I have visited twice "The Birth of the Nation" moving pictures. My judgment is that they should be either modified or withdrawn. By its agonizing appeals to tender sympathy, and its misstatements of history in the programme, it is galvanizing the dormant seeds of State sovereignty views. It is a racketty and hair-lifting production, but it gives a false tone and is ripping up old sores. It is bringing discredit to the National Government and its war records. All through this panorama there is exaggeration of both good and evil—the good among the secessionists and the evil of personal marauders in the National Army and the adventurers in reconstruction. Beware of war. They who commence it must suffer the consequences of fallen human nature. I was through the Civil War, from the first hour to the last, and was considerably awake before and after it. The author of this show gives in his programme very erroneous texts. He represents the would-be seceders as a lovely, refined, Utopian, Christian people, invaded and outraged by barbarous Huns. He does not state that our brethren commenced war upon "the best Government the world ever saw," in a "causeless and wicked rebellion," slaughtering a quarter of a million of patriots who were defending the authority of their nation and bringing sorrow to every loyal family in the land, North, South, East and West. The title of these "movies" is a misnomer, an anachronism. The nation did not have its birth in the '60s. It was conceived in 1776, born in 1778, confirmed in 1787, and grew to a giant down to 1861 when he defended his life the best he knew how.

Dr. Griffith, the author, says: "Peaceful secession was scarcely disputed, North or South." What! Two millions of Americans rushed immediately to arms against disrupting the Union, and the wisdom of congresses, legislatures, the pulpit and the press sustained them. Although Massachusetts talked secession, she never tried it. President Jackson sent a Kentucky colonel there with a Federal battalion to watch them. He reported back to the Government that they did no act disloyal to the Government. Dr. Griffith should put in his programmes that the Colonies, in declaring their independence, used the phrase "these United States," and called themselves "one people." The word "States" was simply an abstract compliment, and while in co-operative war they forestalled any State sovereignty and declared four times that the Union should be "perpetual." In that compact every vestige of sovereignty was denied the Colonies. They never had an instant of sovereignty from Christopher Columbus down to this time. In 1787 this "perpetual" Union was made a "more perfect Union." So we see the nation was born then, and after about eighty years of knitting together was saved in the '60s. It is a canon of law that a nation will not give up its life without a struggle. But what happened? Human slavery was our world-wide disgrace and degradation to both white and black races. It demanded a separate Government. It is true that they had a Constitutional right to take a slave like a horse into the territories, but Alexander Stevens, in pleading against secession, said: "Show me a single instance where the Federal Government has encroached upon the legal rights of the South." Again he said to the Georgia Legislature: "If you secede for the Constitutional election of Mr. Lincoln, you will be wrong, and posterity will execrate you." WILLIAM HEMSTREET (Formerly Captain and Brevet Lieutenant Colonel, Eighteenth Missouri Infantry).

Brooklyn, July 21, 1915.

CLEVELAND
JUL 22

FIGURES IN $2,000,000 NEW MOVIE CORPORATION

Cleveland Man Aids Plan to Show Big Films at Low Prices.

E. Mandelbaum, Cleveland theatrical promoter with offices in the Columbia building, and one of the first men to operate high-priced moving picture theaters in the country, and to place feature photoplays acted by celebrated stage stars before the public, was named yesterday as a member of the organization committee in a $2,000,000 combine of moving picture exhibitors.

The object of the organization is to be to standardize the output of big features. One has the order of "The Birth of a Nation" will be made and [illegible] to picture theaters at [illegible] that

The organization aims [illegible] the dictatorial policy [illegible] in forcing exhibitors upon [illegible] none of their productions.

Final plans of the [illegible] will be perfected [illegible] held in Chicago [illegible] ment of the [illegible] yesterday.

CRUZ (Cal.) NEWS
JULY 26, 1915

Movie Censorship Means End of Free Speech In America," Is Warning of Film Producer

[illegible] ACCEPTED BY PUBLIC, HE [illegible] THIS AUTOCRACY WILL [illegible] SPREAD TO THE PRESS.

SAN FRANCISCO, July 26.—Motion picture producers are tremendously [illegible] over legalized censorship of [illegible].

They say it is threatening free speech in America.

Not alone motography, but the speaking stage and the press is menaced by "the blight of restricted expression," assert the film producers who are now forming a great organization to combat censorship.

Almost every city and town is dealing with it.

Over 5,000,000 daily patrons of motion picture theaters are directly interested in the outcome as it will affect their entertainment and education.

Most zealous of legalized censorship foes is David Wark Griffith, America's premier motography producer, whose protests have become impassioned since Chicago, Philadelphia and other cities placed the ban on his masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation."

"Free speech," said Griffith here recently, at the annual convention of motion picture producers, "America's most priceless heritage, is in danger.

"When a few men can absolutely dictate what 10,000,000 of their fellow citizens shall or shall not witness, a dangerous precedent has been established.

"The producers' fear of censorship already is robbing the nation of virile thought and inspiration through its most popular source of instruction and entertainment. We are afraid to produce the vigorous manuscript that has a punch in it because we know it will be condemned in almost every case.

"The consequence is a surfeit of the most insipid, milk-and-water stuff that inspires little thought—mediocrity that can not stir any one.

"And people submitting to censorship of films, can also readily be persuaded by an autocratic government that what they read or hear on the speaking stage shall first be approved by other individuals or boards.

"Recently Philadelphia established a censorship board to pass on matter printed in the magazines. Does the nation realize how dangerous this beginning is? It shows the drift of the times.

"The same spirit of intolerance which is taking away, one by one, the personal liberties of the American people, will find an easy task in turn to attack with success all forms of freedom.

"The motion picture, which can be made the greatest educational factor the world has ever known, is as clean, decent and respectable a mode of expression as that of any art ever established.

"We believe we have as much right to present the facts of history as we see them, for instance, on the motion picture screen as Woodrow Wilson has to write these facts into his history, or the speaking stage has to show them."

David W. Griffith.

GRIFFITH'S CHALLENGE.

"We have no wish to offend with obscenity or to glorify crime, but how is it possible to portray virtue without portraying its opposite, vice? How are are we to show the sweetness of character of Abraham Lincoln save by contrast with the mistaken ideas of Thaddeus Stevens?"

◆ ◆ ◆

"The passion to limit freedom of individual expression in all its forms is today the curse and peril of this nation."

◆ ◆ ◆

"You can't have motion pictures that are worth a whoop if the producer is afraid of every constable or mayor in the land."

◆ ◆ ◆

"We motion pictures creators are fighting today one of the few issues in the world worth battling for—freedom of speech."

SEATTLE (Wash.) POST-INTEL.
JULY 29, 1915

Joseph Henabery [illegible] In "Birth of a Nation" —Clemmer

Lincoln, immediately following his signing the call for the first volunteers for the Union preceding the civil war, as shown in Griffith's picture.

CLIPPING FROM Chronicle
Date Portland Wash. 7-31-15

STORY OF "BIRTH OF NATION" STARTS BACK TWO CENTURIES

FF

The story of "The Birth of a Nation," which will open its engagement at the Clemmer Monday afternoon, begins in the 17th century with the bringing of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to various phases of slavery and its bearing upon the history of the United States.

The second part of the film takes up the theme of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," which deals with the Camerons of the south and the Stonemans of the north, Silas Lynch, the mulatto lieutenant governor, the opening and the close of the civil war, the scenes attendant upon the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, the period of carpet-bagging days and reconstruction following Lee's surrender, the terrorizing of the southern whites by the newly freed blacks and the rise of the Ku Klux Klan.

Fill With Paramount.

During the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" Paramount features will occupy the screen at the Clemmer between 11 a. m. and 1:30 p. m. and between 5:30 and 7 p. m.

"The Running Fight" will be shown all day Sunday and in the hours mentioned Monday and Tuesday. It is a five part screen version of William Hamilton Osborne's novel by that name. The story is a melodrama which deals with the machinations of a New York financier. No. 13 of the South America travel series and Pathe's weekly [illegible] "Kindling" will [illegible].

DENVER, SAN FRANCISCO AND [illegible]
CABLE ADDRESS [illegible]LIPSBURG

CLIPPING FROM Times
Seattle Wash.
Date 7-28-15

Griffith Feature—Clemmer.

Saturday night marks the positive closing of "The Birth of a Nation" engagement at The Clemmer, as this remarkable picturization of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" is to open in Spokane Monday. Hence it is up to all those who have not seen this Griffith half-million-dollar masterpiece to hurry, for it leaves only seven performances before Seattle says good-bye to the wonderful picture. And there is no probability that "The Birth of a Nation" will be brought back to Seattle, at least not very soon. With a record of five straight weeks' run and a record attendance, this great masterpiece proves that when a really good and meritorious production comes to Seattle the people [illegible].

ALAMEDA (Cal.) TIMES-STAR
JULY 31, 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" TO AGAIN THRILL AT MACDONOUGH

FF

"The Birth of a Nation," or as it is more generally known "The Clansman," the photo-drama by D. W. Griffith, the master of the film play stage, which opens at the Macdonough theater for a brief return engagement, commencing August 2, carries with its marvelously absorbing romance the first correct understanding history of this country ever shown by an unbiased mind directing an unprejudiced hand.

While it is based on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," this trilogy portrays the inception, echoes the travail of the birth and shows the development of our nation, the country that before the Civil War was the United States and ever since and ever will be "The United States"

Swiftly, impartially and unflinchingly it all tells the huge story of the war by making its heroic events an epical frame for a lyrical narrative of romance of the strongest of emotions—love.

Two exhibitions will be held daily [illegible] and the evening exhibition at 8:10.

JULY 30, 1915
SEATTLE (Wash.) TIMES

Griffith Feature—Clemmer.

Tomorrow night sees the close of "The Birth of a Nation," the marvelous Griffith masterpiece which has been packing The Clemmer for the past five weeks. This thrilling and blood-tingling photodrama, founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," has run the longest of any photoplay in Seattle and played to more people than any production ever brought to this city. "The Birth of a Nation" passes out of the theatrical spotlight of Seattle with unstinted praise heaped upon it by the thousands it has entertained and the emotions it has swayed and with the knowledge that it has [illegible] spectators as no other production, either photodrama or legitimate, ever has done. It has made a record in many ways.

CLIPPING FROM Times
Seattle Wash.
Date 7-30-15

Last Week of "Birth of a Nation."

Manager Clemmer has definitely decided to close with "The Birth of a Nation" Saturday night. The run of five weeks has broken the record for photoplay exhibitions in this city. The tremendous interest awakened in this historic photodrama has hardly lessened from its opening day. It has so fine supplementary features here in the way of music and decoration as it could have had in any of the eight cities where it is being shown.

JULY 30, 1915
SEATTLE (Wash.) POST-INTEL.

[illegible] story in which one is at [illegible] is a worthy one, and does credit to [illegible] producers.

FF

Closing Days of "Birth of Nation."

Good audiences are still the rule at the Clemmer, where Griffith's great historical poem of the civil war, "The Birth of a Nation," is rapidly nearing its run, Saturday night being the final performance. For five weeks this remarkable picture has been shown here to audiences that generally packed the house, many times hundreds being turned away. It is the first adventure of a regular photoplay house to put on feature at theater prices. Manager Clemmer has been remarkably [illegible]. His production of the picture has something to do with this, features being more than [illegible]

CLIPPING FROM 7-30-15
SEATTLE (Wash.) POST-INTEL.

Theater to Change Bill Sunday.

"The Birth of a Nation," which has had a five weeks' run at the Clemmer, will give way Sunday to "Marrying Money," with the Seattle favorite actress, Grace Kimball Thomas, in the leading role. "The Birth of a Nation" is still drawing good houses and [illegible]

Chronicle
Spokane Wash.
7-31-15

...mer—he should make enough ... to buy gasoline for the rest ... days."

Question of Patrons

...on the attendance during the first ...night probably depends the length ...e engagement of "The Birth of a ...on" in Spokane.

...e indications warrant the stay, ...film spectacle will be here the full ... weeks for which it has been ...ed. If not, it may be taken elsewhere for the remaining week.

...is no secret that the film did not ...ll that was expected of it in Seattle where it is closing a five-weeks' ... It ran into rather hard luck right ...he start, during the gathering of ...Shriners. It had been figured that ...convention guests would patronize ...picture largely, but the majority ...them were too busy being entertained elsewhere most of the time. In ...later weeks of the run attendance ...been heavier.

Sets Records Elsewhere.

... other cities the spectacle con...s to set records for receipts. It ...just closed a stay of 15 weeks in ...Francisco. It is in its second year ...New York. In Boston and Chicago, ...re censorship squabbles took it ...the courts, it is doing big busi...

...rhaps the fact that the showing ...he picture was entirely uneventful ... something to do with the situation on the Sound. Nothing occurred ...ly to excite the Seattle populace ... the film. For that reason the ...est and censorial probe made here ...ld prove a godsend to the box of... A fortnight ago, only a normal ...ber of Spokane people seemed to ... whether they saw the film or not; everybody in town, apparently, ...ts to go.

...VILLE CENTER (N. Y.) OWL
JULY 23, 1915

...TON BEACH MUSIC HALL

...e of the dispute which has ...ed among them over their re... swimming obilities, Manager ...mble has put up $100 in prizes ...imming and diving contests by ...ght girl ushers in the Brighton Music Hall where D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is now ...

...n Manager Kemble decided to ...girl ushers in the Music Hall ...escribed that each must be a ...mer because of the close proximity ... the water and the supposition ...etween performances they would ...ally go into the surf. He did ...rish to run the risk of any girl ...oyee as a result of inexperience ... water to lose her life.

...t as Manager Kemble divined, ...irls do spend most of their time ...ming. None of them has as yet ...n accident but they had had a ...te as to their respective abilities ...immers. Manager Kemble heard ... and has decided to arrange a ... of races.

...ese will include a 100 yard dash, ... mile swim and a one mile swim. ... winners will receive $20 and the ...nd and third a small amount. ... girls who will compete are Hilda ...haels, Adeline Coar, Mildred ...ham, Edith Hawkey, Marion Wog... Marguerite Leslie, Anna Donnelly ... Anna Wulf.

...Manager Kemble will act as referee ... H. Clark Mooney, who is associated with him in the Music Hall, ... judges.

...COEUR D'ALENE (Idaho) PRESS
JULY 17, 1915

...EMMER BOOKS FILM AT $20,000 FOR SPOKANE

To bring the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," by the Clemmer Theaters, ...oke, is costing Dr. H. ... ...r, $20,000, the largest ... ...d for a motion picture ... ...est, according to ... He saw the picture ... ...on a recent visit ... ...ane Ad club, and ... ...ced that he ... ...rifith, regardless ... ...

...ut the Clemmer ...

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J. REVIEW
JULY 19, 1915

BIG PHOTOPLAY HEARS SUCCESS

"Birth of a Nation" at New Nixon a Marvelous Work

D. W. Griffith's marvelous masterpiece, "The Birth of a Nation," is the most impressive spectacle ever staged. At the New Nixon it has successfully started on a summer run which promises to eclipse all records.

Thrilling battle scenes, love lyrics of romantic beauty, episodes of rare historical interest and nature in its fairest garb are component parts of the most lavish production ever presented to the public. It is vital—throbbing with life and virility, of great historical and educational values—and withal a great, love story that holds great audiences spellbound.

The stirring events of the Civil War and the period of Reconstruction are shown in striking detail. The fighting in the trenches of Petersburg, Sherman's march to the sea and the surrender of Lee at Appomattox and the saving of the South by the Scottish Clans are faithfully reproduced.

Months of research by historians preceded the actual work of production. Engineers from West Point and veterans of the North and South assisted in laying out the great battle grounds. The artillery and other ordnances were those of the exact period. The actual work of assembling and rehearsing the armies took over two months. Director Griffith used twenty batteries of cameras which he directed from a central tower by means of a system of underground telephone connections.

Such perfection of detail insured the success which this spectacle has achieved in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco, Los Angeles, Milwaukee and now Atlantic City.

There are two performances every day at 2.30 and 8.30.

BERKELEY (CAL.) GAZETTE
JULY 31, 1915

...AIN RETURNING TO THE MACDONOUGH MONDAY

Mae Marsh, who plays one of the leading parts in "The Birth of a Nation."

"The Birth of a Nation," or as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle in twelve reels, which opens at the Macdonough theater Monday, August 2d for a brief return engagement, is conceded by the leading dramatic critics of the country to be the world's greatest motion picture. Two performances will be given daily, a matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:10.

More than $500,000 was expended in the production of the film and eight months were required to complete it. The travail of a nation's creation, the stress of its growth, the assumption of its majority in its plenitude of beneficent power is portrayed in all emotion stirring detail, is impressed on the mind as could be done by no history, by Griffith's photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman."

Men have written vivid histories. Gibbon's Rome, Macauley's England, Carlyle's French Revolution. But in "The Birth of a Nation," Director Griffith has photographed history—our own history—and has placed before the eyes not only the incidents potent with greatness of event, but mingles these with a lovely romance.

MILWAUKEE (WIS.) WISCONSIN
JUL 15

VETERANS APPROVE OF THE SCENES IN BIG PHOTOPLAY

Sherman's March to the Sea.

In the list of accurate battle scenes and maneuvers in The Birth of a Nation, the noted pictorial drama of the Civil war, which visualizes the problem of slavery and state sovereignty, now attracting large crowds at the Davidson twice daily, as an accurate reproduction of Sherman's march to the sea. The above picture is a realistic view of Union troops passing though Georgia. Sherman's move was one of the decisive acts of the long, hard-fought war as it divided the south and took away food supplies which were needed for the support of the Confederate army.

The siege of Atlanta and the flight of its population to the country is also a realistic reproduction of a historical event. [illegible] the battle scenes, D. W. Griffith, the producer, obeyed the directions of military experts who mapped out the movements of the Union and Confederate armies as described in the accurate reports in the possession of the United State government. In fact, many weeks were spent in the acquirement of data for the staging of the battle scenes.

Many old soldiers have witnessed and approved of the pictures, saying that they recalled with vivid impressiveness the hazardous experiences which they endured in army service.

A section of film which impresses one with a lasting sense of the suffering due to hunger shows Confederate soldiers on the firing line eating sparingly of short rations of parched corn. In another picture the capture of a supply train is an impressive [illegible]

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS
JUL 19 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" PUT ON IN ATLANTIC CITY

Special Despatch to "The Press."

Atlantic City, July 18.—"The Birth of a Nation" began the Summer season at the New Nixon Theater on the Boardwalk to-night. This is the D. W. Griffith motion picture drama which has created such a stir in New York and elsewhere as the first "movie" to be offered in this country at the usual $2 scale of prices charged in the regular theaters.

It is a production in twelve reels, showing the beginning of slavery in the American colonies and then progressing to the settlement of that question in the Civil War. The main incidents of the story are taken from Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," but Griffith has made the story so much bigger in its present form that the title was changed to fit it.

The last half of the picture deals with the reconstruction era in the South following the war.

More than 18,000 persons took part in the production together with 3000 horses. It is the largest and most thrilling thing of the kind ever undertaken in moving pictures.

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) INQUIRER

Date JUL 19 1915

2 MOVIE AT THE SHORE

"Birth of a Nation" Enthusiastically Received at Atlantic City

Special to The Inquirer.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 18.—"The Birth of a Nation" began the summer season at the New Nixon Theatre on the Boardwalk tonight. This is the celebrated D. W. Griffith motion picture drama which has created such a stir in New York and elsewhere as the first movie to be offered in this country at the usual $2 scale of prices charged in the regular theatres.

It is a wonderful production in twelve reels showing the beginning of slavery in the American colonies and then progressing to the settlement of that question in the Civil War. The main incidents of the story are taken from Thomas Dixon's noval "The Clansman" but Griffith has made the story so much bigger in its present form that the title was changed to fit it.

The last half of the picture deals with the reconstruction era in the South following the war. Over 18,000 persons took part in the big production, together with 3000 horses. It is the largest and most thrilling thing of the sort ever undertaken in moving pictures. Atlantic City accorded the work an enthusiastic reception. It continues as an attraction for the remainder of the summer season at the Nixon.

JULY 19, 1915
ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW

IN THE TRENCHES, WAR SCENE FROM THE "BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE NEW NIXON THEATRE ALL THIS WEEK.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) North American

Date JUL 19 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" OPENS IN ATLANTIC CITY

Celebrated Motion-Picture Drama Inaugurates Season at New Nixon Theater

ATLANTIC CITY, July 18.

"The Birth of a Nation" inaugurated the summer season tonight at the New Nixon Theater on the boardwalk. This is D. W. Griffith's celebrated motion-picture drama which created such a stir in New York and elsewhere as the first "movie" to be offered in this country at the usual $2 scale of prices charged in the regular theaters.

It is a remarkable production in twelve reels, showing the beginning of slavery in the American colonies and then progressing to the settlement of that question in the civil war. The main incidents of the story are taken from Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," but Griffith has made the story so much bigger in its present form that the title was changed to fit it. The last half of the picture deals with the reconstruction era in the south following the war.

More than 18,000 people took part in the big production, together with 3000 horses. Atlantic City accorded the work an enthusiastic reception.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date JUL 19 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" FILM THRILLS ATLANTIC CITY

Griffith Motion Picture Accorded an Enthusiastic Reception

Special Telegram to Public Ledger

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 18.—"The Birth of a Nation" began the summer season at the new Nixon Theatre on the Boardwalk tonight. This is the celebrated D. W. Griffith motion picture drama which has created such a stir in New York and elsewhere as the first "movie" to be offered in this country at the usual $2 scale of prices charged in the regular theatres. It is a wonderful production in twelve reels, showing the beginning of slavery in the American colonies and then progressing to the settlementof that question in the Civil War.

The main incidents of the story are taken from Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman," but Griffith has made the story so much bigger in its present form that the title was changed to fit it. The last half of the picture deals with the reconstruction era in the South following the war. More than 18,000 people took part in the big production, together with 3,000 horses. It is the largest and most thrilling thing of the sort ever undertaken in moving pictures. Atlantic City accorded the work an enthusiastic reception. It continues as an attraction for the remainder of the summer season at the Nixon.

JULY 19, 1915
ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW

BIG SPECTACLE STARTS SEASON

"Birth of a Nation" at New Nixon Proves a Revelation

D. W. Griffith's much-talked of spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," began an engagement at the Nixon Theater last night before a tremendous audience, the size of which was unprecedented in Atlantic City Theatres.

Much was expected of this famous motion picture, the first for which a two dollar scale of prices has prevailed, and which is now in its sixth month in New York its fifth month in Boston and a third in Chicago but let us say at the start that instead of fulfilling local expectation, it exceeded our most favorable anticipations. It bewildered and completely swept the audience off its feet. Such enthusiastic applause and cheering has not been heard here in many a day.

"The Birth of a Nation," is by far the most marvelous and gigantic production ever witnessed here. It is everything that goes to make up a powerul drama a stupendous spectacle, an astounding motion picture, and withal a stirring inspiring, hisorical pageant. All of the momentous incidents of American history are re-enacted before one's eyes with startling realism. The decisive battles of the Civil War are reproduced, showing 18,000, soldiers in fierce conflict, long lines of trenches extending three miles in the distance, shells exploding, artillery duels, terrific cavalry charges, all of which are without doubt the most wonderful war scenes ever conceived and revealed. The night battle scenes were amazing, with the red glare of bursting shells. The burning of Atlanta Sherman's march to the sea, the Battle of Petersburg, and the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomatox are some of the remarkable scenes as is also the assassination of President of President Lincon at old Ford's Theater, Washington, D. C., The later one is one o fthe most impressive moments in the spectacle.

Then the terrible Reconstruction Days in the South following the War are depicted when that unfortunate country suffered the reign of the unscrupulous carpetbaggers from the North. The rescue of the South by the Klu Klux Klan and the realization finally of "Union Inseparable Now and Forever" among the United Staes of America form the climax of the great production.

The players who enact the thrilling drama give finished and powerful characterizations. There are so many in the cast and all so uniformly excellent that it is impossible to mention them all and it would be unfair to single out any special few The large symphony orchestra which accompanies the presentation renders an exceptionally beautiful score most efficiently and impressively.

Finally "The Birth of a Nation" is invaluable as a historical study the difference between seeing it and reading history being that by the former it is much more forcibly impressed upon the mind by beholding it before the very eyes and moreover, one is besides treated to the most gorgeous spectacle the mind of man ever imagined.

SAN DIEGO (Cal.) TRIBUNE
JULY 22, 1915

EMPRESS

"The Clansman" will close its long and successful engagement at the Empress with the evening performance on next Sunday night. Only three more days remain in which to witness this greatest of all film productions. This masterpiece will leave to fill engagements in other cities and positively will not be shown in any other theatre in San Diego. Following "The Clansman" the management has booked another of David Griffith's wonder pictures, "The Escape", by Paul Armstrong, which has been filmed in seven thousand feet of thrilling pictures.

It deals with the vital subject of the duty owed to unborn children, and the care which should be given to developing their best, rather than their worst traits after birth. All this is pointed out in the prologue, and the story itself unfolds logically and intensely.

It is the life, labor and love story of two sisters of New York's "East Side".

The broad-shouldered gang bully makes love to the one, but she escapes just before the wedding.

Her deficient sister admires "brute force", and wins the gangster after her sister's flight to the still more dangerous life where she finds a "wealthy" friend.

The silver thread of true love, by the young ambulance surgeon, shines through the horrifying brutality of the East Side hovel, and accomplishes the second "escape" of the girl from the treacherous life of wealth.

The climax of the play comes when the rescuers raid the dive of the slavers, and the film portrays the most thrilling and realistic fight of guns, fists, blackjacks and night sticks ever shown on a motion picture screen.

It is a fine example of the powerful effects which can be produced on the screen and which are impossible on the stage. For instance, the picture of the neglected little child mother sitting in her chilly room, while in the same moment the husband is seen staggering along the street below.

The raid of the police on the den of thugs where the young mother is being detained is one of the most exciting scenes ever put upon the screen. In these scenes the master mind of D. W. Griffith is found not wanting and with the atmosphere of the typical slums the picture gives a splendid insight into actual conditions.

The principal roles are played by Blanche Sweet, Mae Marsh, Donald Crisp, Owen Moore, F. A. Turner, Ralph Lewis, and Robert Harron, whose acting is so simple, natural and convincing that they seem to really live as men and women. It is here that Griffith has found his great success for he believes power is found in sincerity and strength of character as it really exists in his assistants. Matinees daily at 2:30 and two performances in the evening, 7:30 and 9:00.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) EXAMINER
JULY 19, 1915

"CLANSMAN" CONTINUES.

D. W. Griffith's "The Clansman," or "The Birth of a Nation," to-day enters upon its fourteenth week at the Alcazar. The "Standing Room Only" sign nightly evidences the continued popularity of the production.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
JULY 23, 1915

...the fist, in "The Birth of a Nation," ... this week.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CHRONICLE
JULY 19, 1915

"The Clansman" Continues Its Long Run at Alcazar

D. W. Griffith's film creation, "The Birth of a Nation," enters upon the fourteenth week of its run at the Alcazar this afternoon. In three hours "The Birth of a Nation" reveals the history of a great country's travail and the woes of the rear-guard of a lost cause.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CHRONICLE

"Clansman" in ...

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's great war spectacle, opened its fourteenth week at the Alcazar this afternoon.

It depict the decisive battle of Petersburg required the use of 25,000 ... and an expenditure of $500,000 and yet this battle scene is merely an incident in the film marvel.

Love, patriotism and tragedy are component parts of this great picture, which preaches a wonderful sermon of peace. Miss Mae Marsh, in her characterization of the "Little Sister" who gladly dies when honor is at stake, has won the adulation of her audiences, and Miss Lillian Gish is one of the most attractive heroines of the motion picture screens.

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

GRIFFITH PICTURE AT SHORE

"The Birth of a Nation" Shown at Nixon in Atlantic City.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 19.—"The Birth of a Nation" began the summer season at the Nixon on the Boardwalk last night. This is the D. W. Griffith motion-picture drama celebrated as the first "movie" to be offered at a $2 scale of prices.

It is in twelve reels, showing the beginning of slavery in America and progressing to the settlement of that question in the Civil War. The main incidents of the story are taken from Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman," but Griffith has made the story so much bigger in its present form that the title was changed to fit it. Over 18,000 people took part in the production, together with 3,000 horses.

Atlantic City accorded the ... enthusiastic reception ...

Press July ...
ATLANTIC CITY
N. J.

TRIUMPH OF GRIFFITH PHOTOPLAY ...

"Birth of a Nation" in Comic ... Atlantic City ...

The biggest thrill on the boards ... D. W. Griffith's ... "Birth of a Nation," which ... such a triumph at the New ... tre, where it has opened ... summer run. Thousands ... emotion; the most gigantic ... ever staged; the most powerful ... man and nature.

After preliminary ... charming love interest in ... lina today of Federal ... soft, half-faded ! ! ! ! ... of romance ...

CLIPPING FROM News
Date Pittsburgh
7-19-15

It was stated in a magazine recently that the night scenes in Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" were taken in broad daylight and tinted. You're all wrong, Mr. Writer. The night-battle scenes were all taken after nine o'clock in the evening.

Proof that the big features are going to be the real money getters, is shown by the continued success of the "Birth of a Nation" and "The Eternal City," both of which are enjoying long runs at Broadway-theater ...

AT THE THEATRES.

July 14

Liberty.

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is still breaking records at this theatre. Last week marked its turning into the fifth month of the run in New York. With the exception of the year's biggest musical comedy hit, it is said, the receipts at the Liberty have exceeded those of any other attraction in town. Great ...

Birth of a Nation

NEARLY fifty years have passed since the stirring events of the Civil War. But Mr. D. W. Griffiths' great photo-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," entering on its third month at Liberty Theater, unfolds one by the thrilling scenes of those ...led times and leaves ...fairly gasping ...

Thomas Dixon ... story of "The Clan..." the idea of the film is ..., gives to the director ...redit of having pro... a drama far superior ... book and also his play ...d some eight years ago ...ectacular as "The Birth ...Nation" undoubtedly is. ... scenes faithfully pic... ...g episodes in the lives ...e unfortunate Southern ...who lost home and dear ...through their mistaken ...bring the tears to our ...so sympathetically are ...handled. The portrayal ...e character of Lincoln ...eed a masterpiece both ...e appearance and action ...e artist playing the role, ...ng the audience deeply ...g the painful moments ...unding the assassination of President.

...th power to fairly lift an aud... out of its seats the war scenes ... no equal. Especially thrill... ...s the march of Sherman from ...nta to the sea, and the dash ...e Ku Klux Klan "crusaders of South," on their mission of res... ...wierdly garbed and mounted ...undreds of superb horses.

... might be expected, with a di...or of Mr. Griffith's calibre, the acting is on a par with the excellence of the production. Mr. Walthall, the "Little Colonel" of the drama, is particularly fine. Always an artist, he sinks his identity completely into the characterization of this role. Lillian Gish, as the sweetheart of the Little Colonel, is sweetly appealing.

Appropriate music by an excellent

MR. HENRY WALTHALL

chorus and old Southern melodies sung softly and sweetly by the soloist, are well in keeping with the spirit of the play and ushers in costumes of the period of 1860 lend a touch of atmosphere.

That "The Birth of a Nation" is a sensational success is evidenced by the fact that the box office receipts have already passed the $100,000 mark and 126,000 people have so far seen the production.

...DAY OREGONIAN, PORTLAND, JULY 11, 1915.

...cene From "The Birth of a Nation," Soon to Be Shown in Portland.

BY LLOYD F. LONERGAN.

NEW YORK, July 10.—At this time of year, one of the most popular places for light Summer attractions is at the seashore where Summer shows and vaudeville are well patronized. For many years the largest and only high-class vaudeville theater at Brighton Beach was the well-known Brighton Beach Music Hall. Within the last few years, possibly in 1910, an up-to-date modern house was erected on the boulevard near the ocean front and called the New Brighton.

Intense rivalry was the keynote of the relations between the theaters and this year the older house went "into pictures." It has met with success and there were many hints from the management that a big surprise might be expected. The big surprise turned out to be the rights to run "The Birth of a Nation," that wonderful "Two Dollar Movie" which is packing the houses in seven cities and recently closed a successful engagement at an eighth, the Auditorium in Los Angeles.

The military opening night at the Brighton Beach Music Hall is one that will be long remembered. On Friday night, July 2, (note that there was no fear of "the Friday" hoodoo!) more than 1000 members of the National Guard were reviewed by Mayor Mitchell in front of the Brighton Beach Hotel. These included 700 members of the Twenty-third Regiment under the command of Colonel Norton, the Old Guard under former Mayor Ardolph L. Kline, the officers of the Ninth Coast Artillery and about 150 volunteers of the Civil War to whom the pictured scenes brought back recollections of the real days of '61.

Film May Come to Portland.

The phenomenal success of this master film has caused much surprise in theatrical circles, as well as among moving picture experts who believed that the millenium had been reached with the opening of the 25 and 50-cent houses. At the Tremont Theater, Boston, the Illinois (Chicago), the Alcazar (San Francisco), the Davidson (Milwaukee), the Liberty (New York), and in Seattle, crowded houses have been the result.

The ushers in volunteer uniforms are assisted by pretty maids in the quaint old-fashioned dress of war times. The music is a treat in itself and there is much novelty as well as unusualness to the whole spectacle. Whether a second "Birth of a Nation" will ever be produced, remains to be seen. If so, the producer undoubtedly will be the same genius, David W. Griffith.

Portland probably will see this great picture shortly. Regarding a rumor that arrangements were under way to exhibit it in Portland, the management could not deny the report but stated that they were not at liberty to disclose details at this time. An announcement probably through the news columns of the paper, may therefore be expected within the near future.

SPOKANE (Wash.) REVIEW
JULY 21, 1915

...and C. A. Tupper boats.

CENSOR'S TRIAL OF FILM SHOW

National Board Passed "Birth of Nation" After Eliminations.

Commissioner Samuel Glasgow, city amusement censor, yesterday took up the matter of the objections made before the city council against the motion picture drama of reconstruction days, "The Birth of a Nation," billed for August ... at the Glimmer theater. He telegraphed to Orrin R. Cocks, executive secretary of the national board of censors at New York, telling of the opposition against the piece in Spokane and wanting to know the action of the board.

A reply later in the day told of numerous eliminations that had been ordered in the original production, after which the play had been passed. Commissioner Glasgow this morning will confer with two persons who saw the play at Seattle, one a white man and the other a colored man, both of whom will be asked to give their views. Thursday night Commissioner Glasgow will probably leave for Seattle to view the picture first hand.

July 18, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" OPENS TONIGHT AT THE NEW NIXON

Griffith's Great Spectacle Begins Its Summer Engagement at the Popular Playhouse Now Under Personal Management of Harry Brown.

D. W. Griffith's great spectacle will be presented tonight at the New Nixon Theatre for the first time in Atlantic City. All the details for this great summer engagement of the most important attractions obtainable have been completed and nothing remains but to present the wonderful story which Mr. Griffith has put together.

It is determined that the most brilliant apdience of the season will be on hand tonight to witness the local premiere. In recognition of Manager Nixon's enterprise in booking the great photo-drama for his handsome new theatre the most prominent citizens of the city have signified their intention of being present at the opening.

When "The Birth of a Nation" is unfolded here it will be recognized as the most masterly treatment of the American war theme and the drama which clusters about that story which has ever been conceived by any producers. With the original locale of the great conflict for his background, Griffith has builded an epic. In all the great excitement of his stirring spectacle he has never lost sight of the inherent drama of these historical episodes. He has succeeded in blending history and romance in a way which is astonishing. In the midst of great battles that are flung across an acrea of 10 square miles he enhances his action by those deft touches of human nature which keep his dramatic narrative building up to its great climaxes and subsequent denounements.

As fast as the eye can follow its sequences the story develops its main characters and its heart interests. A brief prelude introduces the motif of African slavery. Following this event of the 18th century the action leaps to the 19th, century with the beginning of the nation wide movement in the North to abolish this ancient institution. The Stoneman boys of Pennsylvania go South to visit their boarding school chums, the Camerons of South Carolina. Benny Cameron falls in love with Elsie Stoneman and Phil Stoneman surrenders his heart to the elder of the Cameron girls. As romance buds in the waving cotton fields and the hospitable South of the ante-bellum days the note of alarm tears asunder these old cronies. Abraham Lincoln has been elected president and the South threatens to secede. The Stonemans rush north and the Cameron boys catch the spirit of insurrection in their neighborhood. South Carolina goes out of the Union. President Lincoln calls for volunteers. The long delayed clash is on. Great armies begin their movements. The Camerons cast their fortunes with the South. The Stonemans join their northern regiment. The war rolls on for two years and the old chums meet upon the battlefield, one wearing the blue and the other the grey. The younger chums are laid low and lie in each others arms. War has cast its blight upon romance. The older boys are Colonels in their respective regiments and too busy to think of love or courting. Death has claimed its tears and treds in divided homes. Ben and Phil at the head of their respective regiments face each other as enemies at Petersburg. It is the last grey days of the Confederate cause but the battle is one of the most desperate ever fought in the world's history. It passes before your vision like a great conflict viewed from a distant coign of vantage. These scenes are the mightiest ever placed within the view of an audience. Ben leads a last desperate charge and falls wounded upon the breast works behind which his former chum commands. He is lifted to a place of safety and desperately wounded is carried to the rear and then sent to the hospital at Washington where Elsie Stoneman is a nurse. In suffering the thread of romance is picked up and followed once more. Meanwhile the old home in the Southland has been torn and wounded and brave hearts left behind suffer all the agonies of war without the valorous compensations of achievements on the field of glory.

With the realism of a old, Griffith has shown where the real heart aches and sufferings are encountered. Peace at last is in sight when Grant and Lee meet at Appomattox and make terms for ending the terrible conflict. Ben Cameron is released by President Lincoln and goes home to take up the work of rebuilding the shateered South. Just when peace seems in sight and happiness is once more apparent at Piedmont comes the terrible news of the assassination of Lincoln and the South is left to have an even worse fate than the four years of war had meant to its people.

This national calamity is shown is historic detail in Ford's Theatre the night that President Lincoln laid down his life. The carpetbagger horde and the unscrupulous politicians rush in to carry away the remaining booty. Lawlessness and riot run rampant. The freed slaves are cozened and beguiled by white scalawags and not knowing better are carried into riotous excesses. Out of the flickering ashes of their sectional honor springs the Ku Klux Klan. Old enemies are re-united in defence of their aryan birth right. Thrilling rescues and wild rides though the night lend a thrill of great excitement to the narative. At last order finds its way out of chaos. The long separated lovers forgive and forgot and find their romance still fresh in their young hearts. The mighty nation, one and indivisible realizes Daniel Webster's dream ... last and the means of peace ... through ...

...ful ... which has brought ... theme ... "The Birth of a Nation" ... in a thousand details. A ... orchestra plays an accompaniment ... which lends color and ... to the telling. It is so big ... in every department that the ... establishes a new epoch in ... of art that reveals its unsuspected possibilities. The great American ... one ... critic has said "you ... a better American" for seeing ...

... Atlantic City engagement is for ... remainder of the summer season ... matinees every afternoon at ... and nightly presentations at 8:30 ...

... intends painting ... producing firm in ...

The Colonial is housing Ina Claire in "The Puppet Crown" through Sunday. Next week the house goes dark for changes preceding the moving of "The Birth of a Nation" from the Illinois.

SHEBOYGAN (Wis.) PRESS
JULY 16, 1915

8

Milwaukee Praises Photospectacle "The Birth of a Nation"

ASSASSINATION OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

What is proving to be the most astounding moving picture engagement ever played in this city, is the center of attraction at the Davidson theater, Milwaukee, where "The Birth of a Nation," Griffith's tremendous photospectacle, is entering into the third week of its prolonged engagement.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be seen in Milwaukee for an indefinite period. Seats are now on sale for four weeks in advance, and capacity houses are viewing each performance. Presentations start at 2:15 and 8:10 daily. One of the features of the offering is the musical setting, synchronized and arranged by Joseph Maria Priel, which is rendered by orchestra under the direction of Herman Kelbe.

Those who have viewed this spectacle do not hesitate in acknowledging it to be one of the most striking presentations of the history of the reconstruction period ever staged. There is a prologue flashed, showing how the seeds of dissension were sown when the first slaves were brought to the Americas. Then comes the ante-bellum days, when slaves on the plantations of responsible masters were well treated. The spirit of anti-slavery is fomented. Then comes the emancipation proclamation; the declaration of war; the opening engagements; the siege of Petersburg; the flight from Atlanta; Sherman's march to the sea; the surrender of Lee; and then, the assassination of Lincoln. In swift moving story, follows the tale of reconstruction days—the organization of the Ku Klux Klan, the Freedman's bureau, the control of black authority and carpet-bag rule; the riots in South Carolina; the pitched battles between negro and whites; and, finally, the closing battle in the streets of Piedmont, and the final march of the white knights in full number.

Griffith exceeded himself as a master of photoplays in this effort. More than 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were employed in taking it. Some scenes of battle were filmed from the top of a sixty foot tower over a five-mile area. The cast includes such actors as Harry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Lillian Gish, Robert Harron, Donald Crisp, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Mary Alden, and others. The historic tableau of famous scenes are most striking.

FROM FAR SPOKANE

Vacations Thin Out the Force of Workers on the Various Papers, but the Sheets Go to Press with Unfailing Regularity Just the Same—Various Briefs.

(Special Correspondence.)

SPOKANE, July 31.—Miss Olive Lender, formerly society editor of the Spokesman-Review and later holding a similar position with the Chronicle, has shown the value of newspaper training for other lines of work by stepping into the important position of passenger agent for the O. W. R. & N. Railway in Spokane. Railway officials state that this new and untried field for women requires unusual ability. Miss Lender has been conspicuously successful in her activities since she began to earn her living ten years ago on a big Chicago newspaper.

The demands of the vacation season have thinned out the serried ranks of the Spokesman-Review staff, vacations of various lengths having been granted depending on the number of years each employe has been on the paper. J. F. Young, business manager, F. J. Whaley, treasurer, and Charles Breed, circulation manager, are members of a fishing party in the wilds of northern Idaho, having struck the blazed trail on pack horses at a jumping off place called Avery.

A. O. Loomis, advertising manager of the Spokesman-Review, has just returned from a trip to San Francisco and other coast points, and F. O. Baker, assistant advertising manager, has come back wearing his old-time smile and a brand new coat of tan acquired on a remote trout stream in Montana.

B. F. Lacy, of the advertising staff, is rusticating at Medimont, Idaho.

George Dodds, managing editor, is at Seaside, Ore.

Belle Colver, society editor, has just returned from a two weeks' vacation at Chelan Lake.

During the vacation period Howard Brownlee and C. L. Sheely are on the copy desk of the Spokesman-Review.

H. W. C. Jackson, an old-time newspaper man with experience in many cities and formerly mining editor of the Spokesman-Review, has rejoined the staff of this paper after a period spent in actual mining operations in Montana.

Rev. H. Rice, telegraph editor of the Spokesman-Review, has obtained a two weeks' leave of absence in order to arrange Mardi Gras features and other spectacular stunts for the Order of Eagles during its convention in Spokane. Rice is an experienced hand at this work, having distinguished himself for a number of seasons as manager of the National Apple Show in this city.

J. A. Ford, formerly political editor of the Spokesman-Review and now private secretary of Senator Miles Poindexter, is spending his vacation in Spokane.

A recent Spokane visitor who made his presence well known was Charles C. Hart, secretary of the National Press Club and Washington correspondent of the Spokesman-Review, of which he was formerly city editor. In interviews given out, the politically wise detected a strong though covert desire to boom the presidential candidacy of Senator Borah of Idaho.

While on his vacation in Seattle, W. W. Hindley, dramatic editor of the Spokesman-Review, prepared a review of D. W. Griffith's photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," the exhibition of which in Spokane was opposed by the colored and ministerial associations. When the Spokane City council passed upon the question, this review was incorporated in the minutes of this body after it had been read and discussed. The council's decision was in line with the attitude of Mr. Hindley's article and the exhibition of the film was allowed.

R. G. Paulin, formerly of the Spokesman-Review's advertising staff, who gained prominence in Spokane as president of the Ad Club and candidate for city commissioner, has established a bi-weekly newspaper, the Post, at Bakersfield, California.

AUG. 13, 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS

GREAT WAR PHOTOPLAY BROAD IN APPEAL

Elmer Clifton as a Northern Colonel.

All classes of theatergoers are attracted to the Davidson by "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest pictorial production ever completed. Many visitors come to the city to attend conventions and the majority of them plan their time so that they may see the war pictures.

An interesting double romance of the Stonemans of the North and the Camerons of the South runs through the play. Engagements are broken off when war is declared and the estranged lovers are reconciled after the end of the long struggle.

The pictures show the fighting armies in action with thousands of infantrymen, cavalrymen and artillerymen under fire. Heroic deeds of rescue are depicted and all phases of warfare are visualized.

Hundreds of veterans of the National Soldiers' home who have seen the pictures have stated that they are wonderfully realistic and vividly reminded of what they themselves experienced on bloody battlefields. [illegible] the pictures were [illegible] movements w[illegible] experts.

Bklyn. Standard union aug. 19, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" at Brighton Beach Music Hall is still the talk of thousands who have seen this wonderful moving picture spectacle founded upon the story of "The Clansman."

St. Louis Republic august 19 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION HAS 5,000 SCENES

18,000 Men Engaged in Battle Mammoth Film Play to Be Shown at Olympic.

"The Birth of a Nation," which will inaugurate the season at the Olympic Theater Sunday night, August 29, is a spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days. It is said to be truly gigantic in its proportions.

The battle of Petersburg was staged on a field five miles in extent, and involved 18,000 men. The wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans called into service 3,000 horses. In Ford's Theater, exactly reproduced from photographs and contemporary descriptions, a full audience is seated, with President Lincoln in his box, and Laura Keene and her company on the stage. The South Carolina Legislature, chosen at the first election under the influence of the carpet baggers, is shown in full and exciting session.

St. Louis Mo.
Date 7-16

David Wark Griffith, whose monster production, "The Birth of a Nation," continues the sensation of the country, is now at work in his studios, in Los Angeles, preparing for the filming of "The Mother and the Law," a multiple reel feature to be presented on a stupendous scale.

Several players cast by Mr. Griffith for important roles in "The Birth of a Nation" are to be featured in "The Mother and the Law," notable among them Mae Marsh, who rendered a vivid portrayal of Florence Cameron; Marion Cooper, who was prominently cast; Ralph Lewis, whose characterization of Stoneman, placed him among the greatest of Griffith's players, and Walter Long, who will long be remembered for his portrayal of Gus [illegible]

(Wash.) LEDGER
AUG. 8

PHONE VOTES FREAK ORDINANCE

COUNCILMEN HEAR ARGUMENTS.

Picture Man Say Proposed Measure Would Hit Many Productions.

...agant oratory, humorous rep... and earnest appeals were heard ...ity council chambers when the ... drafted by Col. A. S. Josh to ... the exhibition of moving pic... ...' was put to the commissioners ...age yesterday. The matter was ...postponed for a week.

...ssioner Owen Woods voted the ...t of many who listened to the ...ts when he exclaimed: "We ... pass this just to sustain Ta... ...eputation as a freak town." He ... to postponing action and frankly ...at he was ready to vote against ...ure. Mills suggested the post... ...t be made because he said that ...ot believe the wording was just ...

...ised at "Birth of Nation."

...the film, "The Birth of a Na... the ...er of the proposed ordi... ...as openly admitted, but many ... picture men present expressed ...ion that the measure would ... interfere with many elements ...ong that might otherwise be ex... ...a Tacoma.

...rdinance was framed by Col. ...er he had appeared before the ...rvice board and obtained its ... Attorney Evan Stallcup also ... before the council yesterday ...e in favor of the ordinance. He ...o have had a part in framing it. ...r Charles Herald of the Ta... ...ater and several moving picture ... managers were on hand to try ...nce the commissioners that the ...e would be an unjust discrimi... ...gainst "The Birth of a Nation." ...Mr. Herald has been considering ...traction for his show house.

...ber of colored people, including ...an, were at the council meeting ... for the ordinance. Pictures or ...r production tending to arouse ...judice or hatred were included ...proposed measure. What devel... ... of the arguments was a marked ...e of opinion as to whether or ...roduction like "The Birth of a ... really excited race hatred or ...

...oab Calls It "Damnable."

...oab stated he was not repre... the colored people nor working ...n, and complimented the council ...organization "second in importance ...ly to the home in formulating ...principles of government." He ... was calling on it to prevent the ...n in Tacoma of "a damnable ...entation of American history." ...ney Stallcup told the councilmen ... they would pass the ordinance ...ould gain the everlasting grati... the colored people.

...er Herald said he believed At... Stallcup was wrong in saying ...ryone who saw the picture would ...ed to raise hatred.

...ays No Harm, Says Herald.

...ve seen the production but it did ...e me hate the colored people as ...llcup says it would," Manager ...said. "I have a great many ... among the colored people and ... desire to hurt them in any way. ...e been said that The Birth of a ... has been the cause of race riots ...y it has been exhibited. I have ...ear of a single riot that can be ...d to it."

...Herald left with the council a ... of press clippings and the opin... critics classifying the production ...e greatest educational value as ... being a representation of the ...art in the moving picture field.

...ney John D. Fletcher argued ... the passage of the ordinance. ...pect the colored people and ad... ...em for what they have accom... he said. "I have a great many ... among them and would not do ...g to injure them.

...n what I have heard of 'The Birth ...on' it does not slander the col... ...ple. It does depict conditions as ...sted in the reconstruction days, ...e that the colored people were ...onsible for, but I think it pays ... a high tribute in the contrast ... conditions then and now."

(Tex.) STATESMAN
JULY 20, 1915

Starring On Screen

Upper, Marguerite Marsh; lower, Mae Marsh.

Not so many seasons ago Marguerite was playing leads with the old Griffith company in the Biograph studios. Her her little sister, Mae, since far-famed for her splendid role in "The Clansman," "The Outcast" and a score of other dramatic parts, came hopping into the studio, wistful-eyed and straggly-haired, wondering at the grandeur of her big sister in make-up and costume.

"I'd like to act, too," she told the big sister with eager voice and tiptoe expectation.

"Nonsense," said Marguerite, "run home and play with your dollies. You couldn't act. You're not big enough, child!"

But D. W. Griffith happened to see the quaint little figure sitting on a "prop." He immediately told big sister Marguerite to bring her along next day; that he had a little part for Mae to play.

To the unspeakable delight of the child and the astonishment of her sister, Mae was hired, first for "bits" and then for "regulars." She worked incessantly. She climbed slowly but surely. Then came a chance for her to play big acting roles. She had had no theatrical experience, but she surprised everyone by her ability and insight into the characters she portrayed.

...Date ...

In conformity with a poli... adopted of having the ... Brooklyn view D. W. Griffith's ... film, "The Birth of a Nation" ... the Brighton Beach Music Hall ... guests, Manager William H. Kem... has made arrangements for the ... commodation of several hundred ... dren of the Hebrew Orphan Asy... at the matinee performance Mo... afternoon.

Last week Manager Kemble had ... boys and girls from St. John's Ho... as his guests and they enjoyed ... wonderful picture with a display ... enthusiasm and patriotism. Natur... the pictures of the last stand of ... Confederates, the march of G... Sherman to the sea and the char... and counter charges of the Confede... ates and the Federals filled them wi... a patriotic fervor and they stood ... their seats and cheered. The Rig... Rev. Monsignor John McNamee, who ... accompanied the boys and Father ... York, who was also with them, bo... expressed admiration for the picture ... and said that every man, woman a... child should see it.

"It is a wonderful, I should s... marvelous picture, that gives an i... pression of our Civil War period th... cannot be obtained from books," sa... Monsignor McNamee. "I am tru... glad that the children of St. John's Home saw the picture. It will enab... them to understand their studies ... that period much better than othe... wise."

Louis L. Firuski of the Hebre... Orphan Asylum accepted Manager Kemble's invitation to take severa... hundred of the children to the matine... performance Monday. The childre... will be accompanied by the Hebre... Orphan Asylum Band. They will b... conveyed to the beach in special car... The band will play on the way. Up... their arrival there they will form ... line and parade around the boardwa... preceded by the band, pose for a pi... ture in front of the Brighton Bea... Music Hall and then proceed in ... their seats. Manager Kemble, as ... the case of the St. John's Home chi... dren, will provide them with orang... ade and sweets.

"I intend to have thousands ... orphans view the picture becaus... think it will be a wonderful treat ... them," said Manager Kemble. "... picture is instructive and will not ... entertain and thrill the children, ... give them a clear insight into an i... portant phase of American histor...

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

Date ...

accepted at the same time and pla...

"The Birth of a Nation."

In order to in... most perfect pr... jection possible, the management of "T... Birth of a Nation" at the New Nix... Theatre, Atlantic City, has installed ne... motors and dynamos at a cost of over ... $1,000. The new apparatus is of the late... type. The increase in the volume of lig... may be imagined when it is known th... the new motors and dynamos deve... 26,000 candlepower, and use electricity ... a cost of $50 a day. With an orchestra ... forty musicians and the large forc... electrical experts, operators, effect ... and others it is plain that the exp... running this spectacle equals that ... large dramatic company. The mimic ... scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" tr... scend reality. Imagine a panorama m... long, in which the Confederate soldi... leap from their trenches in long, serr... lines and charge the Union breastwor... overrunning the first, smashing their wa... into the second and bounding at the th... line until they are forced to recoil befo... the storm of grape, canister and bulle...

CLIPPING FROM Seattle Mail,
7-19-15

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS STILL SUPREME ATTRACTION.

Notwithstanding the bright ... which wooed people to the woods yesterday in great numbers, the Clemmer was filled for both performances of "The Birth of a Nation." This remarkable achievement in photo drama has an unprecedented hold on the imagination. It is so vital in its treatment of the creative events in the development of the new world, so terrific in its explanation of those events that it compels the intelligence while it stirs deeply the emotions. It is now in its fourth week at the Clemmer and shows no lack of drawing power. The influence of this picture on the mind is such that those who see it cannot cease talking of it when they go away. It is not pleasing in its aspect toward life. On the contrary, it is a terrible indictment of many of the passions and ambitions of humanity. It is a visualized protest against the horrors and wickedness of war. It shows the noble mind in close contrast to the vile and degenerate motral, both among the cultured and the ignorant. It is pitiless in its criticism of selfish or perverted human passions. On the other hand it has innumerable scenes of single drama, heroic, pathetic, sublime in their simplicity. Had Director Griffith never made another film, this "Birth of a Nation" would have given him a permanent place among the first imaginative dramatists. It is a story for the ages.

SAN DIEGO (Cal.) TRIBUNE
JULY 9, 1915

Lillian Gish in "The Clansman" at the Empress theatre.

[redacted]

...film ever produced has more educa... tional points than Griffith's latest ... and greatest masterpiece, "The ...

DULUTH (Minn.) NEWS-TRIBUNE
JULY 6, 1915

SEES BIG FORTUNE IN 'UNCLE TOM' MOVIE

Harry L. Minturn Says Famous Old Play Would Make Wonderful Production.

"Why hasn't somebody produced 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' in motion pictures?" asked Harry L. Minturn, leading man of the Baldwin Players, last evening.

"There's a fortune for some picture producer in it, I believe, for there is the opportunity for a wonderful picture play. We began this week to see how big a production can be made of 'Uncle Tom,' when the scenic artists have been making the scenery for it. It can be produced on a tremendously big scale even on the stage, and a motion picture play of the story could be a most elaborate affair.

"It seems strange to me that nobody has produced it. The picture people are grabbing anything with any semblance to a plot. They are at their wit's ends for good material and here is the greatest story and the greatest play of half a century right before them. The country has gone wild over 'The Birth of a Nation.' I think 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' would make almost as much money in pictures as it did in book form. Provided, of course, it were produced on a big enough scale and with attention to its dramatic values.

"I'd like to bet a hat that if my suggestion ever reaches the ... world it will be acted upon."

JULY 27, 1915
WHEELING (W. Va.) REGISTER

WISCONSIN VETERAN SAW THE ASSASSINATION OF LINCOLN

Herbert M. Nogle.

Sees "Birth of a Nation" Pictorial Drama and Praises Accuracy of Great Film.

Of the thousands of spectators who have seen "The Birth of a Nation," the pictorial drama of the Civil war at the Davidson theater, one was an eyewitness of the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln in Ford's theater in Washington fifty years ago.

Herbert M. Nogle, a veteran of the rebellion, 76 years of age, Mondovi, Wis., was the spectator who witness the reproduction of the assassination of Lincoln in the pictures, and who compared it with the real tragedy.

"The circumstances are exactly as they were that terrible night when Lincoln lost his life," he said. "I was present and I remember the dazed way in which the crowd realized the tragedy. The shot was fired before anyone knew that the President was in danger. The sharp report of a revolver was heard. People rushed to the President's box. Others stood rooted to the floor. Women screamed and a crazy-looking man leaped upon the stage and shouted something in Latin and disappeared.

"'Wilkes Booth!' people shouted. With a mighty rush the whole crowd swept toward the exits, but the doors were guarded by soldiers and no one was allowed to leave until the police and soldiers knew that the assassin had escaped across Long bridge. Then we were allowed to file out of the theater. People were stunned by the tragedy and instead of going home they stood around in groups for a long time talking about it."

Mr. Nogle had read accounts of "The Birth of a Nation" and as he served through the entire war with a Pennsylvania regiment he resolved to come to Milwaukee to see the war in motion picture form. Mr. Nogle was surprised over the accuracy and realism of the pictures and he said that he had never expected to see anything so wonderful. Asked about his military record, he said that he joined the Union army on the first call for 75,000 volunteers when he was 21 years of age. He was then working in a tannery in Gouldsburg, Pa. After serving as a soldier three months he re-enlisted and served through the long war, being mustered out after peace was declared.

He participated in many battles, including Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettysburg and the long Battle of the Wilderness.

"Gettysburg was a tough, three-days' fight," he said, "and it looked like a losing battle for the Union troops [illegible] the rebels had a much larger artillery equipment, but in the end we fixed 'em.

"Struck by an ounce minie ball, I was shot through the right lung in the Battle of the Wilderness and I laid on the battlefield three days with blood gushing from the wound until I received any attention. Sergt. Delacy then carried me off the field. I still have the rubber blanket which was wrapped around me. The bullet passed through my body. Luckily, water was poured into the wound while I was helpless and delirious, and that and my strong constitution saved my life.

"I was taken to Douglas hospital in Washington, but I didn't receive regular treatment until eleven days after I was wounded. Two of my ribs were shot away and I coughed up forty-nine pieces of bone. The doctors thought I was a 'goner,' but they worked over me faithfully and I managed to pull through. I was in the hospital a whole year.

Attended Gala Performance.

"While I was convalescing, the news of the surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomatox was received in Washington. A gala performance in Ford's theater in celebration of it was planned, and as we knew that President Lincoln would be there, Sergt. Lambert and I went to see the play. The pictures show the tragic event exactly as it occurred."

Kenosha Nash
Date 7-16-15

SPECIAL MATINEES OF FAMOUS CLEMMER FILM.

Special matinee performances of "The Birth of a Nation" will be held at 10:15 [illegible] this morning and Saturday morning at the Clemmer, to accommodate the Shriners and visitors who are unable to attend the regular afternoon or evening performances. So great has been the advance sale of seats for the regular performances and the many requests that a morning showing of this wonderful picture be arranged that Manager Clemmer has decided to put on these two extra performances.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) [illegible]
Date [illegible]

GREAT SEAT DEMAND FOR OPERA SEASON

Subscriptions Are So Numerous as to Surprise Local Management—Visit of Ballet.

AN IMPORTANT ATTRACTION

New York Hippodrome Presentation and the Establishment of Stock With Stars.

Not in the history of the Metropolitan Opera House has there been such a demand for seats for opera as has been made this summer. Practically all the seats in the orchestra up to Row N have already been assigned, and the first three rows of the balcony are already taken. Manager Hoegerle and Treasurer Loeb are elated, and they anticipate that it may be necessary to ask for additional performances after the 14 scheduled have been given. They are to be on Tuesday nights beginning November 23, and the season is to continue until March 28, with a concluding week of ballet (six performances in all), beginning March 27. The Diaghilew Imperial Ballet Russe is the organization to be seen here, and it will contain some of the most-lauded dancers of the world, presenting selections from a repertoire of 12 dance dramas.

So great has been the demand for seats for the opera season that there will be no special rates, as in other years, for teachers and representatives of educational institutions. This will be a disappointment to many persons, but there was preparation for the condition, inasmuch as a similar state of affairs prevailed last season. Of course the ballet season is apart from the opera itself, although closely affiliated in a managerial way. It is said that the bringing of the company to this country will involve expenditures of $500,000, and that a guarantee of that amount has been required for the 15 weeks' stay. There will be a four weeks' run in New York, and 15 cities in all will be visited. Diaghilew Ballet is famed in Paris, London, Berlin, Vienna, Monte Carlo, Rome, Brussels and Dresden. Everywhere the company had the greatest of success, and reports as to the achievements of Warslav Nijinski, Tamara Karsavina, Michel Fokine and Vera Fokine place them in the front rank of the world's dancers. Nijinski is declared to be the surpassing dancer of the age. Karsavina was called in Paris La Timide, because of her winsomeness. Vera Fokine is famed for her dramatic power and interpretative genius. Michel Fokine has won his greatest fame as a producer of ballets.

Indeed arrangements now under way indicate a season that will be filled with striking entertainment. The Metropolitan Opera House will have the New York Hippodrome show as a September attraction and arrangements now are making for the building of a tank for aquatic performance upon the stage of the theatre. At the Walnut Street Theatre, it is said there will be established a stock company of noted players with William Faversham as the star in the opening performance of "The Squaw Man." The leading theatres generally have not yet been booked completely, but it is pretty certain that "The Birth of a Nation" will be at the Forrest for two months at least. As to the future of the Chestnut Street Opera House there is uncertainty and several plans have been considered. A stock company was under consideration and it had also been thought to be a good idea to re-establish the theatre as a home for big traveling productions. One suggestion was that the opening attraction should be "Watch Your Step," the musical piece in which the Castles and Frank Tinney were prominent last season in New York. At all events the house will be opened with some worthy attraction and it is said that there is in contemplation the refurnishing of the auditorium with new chairs.

One of the season's attractions will be Joseph Brooks' revival of "Trilby," with a cast including Phyllis Neilson-Terry. Lyn Harding, to be seen as Svengali (Harding is coming from England especially to assume this role); George MacFarlane, Charles Dalton, Ignacio Martinetti, Regan Hugston, R. Paton Gibbs, Ross Coghlan, Cecil King and Carrie Radcliffe. Brooks is one of the ardent opponents of the "legitimate" actor as a motion picture player and he has declared that his stars will not, in the future, be permitted to pose for the "movies." He believes that it is injurious to have an actor in the flesh attempt to compete with himself in the films, especially when the actor is trying to induce patronage at $2 for the best seats while the picture is commanding but five or ten cents for admission. One remedy that Brooks has for the condition brought about by competition of the motion picture is to have a greater array of noted players in a play than the motion picture producer is able to assemble for a production.

HERMAN L. DIECK.

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES
Date [illegible]

William H. Kemble, manager of the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where W. D. Griffith's wonderful $500,000 picture, "The Birth of a Nation," is being produced twice a day to crowded houses, has decided to give the orphans of Brooklyn an opportunity to see the film, which is an instructive pictorial history of the Civil War period.

The delight which the boys and girls from St. John's Home derived from seeing the picture on Wednesday afternoon, as the guests of Mr. Kemble, has encouraged him to make arrangements to enable hundreds of orphans to witness the spectacle every week. Mr. Kemble is now in communication with the managers of a number of Brooklyn orphan institutions, and is making arrangements through them for the presence of the boys and girls at the performances. Because of the presence of the children from St. John's Home last Monday, hundreds of persons were disappointed when they tried to gain admission. Mr. Kemble could not accommodate them.

"I hope these patrons will not be offended," said Mr. Kemble. "They will perhaps be able to see the pictures at another time, while Monday afternoon was the only one on which I could show the picture to the children from that particular Home. I will have hundreds of other orphans present next week, and on other days throughout the rest of the summer."

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
JULY 23, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS NOW IN THIRD WEEK

Now in the third week of its remarkable run at the Davidson theater "The Birth of a Nation" is still attracting large crowds of Milwaukeeans and visitors from cities in the state every afternoon and evening. In fact, many persons have attended several performances to get the full enjoyment of the entertainment. Visualizing the slave problem and the civil war, the photoplay is a powerful appeal to emotion intensified by an inspiring musical score interpreted by an orchestra of forty skilled musicians.

The war pitcures are said to be true depictions of history, setting forth the conditions of the times and the trials of the North in subduing the rebellious South. When the pitcures were made military experts had supervision over the actors, their number and their

CLIPPING [illegible]
JUL 15 1915
SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN

"THE CLANSMAN" IS ON TWELFTH WEEK

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION," or "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's spectacular production in twelve reels, continues to be greeted with capacity houses at the Alcazar Theater, where it is being shown twice daily, the matinee being held at 2 o'clock and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

"The Birth of a Nation" carries with its marvelously absorbing romance the first correct understanding of the history of this country ever shown by an unbiased mind directing an unprejudiced band. While it is based on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," this trilogy portrays [illegible] the travail of the [illegible] and shows the development of [illegible] the country [illegible]

CITY (N. J.) GAZETTE
AUG. 1, 1915

t and Lee at Appomattox in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Nixon.

TIC CITY (N. J.) GAZETTE
AUG. 1, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Continuation of Atlantic City Success of Griffith Film Feature

David Wark Griffith, actor, dramatist and director of motion pictures, places his interpretation of history on a film. His method is to revitalize and visualize the deeds of the past. He was peculiarly fitted to recreate the scenes of the civil war and reconstruction days for his father, Jacob Wark Griffith, commanded a Confederate brigade and all David's kinfolk endured the terrible sufferings of the post-bellum days.

For years young Griffith dreamed of his plans to make that epoch of American history live anew. Finally at a cost of half a million dollars he realized his dreams. The result was "The Birth of a Nation," which is now in its third week at the New Nixon, Atlantic City. In staging Sherman's march to the sea a village of frame houses was built to be burned; Ford's Theatre in Washington was constructed in replica; the Assembly chamber of the South Carolina Legislature was reproduced in the same way in order to get a scene lasting only 30 seconds. When he wanted to show the thrilling rides of the Ku Klux Klan, Griffith found that all the roads he could use were oiled macadam. He needed dirt roads, so he went to the county supervisors and obtained the use of the roads in an area of 10 square miles for one day, hired a force of laborers to lay 10 inches of dirt on the roads and ran his rides. Then the workmen removed the dirt. He staged a series of interior views of the Cabinet room in Washington, the Wilmer-McLean home at Appomattox, where Lee surrendered to Grant; the military hospital in the Patent Office in Washington; the homes of the two families, one Northern and the other of the South, in which the love interest of the story centres, and he took a number of amazing scenes at night by the light of exploding incandescent bombs.

There is a matinee every day at 2.30, when the prices range from 25 cents to $1. At the night performances at 8.30 the best seats are $2 and $1, with numerous seats at 25 and 50 cents.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.)
Date

In "The Birth of a Nation" (Motion Pictures) Nixon (Atlantic City)

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
AUG. 1 1915

HISTORICAL PICTURE ENTERS FIFTH WEEK

"Birth of a Nation" at the Davidson Breaks Record for Continuous Run.

MAJESTIC OFFERS FEATURE

Butterfly, Strand and Alhambra to Present Unusual Program This Week.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's master photofilm, which has broken all records for length of engagement and number in attendance to the present time, opens its fifth week at the Davidson theater on Sunday. Griffith based his story on "The Clansman," a dramatization of Thomas Dixon's two novels, "The Clansman" and "The Leopard's Spots." The story of the Kuklux Klan is introduced as the action motive of the second part of the drama, that portion dealing with the days of reconstruction following the assassination of President Lincoln. Those cognizant with the affairs of the reconstruction days, especially in South Carolina, where the order had its origin and where many of its most important battles were fought, declare the film to be a realistic and historic portrayal of this phase of the reorganization of the states. Stoneman has prototype in real life in Thaddeus Stephens, who led the house during Johnson's administration and who was prominent in his bitterness against the states that seceded. Stephens was responsible for the motion passed by congress to treat the south as conquered provinces. Johnson promptly vetoed this order, following the principles of the dead Lincoln, and his action was one of the factors that led to impeachment charges afterward being filed against him. The engagement at the Davidson has been indefinitely prolonged. Herman Kelbe's orchestra renders a synchronized musical setting by Joseph Conrad Birjel.

ssination of President Lincoln—Scene From "The Birth of a Nation," at the New Nixon Theatre All This Week.

AUKEE (Wis.) JOURNAL
AUG. 1 1915

Davidson Continues Run.

Davidson will continue its run Birth of a Nation, the photo- [redacted] nstruction pe- this country's history as nar- in The Clansman. With the of this big film production Mil- ans are already familiar, and engagement is prolonged by the on management, it continues to friends for photomimic drama those who hitherto have scout- idea that the results achieved producers were possible for the camera. Those who have been itnesses to the scenes presented y to their historical accuracy, and far its merit as entertainment is mented by its educational value.

TRIBUNE. AUG. 1, 1915
OAKLAND CAL.

MACDONOUGH

"The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," will [illegible] at the Macdonough theater for a brief return engagement commencing tomorrow.

This tremendous photo-drama, based on Thos. Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," made by that wonderful performer, D. W. Griffith, partaking of the quality of a Wagnerian into scene, on an epical [illegible] the drama is of course paramount in emotional intensity and illustrative of the nation's development from a federated states into a state.

Accompanying the photo-play is a remarkably effective musical setting [illegible] frame for the scenes. This is not [illegible] cally classical but tunefully strong in [illegible] timent for the main scenes in [illegible] of those old days [illegible] with the events and national [illegible] depicted.

N. Y. TELEGRAPH
~~July~~ AUG 1, 1915

In the film world "The Birth of a Nation" has completed its second "sold-out" month at the Illinois and is still running strong. Officials of the controlling firm recently visited Chicago, and after viewing the transient crowds in attendance at the Illinois pronounced this city the true dramatic center of the country during the Summer months.

BRIGHTON BEACH—In conformity with a policy he has adopted of having the orphans of Brooklyn view D. W. Griffith's $500,000 film, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, Manager William H. Kemble has made arrangements for the accommodation of several hundred children of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum at the matinee performance to-morrow afternoon. Last week Manager Kemble had 500 boys and girls from St. John's Home as his guests and they enjoyed the wonderful picture. Naturally the pictures of the last stand of the Confederates and Federals filled them with a patriotic fervor and they stood in their seats and cheered. Mgr. John McNamee, who accompanied the boys, and Father York, who was also with them, expressed admiration for the picture and said every man, woman and child should see it. Louis L. Firuski of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum, accepted Manager Kemble's invitation to take several hundred of the children to the matinee performance to-morrow. The children will be accompanied by the Hebrew Orphan Asylum band. They will be conveyed to the beach in special cars. The band will play in front of the Brighton Beach Music Hall and then proceed to their seats. Manager Kemble, as in the case of the St. John's Home children, will provide them with [illegible]

WORLD. N. Y. AUG 1

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SUNDAY SENTINEL
AUG. 1, 1915

g Scenes in "The Birth of a Nation"

TRIBUNE. AUG 1, 1915
OAKLAND. CAL.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) GAZETTE
AUG. 1, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION PLAUDITS OF ALL AT THE

Vividly Depicts the Primary Causes of the Civil War During the War, and the Reconstruction of a Nation

Matinee and Evening Performances Daily

David W. Griffith's epoch-making spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is duplicating at the New Nixon its record-breaking runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Partly from the nature of the new art and partly from the opposition aroused, this work has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of recent years, and the extraordinary demand for seats indicates the size of the eager throngs which are coming to the New Nixon.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by [illegible] and music the story of a nation re-born through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the Civil War; Lincoln's call for troops; the ball on the eve of Bull Run and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's March to the sea, and the awful [illegible] the Siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grand [illegible] assassination of the [illegible] the harsh [illegible] the uprising of [illegible] and the [illegible] ger-negro [illegible] tors and events [illegible] the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the [illegible] ed on the friendship [illegible] Camerons of South Carolina [illegible] Stonemans of Pennsylvania, [illegible] families involved in the [illegible] Ben Cameron, the [illegible] of the Dixon stories, appears [illegible] in the role of romantic hero [illegible] piquant Northern girl [illegible] man, as the heroine. Mr. [illegible] took most of the scenes in the [illegible] out-of-doors, where Nature [illegible] the backgrounds. The [illegible] door scenes, like that of Ford's [illegible] atre on the night of the [illegible] tragedy, the peace at Appomattox and the meeting of the South Carolina legislature of 1876 are [illegible] facsimiles of the originals. It is the first time in art-production [illegible] American history has been presented in living pictures on so extensive a scale. To do this many times the amount of time, money and [illegible]

Continued on Page Three.

pense usually devoted to [illegible] enterprises had to be used. [illegible] teen thousand people and [illegible] es appear in the picture, which [illegible] approximately $[illegible] to produce.

Of equal importance to the success is the music that intervals the [illegible] consists of an elaborate, [illegible] score arranged after Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. Now [illegible] gay; now sounding the [illegible] son of war, again sweetly [illegible] ing love's sighs and [illegible] bringing back the old [illegible] melodies, or the crash of [illegible] rapine, or the welcome [illegible] call that fell so gratefully [illegible] ear of Southern whites [illegible] pressed by the [illegible] in the Master's hall—a [illegible] changing scenes of the story [illegible] flowing, beautiful [illegible] marriage of this music to the [illegible] best of all entitles the producer [illegible] his well earned laurel of having [illegible] ed a new art, a new kind of [illegible] opera, so to speak, that had [illegible] conceived before.

Among the distinguished [illegible] pals is Henry H. Walthall, the [illegible] lar Alabama actor who [illegible] historically connected with the [illegible] as the Clansman.

NEW YORK TIMES
JUN 6 1915

A Case of Mistaken Identity.

HENRY WALTHALL, who plays the young hero of "The Birth of a Nation," is the nearest approach to a hero that this particular story has. It is a true story, and concerns the 14-year-old daughter of a New York family who is quite, quite mad about the movies. She can name the films in which any camera actor of note has ever played, and she had been to the huge film at the Liberty just eleven times at the last count. Her extreme admiration for the actor playing the "little colonel" led her finally to a photographer to buy his picture. Thereafter, her purchase adorned her drawing table, where it could be eyed fondly whenever she had a vacant. Her vanity wore this to a threadbare, but there was a good deal of silence, laughing up the sleeve whenever she mentioned. The photograph suddenly vanished, and she had forgotten the Liberty little maid had discovered, that the treasured picture was not one of Henry Walthall at all. That mean photographer had painted off on her a picture of some one else. For days she had been gazing rapturously at an off-stage likeness of Charlie Chaplin.

MAE MARSH IN "THE CLANSMAN"—MECHANICS'

AUG 4 1915
TACOMA (Wash.) NEWS-HERALD

CENSORING THE "MOVIE"

It is meritorious in the colored people or any other [illegible] itself against libeling plays or any unfair criticism, and if they [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" is injurious to them as a people they [illegible] object to its exhibition. But they may be mistaken about the [illegible] of this film. They may be super-sensitive. Civilized men of all [illegible] and creeds is lampooned every day in the year in the moving [illegible] theaters. The villain of the play "gets his" at every [illegible] he is a white man—in color. But that does not make the [illegible] indignant.

"The Birth of a Nation" is reputed to be a film of [illegible] patriotic interest. Many Tacomans have seen it. Probably [illegible] them ever would have thought it to be prejudicial to the [illegible] ren. It does purport to picture conditions of some 50 years [illegible] to the discredit of the blacks, but to the discredit of the white [illegible] most of the ill deeds of blacks of that time are attributable [illegible] lesion on the part of the whites. And we believe that all [illegible] whites will reach that conclusion upon seeing this "[illegible]" negro's wonderful progress in 50 years and his [illegible] to fit himself for sound citizenship are shining high lights [illegible] development; the contrast between the negro of the [illegible] negro of the 20th century is a credit to his race.

The city commissioners are likely to find themselves [illegible] water if they pass the ordinance that is asked, unless [illegible] of a diplomat of a high order. Does it protect red-headed [illegible] the lampooning which the playwrights delight in giving [illegible] humored gentry? Does it save the bald-headed man from [illegible] the fun-makers? The fat lady, what of her? And will [illegible] gage the ordinance in an attempt to protect the fresh [illegible] painted as Irish; to stop exhibitions of Dutchmen made [illegible] the facts? And shall the mother-in-law's funerals and [illegible] back into outer darkness? Shall we be compelled to [illegible] tinted pastors, prosies, too pious, overdrawn and [illegible] painted?

Where, indeed, should such an ordinance's [illegible] play and [illegible]

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXAMINER
AUG. 8, 1915

"SOLONG LETTY" MOROSCO.

MAE MARSH IN "THE CLANSMAN" CURTIS AUDITORIUM.

...York. A ...
...being shown at the ...
...hall, so the ...
...York is piling up ...
...be known before for a ...
...ing in New York.

...UKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
AUG. 2, 1915

...—"The Birth of a Nation," the ...otoplay, in its fifth week of a re...run. Shows at 2:15 and 8:10 o'clock

...ILM STILL DRAWS.

...irth of a Nation," now enter...th week at the Davidson the...roving the most tremendous ... spectacle ever staged in this ... Milwaukee has established a ...d for the photoplay in this run, ...tions are that the engagement ...e a continuous one until the ...f the regular fall season. The ... under Herman Kebe renders ...ous musical setting, synchron...t the film, continuing through...entire performance.

...AUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
AUG. 2, 1915

...Monday sees "The Birth of a ...e current offering at the David... ...well under way in the fifth week ...mest. People from all over the ...raveled to this city to view this ...m of David Wark Griffith's, and ...y indication capacity houses will ...mainder of the run. Seats may ...ained for any performance, and ... are advised at once, as the en...hough indefinite, must of neces...o an end before long, that the ...actions of the fall season may be

...(Cal.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 3, 1915

...LANSMAN' IN OAKLAND AGAIN

...erful Film Returns to the ...acdonough Theater for Renewed Successes.

... Clansman," wonderful film de... of the most thrilling scenes ever ...before a camera, and the greatest ..." production ever made, returned ... Macdonough last night for another ...gement. The famous films, which ...the most successful run ever scored ... "movie" offering in Oakland, last ... drew big crowds just as when it ... first. The fame of the remark...pictures have spread, and the oppo... to them, which was bitter during ... last showing, has their power, and ... in the way of protest is being heard ... pictures are being better under...

... wonderful film drama is founded ...homas Dixon's book of the Ku Klux ... The rise of the movement against ...y, the Civil War, with its terrible ...s and the end of the giant struggle ...irst shown.

...en comes the rise to power of the ...ical demagogue who wields the black ...'s newly acquired vote as his weap... Then comes the "Klan."

... of the most thrilling scenes in the ...ic the long line of white uniformed ...smen riding furiously to the rescue ...he town of Piedmont. Five thousand ...rs are seen in the wonderful picture. ...illian Gish and Mae Marsh do some ... wonderful acting in the piece, and ...eral other clever actors and actresses ... seen in prominent roles, the perfec... of the acting being as marked as ... perfection in the photography. The ..., D. W. Griffith's triumph, is made ...e attractive by musical selections of ... old South, and a setting, on the ...e, showing the scene, in reality, from ...ich the picture was taken.

"The Clansman" will be seen daily at ...tinee and evening performances dur... its stay in Oakland.

Mae Marsh, the diminutive actress in ... picture, leaped to world-wide fame ...rough the production. Her acting is ...e of the most striking features of the ...m, and the final tragic scenes at her ...eath drew tears from all parts of the ...use. Another genius is the actor who ...sumes the part of the mulatto ruler of ...e negro voters, and the character of ...toneman, the stern assailant of the ...hite man's power, is also vividly and ...everly portrayed. Lillian Gish, one of ...e beauties of the movie world, appears ...s Elsie Stoneman.

One of the battle scenes, showing the ...renches, and a bayonet charge from one ...mbankment to another, with five thou...and or more soldiers in authentic cos...umes and with real Civil War arms, is ... thrilling bit of war depiction. Several ...ther artillery and infantry scenes are ...striking.

(R. I.) SUN
AUG. 2, 1915

THE VICTORY OF THE PHOTO-PLAY

The film has moved from Broadway to Los Angeles, according to William A. Brady, the theatrical manager, who in his condensed and picturesque statement, describes the flight of "stars" from the speaking stage to the "canned" drama in response to irresistible offers of cash. It is not merely that this golden invitation has caused the desertion of Robert Mantell, with whom Mr. Brady has made Shakespeare pay on the speaking stage for years, but, in the words of the wailing manager, "the big salaries of the motion pictures are drawing all our actors away from us." Mr. Brady even goes so far as to say that "the motion picture industry is going to kill the drama within twelve months."

According to this authority, seventy-five per cent of the stars of the stage are now in California where is centered the business of the large photo-play producers. In addition to their ability to purchase the talents of the best actors and playwrights, the picture-play men can draw freely on the literature of a thousand years. "They can go to the public library," says Mr. Brady, "and get a thousand old books, from Shakespeare to Marie Corelli and 'John Halifax, Gentleman,' and put them boldly on the screen. We have to dig up the raw material which, in turn, they can use later at no expense."

Mr. Brady makes it clear that the speaking stage has fallen upon evil days and that its managers are laboring at a disadvantage, but he does not explain why all this has happened. Why were so many of the theaters "dark" during the past season and why were those still open doing business to half-filled chairs? Why have the motion-picture people so much money that they only need to beckon in order to see the best histrionic talent come running, dazzled by the offer of fabulous sums? In the beginning the success of moving-picture plays was explained on the ground that the "common crowd" would not pay theater prices when it could get entertainment of a sort for ten cents, but now the best seats at Griffith's great motion-picture production, "The Birth of a Nation," bring $2.00, and the people who go to the opera one night are seen at a high-class photo-play the next. Why is this?

The unavoidable answer is that the photo-play is more than a mere novelty, that in its highest development it has become fully as artistic as the speaking stage itself, that it can furnish the variety of a hundred scenes where the speaking stage can afford but one, that its possibilities—especially in out-door representations—are far in advance of what the speaking stage can accomplish. These superior assets, together with unlimited funds wherewith to secure the best talent, tend to offset, or more than offset, the speaking stage's two lone remaining advantages of color and the sound of the human voice.

In view of all this, the judicial public will hesitate to join the theatrical managers in deploring the success of the picture-play as a calamity. If the speaking stage is to maintain anything like its former dominion (it will survive, of course,) it must prove its superiority by further development, and it must fight deadly competition by accepting a smaller remuneration through the box office.

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 3, 1915

MAE MARSH TEACHER OF JUVENILE STAR

Mae Marsh, whose little sisters, ... "The Clansman," seen at the ... is so ... as well as a ... piece, as the result of ... is a full-fledged movie ac... and one of some note already. ... Marsh, one of the bright... little curlyhead ... clever children of the ... Beverly ... Wyoming ... Mae ... Theatre ...

BERKELEY (Cal.) GAZETTE
AUG. 4, 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" AGAIN PLAYS TO BIG HOUSES IN OAKLAND

Mary Alden in "The Clansman," at the Macdonough theater.

D. W. Griffith's latest achievement, "The Birth of a Nation" or, it is more generaly known as "The Clansman," in twelve reels, conceded to be the world's greatest motion picture production, and which cost more than $500,000 to produce, opened at the Macdonough theater last Monday for a brief return engagement.

Two exhibitions are given daily, a matinee at 2:15 and the evening performance at 8:10.

It has been pronounced by all reviewers to be the most potent drama of these times.

While it is an epic of pictures it is always intimately human; the great tragedy it depicts is illumined by constant natural comedy, and illuminated by a beautiful romance which threads the series of historical events.

There is a mastery of detail shown which is novel to the stage and this is combined with absolute fidelity to historical fact.

Lincoln's decisive act of signing the call for volunteers is as exact as if the audience had been present.

That immortal meeting of Lee and Grant at Appomattox court house is absolutely accurate, even to the sigh that bade farewell to all his greatness that moved Lee's breast as he affixed his signature to the terms of the unconditional surrender.

BERKELEY (Cal.) GAZETTE
AUG. 2, 1915

BIG GRIFFITH'S FILM RETURNS TO MACDONOUGH

D. W. Griffith's latest achievement, "The Birth of a Nation" or as it is more generaly known, "The Clansman," in twelve reels, conceded to be the world's greatest motion picture production, and which cost more than $500,000 to produce, opened at the Macdonough theater this afternoon for a brief return engagement.

Two exhibitions are given daily, a matinee at 2:15 and the evening performance at 8:10.

"While "The Clansman" is an epic of pictures it is always intimately human; the great tragedy it depicts is illumined by constant natural comedy, and illuminated by a beautiful romance which threads the series of historical events.

There is a mastery of detail shown which is novel to the stage and this is combined with absolute fidelity to historical fact.

The assassination of Lincoln, the dare-devil leap to the stage of Ford's theater by Booth is seen exactly as it was seen by the audience on that fateful night. More than 25,000 persons and 3000 horses were utilized in staging the production and eight months were required to complete it.

COMMERCIAL
N.Y. AUG. 1, 1915

A temporary injunction was issued by Chancellor Walker in Trenton on Saturday restraining the Commissioners of Atlantic City from closing the film production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the New Nixon Theatre The Chancellor also allowed a rule to show cause returnable Tuesday, August 24, why the injunction should not be made permanent. There are 12,000 negroes in Atlantic City and the officials feared race riots.

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 3, 1915

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES

AUG 3 1915

...hans Get the Great Film.

...hundred children from the ...Hebrew Orphan Asylum ...guests yesterday afternoon ...H. Kemble at the matinee ...at the Brighton Beach ...of D. W. Griffith's $500,000 ...tion, "The Birth of a Nation," ...panied by the ... forty pieces the children were ...to the music hall aboard spe... At the beach the children ...by William H. Kemble, the ... and the ushers. The chil... formed in a line and paraded ... Brighton Beach. This was ...give the children an oppor... see the resort and the ocean. ...band played a march. After ...about fifteen minutes ...into the Music Hall, where ...Kemble had reserved a spe... for them. At the same ...girl ushers and Manager ...himself supplied them with ...ade and fruit.

...Kemble, who has adopted ...of giving the orphans an ...ity to see the picture because ...educational value, will have sev...hundred children of St. Malachy's ...at Far Rockaway, as his ...this afternoon.

...audience of grown-ups at the ...formance was very large yes... The sweeping thrills of the ...epic, the whirling rush of ...dillery, the sinister conspirators, ...tender sentiment, appears to ...king a stronger appeal every ... "The Birth of a Nation" is one ...few dramatic attractions that ...notices.

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) EAGLE

Date ..... AUG 3 1915

ORPHANS AT BRIGHTON.

...hree hundred children from the ...oklyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum ...the guests yesterday afternoon ...William H. Kemble at the matinee ...formance at the Brighton Beach ...sic Hall of D. W. Griffith's $500,000 ...duction, "The Birth of a Nation," ...companied by the orphan asylum ...of forty pieces, the children ...conveyed to the music hall ...board special cars. At the beach the ...ildren were met by William H. ...emble, the manager, and the ushers. ...e children formed in a line and ...rraded around Brighton Beach.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union

AUG 3

MORE ORPHANS SEE "BIRTH OF A NATION"

...hree hundred children from the ...klyn Hebrew Orphan Asylum ...the guests yesterday afternoon ...William H. Kemble at the matinee ...formance at the Brighton Beach ...sic Hall of D. W. Griffith's pro...duction, "The Birth of a Nation." ...companied by the orphan asylum ...band of forty pieces the children ...were conveyed to the Music Hall in ...ecial cars. At the beach the chil...dren were met by William H. Kemble, ...manager, and the ushers. The ...ildren formed in a line and paraded ...around Brighton Beach. This was done ...give the children an opportunity to ...the resort. After they had paraded ...fteen minutes they filed into the ...Hall, where Manager Kemble ...reserved a special section for ...them. At the same time the girl ...ushers supplied them with orangeade ...and fruit.

Manager Kemble, who has adopted ...the policy of giving the orphans an ...opportunity to see the picture on ac...count of its educational value, has ...several hundred children of St. ...Malachy's Home at Rocke... ...his guests ... afternoon.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN

AUG. 3, 1915

...WERY PLAYS BIG PART IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Bringing the First Slaves to America.

ONE of the most striking scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Davidson theater, is the prologue which opens the offering, showing the importation of the first slaves to America. Slavery is made the theme of the photoplay for it is through slavery that the seeds of dissension are sown that end in the secession of the south, the Civil war, and the horrors of reconstruction. Tableaux of this film are impressive, particularly the signing of the emancipation proclamation, the surrender of Lee, the death of Lincoln, and other sets, based upon historic data and familiar pictures. Two performances are given daily.

ALAMEDA (Cal.) TIMES-STAR

AUG. 2, 1915

SCENE FROM "THE CLANSMAN" AT ...

Philadelphia, (Pa.) North American

Date aug 3, 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATION' REMAINS NIXON FEATURE AT SHORE

Entering upon its third week at the Nixon Theater, Atlantic City, with its daily audiences still increasing, the D. W. Griffith photoplay spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," bids fair to duplicate its New York and Chicago successes at the New Jersey resort.

The picture, which is coming to this city in the fall, is probably the last word in the realm of the motion picture. It conceives of the events that followed the civil war in a large constructive fashion and projects them with unsurpassed finish and scope.

MAIL. AUG 3, 1915

N. Y.

W. W. Hodkinson, chief ...ve of the Paramount, is credited ... interview with saying, "To me ... serious attempting to produce and exhibit $2 motion pictures is ridiculous." That is a statement that should never have come from the head of one of our most prominent organizations in these days of film advance. We have all seen the day when talk of producing four and five reel features was called ridiculous by some, and scores of other things have come to pass which various and sundry persons have declared impossible.

A tremendous change is under way in the attitude of the public toward films. They are choosing their films as they never chose them before. They are willing to pay real money if they are assured that they will see attractive productions. Such films have been made and they will be made again, more and more of them every day. Unfortunately, there are too few persons now in the film business able to produce the fine films the public demands, but there are scores of students now producing who will be the masters of future years. Because a competitor intends to try to present films at $2 should not call forth the prediction from Mr. Hodkinson that such a thing is impossible.

I have much respect for Mr. Hodkinson and his opinions and the things he has done as the head of Paramount, but he is wrong in attacking a purpose which cannot but lead to greater things. Mr. Hodkinson says that Paramount films are played at 50 cents top in the cities and 25 cent top in the small towns with many theatres getting 10 cents. He argues, evidently, that no one can produce greater films than Paramount is now doing.

I will disagree with him to the extent of saying that I believe within the coming year Paramount will be making productions which could be played in many cities at $2 top price. I do not think that just at the present moment any films will get $2 top prices in many cities, but I do believe $2 will be secured in some cities immediately, with good success; and in other cities as much as $1 will be secured at once. Within a year, I believe, we will have quite a number of film attractions playing this country getting as high as $2. The one important point which Mr. Hodkinson appears to disregard is that where Paramount films play, there are always to be furnished by the theatre some three or four other subjects to fill out the bill. Many times these fillers are not only weak; they are actually bad. The film attractions which will command the $2 top price will either be one tremendous subject, which will occupy an entire evening, or it will be a programme made up of two or three "feature" films of varying lengths. But they will be "feature" films in the true sense of the word, not according to the present classing of "features."

Before the big success, "The Birth of a Nation," was presented in New York it was easy to find persons who would say: "Talk of seriously attempting to produce and exhibit $2 motion pictures is ridiculous." But to-day we know it has been done successfully, once, and what has been done can be done again, and according to the history of achievement in films it can be done better than in the past. The day is here when films can be booked as productions of the stake have been in the past.

To the man who tells you that you cannot sell an exhibitor an evening's entertainment as a whole, because there might be some part of it he would not like, the answer is that just as many men said not many months ago that it was impossible to sell a man five-reel features, contracting with him to take one a week, even before he had seen them.

It is going to be done by the standardizing of "bookings." Yes, and it is going to be done within the next year. And I have a little hunch that the Paramount is going to be one of the organizations which will be making films within the coming year that they can get "ridiculous prices" for. There will also be others.

SPOKANE (Wash.) CHRONICLE

AUG. 4, 1915

851

PRAISES VIEW OF BIRTH OF NATION

Colored People as Opposed to Intermarriage as the Whites, Writer Declares

SPOKANE, Aug. 3—To the Editor of the Chronicle: Please, sir, accept the thanks of my race for your very frank criticism of "The Birth of a Nation." It takes a pretty strong man to stand up this time and spell the truth. Such men were Sumner, Garrison, Phillips and others.

Mr. Dixon seeks to raise the present estimate of the Ku Klux Klan, of which his father, a Baptist minister in North Carolina, was one. The Hon. Reverdy Johnson, a hired attorney for that secret black and midnight horde, withdrawing from the defense, thus addressed the court: "I have listened with unmixed horror to some of the testimony which has been brought before you. The outrages proved are shocking to humanity; they admit of neither excuse nor justification; they violate every obligation which law and nature imposes on men; they show that the parties engaged were brutes."

No Mention of Crime.

Out of 332 pages of testimony and argument in these same cases, no crime against a white woman is mentioned.

The better element of my race is just as averse to intermarriage as you. But we object to it being written in the statutes, because the very law which stands for equality of rights would then brand us legally as an inferior race and legalize the lust of white men who are continually multiplying the breed of mulattoes outside of wedlock throughout the south. Whites and blacks intermarrying are as completely ostracised in our social circles as yours.

Chronicle View Helps.

The Chronicle's view of "The Birth of a Nation" will do much to help us. We need your help. Your race has so much for which to be proud, so many opportunities to witness works as artistic, productions equally as spectacular, without aiding Mr. Dixon in his vicious mission.

The striving of the spiritual man is for all that is good, true and noble; that some faraway day this rhetorical expression "The Fatherhood of God and the Brotherhood of Man" may no longer be a dream, but an actuality.

If, as is said, Christian ministers have nothing to say against "The Birth of a Nation," and Christian men and women accept the same view, some day God Almighty is coming back and smash their new religious pattern to pieces and build a new one.

Respectfully,

BLANCHE KNIGHT ROBINSON,

N111 Jefferson street.

SHEBOYGAN (Wis.) PRESS

AUG. 6, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS COMING

"The Birth of a Nation," the great photographic play which has been creating such a sensation in Chicago, Milwaukee and other cities, will be seen at the Opera House in this city during the week of October 17. The company producing the great play carries its own orchestra, which forms an important part of the production in which 18,000 people compose the cast. Many Sheboygan people have gone to Milwaukee to see the production but now all will be given the opportunity of witnessing it at home in October.

CLIPPING FROM

Date 9-15

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) JOURNAL

AUG. ... 15

The fifth week of the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," at the David... ...satisfactory as have the preceding days. This film establishes a new record in the motion picture world ...Milwaukee, Wisconsin, and the mid...dle west, except Chicago. Herman Kel...ie's orchestra and the musical setting, which is played throughout the perform...ance, is one of the big features of the ...gagement. People from all over Wis...consin have witnessed this performance, and it is expected that capacity houses ...ill view the remainder of the extended ...gagement. Seats are on sale for all ...rformances.

Veterans Plan to Visit Davidson.

Sixty inmates of the Soldiers' Home who have not seen the Civil war drama, "The Birth of a Nation," in motion pictures at the Davidson, have organized a party to see the play on Wednesday afternoon. The youngest member of the party is 71. Many members of the home have seen the picture and expressed their admiration of the realism depicted in the battle ...

PRESS. AUG. 3, 915

...the program.

DRAWS FROM OUTSIDE TOWNS.

Opening its second week in Spokane today at the Clemmer theater, D. W. Griffith's historical spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," faces a heavy advance sale for all the performances, according to Dr. H. S. Clemmer, manager of the theater. A feature of the reservations, he states, are those from surrounding towns.

In the two capacity performances yesterday were 12 automobile parties from out-of-town, so Dr. Clemmer states. He reports that these automobile parties are daily features and advance sales indicate that the present week will see still more of them. Many are coming in from the Palouse section, one party of 42 arriving last week in a special car attached to an Inland train.

Dr. Clemmer says delegations present at the performances during the first week represented practically every town of importance in the Inland Empire. The present week is announced by the management as the last for the picture in Spokane, although the Clemmer has the option on the film for another week. The Paramount service has been withdrawn for the week and only two ...

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE

AUG. 8, 1915

MACDONOUGH

...RALD
AUG. 4, 1915

...ity, by chance was ...
...as everyday become ...
...family of little Marshes ...
...part of the popular ...
...salary goes to educate these ...
...Miss Marsh spends her ...
...ting the touches onto her ...
...tion.

(Can.) CITIZEN
AUG. 4, 1915

...T ATTRACTION ...R THE EXHIBITION

... Making Motion Pic... for Night Show.

Central Canada Exhibition ...tion has secured D. W. ...h's speech-making motion pic... The Birth of a Nation, for the ...ght shows before the grand ... at the coming Ottawa fair. ... Birth of a Nation is New ...'s last word in high class amuse... It has been appearing for a ... time in the big Liberty Theater, ...ing immense crowds at prices ... $2 a seat. This picture play ...not only surpassed all other film ...ctions, but has eclipsed the ...ard spoken drama of the sea...

...ttawans visiting New York have ...rned with enthusiastic praise for ...mith's latest work. The profes...al dramatic critics have accord... it the most favorable criticism. ...cers of the Exhibition Associa... witnessed the great screen ...ma and on account of its ex...ordinary merit deemed it an ideal ...traction for the fair. Although ... Central Canada directors, some ...e ago, decided to make this in...vation in their program, it was ...ly this week that arrangements ...uld be completed for getting the ... thing into Canada while there is ... much demand for it across the ...rder.

The Birth of a Nation is based on ...ev. Thomas Dixon's novel, The ...lansman. Its title refers to the re...onstruction of the United States ...uring and after the Civil War on ...e issue of slavery. Plans for the ...icture were laid last year and the ...reation occupied eight months. ...he historical research, travel, ...hotographs and other preparatory ...ork cost half a million dollars. ...Eighteen thousand actors are in...volved, the principals including all ...he notable personages of the time ...from Abraham Lincoln down. Five ...thousand pictures are employed. The ...action covers the history and after...math of the war, combining with ...them a charming romance. The ...artist's conception of the thrilling ...battles and his devices in presenting ...them are wonderful, one authority ...declaring the whole work the great...est art conquest since the beginning ...of civilization.

The Birth of a Nation is such a ...forward step in motion photography ...that it has won the new title of the ...Eighth Wonder of the World.

...WAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
AUG. 4, 1915

...week—"The Birth of a Nation," now in ...fth week at the Davidson theater, pre... one of the best known actors of the ... Donald Crisp, in a comparatively minor ...that of Gen. Grant. Crisp was selected ...the part because of his stature and ...e, which admitted the possibility of a ... makeup of the great northern general. ...t appears in but one brief tableau, ...surrender of Lee, but the scene is one of ...most impressive of the film.

...ROOKLYN, (N. Y.) EAGLE
AUG 4 - 1915

...stimated that fully 125,00 per... ...ave witnessed D. W. Griffiths ...l film "The Birth of a Nation," ... its run of five weeks at the ...n Beach Music Hall.

...IMPORTANT ADDRESS CLIPPING FROM
Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union
AUG 5 - 1915

...t is estimated that 125,000 persons ...ring the five weeks it has run at ...ighton Beach Music Hall have wit...ssed D. W. Griffith's picture film, ...he Birth of a Nation." All who ...ve seen this picture are lost in ...ir praise of it. The many Civil ...r scenes, together with the march ... the Union Army to the sea, are ...masterpieces of motion picture pho...raphy. Many educational societies ...ve witnessed the picture.

AT OTTAWA FAIR

Picture Drama That Cost Half a Million Dollars to Produce to be Shown.

Grifith's famous half million dollar screen drama "The Birth of a Nation," has been secured for the six night shows before the grand stand at the coming Ottawa Exhibition. The Birth of a Nation derives its name from the theory advanced in Rev. Thomas Dixon's story "The Clansman," that the United States was born a new nation after the Civil War over slavery. The picture drama which is founded on this novel traces the history of the war by means of 5,000 matchless photographs, which cost half a million dollars to produce. Over 18,000 persons are included in the action and such historic scenes as the assassination of Lincoln, battles in which Grant, Sherman and Lee figured are faithfully reproduced. A very beautiful romance is interwoven in the military and political plot.

Grifith's latest work in motion photography proved a sensation, particularly among the dramatic critics. It had not before been realized that the motion picture could seriously rival the standard drama of the old time stage. But all this season in New York the Birth of a Nation has been drawing immense crowds at prices up to $2 a seat and generally considered the leading attraction in that city of many amusements. All this is verified by Ottawa people who visited New York this summer and also by officers of the Exhibition who inspected the picture play before recommending it to the directors.

Never before has such an important innovation been decided upon for the Ottawa fair's entertainment programme. The great artist's conception of war and his marvellous devices for conveying it will appeal strongly. Actors are required to present a satisfactory imitation of war and as the scope of action is far too great for the ordinary stage the gigantic picture drama alone is equal to the occasion.

Review. Aug 4, 1915
Atlantic City, N.J.

MAGNITUDE OF BIRTH OF NATION

Spectacle At New Nixon Almost Inconceivable In Scope

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's massive spectacle, now at the New Nixon, is the largest and most important production of a decade, yet not a word is spoken throughout the performance of nearly three hours. Music supplies the absence of speech, mechanical effects add realism, whilst the wizard of the screen, David W. Griffith, unfolds in 12,000 feet of film the thrilling romance of the War between the States and the Reconstruction of the Southland. Some idea of its magnitude may be had from the facts that 18,000 actors and 3000 horses took part and that the staging of this great "outdoor drama" cost half a million dollars.

Several of the actors are of Southern lineage. Henry Walthall, who plays the heroic role of the little Confederate colonel, is a member of the well-known Walthall family of Alabama. Miriam Cooper, who appears as Margaret Cameron, is a direct descendant of Charles Carroll, the Maryland signer of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Griffith is the son of a Brigadier General of the Confederate army.

For every character, however small, Mr. Griffith has found just the personality needed. After that his masterly direction made each one give a perfct characterization of the widely varying roles The result was not acting but life itself. Such realism is never seen on the old-fashioned stage. The limitations of the theater were swept away for Nature was Mr. Griffith's stage. Panorama after panorama is revealed to the astonished eyes of the spectator. The most inventive imagination could hardly picture to itself such scenes of splendor.

...WAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
AUG. 5, 1915

DAVIDSON—"The Birth of a Nation," the spectacular photoplay, in its fifth week of a record breaking run. Shown at 2:15 and 8:10 o'clock daily.

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Davidson, which is establishing new records for motion picture offerings in this city, has a list of actors in its cast that includes more than one leading man. In addition to Harry Walthall, who plays Ben Cameron, there is Robert Harron, the younger son; Wallace Reed, who is the fighting blacksmith; Joseph Henabery and Spottiswood Aiken, character leading men, and Ralph Lewis. Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish and Miriam Cooper form a trio of leading women. Two performances are given daily, and the engagement has been extended indefinitely.

TACOMA (Wash.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 4, 1915

"YOU'VE GOT COLD FEET, OLD SPORT," WOODS TO MILLS

Delegation Before Council in Protest Against Showing of "Birth of Nation."

Crowding the council chamber, moving picture theater managers, negro citizens of Tacoma, and others, interested in the contemplated passage of an ordinance aimed to prohibit the production of the feature film "The Birth of a Nation," in this city, Wednesday morning aired their views pro and con on the question of race prejudice, with direct significance to the photoplay in controversy.

Before the public arguments began Commissioners Woods and Mills engaged in a lively tilt, Commissioner Woods charging the commissioner of public safety with suffering from an attack of "cold feet" when he requested that final vote on the proposed ordinance be delayed for a week.

"I don't care what Mr. Woods says or believes with regard to this picture. I don't think the contemplated ordinance is worded properly, and I am not going to ask for its passage at this time," said Commissioner Mills.

"Oh, we all knew your attitude, Mills," retorted Woods. "Your temperature is going down fast, old sport."

"Nothing of the kind," responded Mills. "I think a delay in the passage will favorably affect all parties concerned."

"As far as I'm concerned," replied Woods, "I'm in favor of not deviating from the cognomen of 'freak town' that we acquired long ago. Let's pass the ordinance and perpetuate our freak reputation. We always take the opposite view of every precedent."

The ordinance was put over for a week following talks made by Colonel Joab, Attorney John Fletcher, Manager Charles Herald of the Tacoma theater, who is negotiating for the film, Attorney Evan Stallcup, and John Ryan, a local negro editor.

Colonel Joab, who brought about the current agitation, read from the published statements of well-known public characters in the East, who condemn the picture because of its depiction of the negro as a brute, and because of the historical incorrectness of the theme.

Mr. Ryan made a plea in behalf of the negro residents of the city, whom he said would inevitably suffer humiliation if the picture is shown here. He said that there had been race riots in Boston because of the picture.

Laws passed in Iowa and Ohio towns prohibiting the showing of the picture were alluded to by the speakers opposing the advent of the drama in Tacoma.

Mr. Herald said he had no intention of inciting any enmity between races by bringing the picture here, and read from newspapers in cities where the picture has been shown, which have nothing but praise for it as an elaborate production and a rousing film.

...MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 5, 1915

Revives Memories of the Great War

Miriam Cooper in "The Birth of a Nation."

Under a spell of realistic motion picture photography, veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic in reunion in Washington, D. C., Sept. 27 to Oct. 3, will have an opportunity to revive their memories of the terrible battles which were fought in the civil war. This will be through the medium of the realistic war scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," the fascinating pictorial drama of war, slavery and romance, now in its fifth week as a twice daily attraction at the Davidson theater in Milwaukee.

It is interesting to note that the parade of veterans on Pennsylvania avenue in Washington will be along a historic thoroughfare, half a century after the spectacular review of the victorious Union troops after the close of the terrible war.

All phases of war are depicted in the historic pictures and one who sees them can readily conceive of the danger and hardship entailed.

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE 671
AUG. 5, 1915

MACDONOUGH

Capacity audiences continue to greet D. W. Griffith's marvelous photodrama, "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," at the Macdonough theater where it is being shown twice daily. Two exhibitions are given daily, the matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

The periods included in this picture of seething conflict, spectacular romance, destruction and construction, are those immediately preceding the civil war, the war itself and the reconstruction period, with a finale showing the entire people forming a nation, the striving people of the past becoming a unit, an American with no north nor south of sentiment.

Griffith has in this drama of a nation, photographed an epic poem which favorably compares with the Iliad and Paradise Lost.

More than $500,000 was expended in the production of "The Birth of a Nation" and eight months were required to complete it.

More than 25,000 people and 3000 horses were utilized in staging the film.

"The Birth of a Nation" presents a remarkable blending of American history, romance, drama and comedy midst historical scenes.

Star. Alameda. Cal
Aug. 5, 1915

LOGANSPORT (Ind.) REPORTER
AUG. 3, 1915

[illegible] New York [illegible] Brighton Beach Music [illegible] the record for Greater New York is piling up faster than was known before for a theatrical [illegible] in New York.

CINCINNATI (Ohio) TIMES-STAR
AUG. 5, 1915

"[illegible] NATION" [illegible] booking has not been [illegible] it is believed that "The Birth of a Nation," spectacular photoplay, will be used as the opening attraction at the Grand Opera house in September. This picture has been playing for many months in New York at a $2-scale of prices and similar prices prevail in Chicago. Klaw and Erlanger now hold the booking rights for "The Birth of the Nation."

SPOKANE (Wash.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 3, 1915

STAGE STUFF

NOT ALL BAD, AND NOT ALL GOOD, "BIRTH OF NATION" IS FOUND

Photoplay Tells in Powerful Way the Awfulness of War —Great Photography Has Been Done, but Picture Is Poor Teacher of America's History.

By JAMES EMMET ROYCE.

If "The Birth of a Nation" were all bad, it would not have reaped record receipts in every city where shown, exhausted the superlatives of reviewers throughout the country and delighted millions of theatergoers.

On the other hand, if it were all good, it would not have caused riot and bloodshed in Boston, split the Illinois courts on the censorship problem and evoked protests from sections of nearly every community.

There is a share of each element in the photo spectacle and, to weigh the two, large houses gathered at the Clemmer theater yesterday afternoon and evening.

Why It Is Great Film.

Roughly, the claims made for the picture are these:

It employs more players than any other film ever made in America.

It reveals entirely new possibilities of motion photography.

It tells a powerful and appealing story in an intensely dramatic way.

It is the most pretentious portrayal of national events ever thrown upon the screen.

Its Shortcomings.

The criticisms directed against it may be summed up under three heads:

It is manifestly unjust to the negro race.

It presents a deliberately falsified recital of critical events in American history.

It glorifies mob law and mob violence, as exemplified by the night riders known as the Ku Klux Klan.

Both Views Justified.

The dozen reels of film contain much to justify both the eulogy and the indictment. Pictorially and dramatically "The Birth of a Nation" is a masterpiece; historically it has blundered.

Even those most opposed to the exhibition of the film have shown no wish to deny its great value as an example of what possibilities the photodrama field possesses.

Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," on which David Griffith founded "The Birth of a Nation," was a story of unusual interest, but the film producer has even increased its dramatic value. It paints the feeling between the north and the south at its highest and its bitterest. It is a play which can not fail to move any audience, wheresoever gathered.

Changes in the Story.

Mr. Griffith has made several material changes in the romance, sometimes to soften its brusker aspects and sometimes merely to heighten its theatrical points. The role of Flora, for example, has been written in to replace that of Marian Lancir, and a spectacular suicide to escape her pursued is substituted for the assault of which the novelist tells.

The Stoneman and Cameron families are shown as friends throughout the war and the great conflict itself is made a big part of the film, leading up to the hospital scene with which the original story opened.

The result has been to place a much greater amount of dramatic material in the hands of the producer, who has made most excellent use of it. It permits battle scenes never equalled in picture plays, night photography which can not but win applause and bits of tense action, over which the spectators found themselves time after time applauding the dumb figures on the screen.

Are Same Objections.

As for the objections against the photodrama, they are essentially the same as those which "The Clansman" itself met as a novel and as a stage production. They are faults found with Mr. Dixon as a historian and propagandist, and not with Mr. Griffith as a maker of films.

"The Clansman," without question, was a story conceived and written in the greatest bitterness, and Mr. Griffith, also a southerner, seemingly found no reason to alter its viewpoint.

"The Clansman," Mr. Dixon himself has been quoted as admitting, was a "story with a purpose." That purpose was to teach the southern view of the reconstruction and to create an abhorrence for colored men in the hearts of white people, especially of white women, in order to stop intermarriage.

Echo in Audience.

How well that purpose has succeeded was noticeable even in last night's far-north and seemingly open-minded audience, the spirit of whose applause for every checkmating of a black-skinned character could not be attributed entirely to the dramatic handling of the theme.

"The Clansman" and "The Birth of a Nation" are both manifestly unfair to the negro, because they paint the negro race not as one far more wronged than wronging but as a people wholly bad in whose veins the blood for white womanhood flows uncontrolled. The objection is not that as the Celt or the Hebrew might be, for a single offensive character in an occasional play. It is one founded on a portrayal which shows the negro as irredeemably bad, the sole example of a faithful black being thrown in as a mere sop—far more for its dramatic value than for any other reason.

The Dixon view of the reconstruction is hardly that of any historian. Save for his telling tribute to Abraham Lincoln his picture of the northern legislative attitude toward the south is uncompromisingly hard, while the Austin Stoneman of the pictures (plainly meant to be Thaddeus Stevens, republican editorial leader of the sixties) is just as unflattering a character as that of the novel.

For the Ku Klux Klan of the film, riding by night in its robe of mystery and bearing aloft the cross of fire, it is hard to smother a cheer. There is no intimation of the brutality, the lynchings, and the other outrages committed in its name, which still find an echo in southern crimes that are a reproach upon the very word, civilization.

In Blow to Jingoism.

Such is "The Birth of a Nation," unquestionably the most notable product of the screen. A judgment of it simply amounts to finding whether the preponderance is with the good or with the bad—and few of open mind will say the former does not lead. In one single aspect alone—as a discouragement of war—it is more than worth while. In its portrayal of the awful aftermath of carnage, it has all the power and twice the appeal of even "The Trojan Women."

SPOKANE (Wash.) REVIEW
AUG. 3, 1915

GREAT WAR MOVIE FILLS CLEMMER

Premier Performance of "The Birth of a Nation" Takes Spokane by Storm.

SOCIETY OUT IN FORCE

[illegible] Thrill to Tears at Sight of Thousands—Wonderful Music Aids Performance.

The local engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's drama of the reconstruction period, "The Clansman," opened auspiciously yesterday to two audiences that filled practically every seat in the Clemmer theater. Not since the new picture playhouse was opened has a picture received a more tumultuous reception than greeted the D. W. Griffith pictorial masterpiece at the two performances yesterday. Limousines and automobiles lined the curb on both sides of the theater, and the night performance took on the appearance of a gala social event.

Takes Spectators by Storm.

The applause was almost deafening at times often during the performance. "The Birth of a Nation" certainly took the spectators by storm. Many visiting Eagles were in the night audience.

Not the least effective part of the presentation is the wonderful musical score, skilfully interpreted on the big pipe organ by Oliver Wallace, organist of the Clemmer theater in Seattle, where the picture has just completed a record-breaking five weeks' run.

The big scenes with the first day audiences were the battle scenes and those with a strong patriotic appeal. The crowd went wild when Wallace broke into "Dixie" as the southern troops marched to the front, and the applause was thunderous when he struck up "Marching Through Georgia" as the film showed Sherman's march to the sea.

Rise When Lincoln Appears.

Everybody stood when the figure of Lincoln was flashed on the screen in the scene showing him praying after signing the first call for volunteers. His entrance to the Ford theater the night of his assassination might have been his entrance to the Clemmer, so vivid was it and so enthusiastically did the crowd receive it. The surrender of Lee to Grant was another episode that touched the red blood that brounght forth a roar of applause.

The battle scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" are stupendous. No other word describes them. In number of men employed, maneuvers executed and spectacular effect nothing previously done in pictures has approached them. The night scenes are not only marvels of photography but graphic portrayals of war as it really is. The horrible, ghastly scenes after the conflict are the most eloquent plea for peace that can be conceived, portraying the horror and sadness of war and its futility and hate-breeding effects.

Scenes Bring Tears to Audience.

There were many wet eyes in many parts of the picture. The home scenes, where father, mother and sisters hear of the death of one brother and son after another and the homecoming of the survivor to a wrecked and ruined household are sad as only war can make sadness. The parallel, in thousands of European homes is obvious.

Griffith has achieved a large number of unusual effects in the picture. Night photography is used for the first time effectively, and the marshalling of thousands of men is done with a master hand in the battle numbers, the mob scenes with drunken negroes or the assembling of the Ku Klux Klan. The latter is a pictorial marvel, the scenes being tinted an uncanny salmon tinge. Hundreds of white-robed mounted figures are shown in these scenes.

Makes Martyrs of Clansmen.

Dixon makes all his Clansmen glorified martyrs, and practically all his black people are fiendish beasts, without a redeeming feature. His radical views have been given full sway in the latter part of the picture, and Griffith has overlooked no detestable bit of stage business to secure the effect intended.

Henry Walthall as Colonel Cameron, Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman, Mae Marsh as Flora, the pet sister, and Miriam Cooper as Margaret Cameron have the principal parts and do the greatest work of their careers. There are many principals in the cast, all uniformly good. George Seigmann's Bliss Lynch, the mulatto governor, is a great bit of characterization.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) LEADER
AUG. 4, 1915

THEATERS

DAVIDSON—Movies. Fifth week of "The Birth of a Nation," greatest motion picture ever produced. Great battles of civil war realistically portrayed.

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

War in its grim and tragic phases is accurately shown in "The Birth of a Nation," the motion picture drama in the Davidson, now in its fifth week. The pictures depict the slave problem and the great war of the rebellion.

In staging the pictures, D. W. Griffith, consulted military experts who availed themselves of all the information it was possible to gain from history.

Big battles were studied out and an army of 15,000 actor-soldiers and 3,000 cavalrymen were rehearsed in their maneuvers before the films were made.

The preparations were expensive and considerable energy was expended in the construction of trenches and breastworks, vast fields being replaced to normal condition after the mimic engagements were fought.

The battle of Gettysburg and the siege of Petersburg are remarkable films, visualizing warfare.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXAMINER
AUG. 8, 1915

'The Clansman' Again Will Be Presented in Los Angeles

"THE CLANSMAN," the greatest of all motion pictures, adapted from the popular novel of Thomas Dixon, Jr., will open its seventeenth week at Clune's Auditorium Theater tomorrow afternoon.

This picture was produced by D. W. Griffith, and during its sixteen weeks' run here played to over 300,000 persons. At New York, Boston and Chicago, where it is playing at $2.00 prices, "The Clansman," or "The Birth of a Nation," as it is called there, is sold out weeks in advance, so wonderful is its hold on the American public.

In "The Clansman" are seen the greatest battle scenes ever staged, over 25,000 soldiers being used, including fifty companies of cavalry and 25 batteries of artillery. The most startling effects were gained in this picture, especially the night battle scenes.

The famous raids of the Ku Klux Klan, with thousands of these white-hooded riders in action, are faithfully reproduced in "The Clansman."

For the first time in history, the assassination of President Lincoln is graphically portrayed, showing the interior of Ford's theater true in every detail.

Owing to the length of "The Clansman," there will be only two performances daily, at 2:30 and 8:00 p. m.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
AUG. 8, 1915

MUSIC OF "BIRTH OF NATION" IMPOSES BIG TASK ON ORCHESTRA

What is one of the most interesting phases of "The Birth of a Nation," is the musical setting which accompanies every presentation of that tremendous photospectacle at the Davidson theater.

Joseph Carl Briel was responsible for the arrangement of this accompaniment, and so cleverly has it been synchronized, that every cut of the film is rendered with appropriate music. There are no less than 889 music cues, ranging from light to gay, and from war strains to love themes. Griffith, in all of his films, believes in sharp contrast. The midst of a battle scene may be interrupted with a glimpse of home, or a struggle contrasted with a love situation. This rendered the work of the arranger the more difficult.

Griffith himself is a Virginian. He was born in that state, and his father was a commander in the Confederate ranks. His early days were spent among the negroes of the war-scarred plantation, and from them he learned weird Etiop melodies that have been used to advantage. Stirring martial songs of '61, and sentimental tunes the belles and beaux of those days loved, were woven into the accompaniment. Then the work of Briel is seen—the weird call of the Ku Klux, the martial motif that themes the beginning, and the rumble of war and dissension that is worked throughout the whole.

Herman Kelbe's orchestra has a gigantic task each day. Twice it follows through this music. It takes them 2 hours and 45 minutes to play it, not including a 6-minute intermission.

DERRY (N. H.) NEWS
AUG. 6, 1915

[illegible] Majesty [illegible] that [illegible] leading role in his great production of the Birth of a Nation." In [illegible] mendation could be given to her success is phenomenal. [illegible] the Broadway, Monday.

...NTOWN (Pa.) LEADER
AUG. 7, 1915

CLEVELAND MOFFETT VISITS ALLENTOWN

His "Conquest of America" to Be Greatest of Picture Dramas

It is planned to have the hills and valleys of Lehigh county as the setting for a moving picture dramatization even greater than "The Birth of a Nation."

Cleveland Moffett, the famous magazine writer, author of "The Conquest of America," now running through McClure's and a number of Sunday newspaper magazines, was here yesterday, looking toward staging his great story around Allentown.

Thomas Dixon, author of "The Birth of a Nation," heads a company that has determined to dramatise "The Birth of a Nation."

Mr. Moffett had letters of introduction to Colonel Harry C. Trexler, the Quartermaster General of Pennsylvania, and General C. T. O'Neill, commander of the Fourth Brigade, N. G. P., and through their offices obtained permission to have pictures taken of the marching of Battery A, of Bethlehem, to Tobyhanna, and also scenes of the artillery firing going on there. By their advice he also arranged to have pictures taken of the Second Brigade encampment at Indiana this week.

Arrangements have also been made to have pictures taken of the marching and evolutions of the United States regulars at Texas City, and of calvary on the move at other places.

The real battles, which will form the most thrilling part of the picture drama, will have to be enacted by companies formed especially for that purpose, and on account of the historic associations of Pennsylvania with the freedom of the Republic and the victory at Gettysburg, they are to be produced on Pennsylvania soil, in Lehigh County, which sent out the First Defenders.

Mr. Moffett was taken on an auto trip to survey Allentown and its environs by Colonel Carson W. Masters, son of a veteran of the Bucktail regiment.

...rth Birth of a Nation ever ... approached the ... Birth of a Nation," the ... rama of the slave prob... l war which is attracting ... of spectators to the Da... afternoon and evening ... nance Saturday night the ... g play will pass into the ... of its engagement here. Vis... s entertained daily from cities ... t Wisconsin and the pe... such sources indicates ... o Milwaukee is incom... a visit to the Davidson. ... rts have been received ... k and other large cities in ... e pictures are exhibited ... are twelve reels of epic ... pectacles which tell the story ... uble romance, which explain ... ude of the North and the de... the stubborn South over the ... ue, and which carry one ... scenes of the long, cruel war, ... ages to the world being "Lib... d Union, one and inseparable." ... Stoneman of the North is in ... th the sister of Col. Cameron ... South. And Col. Cameron is ... ted with the sister of Col. ... an. These romances are de... before the war and the views ... ow the drawing of lines and the ... cement of war worked es... ment, distress and hardship on ... ung lovers and members of their ... s. Brave young men embrace ... mothers, sisters and sweethearts ... depart for army service, their ... ns being depicted in their resp... ces. The pictures also show ... tic women at home sewing and ... g for the soldiers. ... magic films reveal the interiors ... Northern and Southern homes. ... sees vast armies mustered to ... away to war. In a twinkling ... cene changes and the sun shines ... tly on a snowy cotton field in the ... , with scores of negroes of all ... plucking the white blossoms. ... ive little picaninnies caper about ... at nightfall in cabin quarters ... ing and dancing are indulged in by ... slaves. Bondage is visualized ... its sorows and its joys. As the ... progresses great battles are ... ht and the thrilling action from ... fire to cavalry clashes and artil... duels is depicted in pictorial form ... true to life as it is possible for ... han agency to simulate. ... cenes are unfolded in which 18,000 ... diers and 3,000 cavalry, the largest ... atrical army ever assembled, are ... tive in the performance of the good ... d bad deeds of warfare. One sees ... bayonet charge with a quiver of ex... ement and closes his eyes at sight ... the dying and the dead. Ambu... nce drivers arrive to carry away the ... llen and hospital doors are thrown ... en to receive the injured. Gentle ... rses flit from cot to cot to minister ... the wants of the patients. ... Historic scenes are depicted with ... alistic effect, ranging from battle ... gagements, such as the battle of ... ettysburg, the siege of Petersburg, ... herman's march to the sea and the ... all of Atlanta, to events in Wash... gton. In the pictures Gen. Robert ... E. Lee strides forth to clasp the hand ... f Gen. U. S. Grant, his conqueror at ... Appomatox. Another historical event ... f lasting impressiveness is the as... assination of President Abraham Lin... coln, presented as accurately as the ... details are remembered by eye wit... nesses and as exact reproduction of ... the playhouse in which the martyred ... president lost his life. ... Peace is exemplified in a brilliant... ly impressive pageant and the pic... torial story continues with the for... tunes of the reunited lovers and the ... trouble experienced in the South over ... the abuse of political power vested in ... the imancipated negroes. Mob violence ... and outlawry are depicted, followed by ... spectacular views of the Ku Klux ... Klansmen who organized secretly to ... control the negroes through their su... perstitious fears. The Klansmen were ... fearless night-riders and they wore ... white shrouds. Acts of vengeance ... were perpetrated under the cover of ... darkness and the pictures show clearly ... why such extreme measures were ... necessary for the continuance of law ... and order. "In point of interest the ... Klansmen spectacles rival the war ... aspects of the graphic photoplay.

GALVESTON (Tex.) NEWS
AUG. 8, 1915

ART GOES ON ROAD WITH NEW SUCCESS

Playhouses Must Be Readjusted to Stage Enormous Spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation."

New York, Aug. 7.—When D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," goes on the road during the regular season this widely discussed production will be projected upon the same elaborate scale that has marked its success in New York, where it has just turned the sixth month of the run at the Liberty Theater.

Some idea of the preparation necessary to present the great spectacle in the proper light can be understood when it is known that Mr. Griffith's forces are now arranging for two cars to carry the technical equipment necessary for the presentations on the tour. Several days before the attraction reaches here the advance guard of the Griffith corps will be on hand. The house has to be scientifically readjusted along the newest lines invented by the producer. These arrangements are all based upon plans which students of focal requirements for the perfect projection of the great story have studied out in minute detail.

The company carries its own booths and the latest improved machines, which are duplicates of those now in use in New York. It requires from three to four days' work to complete the details in each theater for the proper presentation of the spectacle. With the company is a sympony orchestra to play the accompanying score and nearly one hundred members of the organization who look after the effects of the production. In addition to the two cars of equipment, the company will travel in special sleeping cars, as all the jumps will be made at nighttime. Griffith is a great stickler for detail, and the silent forces which contribute so much to the perfect presentation of his spectacle equal in numbers some of the largest of the touring musical organizations.

By H. T. Ryan

The scoffers are confounded and the unbelievers are set at naught.

All of which is but another way of stating that there is every indication at this writing that "The Birth of a Nation" will complete its allotted assignment of eight summer weeks at the Davidson theater, thereby establishing a record for theatrical "runs" in our fair city that will probably stand for some time to come.

True, that word "summer" may be a bit misleading, for with our genial city editor setting up, on Aug. 4, the gas heater that he only took down in the latter part of June—because "the baby caught a cold" on Aug 3—and with the prisoners at the county jail clamoring for heat until the sheriff got steam up despite the boldfaced attempt of the calendar to prove that we are now on the edge of the "dog days," there is some justification for the assertion of the pessimists that we "ain't had no summer" this year. However, a la George Monroe, be that as it may, a five-week run for a motion picture attraction at $1.50 a throw is not to be sneered at, summer or winter in Milwaukee, and the end is not yet.

I took in the Griffith masterpiece last Wednesday night for the 'steenth time, and during the intermission I visited a bit with Treasurer Schnell at the boxoffice window. "Bill" was overjoyed at the way "The Birth of a Nation" had fooled the wiseacres who thought it wouldn't last the second week out.

"Why," he declared, "it's made money from the start, and with a five-weeks run to its credit the picture is drawing bigger houses right now than it has at any time before."

When "The Birth of a Nation" began its run at the Davidson there were plenty of persons—and I don't deny that I was among 'em—who seriously doubted Manager Sherman Brown's wisdom in entering into a deal to keep the film at the Third street playhouse for eight weeks when it was a matter of record that no attraction had ever enjoyed a two-week's run with successful financial results in this city before. The film is now entering upon its sixth successful week with every indication not only that it will stay the original eight weeks, but that its engagement could profitably be extended did not contracts and preparations for the opening up of a new season preclude the possibility of such a step. Indeed, it is more than probable that plans for some redecorating that have been under consideration will be sidetracked for the time being rather than cut short the successful run of the Griffith film before it becomes absolutely necessary to do so.

All of which is going some for Milwaukee theaterdom.

—)o(—

Incidentally, the success of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Davidson is in a way a tribute to the power of advertising. No theatrical attraction in years has been advertised in Milwaukee to the extent that the Davidson management has gone in giving publicity to the big civil war play, this being particularly true with regard to the newspaper advertising and the method in which it was handled. There can be no question that the persistent reiteration of the manifold attractions in "The Birth of a Nation" through the medium of "display" ads and the accompanying reading notices, to say nothing of the editorial comment that the attraction has attracted on its merits has had its effect, drawing many hundreds of persons to the Davidson the past six weeks both from the city and from remote corners of the state who, if the management had not "cut loose" in the matter of advertising, would never have heard of the big Griffith production, or, if they had, would know it only as they know a thousand other feature photoplays, merely by name.

MIRIAM COOPER IN "THE CLANSMAN" AT MASONIC TEMPLE ... OUGH IN OAKLAND.

S. F. Star Alameda Cal. Aug 9 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" TO RUN AGAIN ALL NEXT WEEK

Yielding to poular demand the management of the Masonic theater has cancelled all other attractions in order to continue "The Birth of a Nation" or as it is generally known "The Clansman" for a second week of its return engagement, commencing Monday, August 9th.

Two exhibitions are given daily including Sunday, the matinee taking place at 2:15 and the evening performance at 8:10.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been pronounced by all reviewers to be the most potent drama of these times.

While it is an epic of slavery it is always intimately human, the great tragedy it depicts is illumined by a beautiful romance which threads the series of historical events.

There is a mastery of detail shown which is novel to the stage, and this is combined with absolute fidelity to historical fact.

Lincoln's decisive act of signing the call for volunteers is as real as if the audience had been present. The immortal meeting of Lee and Grant at Appomattox court house is absolutely accurate, even to the sign that bade farewell to all his greatness that moved Lee's breast as he affixed his signature to the terms of the "unconditional surrender."

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
AUG. 7, 1915

MUSIC IS STRONG FEATURE OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

One of the most interesting portions of "The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay at the Davidson theater, is the music setting which accompanies every presentation of that film. The setting by Joseph Conrad Briel, runs for two hours and forty-five minutes continuously, with but a six minute intermission. This means that the orchestra under Herman Kelbe plays steadily for five and one-half hours each day. It means that 380 music cues must be caught and followed, for the music is synchronized to the film, and each scene is accompanied by an appropriate theming.

Griffith, a Virginian, remembering the negro melodies of his childhood, were arranged to meet the cues and then were added to the war airs. So there is "We're Coming, Father Abraham," "Marching Through Georgia," "Old Kentucky Home," "Year of Jubilee" and "In the Glooming," with other selections harking back to the belles and beaux of the days of '61.

The task of Briel was rendered the more difficult because of the [illegible] scenes, and the quick transition from light to gay.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Date Aug 8, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

That stupendous pictorial history of the Civil War and the period following it, "The Birth of a Nation," continues to draw enthusiastic crowds at the Nixon Theatre, in Atlantic City. This work reproduces in realistic detail the battles of the war, introducing Grant and Lee and other personages whoose careers are known to every schoolboy and girl; meetings of President Lincoln and his Cabinet, and other happenings of equal historical importance. Then, there are the stirring scenes in the South during the period of reconstruction; the Ku Klux Clan is shown at work, and the doings of the nefarious carpet-bagger exposed.

Thousands of men and horses were employed in the making of the great ensembled scenes for the drama. It is said to have cost $500,000 to produce it.

SACRAMENTO (Cal.) BEE
AUG. 7, 1915

As a follow-up to "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith has begun preparations for another great masterpiece, "The Mother and the Law." Among the prominent people who will appear in it are Mae Marsh, Mary Alden, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis and Walter Long.

Sunday Oregonian Portland Oregon July 25 1915

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) TIMES
AUG. 8, 1915

Clune's Auditorium.

"The Clansman" returns to Clune's Auditorium this week, opening tomorrow for its seventeenth big week. Already over 300,000 people in this city alone have witnessed the big feature film. In New York, Boston and Chicago the film is still running to $2 prices, with no prospect of abatement in interest.

Nothing approaching "The Clansmen"—agree all who have seen it—has been produced in the motion picture world, especially in point of vividness, historical value and elaborate action. In the twelve reels embracing the story, the South is shown before, during and after that terrible strife, the Civil War.

David W. Griffith, the producer, has set a high mark in this motion-picture production, and any which it will be difficult to surpass. [illegible] who [illegible] will [illegible] the [illegible] work will [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) LEADER

MOVIE MAKES A RECORD

Prosperous business of "The Birth of a Nation," the thrilling pictorial drama of the slave issue and the civil war in the Davidson, indicates the attraction will be retained for an entire run of eight weeks, the longest engagement of any theatrical attraction ever presented in Milwaukee.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
Aug. 6, 1915

MUSICAL SCORE FOR SPECTACLE

"Birth of a Nation" Has Specially Prepared Musical Setting

The great theatrical sensation of New York, Boston and Chicago, "The Birth of a Nation" is now in the third week of its summer run at the New Nixon.

The first half of the D. W. Griffith spectacle unrolls scenes and incidents from the Civil War on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. The second half is a pictorial chronicle of Reconstruction days in the South, including the carpetbagger negro excesses and the rise and triumph of the Ku Klux Klan. Interwoven with the whole is a double romance of the Blue and the Gray, suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman."

In preparing the musical setting of this great production Mr. Griffith had hoped to find in folk-song collections the motifs for the symphonic score. His search was unsuccessful. Then he thought of the plantation melodies he used to hear as a boy down in Kentucky times that had never been made into crochets and quavers. As he worked, a different Southern air suggested itself for each character in the pictorial story. Joseph Carl Breil jotted down the hummed tunes. Mr. Briel next essayed the tremendous labor of scoring the 5000 scenes of the play, each with its appropriate music. The synchronization of the score to the scenes was indeed a task of magnitude.

There is an orchestra of forty and a large force of expert technicians.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Aug 7, 1915

Lighting "The Birth of a Nation"

Although "The Birth of the Nation" at the New Nixon in Atlantic City has been "crowding in," the management has at great cost installed new motors and dynamos to increase the volume of light.

The new apparatus is the latest improved type manufactured in the Fort Wayne Electric Works of the General Electric Company. The factory had been working day and night to have the machines ready for last Monday night, and the express company held a special car in readiness to transport them.

The lighting expert of the Epoch Producing Company, Cecil R. Wood, came on from New York, and with an expert corps of trained men made the change of apparatus in the short time of three hours. In three minutes after they had finished the evening performance began.

To give an ideal projection to this wonderful work of education and art to the audiences in Atlantic City, making it fully on a par with that of New York, Chicago and Boston, has entailed a cost of over $1000 to the management.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now the brightest picture in Atlantic City, and to realize what was necessary to obtain the dazzling whiteness and vivid detail it is only needful to state that the new apparatus develops and uses 25,000 candle power and uses electricity at the rate of $50 a day.

With a symphony orchestra of 40, and with the large force of electrical experts, operators, effect men and others, it can readily be seen that the cost of running this production equals that of large dramatic companies.

N. Y. WORLD. AUG 7, 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre will have its 400th performance in Greater New York on Friday night.

N. Y. GLOBE. AUG. 7, 1915

THE BEST MOVING PICTURES.

LIBERTY.—D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theatre will turn its 400th performance in Greater New York at this house next Friday night. This is the longest run of the current season. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if "The Birth of a Nation" will establish the long-distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome.

N. Y. JOURNAL OF COMMERCE. AUG. 7 1915

MOTION PICTURE NOTES.

D. W. Griffith's great photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will have its 400th New York performance at the Liberty Theatre next Friday night. The patronage shows that this will be by no means the end of the run and it is expected that the picture will establish a long distance record in a number of showings. Up to date more than 400,000 persons have attended the presentations.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union
AUG 9 - 1915

"The Birth of the Nation" in motion pictures is doing unusual business at the Brighton Beach Music Hall.

CLIPPING FROM
PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD
Date AUG 8 1915

THE GRIFFITH MASTERWORK

"Birth of a Nation" Continuing to Enthrall Seashore Visitors.

David W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is duplicating at the New Nixon, Atlantic City, runs in New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles. Partly from the nature of the new art and partly from the opposition aroused, this work has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of recent years, and the extraordinary demand for seats indicates the size of the eager throngs which are coming to the New Nixon.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, the piece's technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the civil war; Lincoln's call for troops; the ball on the eve of Bull Run and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march to the sea and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the Federal President; the harsh Radical policy to the South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan and the overthrow of the carpet-bagger—negro regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the spectator.

Of equal importance with the scenes is the music that interprets them. It consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged after Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union
Aug 8, 1915

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL.—D. W. Griffith's $500,000 film, "The Birth of a Nation," continues to draw big crowds to the Brighton Beach Music Hall. This is the sixth week of the production and there is no evidence of lack of interest.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 7, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's Civil War picture, will have its four hundredth performance at the Liberty Theatre Friday night. It is to be seen also at the Brighton Beach Music Hall and at theatres in other cities. More than 400,000 persons have witnessed the film.

"The BIRTH of a NATION" Brighton Beach

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Aug 8 1915

BRIGHTON BEACH—Entering on its sixth week at Coney Island, D. W. Griffith's $50,000 spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is being presented at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, has proved to be one of the greatest drawing attractions in the film field. More than 125,000 visitors to Brighton Beach have viewed the picture, which presents the stirring times of the Civil War. There has been much commendation of "The Birth of a Nation" by educators and historians who have seen it, and the D. W. Griffiths interests have received requests from all sections of the country for its production. In several instances, school authorities have taken all the pupils of an entire school to witness the performance. Lillian Gish, the heroine of the play; Miriam Cooper, who portrayed the character of the sister of the Southern general; Mae Marsh, Mary Alden and several other performers in the leading roles soon will be the guests of William H. Kemble, the manager, and his associate, H. Clark Mooney, at one of the performances.

Since "The Birth of a Nation" has been playing at the Brighton Beach Music Hall Manager Kemble has had more than 1,000 orphans as his guests at several of the performances, and throughout the rest of the season will accommodate as many more as possible.

"A LIVE SCENE IN THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, (N. Y.)

"The Birth of a Nation" Entering upon its sixth week at Coney Island, D. W. Griffith's $50,000 spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is being presented at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, has proved to be one of the greatest drawing attractions in the film field. Already more than 125,000 visitors to Brighton Beach have viewed the picture, which presents the stirring times of the Civil War. There has been much commendation of "The Birth of a Nation" by educators and historians who have seen it, and the D. W. Griffiths interests have received requests from all sections of the country for its production. In several instances, school authorities have taken all the pupils of an entire school to witness the performance. Lillian Gish, the heroine of the play; Miriam Cooper, who portrayed the character of the sister of the Southern general; Mae Marsh, Mary Alden and several other performers in the leading roles soon will be the guests of William H. Kemble, the manager, and his associate, H. Clark Mooney, at one of the performances. Since "The Birth of a Nation" has been playing at the Brighton Beach Music Hall Manager Kemble has had more than 1,000 orphans as his guests at several of the performances, and throughout the rest of the season will accommodate as many more as possible.

FOUR FILMS IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Upper line, soldiers in the heat of battle; Sherman's troops marching to the sea; lower line, scene exemplifying protection of slaves by the Ku Klux Klan in the Sunny South before the war.

SUN. N.Y. AUG 1, 1915

LIBERTY—D. W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month, will turn its 400th performance in Greater New York at this house next Friday night. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if "The Birth of a Nation" will establish the long distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date over 400,000 people have attended the local presentations. The big attraction [illegible]

MAIL. N. Y.
AUG. 7, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Record.

D. W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty [illegible] will turn its 400th performance [illegible] at this house next Friday [illegible] is the longest [illegible] To date [illegible]

ASSINATION OF LINCOLN IN "THE BIRTH OF TION" AT THE BRIGHTON BEACH
USIC HALL

Beach Music Hall.—"Birth of ton Theatre.—Vaudeville.
—Coney Island.
e Park.—Coney Island.

TON BEACH and Coney offer infinite amusement and ion to tired business men.
mothers and men, women and en who are not tired but wish amused. King Revel holds large kingdom and Coney Islcapital. There joy is unconre is thrown to the winds.

BEACH MUSIC HALL.—Entering
easide theatre, ith's spectacular "Birth of a as proved to be the greatest traction in the film field.
more than 125,000 Brooklyn resi-sojourners at Brighton Beach ed the picture which presents g times of the civil war, ine days preceding the outbreak, reconstruction period following.
e scenes, one of which shows s march of General Sherman to nd another, the last stand of the ates as their cause was lost, have admiration of hundreds of veterfought in the struggle and who bers of Grand Army posts in this as been so much commendation of th of a Nation" by educators and who have seen it that the D. W. interests have received requests sections of the country for its

n. In several cities the school es, it is asserted, voiced their ap-f its educational value by taking pupils of an entire school at one e the performance.
tors who portrayed President Lineral Grant, General Lee and other aracters of the strife spent six rehearsing. All the while they the characteristics and habits of and portrayed them in remarkable

Gish, the heroine of the play; Mirper, who portrayed the character ister of the Southern general; Mae her sister Mary Alden and several erformers in the leading rôles will the guests of William H. Kemble, nager, and his associate, H. Clark at one of the performances.
"The Birth of a Nation" has been at the Brighton Beach Music Hall mble has had more than 1,000 ors his guests at several of the per-ces, and throughout the rest of the will accommodate as many more as

N.Y. TRIBUNE
AUG 8 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theatre, will turn its 400th performance in greater New York at this house next Friday night. This is the longest run of the current season. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if "The Birth of a Nation" will establish the long-distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date more than 400,000 people have attended the local presentations. The big attraction more than held its own in the face of the terrific weather last week, and the returns were in keeping with its record since it began its stay here.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.
Aug 8, 1915

Scene in "The Birth of a Nation" Nixon, Atlantic City (Motion Pictures)

AUG. 5. 1915
MARINETTE (Wis.) EAGLE-STAR

"BIRTH OF NATION" IS COMING TO MARINETTE

GREATEST FILM PRODUCTION EVER MADE WILL BE SHOWN AT MARINETTE THEATER, THE FIRST WEEK IN SEPTEMBER

"The Birth of a Nation" is coming to Marinette. The greatest photoplay ever produced, the one that caused a national sensation, is to be shown at the Marinette theater. the first week in September. Beginning with Labor Day, the Griffith wonder picture will be shown every night for a week.

Marinette will be the only city between Green Bay and Marquette to get this great film production. The appearance of the picture here will be billed in all the northern towns and many visitors are expected here from as far north as Escanaba and Iron Mountain and south to Oconto, to see it. This city will also be about the seventh city in the United States to get it.

Chicago, New York, San Francisco, Milwaukee and some other cities have had the opportunity to view it but few others. It is now showing in Milwaukee and attracting great crowds. it is the picture which tells the story of the civil war and over 10,000 people were used in its production.

(N. Y.) TELEGRAPH
AUG 21 191
THEATRE

N.Y. TELEGRAM
AUG. 8, 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theatre, will turn its four hundredth performance in Greater New York at this house next Friday night. This is the longest run of the current season.

AMERICAN. N.Y
AUG. 8, 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theatre will turn its 400th performance in Greater New York at this house next Friday night. This is the longest run of the current season. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if "The Birth of a Nation" will establish the long distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date over 400,000 people have attended the local presentations. The big attraction more than held its own in the face of the terrific weather last week and the returns were in keeping with its wonderful record made since it began its stay here.

BIRTH OF A NATION.

Bringing It To Savannah Means Much Work.

When D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is presented here during the regular season, this widely discussed production will be projected upon the same elaborate scale that has marked its success in New York, where it has just turned the sixth month of the run at the Liberty Theater.

Some idea of the preparation necessary to present the great spectacle in the proper light can be understood when it is known that Mr. Griffith's forces are now arranging for two cars to carry the technical equipment necessary for the presentation on tour. Several days before the attraction reaches here the advance guard of the Griffith corps will be on hand. The house has to be scientifically readjusted along the newest lines invented by the producer. These arrangements are all based upon plans which students of focal requirements for the perfect projection of the great story have studied out in minute detail. The company carries its own booths and the latest improved machines, which are duplicates of those now in use in New York. It requires from three to four days' work to complete the details in each theater for the proper presentation of the spectacle. With the company is a symphony orchestra to play the accompanying score and nearly one hundred members of the organization who look after the effects of the production. In addition to the two cars of equipment the company will travel in special sleeping cars, as all the jumps will be made at night time. Griffith is a great stickler for detail and the silent forces which contribute so much to the perfect presentation of his spectacle equal in numbers some of the largest of the touring musical organizations.

CABLE ADDRESS CLIPSBURO
CLIPPING FROM AUG 8 191
PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS

BIG FILM SPECTACLE MAKES HISTORY REAL

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is decidedly the most remarkable historical spectacle ever presented in America. It is now in the full swing of a successful all-Summer run at the New Nixon, Atlantic City, where it is playing to the most phenomenal business of the season.

Petersburg and Atlanta, Appomattox and Ford's Theater, the foothills of South Carolina and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan live again in Mr. Griffith's 12,000 feet of superb motion picture, which took eight months to produce, cost $500,000, employed 18,000 people and 3000 horses. This great spectacle is an epitome of scenes, incidents, characters, passions and emotions of the whole great period from 1861 to 1871—the period of the Civil War and Reconstruction. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" and "The Leopard's Spots," "The Birth of a Nation" has a grandly epical quality. The battle scenes are shown on a scale and with an imaginative quality that vividly resemble actual warfare.

The musical accompaniment adds to the thrill of the war scenes and intensifies the romance of the love episodes. The orchestra plays Southern and old-time airs for the softer scenes, while the big battle views are given to the clash and blare of martial music and the emotion-arousing classical compositions.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
AUG. 8, 1915

MUSIC IS STRONG FEATURE OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

One of the most interesting portions of "The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay at the Davidson theater, is the music setting which accompanies every presentation of that film. The setting, by Joseph Conrad Briel, runs for two hours and forty-five minutes continuously, with but a six minute intermission. This means that the orchestra under Herman Kelbe plays steadily for five and one-half hours each day. It means that 889 music cues must be caught and followed, for the music is synchronized to the film, and each scene is accompanied by an appropriate theming.

Griffith, a Virginian, remembering the negro melodies of his childhood, were arranged to meet the cues and then were added to the war airs. So there is "We're Coming, Father Abraham," "Marching Through Georgia," "Old Kentucky Home," "Year of Jubilee" and "In the Gloaming," with other selections harking back to the belles and beaux of the days of '61.

The task of Briel was rendered the more difficult because of the shortness of some scenes, and the quick transitions from light to gay.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) JOURNAL
AUG. 8, 1915

BIRMINGHAM (ALA.) NEWS
AUG. 8, 1915

GOSSIP OF THE MOVIES

BY PETTERSEN MARZONI

MOST of the big feature comp anies, companies that release the productions to the exhibitor s, are beginning their second year and the plans of all show the de velopment of motion pictures in the last twelve months.

The entire development of the industry has been marvelous, but the last year has seen forward strides that overshadow anything in the past.

The motion picture has reached a plane prophesied by many who sensed what it meant to the millions throughout the country, and the scoffers of the metropolitan centers have fallen under the sway of what they once termed "flickering shadows," and they too, are prophesying a greater future now.

Motion pictures at $2 are no longer a novelty. When first announced, they were considered impossible, but "The Birth of the Nation" is still showing on Broadway and seats are being sold weeks in advance. The price no longer causes wonderment, it is taken for granted. Even the announcement of a projected chain of $2 movies throughout the country merely caused the speculative incident to any untried enterprise, and there are many who look for success in the venture, what a year ago would have seen nothing but scoffs.

The dignity of productions of the last several months has hushed the cry, "Is it art?" and there is no longer any fear of being chided for seeing the movies because "it isn't done, you know." It is true the captious still cry for the abolition of the term "movies" and the substitution of the more elegant "photoplay." Most of these stylists are newly acquired followers of pictures, who do not realize that "movies" was adopted through affection rather than [illegible]

AUG. 9. 1915
SCRANTON (Pa.) TRIBUNE-REPUBLICAN

TOM KANE TO BE AHEAD OF "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Tom Kane, local newspaperman, who for the past several years has been connected with various theatrical firms in the publicity end, will leave on Wednesday to take charge of the advance work of the "Birth of a Nation," which will tour the southern section of the country.

The photoplay, which is having an extraordinary run at the Liberty theater, New York, will open at Asbury Park this week. Mr. Kane expects to be with the film for many months.

...es, N. BEDFORD
...N. AUG. 8, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" Coming.
especial interest will be the cement that on the week of Aug.
both the Orpheum and Thevien res the first production in New ord of the famous picture "The of a Nation." This picture has n thus far only in New York, on and Chicag and is just red for use in the smaller cities on date mentioned. In fact the pic-will be shown here on exactly the date that it will be shown for first time in Providence.

...ERALD. N.Y.
AUG. 8, 1915

Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of n," will be presented for the four th time in the greater city in the Theatre Friday night. As there is ase in the interest in the picture, ing to establish a new record in g runs. More than four hundred already have attended the ngagements.

ATLANTIC CITY (N.J.) PRESS AUG. 10

"The Birth of a Nation" will reach its sixth week at the Liberty Theatre next Monday evening. Over 400,000 people already have seen it since the opening March.

TELEGRAPH. N.Y.
AUG. 10, 1915

AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE

"The Birth of a Nation" Continues to Crowd Capacity Houses.

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theatre, will turn its 400th performance in Greater New York at this house next Friday night. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if "The Birth of a Nation" will establish the long distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date more than 400,000 people have attended the local presentations.

AUG. 9, 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN

PHOTOPLAY IN SIXTH WEEK

The sixth week of "The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay at the Davidson theater, is now well under way. The organization of the Griffith company, of which this is the first release, promises a series of like photoplays. "The Mother and the Law" is the title of the second release, to be made shortly. "The Birth of a Nation" is, beyond question, the most pretentious film ever staged in this country. There are twelve reels, and a special musical accompaniment, arranged by Joseph Carl Briel, that is rendered at every presentation. Seats may be obtained for the remainder of the extended engagement.

TELEGRAPH
N.Y. AUG. 9, 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theatre, will turn its 400th performance in Greater New York at this house next Friday night. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if "The Birth of a Nation" will establish the long distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date over 400,000 people have attended the local presentations.

PROVIDENCE (R.I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 7 AUG. 9, 1915

Permit Probable for "The Birth of a Nation"

[illegible] Birth of a Nation," [illegible] will [illegible] try [illegible] shows at the Providence Opera House despite the previous decision of the Police Commissioner that the photoplay would be barred from this state.

Chairman Walter A. Freeman of the Commission said this morning that he considered the picture objectionable "from the standpoint of one understanding the game, which has been the basis of the protest from colored people here. This scene has to do with an assault by a colored man but the thread of the story is not marred by its absence, so it will doubtless be eliminated.

To-morrow morning the entire picture, 12 reels or in the vicinity of two miles of film, will be shown privately to the Police Commission, and in the event that nothing objectionable in the eyes of the authorities appears, a permit to produce the photoplay will in all probability be granted.

Col. Felix R. Wendelschafer, manager of the Providence Opera House, is the petitioner for a permit to show the photoplay. A hearing yesterday on the petition brought together at the Police Commissioners office a large delegation of persons interested, many clergymen and its particular representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard Union
Date AUG 10 1915

BRIGHTON MUSIC HALL

"The Birth of a Nation" began its sixth week at the Brighton Beach Music Hall yesterday, showing no signs of any decrease in popularity. The war spectacles in the Griffith films hold the attention of the audiences most strongly, owing to present conditions, but the moral and political lessons also make a strong appeal. The matinee and evening performances run about evenly in point of attendance.

AMERICAN. N.Y.
AUG 9, 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," now in its sixth month at the Liberty Theatre will turn its 400th performance in Greater New York at this house next Friday night. This is the longest run of the current season. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if "The Birth of a Nation" will establish the long distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date over 400,000 people have attended the local presentations. The big attraction more than held its own in the face of the terrific weather last week and the returns were in keeping with its wonderful record made since it began its stay here.

TACOMA (Wash.) NEWS-HERALD
Aug 6, 1915

Woman's Defense of the Moving Picture, "Birth of Nation"

Editor of The News:

I wish a word in favor of the moving picture production, "The Birth of a Nation." As a moving picture show it is simply marvelous and as a matter of history of the conditions in the southern states from 1865 to 1870 a true and faithful representation in every detail and calculated to enlighten the people of this generation who have so long been in ignorance of the truth. Unlike Col. Jesse I did not come away feeling "heart sick at heart," but with a feeling of gladness that I live in a country where no one is afraid to portray the truth.

As to creating a prejudice against the negro race [illegible] with those who are ignorant of the true negro character. There are good and bad men among all peoples.

The negro as represented by the "Clansman" by Dixon (a noted Baptist preacher) is a true portrayal of the [illegible] race who for hundreds of years have been subject to others, give them freedom, elevate them to place and power, incite them to acts of arrogance and violence, put guns in their hands and what will follow except rioting and bloodshed.

[illegible] any feeling of resentment is [illegible] it is against the "Carpet Baggers" and "Scalawags" who descended upon the south for their own aggrandisement and the humiliation of its people.

But, we know that these men were not the representative people of the south, no more than the negro shown in the play represented their race.

The negro should be proud to feel that in the half century of freedom, by the aid and good will of the white man he has attained such measure of success. Allow me to quote the closing words of a colored man of the south, Dr. [illegible] in an address on Emancipation Day at Little Rock, Ark.: "Let us forget the love of the southern man which we forfeited for the few political husks on which we fed, and their love will make us free. The ruined southern white man gave us homes and food. He fed us when hungry, clothed us when naked, administered to us when sick, and visited us when in prison. And our Lord says, for one to do that is to do it for him. Let us not forget it, but celebrate it. Remember, all ye who think that this

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH
Date AUG 10 1915

Griffith Picture at New Nixon.

Capacity houses continue to be the rule at the New Nixon, Atlantic City, where David W. Griffith's pictorial spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is breaking all records for a summer run. Although meeting with determined opposition from those who fear the excitement of race prejudice, this presentation is running with unparalleled success in the best theatres of New York, Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, San Francisco and Los Angeles. It falls in the highest class of moving photography the story of the Civil War and the dark days which followed it in the reconstruction period in the South—the days of the "carpet-baggers"—and is based on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." A large and excellent orchestra adds much to the pleasure of the spectacle.

AUG. 8, 1915
TERRE HAUTE (Ind.) TRIBUNE

Unless D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," can be induced to make reasonable concessions to local managers, Terre Haute, in common with other cities that are usually one night stands for two dollar shows, will be assigned the task of supporting a week's engagement of the wonderful film spectacle at the prices that are being charged in Chicago and New York. Contracts being sent out by the producer of "The Birth of a Nation" stipulate that at least two-thirds of the seats on the first floor of theatres in which it is presented must be held at two dollars for night shows, with a dollar the limit at matinees. Also, Mr. Griffith would make Terre Haute a six night stand.

"The Birth of a Nation" is being booked like a regulation dramatic attraction. Each film sent out will have an orchestra, special stage equipment, with a dozen men to handle the production, and there will be an advance agent, a "second man" and a business manager for each show. In seeking a week's booking for "The Birth of a Nation" at two dollar prices, Mr. Griffith is expressing tremendous confidence in the theatregoers of Terre Haute and vicinity. Still, "Ben Hur" once played to $19,000 in a week at the Grand at prices scaling up to $3.

SHEBOYGAN (Wis.) PRESS
AUG. 9, 1915

THEATRICAL TREAT OF THE SEASON

"The Birth of a Nation," with its own orchestra of sixteen pieces is coming here October 17 for one week at the Opera House and Manager Vander Vaart will give the greatest treat of the season, to his patrons.

"Doc." Gardner representing the owners of the famous picture was here Saturday afternoon to make arrangements. He plans to make Sheboygan the central point for the Lake Shore counties and will advertise in Port Washington, Plymouth, Sheboygan Falls and other points with a view of drawing the people to Sheboykan. "The Birth of a Nation" will probably never be shown in this section of the country again, at least with a large orchestra. While the picture is great, the music forms a prominent part in its production. Besides the orchestra eight other actors assist in the presentation of the picture. The production consists of twelve reels, and runs three solid hours in Chicago, people have been turned away daily, and "The Birth of a Nation" will be produced here just as it was given in Chicago and New York. More than 18000 people take part in the cast and it is founded upon the "The Clansman," the great book written by Thomas Dixon, Jr. Be sure and read the book before you see the picture.

CLIPPING FROM Philadelphia, (Pa.) North American
AUG 10 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION' AT NIXON ATLANTIC CITY HOUSE

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's stirring film drama of civil war and reconstruction days, yesterday opened its fourth week at the Nixon Theater, Atlantic City. This film, which took Griffith eight months to make, is duplicating at the coast resort its previous success in New York, Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee and San Francisco.

While it is based on "The Clansman," the novel of Thomas Dixon, this film reveals quite definitely new liberties which their developed artistic instincts are compelling producers to take with their models.

[illegible] AUG. 7, 1915

[illegible] events will be [illegible] feature of the day. Music by Hayr's orchestra.

DAVIDSON.

No theatrical production ever brought to Milwaukee has approached the popularity of "The Birth of a Nation," the gripping photo-drama of the slave problem and the civil war, in the Davidson every afternoon and night.

With a performance Saturday night the play will pass into the sixth week of its engagement here.

There are 12 reels of vivid spectacles which tell the story of a double romance, which explain the attitude of the north and the defense of the stubborn south over the slave issue, and which carry one through scenes of the long, cruel war.

Scenes are unfolded in which 15,000 soldiers and 3,000 calvarymen are active in the performance of the good and bad deeds of warfare. One sees a bayonet charge with a quiver of excitement and closes his eyes at sight of the dying and the dead.

Historic scenes are depicted with realistic effect, ranging from battles to events in Washington. Mob violence and outlawry are depicted, followed by spectacular views of the Ku Klux Klansmen, who organized secretly to control the negroes through their superstitious fears. In point of [illegible]

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH
Date

Griffith Picture Continues.

"The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith's pictorial spectacle with music, continues its summer run at the New Nixon, Atlantic City. This is the offering that opened a new era in the best theatres of New York, Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where it has been running simultaneously for months. Despite great opposition, the play has never been suppressed, but has met approval everywhere. The first half of the spectacle, which was suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," exhibits the salient points of the war between the States, the formation of the Confederacy, Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march to the sea, the Battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant, and the tragedy of Lincoln's assassination. In the second half the South's "second uprising"—this time against the carpetbagger regime—is shown a story of Reconstruction Days. On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearance of the important characters and the enactment of the principal [illegible] Joseph Carl Breil, who composed the score, has used the Wagnerian idea [illegible] The music is played by a

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXPRESS
AUG. 5, 1915

[illegible] Bill will [illegible] newcomer [illegible] Melodious Chaps.

The Clansman to Return.

Viola Allen still continues to play to packed houses at Clune's Great Auditorium, where she is appearing in The White Sister. [illegible] dramatization of F. Marion Crawford's famous novel Miss Allen does some of her best work of her wonderful career, which makes the [illegible] unusual.

[illegible]

CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
AUG. 11, 1915

ELSIE STONEMAN AND THE SENTRY, "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE NEW NIXON THEATER.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
AUG. 10, 1915

MAE MARSH
In "The Birth of a Nation" at the New Nixon Theatre

(N. Y.) TELEGRAPH
AUG 2 1 191
THEATRE

klyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union
Aug 10, 1915

f week will be the seventh of un of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Brighton Beach Music

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) TIMES
AUG. 8, 1915

CHRONICLE
SPOKANE, WASH.
AUG. 7, 1915

SOME THOUGHTS FOR DOG DAYS ON THINGS THEATRICAL

Nearly Everybody Gossips Over "Birth of Nation"—Film Stars in Boycott.

By JAMES EMMET ROYCE.

As a tea table topic for the dog days, "The Birth of a Nation" could hardly be improved upon. There is so much to be said on one or the other side of it that its good points and its ghastly ones may be weighed and counted and measured over and over again.

As an ever-ready filling for conversational cavities, it already has quite eclipsed the European embroglio; on which account, if no other, Howard Clemmer, who brought it here, is entitled to no lukewarm vote of appreciation. It even surpasses the heat and the humidity as a straw at which to grasp when repartee seems liable to lag.

Its strongest point, perhaps, is that there is so wide a field for honest difference of opinion that in almost any company some one can be found to attack and some one to defend. It creeps, with equal indifference, into political debate and kensington gossip. It invades the church, the office and the family fireside.

Not to have seen it becomes a mark of unprogressiveness. To hold no opinion, either "for" or "forninst," marks one as indifferent indeed. The result is a demand for seats which may carry the booking over into its third week.

ALAMEDA (Cal.) TIMES-STAR
AUG. 5, 1915

MACDONOUGH THEATRE

The world's greatest motion picture "The Birth of a Nation" or as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," in 12 reels, produced by D. W. Griffith, the world's greatest motion picture producer, opened at the Macdonough theater last Monday for a brief return engagement. Two performances are given daily, a matinee at 2:15 and the evening exhibition at 8:10.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been hailed by the leading dramatic critics throughout the country as the sensation of the year. The film presents a remarkable blending of spectacular effects, history, drama, romance and poetry. In the production is a love story which arrives at a degree of poignancy unsurpassed in any drama of the stage. What the Ku Klux Klan was, why it was and how it was formed is shown in absorbingly dramatic scenes, such scenes as make the famous situations in La Tosca or the most pathetic of Shakespeare's plays [illegible]

TACOMA (Wash.) LEDGER
AUG. 9, 1915

GOING OFF HALF-COCKED.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been adjudged by competent critics to be a wonderful picture play, portraying scenes that arouse a patriotic pride in Americans; yet it is proposed by city ordinance to prevent the appearance of this production in Tacoma on the ground that it tends to create race hatred. An ordinance was advanced yesterday through second reading, but final action was postponed. It appears that not more than one member of the city council has ever seen the production and that the action so far taken is based on hearsay.

It is time for members of the city council to eliminate grandstanding, get down to business, and look before they leap. The proposed ordinance is designed to prevent the exhibition of pictures tending to arouse race prejudice or hatred. Suppose the ordinance were finally approved. Who would then decide whether any moving picture show tended to arouse race prejudice? Shall a few who profess to discover such a tendency in a picture play be permitted to deprive all others of the privilege of seeing such a fine production as "The Birth of a Nation"? The ordinance would open the way to unending disputes and controversies.

The better way is to leave questions of this sort to the good common sense of the people themselves. If they find a production is prejudicial or is an unfair representation, their condemnation will afford the remedy. While the ordinance appears to have been called forth by "The Birth of a Nation," it would apply to other productions as well and would put in the hands of a few busybodies, who conceive it to be their duty to think for other people, an instrument for nagging and browbeating a legitimate business and for depriving the public of the opportunity of seeing great moving picture shows that have been enjoyed in other parts of the country.

Let's have done with this going off half-cocked over at city hall. It's not a place to pass on a vast and impressive production like "The Birth of a Nation," which thousands of fathers have taken their sons to see for the patriotic lessons it teaches.

N. Y. Press
Aug 9, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation," which is now in its sixth month in the Liberty Theatre, will turn its 400th performance in Greater New York in this house next Friday night. As no end is in sight for the engagement it begins to look now as if this spectacle will establish the long distance run in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date over 400,000 people have attended the local presentation.

ATLANTIC CITY (N.J.) PRESS
AUG 8 1915

WALSH

MUSICAL ... DRAWS WELL FOR ...

...ees in six performances ...ord to date of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Clemmer ...ng to H. S. Clemmer ...e big Griffith masterpiece ...nning its two to three ... engagement in a manner ...s the anticipations of the ...at. The advance sale con... ...avy and covers many of next ... performances.

...management announces that the ...e will be shown one week more ... but the Clemmer has an option ... the third week and the film will be ...tained if the attendance warrants it. ...information has reached the theater ...at unscrupulous parties in the Inland Empire towns are selling fake ...kets to the performances. These ...are red cardboards, issued by the management for advertising purposes only, ...d are not good for admission. The ...servations noted on them are fic...tious, in fact every ticket bears the ...me section, row and seat designa...tion. Some of these have been presented for admission by people from ...t of town, who declare they purchased them from men representing ...emselves to be agents of the theater.

For the morning and dinner hours ...e Paramount feature, "Kindling," ...turing Charlotte Walker, is being ...shown. This is an unusually striking ...torial production and has been excelled by none of the Paramount re...ases in merit or artistic value. It ...as presented yesterday for the first ... and will be shown daily from 11 ...00 and from 5:30 to 7:30 for the ...

NEW YORK POST
AUG 10 1915

...'s Dream," a film play which is an answer to "The Birth of a Nation," has been written by Emmie Sterne. It will be produced shortly under the patronage of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, by the Universal Company. Otis Turner will be the producer. The film will be sent out over the country over routes covered by the other film.

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) TIMES
AUG. 10, 1915

"The Clansman"—Clune's Auditorium

"The Clansman," opening its seventeenth week last night at Clune's Auditorium Theater, with a capacity house, has again taken its place as the leading attraction of Los Angeles.

"The Clansman," or "The Birth of a Nation," as it is called in the East, has lost none of its great interest, and so wonderful is its interpretation of the terrible events that once shook the very foundations of our country, that its grip on the hearts of the American public has increased rather than lessened. From the smallest detail of the beautiful love romance it portrays, to the magnitude of its most tremendous battle scenes, "The Clansman" holds the interest to such a degree that the audience can only gasp its surprise at the wonder of it all.

The great number of tourists visiting Los Angeles will greatly increase the interest in this remarkable production, for its fame has spread throughout the world, and the desire to see it will make it one of the feature attractions of the Pacific Coast.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Date .....
AUG 14 1915

No Perversions of History

THE decision of the City Council of Atlantic City to suppress the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," looks like common sense. However costly the production may have been, now being multiplied endlessly over the country, it is well known that it was planned by and based on the works of a man whose partisan and passionate descriptions of American life belong to the perversions of history rather than to that fair and candid treatment of a controversial period that all sections should strive for.

To use for partisan purposes the tremendously cumulative agency of the photoplay, which has its educational value heightened to an unparalleled degree by its all-pervading character and the peculiar vividness of its visual appeal, is a great wrong. The moving picture has all the world for its field; its recreative ministrations are ever welcome. It is, in its best estate, the greatest invention for the highest form of entertainment ever devised. Those who live by it and profit by it, as well as those who merely enjoy it, and the authorities who have to pass on it, have certain inescapable responsibilities. And these should be met with a spirit of fair play and accommodation on both sides. But this does not mean easy-going lenity as to plays and scenes which sin against public morals or menace public order.

So far as the suppressed play goes, it is admittedly an attempt to reverse certain facts of history, to exalt race hatred into a kind of social religion, to cover up with a picturesque glamour some of the most abhorrent phases of the resumption of white rule in the South, wherein one great wrong did not justify others; and, in general, to teach history from an entirely one-sided sectional and offensive point of view. Those who have the right love of their common country are opposed to all efforts to present an essentially false view of history with all the fervor of a zealot, whose emotions, rather than events, determine his pictures of the [redacted]

N.Y. Globe

N.Y. Commercial
Aug. 14, 1915

With the passing of the old season, D. W. Griffith's ...

Birth of a Nation" established the record ... when last night, the ... New York was reached ... the twenty-seventh week of its ... ment at the Liberty. It will ... definitely.

St. Louis Times
Aug 14, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Opens Olympic; Santley at Shubert

Managers Sanford and Stoltz Make Public Some of the Big Engagements of the Coming Season—General Theatrical News.

By RAYMOND A. WALSH,
Dramatic Critic, St. Louis Times.

"The Birth of A Nation," said to be the most brilliant, vivid and stirring motion picture ever produced will open at the Olympic Theater on Sunday night, August 29, after a most sensational run at the New York and Chicago theaters. Joseph Santley in "All Around Town," a rollicking musical review, will open the Shubert season on Sunday night, September 12, on which date the official winter theatrical season for St. Louis will be inaugurated.

These were the two important announcements made Saturday by Managers Walter Sanford of the Olympic and Melville Stoltz of the Shubert. While the Olympic is opening with a moving picture it is not the sort of moving picture that is shown in the regular movie houses, as in the East the film was treated as a production worthy of the best and highest-priced theaters. If its appearance here can be anticipated from its record in New York, it will be one of the noteworthy events of the earl...

Noted Stars Among Olympic Bookings.

Mr. Sanford returned last night a... a vacation of three months at his s... mer cottage in Siasconset, Mass. He ... jubilant over his opening booking. ... is hardly to be wondered at when it ... remembered that "The Birth of a Nation" is rounding out its ninth month at the Liberty Theater, New York, its thirtieth week in Boston and its twentieth week in Chicago. In the latter place, by the way, its run at the Illinois Theater will be ended soon by the bookings of the regular season, but the Colonial Theater has been leased for one year for the purpose of continuing the engagement. No attraction, dramatic or otherwise, of the present day has caused more comment than "The Birth of a Nation," and it is expected that St. Louis will take the same extraordinary interest in it as has been exhibited in the other large cities.

"I consider it to be one of the most fortunate circumstances," said Mr. Sanford, "that we are able to open our season with an attraction of such magnitude. If I toldyouallthewonderfulthings ...tude. If I told you all the wonderful things about it I would not be believed except by those who have seen it selsewhere. St. Louis will soon know all about it, however, and I have every confidence that our record here will be better even than that of the other large cities, as our capacity is greater than that of any other theater at which it has been shown. 'The Birth of a Nation' is not my only cause for jubilation," he continued. "I have never heard St. Louis people so hopeful and so confident in their expressions of the certain prosperity of the city during the impending ... and winter. We are to have a new ...t life down town, they tell me; ...s are going to brighten up in every ...t, and, of course, you know, when ... begin to talk that way it genuineans something.

CLIPPING FROM Sentinel
Date Atlantic C. N.J. Aug 18 1915

BIRTH OF NATION AN INSTITUTION

Great Spectacle at New Nixon Surpasses Anything on Stage

"The Birth of a Nation," now on its fourth record-smashing week at the new Nixon, is as popular with the summer visitors as the Boardwalk and ocean. The theatre is the coolest indoor spot in Atlantic City and it is always comfortable even on the hottest days.

David W. Griffith's masterpiece has become much more than merely a popular attraction. It is not a firmly established entertainment that is seen over and over again by the most critical playgoers. In fact, with its five thousand swift changing scenes more than a view is required to grasp all of its interesting phases. Each easing new beauties are revealed.

In its infinite variety "The Birth of a Nation" far surpasses anything that has ever been shown on a stage. In mere pictorial beauty it excells the masterpieces in the art galleries of Paris, Rome and Munich, for it is the beauty of nature itself.

Years ago great battles were shown in cycloramas but that was most unsatisfactory for there was no life, no action. It was merely a painting on a grand scale. Now one can sit in a comfortable seat in a theatre and see the Battle of Petersburg visualized in so life like a manner that it is as if one were looking at the real battle from an observation tower. Homer and Virgil have kept alive for centuries the "glory that was of Greece and the grandeur that was of Rome." With his new and wonderful art Griffith has perpetuated for all time the ... story of American ...

Who on Wagnerian is played ...

St. Louis Star Aug 14.

Olympic and Shubert Openings and Bookings Are Announced

The Olympic Theater will open the season of 1915-1916 Sunday night, August 29, with "The Birth of the Nation," said to be the most brilliant, stirring and vivid masterpiece of the motion picture world. The film now is running its ninth month at the Liberty Theater, New York, its thirteenth week in Boston, and its twentieth week in Chicago. A theater has been leased in Chicago for a week for the film.

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
AUG. 14, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation," a filmed spectacle of unusual ... and scope, enormously popular, will have one more week at the Illinois before moving to the Colonial. It is a great picture. The earlier reels unroll Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, the assassination of Lincoln, and other wartime scenes on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of the days of reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and Ku-Klux Klan. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the south and a woman of the north. Music points and emphasizes all the scenes.

In the Summer Gardens

At Riverview tomorrow night the ...

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXPRESS
AUG. 10, 1915 4

The Clansman Returns

After last night's production of The Clansman at Clune's Auditorium it would seem that nothing is impossible, for that remarkable picture production "came back" with a punch that almost equaled that with which it opened its first performance here in February. The Clansman surely has not lost its power to attract, for the audience that gathered to witness its one hundred and ninety-fourth performance here was as great as any preceding it.

Depicting the darkest blot on the civilization of our nation, the Civil war and the reconstruction period, The Clansman has made a place for itself in history, for it reproduces with an accuracy hitherto considered impossible the terrible events that took place at that time. The Clansman has evidently gained a hold on the American public that cannot be shaken, and it will indeed be a long time before its dramatic equal in pictures will be found.

PROVIDENCE (R.I.) EVE...
AUG. 15, 1915

IT TO PRESENT RTH OF NATION'

o City Manager Employs nsel and Appeals to New Jersey Courts.

TION IS OBTAINED

(Dispatch to The Morning Telegraph.)

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 14.

is the answer of Samuel Nixon idelphia, lessee of the new Nixon on the Boardwalk, to the order last night by William Bartlett, of Public Safety, forbidding the tion of "The Birth of a Nation" Boardwalk playhouse.

Nixon obtained an injunction hancellor Walker at Trenton to-straining the Atlantic City offi-rom interfering with the produc-are not going to be made the vic-a political dodge to corral the vote in Atlantic City," declared ixon. "Talk of violence in con-with a film drama which has en by thousands in all of the ities is ridiculous."

has assembled a distinguished f lawyers to give the City Com-ers battle. His fighting force in-former Judge Gordon of Phila-, former Attorney General Mc-of Newark, former Judge Robert ll and former Assemblyman Em-Richards of Atlantic City.

k about suppressing the produc-absurd," Nixon, in a temper, said rning. "Why, it has not only been by J. Louis Breitinger of the ivania Board of Censorship, but authorities have been advised to rrangements for as many children ible to see it. Claims that it in-ace hatred, and for that reason be suppressed, are ridiculous. It vith nothing but historical facts."

ctor Bartlett's order for the sup-n of the film was issued last night etectives had reported to him that ro section of the city, where more 2,000 negroes live, was in a fer-ats have been made to stampede atre, to smash the windows and mit violence in other forms.

HERALD. N.Y. AUG. 15, 1915

Photoplay Exhibitor Wins.

(SPECIAL DESPATCH TO THE HERALD)

ANTIC CITY, N. J., Saturday.—Chan-Walker to-day in Trenton granted junction prohibiting the city of c City, its Director of Public Safety Chief of Police from interfering he presentation of "The Birth of a " in the New Nixon Theatre. This makes void the order sent by the or of Public Safety, William H. tt, to Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, to discontinue exhibition of Birth of a Nation," after next y.

TRIBUNE. N.Y. AUG 15, 1915

ATRE FILMS.

g of the old theatri-week D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Na-d the year's record d performances. On he 400th presentation ty was reached. The rts this week with the remaining one of the f attractions on the list. he twenty-seventh week ment at the Liberty The-are so many elements of ffith's epochal treatment t that it looks as if it the record for all offer-York before its run is The linking of history e, the magnitude of the and the wealth of detail to the production are quali-assist in making this offer-ular. It will continue at the definitely.

HERALD. N.Y. AUG. 15, 1915

Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of on" will enter upon the twenty-sev-eek of its engagement in the Lib-heatre this week. There are many of appeal in Mr. Griffith's treat-the history and romance combined ms Dixon's novel. It will continue Liberty Theatre indefinitely.

MAIL. AUG 14, 1915

'Birth of a Nation' Makes Stage Record

D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," has established the year's record run for continued performances. Friday night, the 400th presentation in New York city was reached.

The new season starts next week with the big production remaining one of the most talked of attractions on the list. This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty Theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in Griffith's epical treatment of the subject that it looks as if it will establish the record for all offerings in New York before its run is terminated. The linking of history and romance, the magnitude of the treatment and the wealth of detail crowded into the production, and qualities which assist in making this offering so popular. It will continue at the Liberty indefinitely.

SUN. N.Y. AUG. 15, 1915

LILLIAN GISH, IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

LIBERTY THEATRE—D. W. Griffith's film spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." Has just established a year's run according to the actual number of performances. This stirring civil war picture is still interesting many people each week.

TELEGRAPH. N.Y. AUG 15, 1915

With the passing of the old theatrical season last week D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," established the year's record run for continued performances. On Friday night the 400th presentation in New York City was reached. The new season starts this week with the big production remaining one of the most talked-of attractions on the list. This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty Theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in Griffith's treatment of the subject that it looks as if it will establish the record for all offerings in New York before its run is terminated.

PRESS. AUG. 15, 1915

Press Aug 15, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" has established a record run for continuous showings, for on last Friday night the 400th presentation in New York city was reached. The new season starts with the spectacle remaining one of the most popular attractions in town, and this week starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement in the Liberty Theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in the production that it looks as if it will establish a record for all offerings in New York before its run is terminated.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) HERALD

AUG 15

D. W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" will enter upon the twenty-seventh week of its engagement in the Liberty Theatre this week. There are many elements of appeal in Mr. Griffith's treatment of the history and romance combined in Thomas Dixon's novel. It will continue at the Liberty Theatre indefinitely.

TRIBUNE. N.Y. AUG. 15, 1915

An agreement was reached yesterday whereby an answer to "The Birth of a Nation," the photo-play dealing so harshly with the colored people, is to be put into films and sent out as a protest against the impression that this viewpoint of the colored race leaves on the mind.

Miss Elaine Sterne, who has made herself nationally known as one of our best scenario writers, conceived the idea of writing a film answer. Miss Sterne first came into prominence in the film field by winning the first prize in the Vitagraph scenario contest with a picture drama entitled "The Sins of the Mothers." Later she won "The Morning Telegraph" prize for the best film, and several other prizes as well. She is special scenario contributor to the Vitagraph Company and the Universal Company, and has written many scenarios for other companies also, including the Selig Polyscope Company, the Fox Film Corporation, etc. She has won a Collier's prize with her short stories and contributes, among others, tales of child life to "The St. Nicholas Magazine." Perhaps her best known series of films are those entitled "Sonny Jim," of which she writes at least one a month for the Vitagraph Company.

Miss Sterne, having felt the necessity of showing the other side of the negro problem, took her proposition to the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People at the time that this organization, under Mr. Villard, Rabbi Stepnen Wise and others, was doing its utmost to have some of the objectionable scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" eliminated. The association was delighted with the idea, and at once sent Miss Sterne to Washington and further South, where she was put thoroughly in touch with the progress that the negro race has made. She visited practically every institution of this kind, including the Hampton Institute and Tuskegee, where she spent some time in consultation with Booker T. Washington. Having collected her material, Miss Sterne then proceeded to write her answer, which she intends calling "Lincoln's Dream," and which is to be twelve reels in length.

The problem of financing this big undertaking was undertaken by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, and Miss Sterne, in her enthusiastic co-operation, was called to Boston and other New England points to read her synopsis, this calling forth the approval, in Boston, of Professor Hart, one of the best authorities on this portion of American history, who complimented Miss Sterne on the accuracy, as well as the interest, of her work. After considerable effort, the money necessary for so large a production was forthcoming, and yesterday a contract was finally signed with the Universal company, whereby they agreed to screen the story, and also, it is most likely, to allow Otis Turner, whose production of "Samson" and other large subjects entitles him to this distinction, to produce it.

When completed, "Lincoln's Dream" will be booked throughout the land as a special feature and sent out, over routes covered by "The Birth of a Nation." Every colored organization in the country has agreed to do its share in giving this production publicity and the colored people who have been consulted before and after the composition of the play are highly enthusiastic at the prospect. They claim that the optimistic nature of the subject and the thorough understanding that Miss Sterne has put into her script is the first, as they consider it, fair discussion and exposition of their development that they have been given since the Civil War.

TIMES. N.Y. AUG. 15, 1915.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is going to answer "The Birth of a Nation" in its own coin. When this film, based on Thomas Dixon's story of the South, was first produced the association carried on an agitation against it, which resulted in the elimination of some scenes considered objectionable, but which failed to accomplish its aim, since the picture was not placed under the censorial ban.

Elaine Sterne, who has won fame as a writer of scenarios, conceived the idea of answering "The Birth of a Nation" with a film in which the development of the colored race should be set forth. After interesting the association in her scheme, Miss Sterne went South to study the subject. "Lincoln's Dream" is the title she has given the scenario based on the material gathered. The Universal Film Company has arranged to produce the picture, which will be sent wherever the film responsible for the protest is exhibited.

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK AMERICAN

Date

Vienna and other European capitals [illegible] were ago and was afterward [illegible] Cosmo in New [illegible] scenes, by Friedrich Freksa, [illegible] "Tales of the Arabian [illegible] claimed to be the most [illegible] offering of vaudeville [illegible] with the passing of the old theatrical season last week D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," established the year's record run for continued performances. On Friday night the four-hundredth presentation in New York City was reached. The new season starts this week with the big production remaining one of the most talked-of attractions on the list. This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty Theatre.

PRESS. AUG. 1

"The Birth of a Nation" twenty-seventh week the Liberty Theatre.

AMERICAN. AUG

With the passing of the old theatrical season last week D. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," established the year's record run for continued performances. On Friday night the four-hundredth presentation in New York City was reached.

The new season starts this week with the big production remaining one of the most talked-of attractions on the list. This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty Theatre.

WORLD. N.Y. AUG. 15,

RALPH LEWIS as Hon. Austin Stoneman, in "Birth of a Nation"

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) EAGLE

Aug 15, 1915

BIG FILM MAKES GOOD.

Because of the success of the run of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, William H. Kemble, the managing director, and his associates, have been able to pay the Griffith interests the $65,000 they guaranteed for the privilege of presenting the film in Brooklyn. In paying this high price Brooklyn not only was shown the picture before Philadelphia and other big cities, but Manager Kemble obtained the exclusive right to present it in this borough. Many producers expressed the opinion that the manager of the Music Hall paid an exceptional amount for the privilege, but the attendance and the receipts have more than justified the venture. The receipts for the performances would be even larger but for the fact that on a number of occasions Mr. Kemble set aside half of the house for the accommodation of hundreds of orphans of the borough. The orphans, who came from Brooklyn homes, were taken to the Brighton Beach Music Hall in special cars and were served with orangeade and fruit. "The Birth of a Nation" will be presented at the Music Hall the rest of the season. Many educational and patriotic and historical societies have reserved blocks of seats for theater parties. Already many of the seats for the last performance that will be given at the Music Hall have been sold.

WORLD. N.Y. AUG. 15, 1915

BRIGHTON BEACH—"The Birth of a Nation."
HENDERSON'S—Vaudeville.
LUNA PARK—Lilliput Island.
NEW BRIGHTON—Vaudeville.
SHELBURNE—"Splash Me."
STEEPLECHASE—Orphans' Day.

BRIGHTON BEACH—Because of the success of the run of D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, William H. Kemble, the managing director, and his associates, have been able to pay the Griffith interests the $65,000 they guaranteed for the privilege of presenting the great film in Brooklyn. Paying this high price, not only gave Brooklyn the picture before Philadelphia and other big cities had it, but gave manager Kembel the exclusive right to present it in this borough. The film, which is a picture history of the days of the Civil War, has drawn crowded houses even in rainy and unseasonable weather. Many film producers expressed the opinion that the manager of the Music Hall paid too much for the [illegible] but the attendance and the [illegible] more than justified [illegible] receipts would [illegible] but for the fact that on [illegible] occasions Mr. Kemble [illegible] of the house for the [illegible] of hundreds of orphans [illegible]

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) PRESS
Aug 5,

MUSICAL FOR ST. LOUIS WILL SOON SEE FIRST MOVIES AT $1.50

"Birth of a Nation" to Open at Olympic Aug. 29, at Regular Prices.

St. Louis is to have its first taste of $1.50 moving pictures, when "The Birth of a Nation" opens at the Olympic Theater Sunday night, Aug. 29.

"The Birth of a Nation" is generally recognized as the most elaborate motion picture ever made, and it is to be exhibited throughout the United States, as it has for months past been shown in Eastern cities, only in high-grade theaters, and at the regular scale of prices prevailing in those houses.

The action of "The Birth of a Nation" deals with American history, in and after the Civil War period. The play is in part founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." This novel, and the dramatization of it, have been condemned as unjust to the negro race, and as historically untrue. The same charge has been made against "The Birth of a Nation," and an unsuccessful attempt was made, in Boston, to prevent the production of the film on this ground.

This Season's Shows.

Walter Sanford, manager of the Olympic, returned to St. Louis yesterday and announced that the Olympic's list of attractions, following "The Birth of a Nation,"

St Louis, Daily Globe Democrat. Aug 15.

The Birth of a Nation.

Walter Sanford, manager of the Olympic Theater, announces the opening of the Broadway house, Sunday night, August 29, when what is regarded as the greatest motion picture extant, The Birth of a Nation, is to be exhibited for the five weeks then ensuing.

It is understood that the contract for this exhibition provides that the picture must be shown in first-class theaters only, and motion picture houses are barred. Nine months ago The Birth of a Nation began its sojourn at the Liberty Theater, New York. It is in its thirtieth week in Boston and its twentieth in Chicago, where, at the Illinois Theater, the time of the film can not be extended, owing to the urgent requirement of beginning the regular dramatic season of the house.

CLIPPING FROM Wisconsin

Date Milwaukee Wis. 8-15

DAVIDSON. FF

"The Birth of a Nation," the tremendous photo spectacle of the days of the rebellion, staged by Griffith and enacted by an all-star cast, ends its engagement at the Davidson on Saturday, August 28.

"The Birth of a Nation" is discontinued at this time, owing to the inability of Manager Sherman Brown to so rearrange bookings of the season that it may remain longer. It will have completed a run of eight weeks at the end of this time, and will have been presented in this city no less than 114 consecutive times. This is a record that will long hold in the theatrical affairs of this city.

"The Birth of a Nation" has attracted wide attention throughout Wisconsin. People are coming from all portions of the state to view this production, and it is probable, from present indications, capacity houses will be the rule until the close of the run. Reservations may be made now for any of the remaining performances. A matinee is given daily at 2:15 o'clock, while the evening presentation begins at 8:10 o'clock.

It is admitted throughout the country, that this offering of Griffith's is by far the greatest thing in the film world ever done in America. It is surrounded with a strong historic value, and the details with which it is filled add to its effectiveness. The all star cast, including such stars as Harry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Donald Crisp, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Josephine Crowl, and others equally well known, give the presentation an unestimable value with the film fan. The story is thrilling. The hold through is intense, and the photography the best examples of Griffith art.

In one scene alone 10,000 men and 3,000 horses participate. That is the siege of Petersburg, where the northern and southern lines are shown in a five [illegible] photos were taken from a sixty-foot tower. [illegible] orchestra is heard [illegible]

Public Ledger. Aug 10

THEATERS GET SET FOR WINTER SEASON

Olympic Will Open August 29 With Five Weeks' Run of "The Birth of a Nation."

The blase first-nighter, who has been forced to content himself with the movies and open-air vaudeville for three long months, is beginning to preen himself up and get ready for the opening of the winter dramatic season. Virtually all the St. Louis playhouses will reopen in the next few weeks with bills that promise well for a good year.

Despite rumors that the Union Electric Light and Power Company is seeking to take over the space in its building occupied by the Shubert Theater, the manager of the Shubert has announced a long list of plays for the winter. In case the deal goes through this winter, all Shubert plays will be transferred to the Garrick Theater, which has been dark for the last few seasons. It is probable that the Shubert will not be closed until next summer, however.

Walter Sanford, manager of the Olympic Theater, returned last night after a vacation of three months at his summer cottage in Siasconset, Mass., with the announcement that the Olympic will begin the season Sunday, night, August 29. The attraction will be "The Birth of a Nation," said to be the most brilliant, vivid and stirring masterpiece of the motion-picture world. The plan is to keep the attraction for five consecutive weeks. This is hardly to be wondered at when it is remembered that "The Birth of a Nation" is rounding out its ninth month at the Liberty Theater, New York, its thirtieth week in Boston and its twentieth week in Chicago.

In the latter place its run at the Illinois Theater will be ended soon by the bookings of the regular season. The Colonial Theater has been leased for one year for the purpose of continuing the engagement. No attraction, dramatic or otherwise, in the memory of present-day playgoers has caused such universal approbation as "The Birth of a Nation."

Sanford Announces Bookings.

"I consider it to be one of the most fortunate circumstances," said Mr. Sanford last night, "that we are able to open our season with an attraction of such magnitude. If I told you all the wonderful things about it I would not be believed except by those who have seen it elsewhere. St. Louis will soon know all about it, however, and I have every confidence that our record here will be better even than that of the other large cities, as our capacity is greater than that of any other theater at which it has been shown. "The Birth of a Nation" is not my only cause for jubilation," he continued. "I have never heard St. Louis people so hopeful and so confident in their expressions about the certain prosperity of the city during the impending fall and winter. We are to have a new night life downtown; they tell me; things are going to brighten up in every respect, and, of course, you know, when people begin to talk that way it generally means something.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union
Aug 15 1915

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL—On account of the success of the run of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, William H. Kemble, the managing director, and his associates have been able to pay the Griffith interests the $45,000 guaranteed for the privilege of presenting the film here. Many film producers expressed the opinion that the manager of the Music Hall paid an exceptional amount for the privilege, but the attendance and the receipts have more than justified the venture. Manager Kemble was certain "The Birth of a Nation" would prove a sensation in Brooklyn as it had elsewhere, and willingly guaranteed the big amount. The receipts for the performances would be larger but for the fact that on a number of occasions Mr. Kemble set aside half of the house for the accommodation of hundreds of orphans. "The Birth of a Nation" will be presented at the Music Hall the rest of the season. Many educational and patriotic and historical societies have reserved large blocks of seats for theatre parties.

Aug 14 1915

RECORD CROWD SEES 'BIRTH OF A NATION'

Atlantic City Authorities Criticised for Attempt to Stop Photoplay

From Public Ledger Bureau

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 13.—Sharp criticism of resort authorities who yielded to demands of protesting colored citizens and summarily ordered the closing of a Boardwalk theatre is the latest development in the "Birth of a Nation" agitation which stirred the city last week.

One of the largest crowds that has yet visited the New Nixon Theatre since the "Birth of a Nation" was billed there filled the big playhouse tonight and marveled over the realistic production with its inspiring music.

Harry Brown, manager of the playhouse, said there was no likelihood of any trouble. Hotelmen, he said, have given the production strong indorsement, and since the agitation began have assured him of their belief it would be a politic mistake to permit any class in the city to dictate the kind of amusement to be provided for visitors.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
AUG. 12, 1915

BIRTH OF NATION IS FASCINATING

Spectacle Has Combined Qualities Of Most Brilliant Masterpieces FF

"The Birth of a Nation" now at the New Nixon, is a bright beacon light which illuminates the most important period of American history. It is as fascinating as a Dumas romance; as impressive as Dante's Divine Comedy; as comprehensive as Balzac's Human Comedy and as soul-searching as the tragedies of Shakespeare. It is a brilliant, faithful and vivid historical romance which tells the story of the war between the States and of the reconstruction era of the South.

This amazing spectacle in 12,000 feet of superb motion pictures was made under the direction of David W. Griffith. Eight months were consumed in the making, 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were used in the 5,000 scenes and $500,000 were expended. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," the historical episodes are interspersed with a dual love story of absorbing interest.

This mighty masterpiece is now filling the following theatres to their utmost capacity: The Liberty and Brighton, in New York; the Tremont in Boston; the Illinois in Chicago and the Davidson in Milwaukee.

"The Birth of a Nation" will always be remembered as the first to merit and win success in the best theatres at a scale of prices the same as had been obtained by the most costly dramatic productions.

With the wane of the season the summer run of "The Birth of a Nation" will soon be reaching its close. It is therefore well to see this great production at the earliest possible time as there will be no other engagement played in Atlantic City.

NEW YORK PRESS
Aug. 15-15

NEW RELEASES ON THE PICTURE SCREENS

Attractive Pictures Announced for First Showing In This Week. FF

"The Birth of a Nation" has established a record run for continuous showings, for on last Friday night the 400th presentation in New York city was reached. The new season starts with the spectacle remaining one of the most popular attractions in town, and this week starts the twenty-seventh of the engagement in the Liberty Theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in the presentation that it looks as if it will establish a record for all offerings in New York before the run is terminated.

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES
AUG 14 1915

[illegible] D. W. Griffith's [illegible] Birth of a Nation [illegible] year's record run [illegible] performances, Friday night [illegible] presentation in New York [illegible] reached.

The new season starts [illegible] the big production remaining [illegible] most talked of attraction [illegible] This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty Theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in Griffith's epical treatment of the subject that it looks as if it will establish the record for all offerings [illegible] before its run is terminated. [illegible] of history and romance [illegible] of the treatment and the wealth of detail crowded into the production are qualities which make it a strong attraction, making this offering as popular. It will remain at the Liberty indefinitely.

N. Y. Mail. Aug 14

'Birth of a Nation' [illegible] Makes Great [illegible]

D. W. Griffith's [illegible] Birth of a Nation [illegible] year's record run [illegible] performances, Friday night [illegible] presentation in New York [illegible] reached.

The new season starts [illegible] the big production remaining [illegible] most talked of attraction [illegible] This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty Theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in Griffith's epical treatment of the subject that it looks as if it will establish the record for all offerings [illegible] before its run is terminated. [illegible] of history and romance [illegible] of the treatment and the wealth of detail crowded into the production are qualities which make it a strong attraction, making this offering as popular. It will remain at the Liberty indefinitely.

AUG 15 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN

FOR THE PLAYGOER

DAVIDSON—"The Birth of a Nation," [illegible] this week. [illegible] CRITERION—Vaudeville of the [illegible] by Countess Van Dorsum. [illegible] viewed show.
ORPHEUM—Continuous vaudeville, 1 to 11 p. m.; pictures, [illegible] 1 p. m.
GAIETY—Burlesque. Twice Daily. Matinee daily.
BUTTERFLY—Pictures.
ALHAMBRA—Pictures.
MAJESTIC—Dark.
EMPRESS—Dark.
SHUBERT—Dark.
FAIRY—Dark.

CRYSTAL'S NEW SHOW.

The Crystal is offering another one of these good shows this week, and every act on the bill is deserving of more than passing mention. There is variety in plenty, so that the vaudeville fan is bound to have full appreciation.

Duncan and Holt are a [illegible] team that keeps the audience laughing from the word go. Their lines are [illegible] and their stunt of burlesquing a violin artist is a hummer.

Another good act is the comedy [illegible] the offering of the McKittie Trio. This team has a feminine star that follows Irene Franklin's style and succeeds in pleasing her auditors. The male members of the company both have good voices, the presentation of the "[illegible]" blend by one being as near a piece of work of its kind seen here in some time.

The Countess Van Dorsum is billed as the "Tetrazzini of vaudeville," and judging from the applause, seems to live up to it. She is accompanied by two good harpists, and the act is all that could be asked for.

The Jupiter Trio has a horizontal bar act to add novelty to the bill. Mike Rialta opens with "The Artists' dream." Eastland motion pictures are shown.

MILWAUKEE
ADDRESS — CLIPSURO
FROM Wisconsin
Milwaukee News
8-14-15

STILL AT THE DAVIDSON.

Scenes from "The Birth of a Nation," Now in Seventh Week

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 14, 1915

[illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay which has broken all theatrical records at the Davidson theater, will be given at that house on Aug. 23. On the following night, Joseph Stanley in "All Over Town," opens the regular fall and winter season, with his company which has scored so extensively in Chicago during the summer months.

"The Birth of a Nation" is discontinued at that time, not through desire on the part of the management, but because of the inability of Manager Sherman Brown to cancel the early bookings of the theatrical season and so continue the photoplay. The attraction will have completed eight weeks of two performances daily when the last presentation is given. These means a total of 114 performances, for two presentations were given before the beginning of the first week. This is a record never equaled in Wisconsin in any sort of a theatrical engagement [illegible] the Middle West, with the exception of Chicago, where the record is held by this same attraction.

"The Birth of a Nation" is generally conceded to be the greatest photoplay ever staged in America, and, beyond question, it is the greatest historical offering ever given. The battle scene, showing the siege of Petersburg, Va., and the last stand of the gallant little band of confederate fighters, introduces 10,000 men and 3,000 horses, and covers an area of five miles. The pictures were filmed from the top of a sixty-foot tower, and the battle is fought according to maps and official reports, the campaign being followed in detail.

Henry Walthall, Mae Marsh, Donald Crisp, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Joseph Henabery, Wallace Reed, Ralph Lewis, Spottiswoode Aitken, Josephine Crowl, are but a few of the better known film stars who participate in this tremendous offering. Griffith himself directed the entire work. He was assisted by Frank Woods, scenario writer, and an advisory staff of military and historical experts, who assisted in varifying and settling disputed points of the affairs of the days of the sixties.

There is a wide range of interest in "The Birth of a Nation" and after seeing the pictures one realizes the conditions which prevailed in slavery times and the acuteness of the situation when war was declared. Slave life is depicted in a realistic manner and the thrilling war scenes are as true to history as it was possible to have them staged. Throughout the play there runs the thread of a double romance between young members of two prominent families of the North and South, the Stonemans and the Camerons. Male members of each family are killed in battles and after peace is declared close relations are resumed.

Armies are shown in camp and in action on the battle field with rifle fire, bayonet charges, cavalry charges and artillery duels. In the battle of Gettysburg, the most impressive of the battle scenes, five miles of territory are occupied by the troops. The pictures depict Sherman's march to the sea and the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln in Ford's theater in Washington the night of a gala performance to celebrate the end of the war.

In the closing scenes of the great play one sees the brave Ku Klux Klansmen of the South, the masked, shrouded night-riders who organized secretly to suppress the lawless negroes who used their freedom in a reckless manner. The riots which took place in South Carolina after the war are visualized and the Klansmen are seen in acts of rescue. Swift justice was dealt out by the Klansmen and the negroes feared them because of their ghostly appearance. Altogether, the pictures show life as it was during the civil war period.

(N. Y.) TELEGRAPH
AUG 21 191
THEATRE.

ADDRESS — CLIPSURO
PING FROM
NEW YORK SUN
AUG 1 1915

[illegible], complete the [illegible]

Performances of "The Birth of a Nation"

W. Griffith's spectacle "The [illegible] of a Nation," now in its sixth [illegible] at the Liberty Theatre, will [illegible] out its 400th performance in [illegible]er New York at this house next [illegible]y night. This is the longest run [illegible] current season. As no end is in [illegible] for the engagement it begins to [illegible] now as if "The Birth of a Na[illegible] will establish the long distance [illegible] the number of performances [illegible] before it wears out its metro[illegible]n welcome. To date over 400,000 [illegible] have attended the local presen[illegible]. The big attraction more than [illegible]s own in the face of the terrific [illegible]er last week and the returns [illegible]n keeping with its wonderful rec[illegible]ade since it began its stay here.

CLIPPING FROM
Date

[illegible] weekly."

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Film Story of Civil War Announced at Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," the Civil War photodrama which has attracted wide attention will be the attraction at the Opera House starting to-morrow night, with two performances daily thereafter. Col. Wendelschaefer has been after this attraction since early in April when it caused a furore in Boston and it was only last week that he was able to do so, after which it was necessary to get the Police Commission's permission to show it.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and the South at war and the reconstruction period which was the [illegible] aftermath of the war. A northern and southern home are shown before the war. The call to arms comes and the sons of both houses leave for the front. Battles and battlefields are rolled out in marvelous perspective, the most striking scenes being the four years war, showing all of the principal events, including Sherman's march to the sea. Then comes the assassination of President Lincoln, the getting into power of the men who exploited the negroes and the rise of the Ku Klux Klan. The love element is not lacking in the film. A northern girl who visits in the South dismisses Col. Ben Cameron, her lover, when she discovers he belongs to the dreaded Ku Klux.

The principal roles are taken by Henry Walthal, Miriam Cooper, Mae March, Josephine Crawell, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Gish, George Seigmann, Joseph Henabery, Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye. An orchestra of [illegible] pieces will play specially composed music [illegible]

CABLE ADDRESS — CLIPSURO
CLIPPING FROM
Date

THE SHOOTING OF LINCOLN

Booth Jumping from the Box to the Stage in Ford's Theatre
A Scene in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Opera House

ATLANTIC CITY ... IDENCE (R. I.) JOURNAL
AUG. 16, 1915

...GISH WHO IS SEEN IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Miss Gish Has One of the Principal Roles in the Photoplay Which is Given at the Providence Opera House This Week.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS (New York City)
Aug 14 1915

SPOKANE CENSOR PRAISES "BIRTH OF A NATION"

FF

"The Birth of a Nation' is magnificent. It is the greatest film I have ever seen."

That is what City Commissioner Samuel Glasgow, municipal censor of theaters, reported on his return to Spokane from Seattle, whither he was sent by the city council to witness the Griffith spectacle and determine whether it should be exhibited in Spokane.

Colored clergymen of Spokane had presented a protest against the film to the city council, which prompted the censor's trip to the Coast, a distance of 400 miles.

"The negro people undoubtedly have cause for complaint," admitted the censor. "They are just as much entitled to object to certain scenes as the Irish and Jewish people have had on other plays and pictures sent here. But I do not believe the performance should be prevented.

"The scenes objected to are minor ones, but are essential to the play and could not well be eliminated. I investigated closely, however, and failed to find in Seattle a single instance of violence resulting from the picture."

"The Birth of a Nation" was bought for Seattle and Spokane by James Q. and Howard S. Clemmer, brothers, who booked it for five weeks in Seattle and three in Spokane. It is no secret that the film has not been drawing as well in the Coast city as was expected, and, if it does no better in Spokane the engagement may be cut to a fortnight and the picture taken onto the road for the odd week.

Lack of opposition in Seattle probably has had something to do with the attendance there and the tempest stirred up here should have the effect of materially helping the box office.

...ING FROM Bu...

At the Beaches

T... message of peace conveyed in the remarkable ... of "The Birth of a Nation" which is being ... at the Brighton Beach Music Hall is stated on the program as follows: "... this graphic presentment serves no other purpose ... its message for universal peace marks it of great importance. Morally and educationally it establishes the folly of armed conflict." A member of the Senate of the United States expressed the foregoing sentiment. "Anyone contemplating war should see this picture," added the Senator. "I sincerely believe it will do more to deter people from engaging in war than anything written or spoken in the subject for years." Great care has been taken not to glorify battle. Even the ranks stops at its motif of glorification to sound the note of terror and desolation which is the real task of War. Armies seldom settle disputed questions of one time where they accomplish this much, in the wake of conflict arise newer and more terrible questions. But for the bitterness engendered in the Civil War, the suffering of the Reconstruction period would never have been known." The theme of the play is also explained on the program, under the heading "A Nation is Born," which reads:

"Among our fathers lived a poet-leader who dreamed a new vision of humanity—that out of the conflicting interests and character of thirteen American states, stretching from the frosts of the north to the tropic jungles of Florida, there could be built one mighty people. For eighty years this vision remained a dream—sectionalism and bitterness the grimmest realities of our life. Lord Cornwallis, the British commander, had surrendered at Yorktown, to the allied armies of the Kingdom of France and the original thirteen states, by name—New Hampshire, Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut, New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia, Maryland, North Carolina, South Carolina and Georgia. Through seventy-five years of growth and conflict these states clung to their individual sovereignty, feeling with jealous alarm the slow but sure growth of a national spirit within the body of the federal Union. This new being was stirred at last into articulate life by Daniel Webster's immortal words, 'Liberty and Union, one and inseparable, now and forever.' The sole question our fathers had not dared to face—whether the sovereignty of the Union should ultimately have supreme rule—was raised in 1861 over the problem of the negro. The North had the passionate conviction that we were a republic of nations, each state free and sovereign. The North, under the leadership of Abraham Lincoln, held that the Union was indestructible and its sovereignty supreme. Until Lincoln the right of each state to peaceful secession was seriously disputed, North or South. New England had more times than threatened to withdraw long before South Carolina. Blind rage led the way. And yet unconsciously the nation within had grown into a living soul, and, in the merciless ... of four years of Civil War and eight years of more ... reconstruction, a nation was born."

This historical drama is founded on Thomas Dixon's ... "The Clansman" and is a truly remarkable presentation. Principals in the cast are: Colonel Ben Cameron, Henry ... Margaret Cameron, the elder sister, Miriam ... the pet sister, Mae Marsh; Mrs. Cameron, ... Spottiswoode Aiken; ... the second son, J. A. Beringer; Duke Cameron, the ... son, Maxfield Stanley; Mammy, their faithful ... Hon. Austin Stoneman, Leader of the ... Elsie, his daughter, Lillian Gish; ... Clifton; Tod, the younger son, Robert ... the blacksmith, Wallace Reed; ... housekeeper, Mary Alden; ... Governor, George Seigmann; ... Walter Long; Abraham Lincoln, ... Ike ... th, Raoul Walsh; General ... Robert E. Lee, ... negro, William De Vaul ... death, William Freeman; ... Wilson. Others are Calvin ... generals, military aides and attaches, secretaries, ... Representatives, visitors, soldiers, abolitionists, ... plantation crowds and mobs.

...MOTION ... City
AUG. 14, 1915

ANOTHER PLAY OF EPIC SWEEP FROM GRIFFITH

FF

D. W. Griffith, the master producer, has just decided upon his next multiple reel feature to follow "The Birth of a Nation." Its title is to be "The Mother and the Law." He is now at the Griffith headquarters, the Reliance-Majestic studios in Hollywood, Los Angeles, California. He is in the midst of preparations for the filming of "The Mother and the Law."

The plot and the theme other than as indicated in the title have not been announced but will be made known later. Mr. Griffith has, however, selected his cast. Prominent among the Griffith players who are to appear before the camera in "The Mother and the Law" are Mae Marsh, the Griffith actress who will be remembered as Florence Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation," Robert Harron, who has appeared in the Griffith features, "The Battle of the Sexes," "Judith of Bethulia," "The Escape," "The Avenging Conscience" and "Home Sweet Home," Miriam Cooper, who has a prominent role in "The Birth of a Nation," and Mary Alden, remembered for the performance of the mulatto in "The Birth of a Nation" and as the mother in "The Battle of the Sexes."

BERKELEY (Cal.) GAZETTE
AUG. 14, 1915

ANOTHER WEEK OF 'CLANSMAN' IN OAKLAND

FF

Miriam Cooper in "The Clansman," in Oakland.

All other attractions have been cancelled by the management of the Macdonough theater in order to continue "The Birth of a Nation," or as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, for twelve more days, or another week, commencing tomorrow.

Two exhibitions are given daily including Sundays, a matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

In producing "The Birth of a Nation," Director Griffith has photographed not only fratricidal strife in its outward showing, but he has photographed the very thoughts of the people and the emotions that caused their hearts to flutter.

With such exactitude has this great photoplay producer adhered to the fact that the spectator knows, as he sees Lincoln and his cabinet deciding on a call for volunteers that it is fact, not imagination he is looking at.

The assassination of Lincoln is true in every detail, even the dress worn by Mrs. Lincoln that awful night is reproduced exactly; the Booth who steals up the stairs to the box, enters and fires the shot that stopped a nation's heart from beating, his wildly reckless leap to the stage, all are pictured with such conscientious fidelity that the greatest of all tragedies is shown as if the spectator were indeed sitting in Ford's theater, over half a century ago, and had seen the deed that he sees now.

SAGE-TEA DANDY

LOS ANGELES (Cal.) EXPRESS
AUG. 14, 1915

So enthusiastic has been the welcome extended that greatest of all motion pictures, The Clansman, that another week, beginning Monday afternoon, has been announced by the management of Clune's Auditorium theater.

Before the appearance of The Clansman, had any one asked if any attraction, either of the silent or spoken drama, could play to capacity houses in a theater like Clune's great Auditorium, for 17 weeks, the answer would have been in the negative. But that is just what has happened, and it is not surprising when one considers that this picture is a reproduction of a historical fact that is still very much alive in the hearts of the American people.

The period following the Civil war, known as the "reconstruction," is portrayed with vividness that startles those who had not the faintest conception of the terrible strife that shook our country to its very foundation. The Ku Klux Klan, organized for the purpose of defending the Southern civilization from the "black rule," is shown in every detail of its work. The rise and fall of a prospective "Black Empire," fostered by dishonest politicians, is portrayed with tragic intensity.

President Lincoln, trying to bring to a successful conclusion the great work he had mapped out for himself, is shown struck down by an assassin's hand while right in the midst of his great endeavor.

ALAMEDA (Cal.) TIMES-STAR
AUG. 14, 1915

...R. EVE. TRIBUNE
...G. 13, 1914

... BOARD ...S PERMIT

...f a Nation" Will Be ...ented Here

...Commissioners decided ...noon to permit the ...he Birth of A Nation," ...d in Providence, begin- ...day evening, with con- ...which the Commissioners ...ewing the play in Boston ...y.

...view was given in the ...pera House prior to the ...on for the benefit of a ... representative colored ...half of those who pre- ...the play at a meeting ...Commissioners last Tues-

...Walter A. Presbrey of the ...told the committee before ...n that the Board had or- ...n cuts, giving the list of ...he committee. After view- ...rtainment for three hours ...rs of the committee pre- ...hairman Presbrey the fol- ...ement:

...fter viewing the films of the ...The Birth of a Nation,' we ...onvinced that this play is of ...racter that it should not be ...Providence.

...e no recommendations to ...r than that the Board will ...a former decision and place ...ban on the entire play.

... Robinson, Rev. Zechariah ... William A. Heathman, John ...ns, Rev. B. G. Moore-Brown, ...A. Gilbert, M. D., Rev. M. F. ...I. W. Fisher."

...communication the board re- ...follows:

...binson, Esq.,

...ir—The Board of Police Com- ...s acknowledges the receipt of ...unication signed by yourself ...r members of the committee ...ed 'The Birth of a Nation' ...uests of the board this after- ...the Providence Opera House, ... you state that the play is of ...racter that it should not be ... Providence.

...the earnest effort of the board ...ate such scenes as might be ...ly objected to by your people ...d regrets that, in your opinion, ...ems to be no common ground ...hich we can unite. The board ...t cannot concur in your opinion ...erefore, informs you that a ...will be granted for this photoplay ...ven to the public just as you ...wed it this afternoon.

... truly yours.

"WALTER A. PRESBREY,
"Chairman.

"J. J. McCAFFREY,
"BENJAMIN P. MOULTON."

...obinson, representing the com- ... thanked the members of the ...or their courtesy, and Chairman ...y declared that as Providence ...cosmopolitan city, the board had ...s best to recognize the rights of ...ses of citizens while protecting ...blic morals.

... more changes were made in the ...ere than were made in Boston ...oting and special legislation.

... Felix R. Wendelschafer of the ...nce Opera House when informed ... rulings of the Police Commission ...I am perfectly satisfied with their ... and will be glad to abide by ...decision.

...ENCE (R. I.) JOURNAL
...AUG. 14, 1915

...ONTROVERSY MAY ... DECIDED HERE TODAY

...ommissioners to Act on ...e Birth of a Nation."

...or not David W. Griffith's mo- ...re spectacle, "The Birth of a ...will be shown in this city is ...ded at a meeting of the Board ... Commissioners this afternoon. ...favorable decision be reached, ...will probably be shown at the ... Opera House, commencing

...m was shown privately before ...e Commission last evening, with ...ts and exclusions which had been ... order of the commissioners. The ...n of last evening will be re- ...efore the Police Commissioners ... deputation of colored men at 2 ... this afternoon. A conference will ... to determine whether all the ob- ...ionable features have been removed. ...Wendelschaefer declined last night ... any statement regarding the pic- ...ut Chairman Walter A. Presbrey ... Police Commission gave out the ...g for publication:

... board witnessed the last reel in ...t section of 'The Birth of a Na- ...nd six reels in the second section. ...rtain cuts in scenes, as they had ... these eliminated. The production, ...ved by order of the board, will be ...d tomorrow afternoon at 3 ... before the board and the cul- ...ed colored gentlemen selected ... committee, which was present at ...ame hearing held in the office of ...ard of Police Commissioners.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 14, 1915.

DAVIDSON

Upper Section: Mae Marsh and Henry Walthal; Lower Section: Members of the Ku-Klux-Klan and a Charge in Battle.

...T (N. Y.) TELEGRAPH
AUG 2 1 191...

...TY THEATRE

OTTAWA (Ont.) JOURNAL
AUG. 12, 1915

MOST VALUABLE FILM IN WORLD TO BE GUARDED NIGHT AND DAY IN OTTAWA

The contract by which the Canada Exhibition secures "The Birth of a Nation" for the night shows of the coming Ottawa Fair, imposes unusual obligations for safeguarding the valuable films of Griffith's famous motion picture. This is a natural consequence in view of the fact that the photographs are the rarest of their kind in existence and cost half a million dollars to produce. It is stipulated that the Fair Association must place a heavy insurance on the property while it remains in Ottawa. Griffith's corporation also demands that the films never leave the physical custody of one of their own representatives. Realizing the merits of the attraction, the Fair management made special concessions. On the other hand, exclusive rights for the screen drama have been obtained by the picture people. Such an extraordinary attraction is expected to be long remembered by visitors to the Fair.

N FRANCISCO (Cal.) CHRONICLE
Aug. 15, 1915.

MACDONOUGH

AT the matinee performance tomorrow, "The Clansman, or The Birth of a Nation," will start on another week of the return engagement at the Macdonough Theater, where it is attracting capacity houses at every performance. The story told in the picture is one of historical value, depicting all the important events of the period of reconstruction in the South, as well as the events leading up to this, starting with President Lincoln's call for volunteers.

The picture deals largely with the rise and fall in power of a character called Austin Stoneman, who obtains power through the assassination of President Lincoln by Booth and is finally vanquished through the efforts of the Ku Klux Klan.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) GAZETTE
AUG. 15, 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" WILL BE SHOWN FOR FINAL WEEK

Yielding to popular demand, the management of the Macdonough theater has cancelled all other attractions in order to play "The Birth of a Nation," or as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle in 12 reels.

Two exhibitions of this film are given daily including Sundays, with matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

What gives "The Birth of a Nation," which is based on Thos. Dixon's novel, its supreme value it that it possesses a double mental perspective.

One is the reality of the fearfully striving periods of just before the Civil War, during that combat and the equally trying and dramatic time immediately following the surrender of Lee.

The other drama no less distinctly shown, and with such vigor that while the former holds the eye with irresistible power the other commands the brain and controls the mind of the spectator, is that of the psychology, the emotions, the thought processes of the three clashing elements—the northerners, the southerners and the negro.

David W. Griffith, Producer of "The Birth of a Nation," at the New Nixon Today.

CLIPPING FROM Times
Los Angeles Herald
Date 8-15-15

Clune's Auditorium.

"The Clansman," that most talked of motion picture, has proven so popular as to make it necessary to extend the return engagement another week at Clune's Auditorium.

The events leading up to that terrible strife, the Civil War, and the period immediately following, are illustrated in a manner that has made "The Clansman" almost a part of history. The development of that famous organization, the Ku Klux Klan, is shown from the time of its inception, that gave rise to its creation

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) PRESS
AUG. 16, 1915

CHANCELLOR AIDS THE FILM DRAMA

RESTRAINS ATLANTIC CITY OFFICIAL FROM INTERFERING WITH PRODUCTION.

RETURNABLE AUGUST 24

City Commissioner William H. Bartlett, director of public safety of Atlantic City, and all other authorities of that place are restrained from in any way interfering with the moving picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now being exhibited at the New Nixon theatre, by an order made Saturday night by Chancellor Walker. The chancellor has allowed a rule to show cause why an injunction should not issue to prohibit the Atlantic City officials from interfering with this production. This rule is made returnable Tuesday, August 24, and in the meantime the temporary restraint is granted.

The application for the injunction was made to Chancellor Walker at his home here by Emerson L. Richards, former assemblyman, and Ulysses G. Stryon, as counsel for the Esplanade Amusement company, owners of the Nixon theatre, and the Epoch Producing corporation, owners of the film. In the petition to the court it was set out that "The Birth of a Nation" has been exhibiting daily at the Nixon theatre for the last four weeks and without any reason being offered Commissioner Bartlett Saturday notified the management of the theatre that on and after Monday, August 16, the exhibition of the picture would be prohibited.

It was set out to the court that "The Birth of a Nation" was produced at a cost far exceeding $100,000; that 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses were used in the production; that it occupied a year of time; that it faithfully reproduced interesting and important epochs in American history; that it is highly moral in its character and tone; that it is educational as well as emotional; that the play in no wise appeals to or tends to excite or engender racial or religious prejudice or animosities, but, on the contrary, is clean, wholesome and elevating.

It is further claimed by the complainants that at present the picture is being exhibited in all parts of the country, and that it was witnessed in February of the present year by most distinguished persons in official life at the National Press club in Washington, and the universal verdict was that it was a wonderful production. It is claimed that there were only two instances in which the propriety of the play has been questioned. One of these was in Chicago and the other in the city of Los Angeles, but in both cities the police departments were restrained by the higher courts from interfering.

The court of chancery was asked to restrain the director of public safety of Atlantic City from his contemplated action because of the effect that it would have not only upon the profits of the Nixon theatre, but because of the irreparable damage that the production would sustain.

ATLANTIC CITY (Cal.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 16, 1915

"Clansman" Continues Crowd Macdonough

[illegible] Film Drama Drawing Hard [illegible] Transbay Theater.

[illegible], August 16.—The fact [illegible] theater-goers in Oakland [illegible] not yet witnessed the big film [illegible] of "The Clansman" or the [illegible] of a Nation," playing a second [illegible] at the Macdonough [illegible] was proven today by the [illegible] gathering which attended the [illegible] performance.

In addition to the big orchestra [illegible] used during the performance, a quartet of singers added to the general Southern atmosphere which pervades the theater, while [illegible] depicting the many events reel after reel is thrown on the [illegible] (transpiring [illegible] in the South.

AUG. 16, 1915
BERKLEY (Cal.) GAZETTE

"CLANSMAN" FILM BEGINS SIXTH WEEK IN OAKLAND

D. W. Griffiths' mighty spectacle in [illegible] reels, "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," will enter upon its sixth and final big week at the Macdonough theater today.

Although this spectacular motion picture production has been shown at the Macdonough for five weeks, during which time more than 85,000 persons have seen it, its popularity continues unabated.

"The Birth of a Nation" marks a new epoch in motion pictures. Never before has the time and care been taken with the production of any film as was accorded by Director Griffith in staging "The Birth of a Nation." More than $500,000 was expended in staging the film and eight months were required to complete it.

Director Griffith utilized the services of more than 25,000 people and 3,000 horses in making "The Birth of a Nation." Romance, comedy, history and drama are artistically blended together in the film.

The most spectacular battle scenes ever enacted before a camera are shown. Other notable features are the rise in power of Thaddeus Stevens, the great commoner, the assassination of President Lincoln by Booth, the formation, motives and raids of the famous Ku Klux Klan and the problems of the south during the reconstruction period.

Two exhibitions are given daily, including Sunday, matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

TRENTON (N. J.) GAZETTE
AUG. 16, 1915

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union

Date AUG 8 1915

D. W. Griffiths' "The Birth of a Nation," which has been referred to as "the eighth wonder of the world" and which cost over $500,000 to film, is still being shown to large audiences at the Brighton Beach Music Hall. The exhibition is now in its seventh week.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) NEWS-DEM.
AUG. 16, 1915

Prov. Opera House

Colonel Felix Wendelschaefer has made one of the most important bookings of recent years for the Opera House. He has secured the sensational picture "The Birth of a Nation" for [illegible] at the Providence Opera House starting [illegible] evening with two performances [illegible] It is the first $2 moving picture [illegible] produced, requiring 18,000 people and [illegible] The first half of the great [illegible] depicts the salient events of the [illegible] war, which came to a close at Appomattox just 50 years ago. Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's theatre live before the spectators of the Griffith drama.

In the second half the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpetbag regime, is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of the "Little Confederate General" Ben Cameron, with the Northerner Lissie Stoneman, and that of the Union captt. Phil Stoneman with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, sustain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story. The fun and frolic of plantation days, as well as the heart ache and pathos of stricken South, are shown. The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special [illegible] Great battle scenes and the rides of the clan are staged with thousands of participants. There are 5000 scenes in this spectacle and (it is estimated) no less than 200,000 interesting historical de-

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 72
AUG. 16, 1915

Providence Opera House

D. W. Griffith will present his epic in motion pictures, "The Birth of a Nation," for the first time here to-night, beginning an indefinite engagement at the Providence Opera House. Two performances will be given daily. It is one of the most important bookings Col. Wendelschaefer has ever made for his theatre. This mammoth presentation of the vital story interwoven with American history is the first $2 motion picture. It has been exhibited with great success in New York and Boston, having been running in the latter city since April.

Mr. Griffith has taken for his theme the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy of a nation, one and indivisible. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies and then the start of the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern States and the outbreak of the Civil War. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episode in a drama of history, romance and emotion the like of which has never been revealed before. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming of permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

[illegible] incidents into his [illegible] producer used [illegible] He has

BERKELEY (Cal.) GAZETTE
AUG. 14, 1915

[illegible] ENGAGEMENT IN OAKLAND IS EXTENDED

Lillian Gish in "The Clansman" at the Macdonough [illegible] land.

Yielding to popular demand, the management of the Macdonough theater has cancelled all other attractions in order to play "The Birth of A Nation," or as is more generally known "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle in 12 reels, for another week starting tomorrow.

Two exhibitions of the film are given, matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

What gives "The Birth of A Nation," which is based on Thos. Dixon's novel, its supreme value is that it possesses a double mental perspective.

One is the reality of the fearfully striving periods of just before the Civil war, during that combat and the equally trying and dramatic time immediately following the surrender of Lee.

The other drama no less distinctly shown, and with such vigor that while the former holds the eye with irresistible power the [illegible] the brain and controls the [illegible] the spectator, [illegible] chology, the economic [illegible] process of the three [illegible] ments—the northerner, the [illegible] corners and the negro.

Phila. Ledger Aug [illegible]

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TO BE CENSORED

Part of Film Objected [illegible] Negroes Will Be Cut Out

From Public Ledger Bureau

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 17.—The [illegible] of a Nation," the thrilling "Civil War" film drama appearing at a [illegible] theatre, is to be censored.

Parts of the production which stirred bitter resentment among [illegible] City's 12,000 negro residents this week, through a committee [illegible] the City Commission to suppress the play, are almost certain to be cut. One of these is "Gus, the negro [illegible] pursues a child to his death, [illegible] "Lynch."

Blocked in their efforts to have the police close the show, through an injunction issued by Chancellor [illegible] bidding city authorities to enforce [illegible] attempt to suppress Public Safety Director Bartlett's suppression order was today scored a [illegible]

After negotiations for a [illegible] ment had been [illegible] a suggestion [illegible] lessee of the New Nixon [illegible] the show is being [illegible] should confer with his [illegible] four of the leading [illegible] met Mr. Nixon at once. The [illegible] Rev. J. P. Gregory, [illegible] ple; the Rev. Charles D. Dickson, [illegible] Baptist; the Rev. [illegible] Presbyterian, and the Rev. W. H. [illegible] ford, of Zion Church, representing [illegible] 2400 parishioners.

After the conference [illegible] "The committee [illegible] was very fair. After [illegible] tions to certain [illegible] a Nation," I said [illegible] matter could be [illegible] tion. J. J. McCarthy, [illegible] Mr. Griffith, who [illegible] been summoned to come [illegible] on Thursday and [illegible]

Mr. Gregory, [illegible] terial Committee, said: [illegible]

"We were [illegible] features of the [illegible] us our case to [illegible] which [illegible] are to be [illegible] the Board [illegible]

Aug 19

St. Louis Aug 19, 1915

OF A NATION AS 5,000 SCENES

Men Engaged in Battle in mmoth Film Play to Be Shown at Olympic.

Birth of a Nation," which will rate the season at the Olympic Sunday night, August 29, is a le of Civil War and Reconstruc- ys. It is said to be truly gi- proportions.

rg was staged extent, and in- The wild rides of alled into service Theater, ex- n photographs y descriptions, a full is seated, with President Lin- his box, and Laura Keene and ompany on the stage. The South ina Legislature, chosen at the lection under the influence of the t baggers, is shown in full and ng session.

se are among the 5,000 scenes of love, romance, chivalry, passion patriotism.

St. Louis Star Aug 18, 1915

RTH OF A NATION,' A SEAT PICTURE, OLYMPIC AUG. 29

Having 5,000 Scenes, 18,000 Actors, to Run Five Weeks —Other Attractions.

Motion pictures at $2 for the best s in the house will make its debut St. Louis at the Olympic Theater day, August 29, when the great "The Birth of a Nation," will be ened.

This film comes with a large sym- ny orchestra to interpret the pat- c and romantic score, which is said be of grand opera caliber; and a cial set of electricians and mechani- s is carried to produce sound ef- s in the battle scenes and the wild s of the Ku Klux Klans.

The performance is three hours long. matinee will be given daily and the a is booked to run five weeks.

The film has been heralded in St. uis by those who have witnessed it its long runs in New York and Chi- o. It has 5,000 scenes, involving ,000 people and is a spectacle of il War and Reconstruction days

St. Louis Times Aug 18, 1915

Birth of a Nation.

"The Birth of a Nation," a gigantic pectacle of Civil War and Reconstruc- on days, involving 5000 scenes pre- ected by especially devised lenses; a usical score, said to be grand operatic n its caliber, interpreted by a sym- hony orchestra to be brought here rom New York, and electrical and ound effects, for which a full carload f newly invented instruments is car- ied, will inaugurate the season at the Olympic Theater, Sunday night, Aug. 29. The engagement is for five weeks with two performances daily, each con- uming three hours.

For the first time in the history of motion picture art, the $2 scale of prices, charged for first-class theatrical attractions, will prevail for "The Birth of a Nation." When D. W. Griffith, the producer, announced this price before the first performance in New York, he was laughed at by the Broadway man- agers. But when the Liberty Theater became the one tightly packed theater in town, and when Boston and Chicago followed suite with the "Standing Room Only" sign, the laugh died away, and instead the managers began wonder- ing what the world was coming to. Mr. Griffith's answer was that it was the same old world, going to see what pleased it, and what it considered worth the money.

Assassination of Lincoln Is One Feature of "The Birth of a Nation"

Scenes From the Great Griffith Masterpiece. Top—Battle of Petersburg, 18,000 Men Engaged. Bottom—Right, Section of Ku Klux Klan on March; Left, President Lincoln in Box at Ford's Theater Just Before his Assassination.

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln is one of the stirring features of "The Birth of a Nation," which opens a five-weeks' engagement at the Olympic Theater Sunday night, Aug. 29.

D. W. Griffith, producer of the spectacle of the Civil War and reconstruction days, built, for this scene, the entire interior of Ford's Theater as it was on the night of the saddest tragedy in American history. The auditorium, crowded to its capacity, the stage on which Laura Keene and her company were playing, and the President's box, set in its tier of boxes, are all reproduced from photographs and contemporary description.

The exact manner of the assassination of Lincoln is not known. Mr. Griffith, in his researches, found 18 distinct accounts, all of them differing in minor details. From these accounts he selected what he considered the most probable chain of events, and every movement made by the actors in the scene at the Olympic will be found by the student of history to be authenticated by one or other of the accounts. University professors who have seen the Griffith production have given it as their opinion that Mr. Griffith has admirably performed a difficult feat.

The care shown in staging the assassination of Lincoln is said to have been exercised throughout the production, and the spectacle is considered a masterpiece of history, as well as romance. For three months, a corps of history experts worked under the direction of Mr. Griffith, examining no less than 5000 volumes dealing with the Civil War and the days immediately following it, besides countless official records, pamphlets and newspaper files. This data was compiled and digested, and finally submitted to Mr. Griffith for a verdict and a choice of picturesque facts. As a result, veterans of both the North and the South have given their approval to the principal historical events of the photo drama.

An Army of 18,000 Men.

The immense labor consumed in the actual work of visualizing the facts in hand is illustrated by the battle of Petersburg. Mr. Griffith and a corps of army engineers laid out the battle field five miles in extent, built the trenches and roads, set the big guns and mortars, and even planted trees and whole thickets. On this field, when it was ready, and when it had passed the censorship of veterans of the battle on both sides, Mr. Griffith assembled two armies, totaling approximately 18,000 men, and for weeks rehearsed them in the action of the battle before the camera was turned upon them.

Other great scenes in the spectacle are the gathering and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans on their errands of vengeance and mercy; the march of Sherman to the sea, culminating in the storming of Atlanta, and the first session of the South Carolina Legislature elected by the carpet baggers.

Throughout the spectacle runs a story of romance and chivalry, based upon Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," though not following that narrative slavishly. The story is said to be one of a strong heart appeal that blends perfectly with the stirring scenes of conflict. A feature of the production is a musical score, said to be grand operatic in its sweep, using as themes various patriotic American airs and songs of love and romance from both continents. A special symphony orchestra will be brought here from New York to interpret this score.

LITCHFIELD (Ill.) NEWS-HERALD
AUG. 20, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, will be presented at the Olympic Theater, [illegible], for five weeks, starting [illegible] night, August 29. St. Louis will see the production [illegible] presented in New York, Chicago and Boston, in each [illegible] has been a phenomenal success here, as in those cities, will be the regular theatrical scale of twenty [illegible] cents to two dollars at night, and [illegible] to one dollar at the daily matinees. A company symphony [illegible] will be brought here from [illegible] to interpret the musical [illegible] which is said to be grand opera [illegible] in its calibre, using as its [illegible] the various patriotic American airs and the folk and heart songs of this country and Europe.

"The Birth of a Nation" is in 5,000 scenes, that run before the eye in dazzling and bewildering succession. War and hate are skillfully blended with love and romance. Among the truly magnificent scenes, whose like, it is said, were never before exhibited in a theater in any form, are the battle of Petersburg, on a field five miles in extent, and involving 18,000 men in a startling realistic conflict; Sherman's march to the sea, culminating in the storming of Atlanta; the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans on their errands of revenge and mercy; an exact reproduction of Ford's Theater on the night of the assassination of President Lincoln, showing the crowded auditorium, the stage and the President's box and detailing every move of the saddest tragedy in American history; and the session of the first South Carolina legislature elected under the influence of the carpetbaggers.

Thru all runs the thread of one of the most beautiful romances of love and chivalry ever staged. Critics have pointed to Mr. Griffith's spectacle as "the great American play last."

(N. Y.) TELEGRAM
AUG 21 191

Theater und Sommerga

Olympic.

Im Olympic-Theater wird vo Sonntag, den 29. August, ab D. W. Griffiths großartiges Kriegsspiel „The Birth of a Nation" gezeigt und zwar für die Dauer von fünf Wochen. Der musikalische Teil wird von einem Symphonieorchester ausgeführt, das aus New York hierhergebracht wird. Die Preise rangieren zwischen 25 Cents und $2.00 für die Abendvorstellungen und zwischen 25 Cents und $1.00 für die täglichen Matinees.

„The Birth of a Nation" hat den Bauernkrieg zur Grundlage und bringt unter seinen zahlreichen Szenen die Schlacht bei Petersburg, Shermans berühmten Marsch, eine genaue Reproduktion des Ford Theaters in der Nacht, da Präsident Lincoln ermordet wurde, und die erste Sitzung der Staatsgesetzgebung von Süd Carolina, die unter dem Einfluß der „Carpetbaggers" stand.

Die Vorführung dieses grandiösen Schauspieles hat in New York, Chicago und Buffalo ganz riesige Erfolge erzielt und wird jedenfalls auch in St. Louis gebührend gewürdigt werden.

TY THEATRE

started n at the ill mark a spec-

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
AUG. 20, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" COMING TO PORTLAND

Portland is to have an opportunity to see "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacular motion picture drama which has entertained Boston audiences for many weeks, and had as great a vogue as the foremost dramatic attractions. Manager Harry Smith of Keith's theatre completed arrangements for the production of "The Birth of a Nations at the local theatre, Thursday by long distance telephone. For a number of days Mr. Smith has been in touch with the men who are responsible for this tremendous production, the greatest known to motion pictures, in order to secure its presentation in Portland and the matter was brought to a satisfactory conclusion Thursday.

The presentation of this wonderful film here will mark the apex of motion picture achievement in this city. "The Birth of a Nation," in the first place, is the only motion picture ever given in Portland for which seats are sold at prices equal to those of the finest dramatic productions. A special orchestra of 20 musicians will be employed during the engagement of this film drama, for all the music is of a character adapted to the theme of the piece, and is an indispensable accompaniment.

"The Birth of a Nation," as all followers of the motion picture drama know, is a play depicting the scenes of the Civil war, the movements of the Ku Klux clan, and other incidents that had to do with the most momentous period in this nation's history. In the scenes thousands of actors are employed, more than have ever appeared in a motion picture production before and the play was staged at an expense so enormous that the figures are positively staggering.

"The Birth of a Nation" is to be seen at Keith's for the entire week of Aug. 30, bridging over the gap between the closing of the Keith stock company and the opening of the Royster-Dudley opera company at the house.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) PRESS, 1915

...th of a Nation on Sun-
...y, Aug. 29.

...With the arrival of the ...in this land, the forces ...to the main story of "The ... Nation," to be unfolded to ...heater goers at the Olympic, ...ight, Aug. 29, and following ...ing lesson, range through the ...es of American history.

...first rumblings of the abolition ...ent are heard ominously. The ...sign States, in their claims to the ... to maintain the institution of ...very, reach the climax of their dis-...tent in the election of Abraham Lin-...oln. The new President issues his first ...all for troops, and the Civil War, so ...long dreaded, comes to be a tragic real-...ity. The story of the mighty conflict ...is told vividly in the works of the best historians, but D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is credited with a new vividness. Sherman marches to the sea before the eyes of the spectator, and the storming of Atlanta excites the veteran in the audience to the wildest pitch of enthusiasm. The battle of Petersburg is fought on a stage five miles in width, and the veteran recognizes the tree or the clump of bushes whose shelter he heroically abandoned to meet the bayonet charge of the enemy.

While the men of the North and the South are engaged in the fearful struggle, Griffith flashes before the eyes of the spectator the woman's part in the war. She is at home praying, or is ministering to the wounded in the hospitals, or is scanning with dreadful anxiety the lists of the slain. Then comes Appomattox Courthouse. Gen. Lee and Gen. Grant draw up articles that are to put an end for all time to strife in this nation, and when they walk toward each other and stretch out their hands for a brotherly clasp, the spectators, according to reports from the Eastern amusement centers, fairly rise to their feet and yell and cheer as if they were present at the actual scene of reconciliation.

Though the war is over, the nation must still go through some bitter throes before it becomes the wonderful reality it is today. Lincoln is assassinated; the enemies of the South in Congress, undeterred by the strong hand of the great leader, make possible the rule of the carpetbagger. The newly liberated race, under the influence of pernicious politicians, go to such excesses that the Aryans of the South are forced to band together secretly for their preservation. This gives rise to the Ku Klux Klans, and their wild rides on their errands of vengeance and mercy are among the most thrilling scenes.

The spectacle is rendered still more realistic by thousands of sound and electrical effects, especially devised for this production, and by a musical score blending patriotic and sentimental themes into an operatic whole, interpreted by a special symphony orchestra.

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" OLYMPIC — AUG. 29

Pittsburgh Chronicle Telegraph Aug 21, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" IS COMING TO THE NIXON

"The Birth of a Nation" will commence a run of five weeks at the Nixon Theater beginning Wednesday night, September 1, and continuing twice daily thereafter. Nearly 100 people are required to present this spectacle. Musicians, electricians and operators, men to handle mechanical effects and men in other departments make up this roster.

MIRIAM COOPER

Pittsburgh Sun Aug 21, 1915

D. W. Griffith's stupendous spectacle of peace and war, "The Birth of a Nation," will open at the Nixon theater on Wednesday evening, September 1, and continue twice daily thereafter for a limited engagement of five weeks.

The first part of the picture covers the entire period from 1861 to 1865 with massive battle scenes. The second half Mr. Griffith devotes to the soul-stirring drama of reconstruction.

N.Y. Sun Aug 21, 1915

LIBERTY—"The Birth of a Nation" starts in next week on the seventh month of its run. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York. With its 18,000 people and 3,000 horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes to the number of over 5,000 it is easy to estimate the reasons for the wonderful success the work has achieved.

Journal of Commerce Aug 21, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" begins its seventh month at the Liberty Theatre next week. The week will mark the 460th performance of D. W. Griffith's masterpiece. With its 18,000 people, 3,000 horses and more than 5,000 scenes, it is without doubt the greatest motion picture ever shown and the indications are that it will remain at the Liberty for a long time.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

George Bowles, manager of "The Birth of a Nation," has made the following statement regarding the leasing of the Colonial theater by the Epoch Producing Corporation: "The Colonial theater has been leased for a year. It has been taken over for the purpose of presenting Griffith attractions, including 'The Birth of a Nation,' owned and presented by the Epoch Producing Corporation, and also the future releases of that company, the general manager of which is J. J. McCarthy. I shall manage the Colonial and all the attractions that play there during the time that it remains under the control of Mr. Griffith, Mr. McCarthy and their associates. As for arrangements with other theaters, I am not quite ready to make any statements, but I hope before long to have something authentic to give out." It is said that "The Birth of a Nation" will close its run at the Illinois theater Saturday night, August 21, and that the first presentation will be given at the Colonial the following Sunday afternoon.

CLIPPING FROM BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES

STATE RIGHT OWNERS OF "NATION" ... CHAIN OF MA BOOK ON COMMISSION BASIS

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) JULY 18, 1916

GRANT AND LEE AT APPOMATTOX AS SHOWN IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" ... NEW NIXON SUNDAY NIGHT.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) GAZETTE AUG. 15, 1916

Miriam Cooper in "The Birth of a Nation"

22, 1915

irth of a Nation.

Gish, a former St. Louis Northern heroine in The ation, which opens a five ment at the Olympic The-night, August 24.
a member of a family that amous in the realm of silent nother and her sister Doroppearing frequently on the Lillian was introduced to ith by Miss Mary Pickford.
ediately discovered her talmoted her rapidly. She has d in The Battle of the Sexes, t Home, and Enoch Arden.
n The Birth of a Nation has her former efforts. of a Nation is based upon of reconstruction days writomas Dixon, though the plot nsman, which forms the out-story, is not followed slav-ith, in conceiving and exegigantic spectacle, had always he accurate portrayal of the he days before, during and im-following the civil war. His as far more comprehensive n's, and the result is declared ork of act to which fiction can e to attain in magnificence and rth of a Nation is a colossal comprising 3000 scenes of love, chivalry; a musical score of ambitions, whose themes are m songs of patriotism and renterpreted by a symphony orto be brought here from New nd thousands of sound effects, tally to the flitting phantoms of en. The battle of Petersburg,

's march to the sea, the assassif Lincoln and the wild rides of Klux Klans are among the sen-features.

LILLIAN GISH
THE NORTHERN HEROINE IN
THE BIRTH OF A NATION
OLYMPIC

ttsburgh Leader Aug 22, 1915

THE PITTSBURGH GAZETTE TIMES

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION COMING."

The magnitude of David W. Griffith's feat in stating "The Birth of a Nation" is almost appalling. Instead of scenery for his background Griffith has used nature. For subject he has covered 150 years of American history. Eighteen thousand people have done his bidding and in the hair-raising rides of the Ku Klux Klan 3,000 riders and horses sweep over the dusty roads.

No wonder that this historical spectacle is the talk of the country. It has established an entirely new art in the realm of the theater—the art of pantomimic screen spectacle with an orchestra score perfectly synchronized to the action. It has also created a tremendous sensation because of its forceful treatment of the theme of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," which both as book and play created the greatest furore of the last decade.

The great deeds of the Civil War and the horrors of reconstruction are made to live again and the nation reborn is apothesized. Mr. Griffith, pioneer among directors, managed this achievement without the aid of dialogue or speech, for motion pictures with music and effects tell vividly this thrilling tale of 50 years ago.

"The Birth of a Nation" will open at the Nixon Theater the evening of September 1 and will continue twice daily thereafter for a limited engagement of five weeks.

THEATER OPENINGS.

The first definite news of what theatergoers may expect for the season of 1915-16 here in Pittsburgh is found in some of the official announcements appearing today in the newspapers. It is declared that the Nixon will be first in the field with a five weeks' season of moving pictures at maximum prices for this class of entertainment. This means, of course, that D. W. Griffiths' much-discussed photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," will come to that house with top prices at $2.

Pittsburgh Gazette Times Aug 22, 1915

[illegible] (N. Y.) TELEGRAPH

AUG 2 1 191

[illegible]TY THEATRE

NIXON OPENING

"The Birth of a Nation" Film Booked for Five Weeks

D W Griffith's master production "The Birth of a Nation" will be the attraction at the Nixon Theater beginning Wednesday evening, September 1, and continuing thereafter twice daily for a limited engagement of five weeks.

It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the great attraction which is now in New York where it has broken every record of the American stage. Those achievements alone have aroused more comment upon the subject of this great story than was ever devoted to a theatrical enterprise before.

The merest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its development sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power. It covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict. Eighteen thousand people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked for three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women while 25,000 yards of white muslin were used up in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klansmen. And yet with all this a simple human story of love and romance weaves through the vast spread of the action, and grips the hearts of the audience. The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A symphonic score accompanies the action, and lends a potent force to the drama.

HOSPITAL SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"
~ NIXON SEPT 1 ~

THE PITTSBURGH SUNDAY POST, AUGUST 22, 1915.

BIRTH OF A NATION," photoplay with scene of Lee's surrender to Grant, to be shown in the Nixon Theater beginning September 1.

David W. Grifith's photo production of "The Birth of a Nation" opens at the Nixon Theate evening, September 1st, continuing twice daily thereafter for five weeks.
"Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird," supposed to be the high-water mark of stage spectacles, a overshadowed by this spectacle of 5,000 scenes, 18,000 characters, 3,000 riders and 300,000 of eight months of labor and the expenditure of half a million dollars. The night riding of the " like a company of messenger spectres along the moonlit roads.

LILLIAN GISH
In "The Birth of a Nation, Nixon, September 1.

W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "Birth of a Nation," will be seen the Nixon theater beginning Wednesday evening, September 1, and continuing thereafter twice daily, exactly it is being given in New York and eral other cities where it has made ord-breaking runs.

his new force in the art of stage ertainment is perhaps the most ly discussed production ever made America. It is above all else the atest thing that has been achieved one producer. Imagine condensing living details of the most strenuous periods of American history into evening's entertainment of less than e hours. You are not told about it is your imagination tested by orical descriptions of what took Instead you see it by lightning upon the program. The players who enact the roles have studied the minute descriptions of these men both from photographs and intimate life studies, and with tthis framework they make these wonderful characters live again. They pass before your vision in a panorama of achievement. The accomplishment is startling. The entire action ranges over three centuries. It beg'ns with the importation of the first African slave and it ends with the settlement of the question in the freedom of the enslaved. But before this end is reached the mightiest nation in the world passed through the throes of internecine strife, and the high lights of those struggles are vividly brought out. Great battles are fought before your eye. Cities are destroyed by fire. Thousands of horses [illegible] wild rides across bloodstained [illegible] the human race weaves

ATLANTIC CITY ... 22, 1915

...mmer Gardens and ...houses Running Full ...st and Most of the Winter ...usement Places Either Just Opening or Getting Ready to Open, Mr. First-Nighter Has a Varied Menu Before Him.

THE sensational and freakish success of "The Birth of a Nation" in the various great amusement centers of America, such as New York, Chicago, Boston and San Francisco, indicates that this film spectacle, which is to be unrolled before the eyes of St. Lous for the first time at the Olympic Theater next Sunday night, has reached the highest point yet attained in the comparatively new art of the screen.

D. W. Griffith, the producer, who was the first man to take his courage in hand and charge $2 for a phantom drama, predicts that the $5 motion picture is a possibility of a future not very remote. He points to the phenomenal advance the art has made in five or six years. Formerly 5 cents was the price of admission, and $500 the outside cost of production. "The Birth of a Nation" cost approximately $500,000 to produce, and that $2 is not too much for a sight of it has been demonstrated everywhere the spectacle has been exhibited, where it has been presented to capacity houses. When the cost of production runs into the millions, Mr. Griffith believes, the $5 picture will come as surely as the $5 grand opera.

For "The Birth of a Nation," Mr. Griffith took as the skeleton the story of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," but he had in his head a far vaster conception than Dixon. It was his aim to reproduce an epoch in American history so vividly that the spectators would actually be carried out of the present and live for three hours in a past that is becoming remote and hazy. But he did not make the mistake of desiring to depict this period of the past in a naked and horrid realism. He was determined from the start to throw about it the glamour of romance that would soften the picture without distorting it. Whether or not he has succeeded, will soon be left to the judgment of St. Louis playgoers. The epoch Mr. Griffth chose is the most thrilling in American history.

The story is told in 5,000 scenes. Mr. Griffith has animated his screen phantoms by providing sound effects for almost every moment of the play, and combining them with a musical score made up of patriotic and sentimental themes in such a manner that the spoken word is not missed. The meaning, it is said, is never obscure, and the audience files out of the theater under the impression it has actually known the characters of the play and heard them talk.

Among the gigantic scenes of "The Birth of a Nation," to which much of its sensational effect is due, are the battle of Petersburg, fought by 18,000 men on a field five miles across; the march of Sherman to the sea, culminating in the burning of Atlanta; the assassination of President Lincoln in the crowded Ford's Theater, the entire interior of which, on that fatal night, is reproduced; the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, and the session of the South Carolina Legislature made up of members elected under the direction of the carpetbaggers.

Mr. Griffith was eight months in putting his spectacle together.

N. Y. American Aug 22, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" starts in next week on the seventh month of its run at the Libery Theatre. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in greater New York. With its 18,000 people and 3,000 horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scepes to the number of over 5,000, it is easy to estimate the reasons for the wonderful success the work has achieved.

Date ... Chicago, Ill. 8-21-15

"Birth of a Nation" Moves

This evening's performance at the Illinois theater closes a prosperous run of "The Birth of a Nation" at that playhouse, and to-morrow David W. Griffith's film epic will be flashed on the screen at the Colonial theater, resuming its uninterrupted engagement in this city. The admission price remains the same. The Colonial theater has been altered to accommodate this mammoth production.

Russian war pictures will be shown at the Studebaker theater all of next week, beginning to-day.

At the Fine Arts theater "The Melting Pot" is rapidly coming to a close. The picture with Walker Whiteside in the leading role has had five successful weeks at this playhouse and to-day enters upon its sixth week. Following "The Melting Pot" George Beban will be seen in a film adaptation of his dramatic vaudeville pla let entitled "The Sign of the Rose." Thomas H. Ince produced the picture under the title of "An Alien," in eight reels.

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK MAIL

Date ... AUG 21 1915

'Birth of Nation' Starts 7th Month at Liberty

"The Birth of a Nation" starts in next week on the seventh month of its run at the Liberty Theatre. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York.

The indications are that it will remain at the Liberty for the longest run in the history of the New York stage.

N. Y. Tribune Aug 22 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" starts in next week on the seventh month of its run at the Liberty Theatre. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York. With its 18,000 people and 3,000 horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes, it is easy to estimate the reasons for the wonderful success the work has achieved.

N. Y. Times Aug 22.

"The Birth of a Nation" starts in next week on the seventh month of its run at the Liberty Theatre. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York. With its eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes to the number of over five thousand, it is easy to estimate the reasons for the success the work has achieved.

CLIPPING FROM Providence Journ

Date ... 8-21-15

pin, will make up an excellent bill promised for Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

"The Birth of a Nation."

With the approach of half a century after the actual scenes of the Civil War, this highest development of the motion picture art bears a keen relationship to current events. Aside from its dramatic appeal and poetic flight it brings back to a younger generation with a newborn realism the things which our fathers and grandfathers went through that out of the travail could come the nation we are so proud of today. It is not a case of opening old wounds but is art suggestive, the highest form of art, to point out to us the mistakes and misunderstandings of the past that we may face the crisis of the present with a calmness and determination to uphold the right.

The dramatic form has often been employed by the greatest minds of the world to express underlined truths and as regards the usages and the sufferings of war, no pen has been able to make as impressive a picture as Griffith has encompassed in this masterpiece. A born realist he cuts into the quick of facts that he may establish his dramatic plot. He has not been concerned with factions of propaganda but with the unerring view of the master of the new art he has made his impress upon our times in a way which is startlingly original and a force to be reckoned with in the future. He masses great armies upon a historic plane to reproduce the records of a mighty struggle and by the human interest of two families makes a great nation's efforts a topic of a dramatic construction which appeals to the heart and the sympathies as no bald narrative of facts could hope to do. To attain these results he employs the passions, the loves and the conflict of essential drama. He writes history by flashes of lightning and with it all has built up a spectacle that thrills the human soul, brings tears to the eyes, mingles pathos with laughter, and above all else, does something fine upon the most tremendous scale that was ever undertaken by a dramatist in the world's history.

It is well worth while and when one has seen it, it is easy to understand why it has created such a stir.

CLIPPING FROM Journal Date ... 8-21-15

Prov. Opera House

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's epic in photo dramas, which opened at the Providence Opera House this week, will me continued next week. The attraction drew capacity audience afternoon and evening all of the week and owing to the extraordinarily large demand for seats which could not be filled, Colonel Wendelschaefer decided to run the photoplay another week, opening with a special matinee Monday afternoon and continuing twice daily thereafter.

"The Birth of a Nation," a Civil War drama, which attracted wide attention everywhere it has been shown met with instant success in this city. A historical drama, founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon it has taken the city by storm as the lines at the box office of the theatre every day will testify.

The attraction employs more attendants and workers in front and behind the curtain than 75 per cent of the legitimate attractions. It requires 25 men behind the scenes to produce the roars of battle, the pounding of many horses hoofs and appropriate noises as the pictures are flashed on the screen. Ten more men are required as clearers. The orchestra, which plays specially written music for the pictures, is larger than that carried for the big musical shows. Fifteen musicians were brought here from Boston because they were familiar with the music which goes with the pictures and 10 local men were added to these.

Griffith has taken for his theme the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy of a nation, one and indivisable. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies and then the start of the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern States and the outbreak of the Civil War. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion the like of which has never been revealed here before. Its termination in in an allegorical picture of the coming of permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

To get these varied incidents into his absorbing drama, the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses. He has written history in a spectacular way which was never dreamed of before.

CLIPPING FROM PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

AUG 19

BIRTH OF A NATION COMING

Big Griffith Spectacle to Open at Forrest September 4.

Samuel F. Nixon, managing director of the Forrest, Broad and Garrick Theatres, makes the important announcement that he has secured D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," as the opening attraction for the regular fall and winter season at the Forrest Theatre, beginning Saturday night, September 4. "The Birth of a Nation," which is conceded to be one of the world's greatest achievements in motion photography and enterprise, is now in its seventh month at the Liberty Theatre, New York, and is enjoying long runs in Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, San Francisco, Los Angeles and at the new Nixon Theatre, Atlantic City.

So great has been the success of "The Birth of a Nation" wherever presented that all Philadelphia will be on the qui vive for the advent of the greatest of all photo spectacles. It will be splendidly displayed with all its original magnitude and beauty at the big Forrest Theatre, where it will be the precursor of other big things arranged for by Mr. Nixon for the new season. After the opening on September 4, performances will be given twice daily. The sale of seats will be opened at the box office of the Forrest Theatre at 9 A. M. Thursday morning, September 2.

Movies at $2 a Throw Will Be Offered St. Louisans for the First Time Next Sunday—"That's Nothing," Says Promoter, "We'll Have a $5 Reel Next."

CLIPPING FROM Journal Date ...

GRIFFITH FILM AT $2 PER SEAT

...n D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The ... of a Nation," is presented in ... this coming season, this ... the same elaborate ... it has just turned ... of the run at the ... the preparation necessary ... the great spectacle is ... that can be understood ... it is known that Mr. Griffith's ... arranging for two cars ... the mechanical equipment necessary ... presentations on tour. ... before the attraction ... the advance guard of the ... will be on hand. The ... to be scientifically ... the novel lines invented ... Mr. Griffith. These arrangements ... upon plans which ... of final requirements for the ... of the great story ... in minute detail. The ... carries its own booths and ... improved machines, which ... of those now in use in ... It requires from three to four days' work to complete the details in each theater for the proper presentation of the spectacle. With the company is a symphony orchestra to play the accompanying score and nearly 100 members of the organization who look after the effects of the production. In addition to the two cars of equipment, the company will travel in special sleeping cars, as all the jumps will be made at night. Griffith is a great stickler for detail and the silent forces which contribute so much to the perfect presentation of his spectacle, equal in numbers some of the largest of the touring musical organizations.

And Muskogee theatergoers had better begin now saving their pennies and nickels for this great movie production is booked for the Hinton at "two dollars per." Did you get that?

Aug 23, 1915

WO WEEKS NIXON FILM

a Nation" On Lap of Remarkable Run of a Nation," bringing for- W. Griffith's wonderful new rialized spectacle with music, ing its last two weeks of its engagement at the New Nix- is the great offering that new era in the theatres of Boston, Chicago, San Fran- Los Angeles, where it ran ely in as many productions many months. Despite great the play has never been sup- t has met the approval of cen- , judges, municipal authori- icists, editors and clergymen t half of the spectacle, which ted by Thomas Dixon's "The " exhibits the salient events of etween the States. In the sec- the South's "second uprising" e against the carpetbagger re- shown in a thrilling story of ction days. The romance of le Confederate Colonel," Ben with the Northerner, Elsie , and that of the Union captain Stoneman, with Margaret Cam- South Carolina lasse, main- threads of continuous love-in- roughout the story.

e great out-of-doors is Mr. Grif- pecial field. Tremendous battle and the wild rides of the Ku Klan are staged with thousands icipants. Eighteen thousand hu- tors and 3,000 horses were em- in the making of the picture, cost half a million dollars and ght months to produce.

he musical side Mr. Griffith at- d what was previously unheard of ection with motion pictures. This synchronizing of a complete sym- score with the appearances of the ant characters and the enactment principal scenes. This magni- instrumental music is played by a orchestra of exjerts who are car- on tour is the traveling company

Pittsburgh Leader Aug 23, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

ning Wednesday evening, Sep- 1, the attraction at the Nixon will be D. W. Griffith's won- production, "The Birth of a Na- which will be seen here for the me. This spectacle holds the stance runs in New York, Bos- hicago, Los Angeles and San co. It is a story of American showing the rise and fall of in this country and the terrible g that was endured before a n of this problem was reached. not so much history as it is and romance in a new form of sion with an operatic accom- nt in the way of a symphonic Nothing like it was even seen Nothing its equal is likely to complished again until D. W. h has time to select another for his genius of expression.

Pittsburgh Sun Aug 23, 1915

PRODUCTION COMING.

g Wednesday evening, Septem- attraction at the Nixon The- be D. W. Griffith's "The Birth tion," which will be seen here rst time. It is a story of Ameri- ory, showing the rise and fall of n this country.

"BIRTH OF NATION" CANNOT BE STOPPED

Chancellor Walker Restrains City Commissioners from Stopping Picture Show

Trenton, August 24—The Commissioners of Atlantic City were permanently enjoined by Chancellor Walker today from further interfering with the production of the moving picture film, known as "The Birth of a Nation," which is being shown at the New Nixon Theatre in that city. A temporary injunction was granted by the court August 14 restraining the Commissioners from prohibiting the production.

In an affidavit of William F. Hanstein, president of the Hotel Men's Association, read before the Chancellor today it was stated that the picture was an object lesson, beneficial to the colored race as showing what might befall them in the hands of unscrupulous politicians.

Emerson L. Richards, who appeared for the managers of the theatre read several affidavits from business men and colored preachers of Atlantic City commending the production and disclaiming that it was likely to create riot and disorder on the part of colored persons. In these affidavits it was denied that the picture had been productive of racial prejudice.

After hearing the testimony Chancellor Walker said it seemed peculiar to seek to restrain the production because they anticipated it might create disorder or riot. He pointed out that the position of the commissioners was in effect asking the court to censure a play without showing that the sense of propriety of the community had been outraged and without establishing legal grounds for judicial action.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) NEWS-DEM. AUG. 21, 1915 723

AMU

NEW YORK (N. Y.) TELEGRAPH AUG 21 1915

AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE

"Birth of a Nation" Nears Its Seventh Month

"The Birth of a Nation" started on the seventh month of its run at the Liberty Theatre. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York.

With its 18,000 people and 3,000 horses moving through a drama that lifts romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes, it is easy to estimate the reasons for the wonderful success the work has achieved.

Three of the Principals in "The Birth of a Nation," which is to be retained at the Providence Opera House Next Week.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN JUL 10 1915

ELMER CLIFTON IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" OR "THE CLANSMAN" AT THE ALCAZAR

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK MAIL

"Birth of a Nation," Holds Show Record Despite Broadway's Gloomy Prediction

By THEODORE MITCHELL.

A passing comment upon prevalent conditions is not interesting without including that motion play sensation, "The Birth of a Nation" in the summing up. Here is the concrete illustration of what can be done when you hit upon something the public likes.

In the dead of last winter vague rumors crept out that somewhere out of the wild West, where they make these screen-thrillers, a fellow had come to New York with a few cans full of celluloid opera and was going to unload it upon dear little old New York at $2 per seat.

We can hear yet the raillery of the Fortysecondstreetites. Groans and jeers mingled in the typical anvil chorus. "What they'll do to that poor boob" was the prevalent sinister reception. It didn't matter much that nobody along the Wise White Way knew a blessed thing about this condensed drama the western producer had tucked away in his trunks, nor did it make any further impression when this aforesaid "comeon" secured the services of one of the best-known showmen in the uptown district to handle his production.

Broadway, with that marvelous wisdom it possesses in prophecy, had said it would not do, and Broadway always knows until it finds out differently.

That motion picture production was christened "The Birth of a Nation." Pretty soon the greatest advertising campaign that Broadway had ever seen for a new show was turned loose, and in the natural course of events "The Birth of a Nation" was launched upon its career of "certain failure." D. W. Griffith was the man who had produced the picture and had taken care of the preliminary work of presenting it in New York.

Of course people in the drama did not know that this man Griffith had been turning out pictures which were the sensation of the world. His only trouble lay in the fact that his other material had never been promoted outside of a limited sphere.

It was late in February that "The Birth of a Nation" crept into New York heralded as the epoch-making achievement of the American stage. It started right off the bat to prove this assertion. It's still there, and every day, if you stroll by the Liberty Theatre, you will see the healthiest and most robust-looking line that ever clogged the lobby of a local theatre for six months without let-up.

Cold figures are unassailable. "The Birth of a Nation" has played for performances in the Liberty to more than 400,000 people. Its gross receipts climb up dangerously near to the $300,000 mark. Broadway still insists that it won't make any money because it cost too much. When told that it has already paid for itself, they say, "We'll never get another one." So the case rests. Meanwhile the big epic in epic form has been creating more and fuss than all the other plays of the year combined. Everybody knows about it, and there are 5,000,000 people in Greater New York who have been able to get seats to see it.

Since its metropolitan "failure" it also been a "failure" in Boston for twenty-one weeks, where it has played to over 200,000 people; for seven weeks in San Francisco, and a record run of sixteen weeks in Los Angeles, where it played to over two times the total population of the city at the rate of 5,000 people a day for months. In addition Chicago and Milwaukee are piling up record-breaking runs to prove that Americans will pay $2 to see a motion-picture production. We understand that five companies are being arranged to go on besides those already mentioned and the other two companies which are playing special engagements at Brighton Beach and Atlantic City.

This phenomenal record only proves one thing: The lucky showman is the one who has something the people wants. The style of entertainment, the manner in which it is given and a lot of things that go to make a successful secondary considerations. It is the first law of nature, the survival of the fittest, applying itself once more in the run of life.

Here is, however, the greatest attraction we know of. It never had a chance. We know this because we were told it so often we had to believe the statements. It seems that it hasn't had a chance to cease being the greatest thing th stage has known in the way of theatrical productions in this

COURT SAYS NO LAW MAKES HIM PICTURE CENSOR

Chancellor Walker Today Allows Permanent Injunction Restraining Commissioner Bartlett From Stopping "Birth of a Nation" at the New Nixon

Says No Evidence to Support Allegation of Race Riots

TRENTON, Aug. 24.

Declaring that there was no law making him a censor of moving picture films, Chancellor Walker today allowed a permanent injunction restraining Commissioner William Bartlett, of Atlantic City, from stopping the exhibition of the "Birth of a Nation," a film that involves the negro race. The film was to be shown at the New Nixon Theatre on the Boardwalk and a delegation of negroes asked Commissioner Bartlett to prevent.

It was charged today that the agitation against the production was largely worked up by Mayor Riddle to win him the colored vote of Atlantic City. There was a denial of any prejudice against the negro race or attempts to stir up race hatred. Affidavits were read averring that some of the scenes showed the negroes in a very bad light and were calculated to cause riots. Chancellor Walker ruled that the plaintiffs had not made out a case and there was no evidence that any such direct results would follow the exhi-

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Produced under the personal direction of

D. W. GRIFFITH

THE MOST STUPENDOUS AND FASCINATING

Motion Picture Drama Created

IN THE UNITED STATES

Lillian Gish, Star of "The Birth of a Nation."

Congressman Austin Scott

Eva Nineman, the Northern Heroine

THE great stir of opposition that "The Birth of a Nation," the great motion picture drama founded upon Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," and produced under the direction of D. W. Griffith, has stirred, is in itself evidence that here is a great dramatic work. People do not become so aroused over insignificant productions. More than that, it has been believed heretofore that motion picture dramas without the power of the human voice could not deeply sway human emotions. With this great production, D. W. Griffith has demonstrated that movie dramas can be created with the verile strength that moves men and women deeply. This is no ten-cent entertainment. The seats are sold at from $2 to 50 cents, the prices that have long held for first-class legitimate dramatic productions. The remarkable thing about this is, not that the management is asking that price (it was absolutely necessary to get such prices for a production that was made at so great expense) but that people are gladly paying it, going away satisfied, eager to urge their friends to see the play.

David Wark Griffith, Creator of "The Birth of a Nation."

[illegible] the [illegible] have been so stirred [illegible] against the play [illegible] not [illegible] and [illegible] so [illegible] will [illegible] give [illegible] consideration [illegible] to condemn [illegible] knowledge of what was [illegible] A[illegible] the Negro is concerned [illegible] must be remembered always in this [illegible] the Reconstruction [illegible] designed and there [illegible] white [illegible] as well as black men. It [illegible] the purpose of the photo-play to [illegible] Negro as typical of the whole race [illegible] give rise to the belief [illegible] were evil [illegible] were [illegible] We must [illegible] that [illegible] period of American his[illegible] as [illegible] was concerned and [illegible] not [illegible] stirred up even though [illegible] agree[illegible]

A[illegible] must [illegible] forget that Southerners [illegible] loyal [illegible] they have seen their mistakes, the terrible [illegible] that brought on the Civil war. Never [illegible] will [illegible] try to break the Union. This [illegible] of their struggles leading up to and [illegible] the Civil war gives a sympathetic insight into these people of the South. The story shows that they were wrong, but it is fair to them. It is because it is fair and sympathetic that the photo-drama story is great, is worth the serious attention that it is being given by the press of the country and by educated audiences who are crowding the theaters where it is being shown. It is a play worth seeing if you get a chance to see it, or well worth reading about if you have no chance to see the actual production.

The first ship that brought a cargo of African slaves to North America started the series of troubulous events preceding "the birth of a great nation." Abolition was subsequently advocated, but the idea of social equality was never considered. The South declared it would secede if in 1860 a Republican president was elected. That president, Abraham Lincoln, is-

PATRIOTISM

WITH WHICH IS COMBINED THE CANDLESTICK MAGAZINE

Bayonet Charge in the Civil War.

Battle of Atlanta.

sued a call for 75,000 volunteers. For the first time in American annals he used the Federal power to subdue individual states.

The Stoneman boys of Pennsylvania had been house guests at Piedmont, South Carolina, of their boarding-school chums, the Cameron boys. Phil Stoneman and Margaret Cameron, fair as a flower, had looked, longed and loved. Ben Cameron had never met Elsie Stoneman, yet the daguerreotype of her he had pilfered from Phil seemed about the dearest, sweetest thing in the world. The younger lads of the two houses—too young for sentiment and romance—frolicked like friendly young colts. Most charming and lovable of all the Cameron clan was the Doctor and Cameron's youngest daughter Flora.

When war cast its shadow over the land, Phil and Tod Stoneman were summoned to fight for the Stars and Stripes; Ben Cameron and his two younger brothers, for the Stars and Bars. The grim years drag along. Piedmont gayly enters the conflict, but ruin and devastation follow. The town gets a foretaste of rapine and pillage in the raid of a mixed body of white and black guerillas against it. The scale of events inclines to the Union cause. Southern wealth and resources are burned or commandeered by Sherman in his march to the sea. Meanwhile two of the Cameron boys have perished in battle, one of them face to face with his dying chum, Tod. Grant is pressing the Confederacy in the famous campaign around Petersburg. When Confederate supplies are running low, one of their provision trains is cut off and the "little Colonel, Ben Cameron, is called upon by Gen. Lee to lead a counter attack and thus, by diverting the enemy, aid in the rescue of the train. We see the panorama of a battlefield flung over many miles of mountain and valley, the opposing intrenchments and the artillery fire, Col. Cameron and his men forming for the advance, their charge over broken ground, the grim harvest of death that swept most of them away, the bayonet rush of the devoted few right up to the trenches, the physical hand-grapple with the enemy, and Cameron, sole survivor, gaining the crest of the Federal works and falling wounded into the arms of Capt. Phil Stoneman, U. S. A., his erstwhile bosom friend. Prisoner in a Washington hospital, Ben Cameron slowly recovers from his wound. Like an angel of mercy Elsie Stoneman, Phil's sister, appears in the role of a volunteer nurse. Poor Ben falls desperately in love with her whose picture he had carried about for years. She and Ben's mother visit Lincoln, "the Great Heart," who clears the "little Colonel" of an odious charge and hands Mrs. Cameron the boy's papers of release [To page 84.

Great Battle of the Civil War.

President Abraham Lincoln Giving a Pardon to Col. Ben. Cameron's Mother.

SHAMOKIN (Pa.) DISPATCH
JULY 29, 1915

The Rialto has moved from Broadway to Los Angeles, according to William A. Brady, the theatrical manager, who, in a condensed and picturesque statement, describes the flight "as" from the speaking stage to the "canned" drama in response to irresistible offers of cash. It is not merely that this alien invitation has caused the desertion of Robert Mantell, for whom Mr. Brady has made Shakespeare pay on the speaking stage for years, but, in the words of the wailing manager, "the big salaries of the motion pictures are drawing all our actors away from us." Mr. Brady even goes so far as to say that "the motion picture industry is going to kill the drama in the twelve months."

According to this authority, seventy-five per cent. of the actors of the stage are now in California, where is centered the business of the large photo-play producers. In addition to their ability to purchase the talents of the best actors and playwrights, the picture-play men can draw freely on the literature of thousand years. "They can go to the public library," says Brady, "and get a thousand old books, from Shakespeare to Marie Corelli and 'John Halifax, Gentleman', and put them bodily on the screen. We have to dig up the raw material which, in turn, they can use later at no expense."

Mr. Brady makes it clear that the speaking stage has fallen on evil days and that its managers are laboring at a disadvantage, but he does not explain why all this has happened. Why were so many of the theatres "dark" during the past season and why were those still open doing business to half-filled houses? Why have the motion-picture people made so much money that they only need to beckon in order to see the best dramatic talent come running, dazzled by the offer of fabulous sums? In the beginning the success of moving-picture shows was explained on the ground that the "common crowd" could not pay theatre prices when it could get entertainment at all for ten cents, but now the best seats at Griffith's motion-picture production, "The Birth of a Nation," are $2, and the people who go to the opera one night are at a high-class photo-play the next. Why is this?

The unavoidable answer is that the photo-play is more than a mere novelty, that in its highest development it has become fully as artistic as the speaking stage itself, that it can furnish a variety of a hundred scenes where the speaking stage can furnish but one, that its possibilities—especially in out-door representations—are far in advance of what the speaking stage can accomplish. These superior assets, together with unlimited funds wherewith to secure the best talent, tend to offset, or more than offset, the speaking stage's two lone remaining advantages of color and the sound of the human voice.

In view of all this, the judicial public will hesitate to join the theatrical managers in deploring the success of the picture play as a calamity. If the speaking stage is to maintain anything like its former dominion (it will survive, of course), it must prove its superiority by further development, and it must meet deadly competition by accepting a smaller remuneration through the box office.

"The Birth of a Nation" has broken all records at Asbury Park, where it was booked for this week to play a special date at the Savoy Theatre. The house was entirely sold out for the week by Thursday morning and in order to accommodate his patrons, Manager Walter Rosenberg, induced the managers of the big spectacle to put in a special performance beginning this morning at 10 A. M. The announcement of this extra performance was made Thursday night and by noon yesterday every seat in the Savoy was sold. The company playing Asbury Park will be at Long Branch the first half of next week and then goes into the Forrest Theatre, Philadelphia, for a limited engagement.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
JULY 27, 1915

BADGER WITNESSES ONCE AGAIN TRAGEDY THAT PLUNGED WHOLE WORLD IN MOURNING

Herbert Nogle, Who Saw Lincoln Shot

Herbert M. Nogle, a veteran of the civil war, 76 years of age, Mondovi, Wis., the only resident of Wisconsin who witnessed the assassination of President Lincoln in Washington fifty years ago, came to Milwaukee to see the motion picture depiction of the tragedy in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Davidson. Few persons are now alive who witnessed the historic tragedy.

"This is a wonderful scene," he said after the light had faded from the screen blotting out the Lincoln tragedy. "The circumstances are exactly as I remember them, and if I hadn't seen the pictures I wouldn't have believed it possible to get such realistic effects. I never realized before that such things could be done."

Mr. Nogle came to the city with his son, Grant Nogle, expressly to see the pictures, and he was so pleased over them that he attended several performances. He served through the whole war with a Pennsylvania regiment and nearly lost his life in the battle of the Wilderness. He was shot through the right lung and eleven days elapsed before he received adequate treatment. He is a retired farmer and has lived in Mondovi and vicinity thirty-five years.

Questioned about his military record he explained that he entered the army when he was 21 years of age in response to the first call for volunteers in April, 1861. He served three months and re-enlisted in Co. A of the 143rd. regiment of Pennsylvania.

"I enlisted," he said, "in Gouldsburg, Pa., where I worked in a tannery run by Jay Gould. But he wasn't a millionaire capitalist then and I've still got $17.50 coming as wages."

He said that he fought in a dozen important battles, including Fredericksburg, Chancellorsville, Gettyburg and the long battle of the wilderness. He was wounded in the Battle of the Wilderness. He was shot through his right lung and his recovery amazed the doctors and surgeons who treated him.

"They sent me to Douglas hospital in Washington and I arrived there eleven days after I was shot. That was how I happened to be in Washington when Lincoln was shot. Washington was jubilant over the surrender of Lee to Grant and a gala performance in Ford's theater was planned. Laura Keene was playing in 'Our American Cousins.' The papers stated that President Lincoln would be there and I wanted to see him. So I went to the theater with Sergt. Joe Lambert. We sat in the middle of the house and we could see the president plainly.

"The crowd cheered him when he came in and he bowed like a courtly gentleman. At first he attracted a lot of attention. Then the play began and all eyes were turned toward the stage. I wasn't thinking of the president when he was shot. I was looking at the stage. The theater was quiet. A shot rung out sharply and people screamed. The crowd seemed to be dazed for a few seconds. Then came the realization that the president was shot. In a dazed way I remember the commotion in the president's box, the sight of a water pitcher carried up to it, and the man with wild, staring eyes and high-pitched voice who leaped upon the stage and said something in Latin which I didn't understand. 'Wilkes Booth!' the crowd shouted. With a common impulse, the people surged toward the exits, but soldiers were stationed in the corridor and cavalrymen were stationed outside. No one was allowed to depart for what seemed an eternity. Then it was learned Wilkes Booth had fled across Long Bridge and the terrified crowd was permitted to disperse."

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
JULY 11, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION IN SECOND WEEK

Griffith Film of Historic Interest Is Shown at Davidson for Hundred Nth.

JANE COWL AT BUTTERFIELD'S

Majestic, Strand and Alhambra Interesting Offerings for Coming Week.

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Davidson theater, will be seen in Milwaukee for an indefinite period. Seats are now on sale for four weeks in advance, and large houses are assured at every performance. Those who have seen this spectacle do not hesitate in acknowledging it a striking presentation of history of the reconstruction period. There is a prologue showing the seeds of dissension being sown, the first slaves were brought to America. Then comes the anti-slavery agitation, the slaves on the plantations of their masters were well treated. The anti-slavery is finished, and then the emancipation proclamation, the declaration of war; the opening moments; the siege of Petersburg; from Atlanta; Sherman's march to the sea; the surrender of Lee and the assassination of Lincoln. In the closing story, follows the aftermath of the reconstruction days—the organization of the Klux Klan, the Freedmen's Bureau, control of black authority, the carpetbag rule; the riots in South Carolina, pitched battles between negroes and whites, and, finally, the closing battle in the streets of Piedmont and the triumph of the "white knights" in the

July 3

LA OPENING FOR "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Spectacle Arouses Great Enthusiasm at Brighton Music Hall.

DISTINGUISHED AUDIENCE.

Dramatic Production Is Finest Of Its Kind—Creates Profound Impression Here.

Brighton Beach was something than its old self last night, the most remarkable theater ance assembled in Brooklyn in al seasons journeyed to the sea to see the initial presentation of D. W. Griffith's magnificent on picture production, "The of a Nation." The whole proing, including a military re before the performance, were tial in tone and the marching sol of the Twenty-third Regiment, Old Guard of Civil War Veterans the ushers, all in uniform, be jumbled in the general effect uced by the showing of the most ing of war dramas, and made a ng impression. Certainly no ation could have been more auspisly started, and the enthusiasm sed by the picture itself was tremdous, the general effect being that urprise and bewilderment at what undoubtedly the most remarkable duct of the motion pictures to date. n the absence of the Mayor and rough President Pounds, Public rks Commissioner Edmund W. rhies represented the city's omldom at the special performance , in a brief speech, voiced the apciation of the audience for the vilege which had been extended it being first to welcome the spectato Brooklyn.

When the history of motion picres is written, "The Birth of a tion" must head the chapter of the t great development in film protions. It is the first picture to ce the work of the camera on a ne where it commands considera n as a distinct art, combining the entials of dramatic and pictorial , and revealing possibilities almost believable a few years ago. Still re significant is the fact that "The rth of a Nation" has been shown regular theater prices, in comition with the best the stage has ered, and has proved more successl than a majority of current plays. This is as it should be. Mr. Grifh's epic picture drama contains re action, suspense, thrills and nes capable of arousing all the otions than any play seen in New rk in several seasons. In addition has scope, elements of beauty and fects only possible to produce in s way, and then only when conved and executed by a man of re rkable ability, if not genius. As historical spectacle, the thousands feet of living, breathing his nstitute perhaps the greatest hiry of the Civil War ever attempted. ith the familiar touches of theatalism almost entirely lacking, the enactment of national events in ch a way as to give spectators the ling that they have seen the dratic events themselves is without rallel as an educational force.

All that the historian, the dramat, the actor, the stage manager and e scenic artist can hope to accomlish is to arouse in the spectator, by semblance of realism, a maximum sponse. This Mr. Griffith has done, agnificently. At every turn can be tected the play of imagination pon threads of fact, with the possilities [illegible] picture mechanics nplified by ingenuity, a real feeling r the fundamentals in human emoons and visual appeal. It is futile try to describe either the effects r the subjects of such a production. he subtle power of the work lies in e fact that it carries all its dynamic ppeal direct to the mind without nguage.

A curtain is drawn and the events half a century are unfolded. Dim storical personages that had but a my place in the memory, step forth mpletely visualized, and go through ir parts. Lincoln and Lee and ant; Petersberg's battlefield; Sherm's march to the sea; the burning Atlanta; the assassination of Lin; the surrender of Appomattox, all the glory and all the horror, the heroism and misery of war hown with marvelous impressive There is grim tragedy, idealism, dy, tender sentiment and the gle of individual wills as well as onflict of peoples, and it is all ed in a swift moving human that holds the interest, ens the eye and plays upon the ns like a rare and splendid exe that recreates and vitalizes usness and sensibility.

rtunately, the picture is not all high plane of ideality. Based homas Dixon's "The Clansnt frequently smacks of the ensationalism that alone disd the book and play. This ote prevails only in the last the picture, where the story to the level of blatant melosten vicious in its appeal. The ight better have been drawn of these later scenes. The nsmen make superb pictthere is a basis of fact for [illegible] Klansmen in such spotless robes, to spread the sins of a portion of blacks over a whole race. The grave troubles that beset the nation during its birth sprang from ignorance, the one enemy of civilization. The ends of civilization and of justice are not to be served by perpetuating ignorance by distortion. It should be said, however, that Mr. Griffith is largely absolved from blame. The picture gives the story a dignity lacking in the original, and its weakness is all inherent in the work of Mr. Dixon and is impossible to completely overcome. Incidentally Mr. Dixon made a brief speech last night, in which he paid a richly deserved tribute to the producer.

A great sheaf of American Beauty roses was presented to Mr. Voohies after the performance, and was, in turn, passed on by him to his daughter, Miss Edna Voorhies. Three cheers for the management whose enterprise brought the spectacle to Brooklyn were then called for by the Public Works Commissioner and were given with a will.

Both before and after the presentation the merit of the picture was accentuated by the Old Guard and the Twenty-third Regiment. The latter, prior to the performance, marched in review before the Brighton Beach Hotel, and late in the evening the officers of the regiment, with the Old Guard, afforded a pleasing bit of military coloring at the reception and dance in the hotel that was tendered by the Music Hall management to its guests. The men of the Twenty-third sat in the balcony during the performance and marched away in a body at its close.

Those who saw this initial Brooklyn presentation made up an audience of considerable distinction. It included many prominent city and borough officials and some of the very well known people of the borough.

Among the guests at the performance were County Judge Lewis L. Fawcett, Magistrate Edward I. Dooley, Edmund W. Voorhies, First Deputy Police Commissioner Leon Godley and Mrs. Godley, Congressman Daniel J. Griffin, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph J. Voorhies, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Bottcher, D. J. Laurand and Miss W. Thane, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Kemble, Mrs. Leonhardt Wall, Miss Eleanore Beahie, Miss Marjorie Gildersleeve, Leonhardt Wall, Miss Marie Furey, John J. Curtis, Dr. and Mrs. John A. Lee, Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Boennerman, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hanington, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Brown, Judge and Mrs. N. J. Marsch, Albert E. Metz and Miss Madeline Van Orden, Maurice J. Metz and Miss Louise McGovern, G. F. Watley, C. R. Holt, F. A. Preston, L. J. Hommel, Miss Caroline E. Hommel, York DeVere.

Among those present of the "Old Guard" were:

Captain H. A. Kurtz, Captain W. G. Cook, Captain A. A. Calhoun, Captain W. H. Kantel, Lieutenant Wgetter, Captain A. P. Vondenburg, Captain W. D. Preston, Captain Fred L. Adler, Captain David S. Skinner, Captain Charles H. Rodwier, Captain E. R. Rodd, Captain John H. Easterdey, Captain Benjamin F. Moon, Captain Walter K. Joyce, Colonel A. L. Kline, Captain Charles D. Bernheimer, Captain A. T. Brani, Lieutenant R. A. Butler, Lieutenant James Mcholne, Lieutenant C. C. Ellex, Lieutenant Wgetter, Lieutenant L. O. Biggins, Lieutenant L. R. Walton, Lieutenant Fred D. Preston, Lieutenant John W. Wagnaar, Sergeant A. A. Gerdis, Sergeant W. H. Horsfell, Sergeant D. A. O'Mara, Sergeant S. U. Lewis, Sergeant C. H. Cutter, Sergeant C. H. Stephens, Sergeant Bernard Wall, Sergeant John W. Masterson, Sergeant Arthur C. Jackson, Sergeant Frank Langston, Sergeant M. M. Cooper, Sergeant Charles F. Wemdell and Corporal A. E. Luzzin.

Officers of the Twenty-third Regiment who were present were: Colonel Norton, Lieutenant Colonel Wells, Major Kevin, Major Blanton, Captain Addrason, Captain Coffin, Captain DeNott, Captain Walker, Captain Robbins, Captain Stoll, Captain Ward, Captain Kloer, Captain Liebman, First Lieutenant Bojardus, First Lieutenant Hall, First Lieutenant Kunzman, First Lieutenant Simonson, Second Lieutenant Enderle, Second Lieutenant Cook, Second Lieutenant Simonson, Second Lieutenant W. Hoyt, Second Lieutenant A. M. Ulrichs, Second Lieutenant Peters, Second Lieutenant Jones, Second Lieutenant Stevens and Second Lieutenant Pierce.

CLIPPING FROM
Los Angeles Examiner
Date 8-15-15

CLUNE'S AUDITORIUM—To tourists and the Los Angeles public, "The Clansman" is proving by far the most interesting attraction to ever appear on the Pacific Coast. This splendid reproduction of the days of '61 will begin its 18th successful week at Clune's Auditorium Theatre tomorrow afternoon. Thomas Dixon Jr. certainly outlined that terrible tragedy, the Civil War, in an interesting manner, but it remained for D. W. Griffith to touch a responsive chord in the sympathies of the American public, and that he has literally brought "The Clansman" to life cannot be denied. For nothing approaching the magnitude and splendid detail of this wonderful picture has ever been made. One detail alone stands out as one of the most important features of the picture, and that is the marvelous reproduction of the assassination of President Lincoln. This one scene alone is a masterpiece, and so aroused the sympathy of the audience as to cause them to fairly hold their breath at the amazing reality of it all.

Keystone Mirror
For Aug. 1915

Coming Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, will be presented at the Olympic Theater for five weeks, starting Sunday night, August 29. St. Louis will see the production exactly as it is being exhibited in New York, Chicago and Boston, in each of which cities it has been a phenomenal sensation for many months. The price here, as in those cities, will be the regular theatrical scale of twenty-five cents to two dollars at night, and twenty-five cents to one dollar at the daily matinees. A complete symphony orchestra will be brought from New York to interpret the musical score, said to be grand operatic in caliber, using as its themes the various patriotic American airs and the folk and heart-songs of this country and Europe.

"The Birth of a Nation" is in 5,000 scenes, that run before the eye in dazzling and bewildering succession. War and hate are skillfully blended with love and romance. Among the truly magnificent scenes, whose like, it is said, were never before exhibited in a theater in any form, are the battle of Petersburg, staged on a field five miles in extent, and involving 18,000 men in a startlingly realistic conflict; Sherman's march to the sea, culminating in the storming of Atlanta; the wild rides of the Ku-Klux Klans on their errands of revenge and mercy; an exact reproduction of Ford's Theater on the night of the assassination of President Lincoln, showing the crowded auditorium, the stage, and the President's box, and detailing every move of the saddest tragedy in American history; and the session of the first South Carolina Legislature elected under the influence of the carpet-baggers.

Throughout all runs the thread of a romance of love and chivalry. Some critics have acclaimed Mr. Griffith's spectacle as "the great American play at last."

JULY 24, 1915
SEATTLE (Wash.) POST-INTE

More Time for "Birth of

By CHARLES EUGENE B

Big Demand for Seats Makes It Imperative for Manager Griffith's Play Several More Days' Exhibition—Jack B Happy Play at Melbourne—Bessie Barriscale at A "Scandal's" Last Day at Colonial.

OWING to an unusual demand for tickets, "The Birth of a Nation" will remain for a few more days at the Clemmer. Yesterday a great many persons were turned away, unable to get seats at either matinee or evening performance.

The unprecedented run of four weeks gives this picture the premier place in the history of motion picture exhibition in Seattle. The price Manager Clemmer put on the picture here is less than one-half that charged in the seven other cities where it is being shown. It opened in Detroit this week at $2 prices.

However, it is doubtful if the price has much to do with the partronage of such a photodrama as Griffith has made in "The Birth of a Nation." It stands alone. No other theatrical entertainment has the same effect on an audience. Words are not necessary to the story. In fact, they would be a detriment. It is a colossal panorama of life in tragic action. It holds with a strange fascination. As I wrote with my first view of it, nothing except Carlyle's "French Revolution" can be compared with it for swift pageantry of tragic history. No wonder the persons that have seen it are seeking tickets for another week. Mr. Griffith has declared his picture will never be shown at popular prices. Naturally. Only a few cities have yet seen it. The life of this composition should be a long one. It is quite certain, too, that no city will give the picture a more congenial atmosphere or more fitting features by way of music and decoration than those at the Clemmer.

"Are You a Mason?" Is Funny.

There are continual ripples of merriment at the Melbourne, where Jack Barrymore is giving a fine performance of the perturbed young husband in "Are You a Mason?" He is at his best in this inimitable farce. The audiences fairly shriek at some of the situations. In the splendidly capable cast is Ida Waterman, who plays the irate mother-in-law with just the right touch of humor, and Charles Dickson, as the bogus Grand Master Mason.

"The Mating" Is a Pretty Story.

No prettier love story could be imagined than that of "The Mating," a college romance in which Bessie Barriscale is playing at the Alaska. A demure little country miss, loving her cat and her dog and longing for a woman's estate, she falls in love with the picture of a college athlete printed in a football story. How she won and the girls that poked fun at her discomfited is charmingly told in the picture.

"Scandal" Will Close Tonight.

One of the photodramas that everybody is better off for having seen is "Scandal," written by Lois Weber, which closes a good week at the Colonial tonight. Miss Weber, who has proved herself a woman of ideals and imagination first in "Hypocrites" and now in "Scandal," plays the leading role in the present Colonial offering. The story shows clearly that it is the repeater of gossip that is to be blamed most for the harm done. If every one were sure of the facts before repeating a tidbit of scandal the world would be a great deal happier, no doubt.

"The Lorelei Madonna" Coming.

The motion picture part of the Empress program next week will be a three-act photodrama made by the Vitagraph, called "The Lorelei Madonna," a Broadway star feature. The story is a drama of the South sea islands, where love runs rampant and, in its violence, often carries a life or two with it. In this piece there are several trying moments, which finally furnish a denouement that is both satisfactory and logical. At a priv showing the picture was selec against a large field of other ma Next week the management hope show "The Octopus," a terrific and ing drama which had a long New run.

Leading Features At Photoplay Ho

ALASKA—"The Mating," featu Bessie Barriscale.
CLEMMER—"The Birth of a N tion," Griffith's historic war poem.
COLONIAL — "Scandal," featuring Lois Weber, the author.
MELBOURNE—"Are You a Mason," featuring John Barrymore.

CLIPPING FROM
Los Angeles Herald
Date 8-15-15

The Birth of a Nation

Walter Sanford, manager of the Olympic Theater, announces the opening of the Broadway house, Sunday night, August 29, when what is regarded as the greatest motion picture extant, The Birth of a Nation, is to be exhibited for the five weeks then ensuing.

It is understood that the contract for this exhibition provides that the picture must be shown in first-class theaters only, and motion picture houses are barred. Nine months ago The Birth of a Nation began its sojourn at the Liberty Theater, New York. It is in its thirtieth week in Boston and its twentieth in Chicago, where, at the Illinois Theater, the time of the film can not be extended, owing to the urgent requirement of beginning the regular dramatic season of the house.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
JULY 22, 1915

FOR THE PLAYGOER

DAVIDSON—"The Birth of a Nation," master photoproduction of the period of reconstruction, for indefinite engagement. Shown at 2:15 and 8:10 o'clock daily.
CRYSTAL—Vaudeville of five acts headlined by Mlle. Mercereau, dancer. Matinee daily.
SHUBERT — Shubert stock players in "Today." Matinee on Saturday and Sunday.
BUTTERFLY—Pictures.
ALHAMBRA—Pictures.
MAJESTIC—Pictures.

MANY FROM OUTSIDE.

Now in the third week of its remarkable run at the Davidson, "The Birth of a Nation" is still attracting large crowds of Milwaukeeans and visitors from cities in the state every afternoon and evening. In fact, many persons have attended several performances to get the full enjoyment of the entertainment. Visualizing the slave problem and the Civil war, the photoplay is a powerful appeal to emotion intensified by an inspiring musical score interpreted by an orchestra of forty skilled musicians. The war pictures are said to be true depictions of history, setting forth the conditions of the times and the trials of the north in subduing the rebellious south.

AUG. 10, 19

Clune's Auditorium

Last night "The Clansman," at the opening of its seventeenth week at Clune's Auditorium Theater, proved that it had not lost its power to attract, for a capacity audience gathered to witness that most wonderful of motion pictures.

In every particular, "The Clansman" maintains its marvelous heart interest, and it seems that one never wearies of its splendid array of battle scenes, its delicate touch upon life's lighter side, and its magnificent interpretation of a question that is ever before the American people—the race problem. Teaching a great lesson, teeming with that something quite indefinable, yet almost within one's grasp, "The Clansman" is creating for itself a place in the world's history, and it will be a long time before the memory of this remarkable production takes its place with the almost forgotten events of the past.

At this time, with so many tourists in Los Angeles, "The Clansman" will prove to be one of the most interesting attractions here, for its fame has spread throughout the world, and everyone is anxious to witness what is acclaimed the most truthful, most extravagant reproduction of that darkest blot on our nation's progress.

ALAMEDA (Cal.) TIMES-STAR
APR. 12, 1915

MACDONOUGH

The Macdonough ... twice daily at ... W. Griffith's ... spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," or as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," based on Thomas Dixon's well known story.

This spectacular motion picture production marks a new epoch in the art of the photo-drama.

More than $500,000 was expended in the production of "The Birth of a Nation," and eight months were required to stage it. No opportunity was overlooked to make it historically and technically correct. A well known professor of history in one of California's leading universities worked four months delving through history to secure exact data for staging the spectacle. The battle fields were laid out according to the most authentic war maps that could be secured. Seven old grizzled war veterans, who took part in the original battle, at siege before Petersburg, assisted Director Griffith in staging this battle scene. Three West Point army officers and several companies of State militia also assisted in the staging of the battle scenes.

BERKLEY (Cal.) GAZETTE
AUG. 11, 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" CONTINUES TO DRAW BIG CROWDS

"The Birth of a Nation," or as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's spectacular motion picture production in twelve reels, based on Thomas Dixon's well known novel, continues to be greeted by audiences that tax the capacity of the Macdonough theater, where the production is now being shown.

"The Birth of a Nation" marks a new epoch in the art of motion picture photography. No care or expense was spared in making the production historically and technically correct.

Showing the faithfulness of accuracy with which Director Griffith has religiously maintained through the formation of this national drama, the announcement of the assassination of Lincoln is made by a reproduction of the front page of a southern newspaper located in the region of the home of the characters shown.

In order to direct the myriads of men, Griffith had to resort to the modern field telephone so that on the immense stage of the plains and valleys of the combats he could order a corps to advance or retreat and supervise in detail all the movements and artillery firing.

Two exhibitions are given daily, a matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 12, 1915

Next week the Chaplin ... appear in "The Prince of ..." with Chaplin in the leading role.

MACDONOUGH

The ... history of the period of ... tion in the South.

Many well-known episodes are shown in the film, including the assassination of Lincoln by Booth, the famous raids of the Ku Klux Klan, the call for volunteers, the ... and burning of Atlanta, ... of Sherman ...

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 12, 1915

MACDONOUGH

D. W. Griffith's marvelous photo-drama in twelve reels, "The Birth of a Nation," or, as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," based on Thomas Dixon's well-known novel, continues to be the attraction at the Macdonough theater, where it is being shown twice daily to enthusiastic audiences that tax the capacity of that playhouse. A daily matinee is given at 2:10, with the evening performance at 8:15.

Although "The Birth of a Nation" is now in its fifth week at the Macdonough, its popularity continues unabated.

In the production of this remarkable motion picture production Mr. Griffith has framed an epochal photo-drama, which pictures as no history or drama, or no poetry can make vivid, as so many can depict, the trilogy of that period—the era previous to the war, the war time and the reconstruction epoch.

But leavening all this marvelous pictorial history with romance, Mr. Griffith has, with consummate skill and a vocabulary of throbbing poetical phrases, interwoven with the history of the nation, a history of individuals, a love story of ardent nature as thrilling as any and as romantic as any which have ever graced the great dramas of the stage. Dovetailed in and out of all the great events of history.

This romance begins before the first shot on Sumter; it blooms at Appomattox; it is forced to cast its die of consequence; it suffers and survives with the destruction of Atlanta.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS

SETS UP NEW RECORDS WHEREVER IT IS SHOWN

...rman Brown, manager of the ...avidson theater, where "The Birth of a Nation" is an exceptional motion picture attraction, has been informed by ... W. Griffith, the producer, that in every city in which the photoplay of the slave problem and the civil war has been exhibited they records of attendance have been established. All classes of theatergoers in Milwaukee have seen the wonderful pictures for large crowds that have witnessed performances every afternoon and evening.

The pictures reveal a double romance between young men and women of the North and South, the estrangements caused by war and the reconciliations followed after peace was de-...

...a spectacular and historic point ... the camera drama is rated as ...nt production ever offered to ...ic. All phases of war are de-... Martial music is played by an ...a of forty pieces and the music ...s the emotional appeal of the ...iews.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
AUG. 11, 1915

...S CLOSE AUGUST 20

...irth of a Nation" Will Have Been ... ...mes.

... Birth of a Nation," now in its ... week at the Davidson theater, ...bly will establish a record for ...films in the middle west that will ... in unequaled for many years to ... The run continues until August ... last performance being given on ...ight. On August 29 the regular ...son of the house is inaugurated ...h Bantley in "All Over Town." ...ll make a complete engagement ... weeks, two performances daily ... time, or an actual total of 114 ...ces given continuously, a rec... theatrical engagement ... ...lwaukee.

BERKELEY (Cal.) GAZETTE
AUG 11, 1915

"THE CLANSMAN" CONTINUES TO DRAW BIG CROWDS

"The Birth of a Nation," or as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's spectacular motion picture production in twelve reels, based on Thomas Dixon's well known novel, continues to be greeted by audiences that tax the capacity of the Macdonough theater, where the production is now being shown.

"The Birth of a Nation" marks a new epoch in the art of motion picture photography. No care or expense was spared in making the production historically and technically correct.

Showing the faithfulness of accuracy with which Director Griffith has religiously maintained through the formation of this national drama, the announcement of the assassination of Lincoln is made by a reproduction of the front page of a southern newspaper located in the region of the home of the characters shown.

In order to direct the myriads of men, Griffith had to resort to the modern field telephone so that on the immense stage of the plains and valleys of the combats he could order a corps to advance or retreat and supervise in detail all the movements and artillery firing.

Two exhibitions are given daily, a matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

Clune's Auditorium.

"The Clansman" appears to be without limit as regards its drawing power. So great is the demand for seats that it will be necessary to show the film again next week.

Special attention has been paid to the musical programme, which sustains the emotional intensity of the film throughout.

Date .....

and Emilon.

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL.

Entering upon its sixth week in this city, D. W. Griffith's wonderful $500,000 spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is being presented at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, has proved to be the greatest drawing attraction in the film field. Already more than 125,000 Brooklynites and visitors to Brighton Beach have viewed the picture, which presents before the audience those stirring times of the Civil War, including the days preceding the outbreak and the reconstruction period following. The battle scenes, one of which shows the famous march of General Sherman to the sea, and another the last stand of the Confederates as their cause was lost, have won the admiration of hundreds of veterans who fought in the struggle and who are members of Grand Army Posts in this borough.

There has been so much commendation of "The Birth of a Nation" by educators and historians who have seen it that the D. W. Griffith interests have received request from all sections of the country for its production. In several cities the school authorities voiced their approval of its educational value by taking all the pupils of an entire school at the same time to witness the photo-drama.

"BIRTH OF NATION" A WONDERFUL SPECTACLE

The Music is Not the Least of the Great Array of Feature in Film Play

The success of D. W. Griffith's wonder spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the New Nixon Theatre, is the talk of the Boardwalk. So many telephone orders are being received at the box office that it has been found necessary to employ an extra telephone operator to answer inquiries and take orders for seats. The attendance is so large that it is advisable for patrons to make their reservations well in advance.

Theatre-goers who have wondered what historical basis there was for the Southern clans pictured in "The Birth of a Nation" may be interested to learn that they were an indirect outgrowth of the Highland clans of Scotland. David W. Griffith is a Southerner and has been a close student all his life of the Civil War and reconstruction periods. The facts given herewith are the results of his studies in that field.

Thousands of Scottish Highlanders, with their families broken by the Stuart wars, emigrated and settled in the Carolinas in the eighteenth century. The traveller today can find quaint villages nestling in the Appalachian foothills where nearly all of the inhabitants are of Scottish descent. To ride swiftly and to shoot straight is the distinguishing mark of the men. The tradition of clannish union for defense rules as strongly as ever. The rite of upholding St. Andrew's Cross is vividly remembered and in many localities preserved.

The clans sprang into life during the reconstruction struggles of 1869-71. General Nathan Bedford Forrest, the dashing cavalry leader, was the organizer and first leader. John W. Morton, afterwards Secretary of State of Tennessee, was Adjutant-General. The incident in "The Birth of a Nation" of the North Carolina clansmen massing to aid their South Carolina brethren is actual fact. Often parties of clansmen rode fifty to sixty miles by night on such secret errands, carrying terror to evildoers.

Henry Walthall, who plays the role of the Ku Klux Klan leader, is the son of a clansman. The rites used are taken from the ritual book of the order, which was secretly published at Pulaski, Tenn. The "underground railroad" was an important part of the system. Later, when Federal prosecutions were instituted, many reached the west and today many clansmen and their descendants are prominent citizens in Texas, Arkansas, Missouri and Oklahoma. A general amnesty finally removed the ban of secrecy and since that time the stories of their doings and thrilling escapes have developed into tales like those that Sir Walter Scott wrote of their ancestors.

Ball at Piedmont, South Carolina, celebrating the battle of Bull Run as shown in "The Birth of a Nation," now showing at the New Nixon.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) POST-DISPATCH
Aug. 15, 1915.

ST. LOUIS WILL SOON SEE FIRST MOVIES AT $1.50

"Birth of a Nation" to Open at Olympic Aug. 29, at Regular Prices.

St. Louis is to have its first taste of $1.50 moving pictures, when "The Birth of a Nation" opens at the Olympic Theater Sunday night, Aug. 29.

"The Birth of a Nation" is generally recognized as the most elaborate motion picture ever made, and it is to be exhibited throughout the United States, as it has for months past been shown in Eastern cities, only in high-grade theaters, and at the regular scale of prices prevailing in those houses.

The action of "The Birth of a Nation" deals with American history, in and after the Civil War period. The play is in part founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." This novel, and the dramatization of it, have been condemned as unjust to the negro race, and as historically untrue. The same charge has been made against "The Birth of a Nation," and an unsuccessful attempt was made, in Boston, to prevent the production of the film on this ground.

AUG. 12, 1915
MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN

TREMENDOUS BATTLE SCENES IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

What is said to be the most tremendous battle scene ever staged, is shown in "The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay, now in its sixth week at the Davidson, when the siege of Petersburg, Va., is depicted. This final stand of the Confederacy was, it will be remembered, strongly contested. For weeks the battle waged and finally Lee's half-starved men gave in. The scenes are shown in an area of five miles, and were taken from the top of a 60-foot tower. More than 10,000 men and 3,000 horses are shown at one time. Both Union and Confederate trenches are to be seen, and mortars, artillery, and all of the paraphernalia of war, complete the scene. The offering will remain at the Davidson until August 29, when the regular season opens.

TACOMA (Wash.) TRIBUNE
Aug 12-1915

BIRTH OF NATION FILM MAY BE HERE ANYHOW

Tacoma Theater May Bring It Next October.

Manager Herald Goes Ahead With Plans in Belief That the Much-discussed Drama Is Within the New Law.

Charles Herald, manager of the Tacoma theater, is conducting negotiations for the appearance here of "The Birth of a Nation" in the belief that it will not come under the ban of the "movie" censor ordinance adopted by the city council yesterday. Mr. Herald expects to close a contract with the producers for the appearance of the spectacle here next October, the earliest date open. Such a rivalry has developed among theater managers that the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" have put the booking on a higher basis and are accepting only the best offers. Mr. Herald said he believes the offer of the Tacoma theater will be accepted.

It was rumored at the city hall today that the colored people have obtained legal advice and will attempt to prevent the pictures being shown. They are not relying entirely on the new city ordinance for a basis of action but are said to have been advised that there is other authority [illegible] action.

CLIPPING FROM Tribune
Oakland Cal
Date 7-11-15

Date Portland Ore
8-12-15

NIXON OPENING

"The Birth of a Nation" Booked for Five Weeks

W. Griffith's master production "The Birth of a Nation" will be the attraction at the Nixon Theater beginning Wednesday evening, September 1, and continuing matinee and evening daily for a limited engagement of five weeks.

It will be brought here in exact reproduction of the great attraction which is now in New York where it has broken every record of the American stage. Its achievements alone have aroused comment upon the subject of this story than was ever devoted to a theatrical enterprise before.

The merest statement regarding "The Birth of a Nation" leaps to superlatives because there is no other form in which it can be written. Simple facts in relationship to its developments sound extravagant until you have seen the production and realized a tithe of its sweep and power. It covers the essential details of American history ranging through three centuries. Actual battles are shown with tens of thousands of soldiers in the conflict. Eighteen thousand people participated in the telling of the story. Three thousand horses were used to give the cavalry and other thrilling effects of the wild dashes over miles of territory. Cities were built up only to be destroyed by fire. The total cost of the entire production was in the neighborhood of $500,000. Five hundred costumers and seamstresses worked for three months to make the costumes worn by the people. Ten thousand yards of cloth were worked into the costumes worn by the women while 5000 yards of white muslin were used in the regalia of the Ku Klux Klansmen. And yet with all this a simple human story of love and romance weaves through the vast spread of the action, and wins the hearts of the audience. The narrative is filled with tears and smiles. A symphonic score accompanies the action, and lends a potent force to the drama.

Date Portland Ore
8-13-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Shows may come and shows may go, and picture films may be widely heralded and after brief exhibitions returned to the shelves, but "The Birth of a Nation" continues on its triumphant way and will be shown at the B. F. Keith theatre in this city the entire week beginning Aug. 30. Besides the film spectacle itself, "The Birth of a Nation" music has taken a firm hold on the fancy of New England theatregoers. It revives most of the old tunes of the Civil war and includes also much elaborate orchestration in a more modern mode. For out-of-town patrons the matinee performances will be found attractive the same as night and more convenient to attend.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the biggest production so far made in the entire world. There were over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras finished their work in the West and South, but the process of selection, which plays such a telling part in these productions, has reduced this to 12,000 feet. The spectacle as it now stands takes about two and three-quarters hours to

PPING FROM Oregonian
Date June Mail
8-14-15

...ued.

Thousands See Picture.

Both in number of persons in attendance and in gross ceceipts, "The Birth of a Nation," which will remain [illegible] week at the Clemmer, may be counted on to set marks which will stand a long time in film circles here.

Probably the first two weeks will total between 20,000 and 25,000 people, who have bought tickets. The third week should have half as many more. This, with a scale of prices considerably above what is usual, shatters records made by "The Spoilers," "The Last Days of Pompeii," "Cabiria," "Neptune's Daughter" or "Hypocrites."

Whatever may be thought of the Griffith film as propaganda, it can not be denied first rank as a great drama and a great drawing card.

(Wash.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 13, 1915 881

STAGE STUFF

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TO RUN THIRD WEEK AT THE CLEMMER

Management Decides to Exercise Its Option — Sale of Seats Is Heavy.

"The Birth of a Nation," now in its second week at the Clemmer theater, will continue its run next week, according to an announcement made by the management today. Seats will be placed on sale immediately for the remainder of the engagement.

The original booking of the picture for Spokane, Manager H. S. Clemmer declares, was for two weeks, with the option of a third week. It is this option which is to be exercised.

"The demand for seats has been so great that all who want to see the picture can not be accommodated in the two weeks," stated Manager Clemmer. "We are receiving hundreds of letters and telephone calls, including many from parties out of the city, and the attendance is close to capacity at all performances."

Delays Portland Run.

The decision to keep "The Birth of a Nation" in Spokane next week will hold up the showing of the picture in Portland, where it has not yet been seen.

The Portland booking has been made by James Q. Clemmer, owner of the Clemmer and other houses in Seattle and a brother of the local theater head. It provides for putting the film into the Heilig theater in the Rose city to run four weeks.

Show Film to Doctors.

Invitations are being sent out by the management of the Casino theater for a pricate run of the picture, "Dr. Rameau," to physicians and clergymen of Spokane.

The special performance is to be Saturday at 9:15 a. m. The picture is a Fox production and is booked to be shown at the Casino Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Send Grifnith Film to Portland House

James Q. Clemmer of Seattle, instrumental in bringing "The Birth of a Nation" to the northwest, who has booked it for a Portland showing.

CLIPPING FROM Tribune
Date Oakland (Cal.)
8-15-15

MACDONOUGH

Popular demand makes it necessary for the management of the Macdonough theater to continue D. W. Griffith's spectacular motion picture production, "The Birth of a Nation," or, as it is more generally known, "The Clansman," for another week, commencing tomorrow.

The exhibitions are given daily, including Sunday, a matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15. It is estimated that more than 85,000 people have seen this remarkable film production during its five weeks here, but its popularity continues unabated. Many people see the play several times, so great is its wide appeal.

While it is an epic of pictures it is always intimately human; the great tragedy it depicts is illumined by constant natural comedy, and illuminated by a beautiful romance which threads the series of historical events.

There is a mastery of detail shown which is novel to the stage and this is combined with absolute fidelity to historical fact.

Lincoln's decisive act of signing the call for volunteers is as exact as if the audience had been present.

FF

AUG 15 1915

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE
Aug. 15, 1915.

"Silent Drama" Is Now Great Industry

FF

Five years ago the motion picture industry was in its infancy. The total amount of capital invested in motion pictures at this time was approximately $10,000. No picture made involved an expense of more than $500. Today the motion picture industry ranks third in the amount of money invested and is exceeded only by the United States Steel and Standard Oil corporations. Five years ago the largest motion picture made did not exceed one reel, or 1000 feet.

The average person of intelligence was ashamed to be seen coming out of a theater where motion pictures were being exhibited. The characterizations in the pictures were crude, the actors and actresses possessed seemingly no dramatic ability whatever. The director, as a usual thing, was simply a stage hand.

Since this time the motion pictures have gone ahead by leaps and bounds.

BIG PICTURES OUT.

Feature pictures of from six to ten reels are now released almost daily. Thousands of dollars are expended in the production of one picture alone.

Perhaps no greater illustration can be drawn showing the wonderful progress made in the movies during the past few years than in citing "The Birth of a Nation, or The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's wonderful film production, now having a record run at the Macdonough Theater. "The Birth of a Nation" has already been shown for six weeks and has played to approximately 85,000 people. No drama of the spoken stage has ever before had such an extended run in Oakland. This proves the great hold that motion pictures have on the general public.

Six years ago Director Griffith started in the motion pictures. He was told to keep the expense of producing his picture down to $400, including salaries, cost of building the stage settings and all other expenses incidental to the taking of the picture. Mr. Griffith wanted a company of soldiers to appear in the picture, and he hired about twenty-five young men to appear before the camera for several days. When the studio manager heard of the extra expense, which amounted to $120, he waxed very indignant. Griffith came very near being discharged on the spot and was retained only after he agreed to make up this amount out of his own pocket and by economizing on his next picture. Gradually the cost of producing pictures was increased.

EXPENSES ENORMOUS.

In staging "The Birth of a Nation" no expense was spared in making the production historically and technically correct. Eight months were consumed in staging it and more than $500,000 was expended in its production. When the producers found that the public wanted good pictures for which they were willing to pay a good price of admission, the producers then awoke that to make a success of the industry they must spend money on the production end of the game.

Mary Pickford was one of the extra girls at the Biograph studio when Griffith found her. She was earning $5 a day when she worked. Today Miss Pickford is probably the highest paid actress in the silent drama with a yearly income of $[redacted]

BATTLE SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL

LILLIAN GISH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL.—Because of the tremendous success of the run of D. W. Griffith's spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" at the Brighton Beach Music Hall William N. Kemble, the managing director, and his associates declare they have been able to pay the Griffith interests the $65,000 they guaranteed for the privilege of presenting the great film in Brooklyn. In paying this price Brooklyn not only saw the picture before Philadelphia and other big cities, but Mr. Kemble obtained the exclusive right to present it in this borough.

The film, which is a picture history of the days of the civil war and shows the likenesses of the great man of those times, including President Lincoln, General Grant and General Lee, vivid battle scenes and Sherman's march to the sea, has drawn crowded houses at the Brighton Beach Music Hall even in rainy and unseasonable weather.

Many film producers expressed the opinion that the manager of the music hall paid an exceptional amount for the privilege, but the attendance and the receipts have more than justified the venture. Mr. Kemble was certain that "The Birth of a Nation" would prove a sensation in Brooklyn, as it has in Manhattan.

The receipts for the performance would be even larger but for the fact that on a number of occasions Mr. Kemble set aside half of the house for the accommodation of hundreds of orphans. The orphans, who came from Brooklyn homes, were taken to the music hall in special cars and were served with orangeade and fruit.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be presented at the music hall for the rest of the season. Many educational and patri-

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union

AUG 17 1915

AUG 17
MILWAUKEE (WIS.) WISCONSIN

"The Birth of a Nation," Griffith photofilm, wh[redacted]ontinue at the Davidson until August 28, is the only offering of the kind ever played in this city at theater prices, and the only offering of any kind to run for eight consecutive weeks in Wisconsin. More than 112 performances will be given when the run ends. Seats are now on sale for all performances, and reservations may be made at the box office. Performances start at 2:15 and 8:10 o'clock.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT BRIGHTON MUSIC HALL

The spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which will remain for the summer season at the Brighton Beach Music Hall, continues to lure large audiences daily. In fact, the story of the Civil War which is told on the screen in a very impressive manner not merely holds uninterrupted attention, but the scenes are thrilling and make the spectators feel that they are witnessing realities instead of mimic representations. The popularity of the production may be gauged by the fact that large parties of educational, civic, patriotic, historical and other associations are viewing the spectacle as fast as reservations can be made.

BERKELEY DAILY GAZETTE
AUG. 16, 1915

"CLANSMAN" FILM BEGINS SIXTH WEEK IN OAKLAND

D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle in twelve reels, "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," will enter upon its sixth and final big week at the Macdonough theater today.

Although this spectacular motion picture production has been shown at the Macdonough for five weeks, during which time more than 85,000 persons have seen it, its popularity continues unabated.

"The Birth of a Nation" marks a new epoch in motion pictures. Never before has the time and care been taken with the production of any film as was accorded by Director Griffith in staging "The Birth of a Nation." More than $500,000 was expended in staging the film and eight months were required to complete it.

Director Griffith utilized the services of more than 25,000 people and 3,000 horses in making "The Birth of a Nation." Romance, comedy, history and drama are artistically blended together in the film.

The most spectacular battle scenes ever enacted before a camera are shown. Other notable features are the rise in power of Thaddeus Stevens, the great commoner, the assassination of President Lincoln by Booth, the formation, motives and raids of the famous Ku Klux Klan and the problems of the south during the reconstruction period.

Two exhibitions are given daily, including Sunday, matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

"SURRENDER OF LEE TO GRANT"

From "Birth of a Nation," at the Savoy Next Week.

Aug 17

When David W. Griffith started the [illegible]oor staging of the civil war and [illegible]truction scenes in "The Birth of [illegible]tion," showing at the Savoy thea[illegible] next week, he was confronted by [illegible]ingly insuperable obstacles. An [illegible] about as large as the corner of [illegible]ium occupied by the Anglo-French [illegible]es was required; thousands of cav[illegible]men had to be shown in an his[illegible] raid by the North Carolina clan, [illegible]ir run was to be over many miles [illegible] typical southern sandy roads. The [illegible] acknowledged wizard of the films, [illegible] Griffith is not a "war lord" with [illegible] to command.

[illegible] this emergency the authorities of [illegible]untry in which "The Birth of a [illegible]" was being produced were ap[illegible]d to. They finally consented to [illegible] off an area of 10 square miles for [illegible] of Director Griffith for one day. [illegible] roads in this section were clos[illegible] traffic during the day, and the cameras were at work on this scene from sunrise to sunset. The roads themselves did not look like the old southern roads, and Mr. Griffith with the permission of the county official remade such of the highways as would come within the camera eye. Tons of sand was spread, and tons of gravel, too. Landscape engineering changed the appearance of the landscape to the rounded hills, piney woods and deep gullies of North Carolina.

The race of the Clansmen to rescue their South Carolina brethren took place on the appointed day without a flaw or accident. After it was all over Mr. Griffith's men scraped the sand off the macadam roads, took down the signs, and life in the sleepy countryside resumed its normal course.

It cost about $25,000 to do this trick, but it was worth it, as those who have seen this wonderful spectacle will cheerfully testify.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) JOURNAL-DEM.
Aug. 17, 1915

Prov. Opera House

As an historical film as well as in the splendor of its scenic effects and the realistic acting of its principal character, "The Birth of a Nation," seen yesterday for the [illegible] publicly in this city at the Providence Opera House, after its spectacular run in Boston, surpasses any motion picture of its kind ever produced. It is, perhaps, the first realistic picture of the terrible days of the four years of Civil War, followed by the worse than anarchy of the crippled South during the 10 years following the surrender of Lee at Appomatox. D. W. Griffith, the author of the play and the director in charge of its stupendous production, has surpassed every other production of the kind in presenting, for the first time in the history of photoplay production, an authentic tale of the terrible days from 1861 to 1875. Artistically as well as historically speaking, the photoplay is without a peer in photoplaydom today.

Although there was a smaller audience last evening than usual those who witnessed the 12 reels of film depicting the Civil War and the period of the Reconstruction were kept in a state of intense interest from start to finish. The special music played by an orchestra of 22 pieces, most of whom are from Boston, together with the property management at the rear of the curtain lent realism to the stirring war and love and historical scenes.

The plot of the play is taken almost bodily from the "Clansman" by Dixon, the novel which, when it came out several years ago, made such a stir by reason of its realistic description of the reconstruction period.

Together with a charming and convincing love story, which is in reality a double love romance, there is woven the stirring scenes of the pre-Civil War period, the days of the war, including Sherman's famous March to the Sea, the Surrender of Lee to Grant at Appomatox Court House, the Assassination of Abraham Lincoln and many other scenes of historical interest, all produced as accurately as possible at this present day

Then the first half of the big production ends the audience has been carried through the stirring scenes of four long years of Civil War. With the second part begins the real pathos of the whole play. The bitter and grinding poverty of the white elements in the south, who have given all for the lost cause of "states' rights" which melted to thin air when Lee's "Flower of the Confederacy" was washed away on the tide of overwhelming adversity and overpowering numbers, the struggle of the whites against the insults of the negroes, influenced by the "carpet baggers" and the lower class of whites of the period, as influenced by men high in the authority of the land; the terror of the women, the ravages of the power crazed whites and blacks who plundered the state; and finally, the advent of the famous Ku Klux Klan that wonderful "Invisible Empire" which stretched over the leading states of the Southland and whose ravages finally compelled the authorities to grant the franchise once again to the whites who gained control of their land once more.

Perhaps no parts of the whole production so stir the blood of the audience as the dashing night riders of the Ku Klux Klan, summoned to the duty of guarding the ever sacred honor of the white race by the fiery cross which in days of old was used by their ancestors in the highlands of Scotland.

The Providence public will be well repaid for the time and money spent in viewing this production. It presents for the first time on the screen an historical facsimile, trfue to life and detail, of what this nation really underwent, in order to become the great power it now is. The gross selfishness of that little gnot of so-called statemen in Washington, who through four long years of Civil War made the overburdened heart of Abraham Lincoln sink sometimes to utter despair with their slander and hectoring and threats are here shown in their true light, restroying in wanton selfishness the efforts at peace and prosperity which he had tried to realize at the close of the war.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE
AUG. 17, 1915

[illegible] of the expedition that has been made to it here and elsewhere by representatives of the colored people. As shown here might the pictures offer nothing to offset or even match the most [illegible] of the negro race [illegible] reasonably take offence. The pictures were witnessed by the large audience, with no exhibition of feeling antagonistic to North or South, white or black, and it is difficult to imagine how any feeling along those lines could be aroused.

"The Birth of a Nation" is decidedly worth seeing. It has marked historical value. The scenes give a vivid and accurate view of happenings before, during and succeeding the Civil War, and in that respect the photo play is highly educational. It also gives a marvelous picture of the horrors of war and the impression it made strong and deep that war is not simply hell, as Gen. Sherman said, but a thousand or a million of hells. Battle scenes are reproduced with a minuteness of detail that is marvelous, and with all the accompaniments of the roar of great guns, the roll of rifle fire, the clouds of smoke, the charges of cavalry and infantry, the death of fighters and the destruction of property until it seems as though one was fairly in the midst of the big conflict. These pictures are particularly impressive at this time when almost all Europe is in the throes of a terrific struggle and this country is hovering on the brink of the precipice. There is also in this photo play the intense lesson of patriotism, of love of a united and not a divided nation that is well worth while in these trying days.

The play is inspiring, too, in that it shows at the end how the negro race has risen from slavery to citizenship, from ignorance to knowledge, from poverty to prosperity. These closing views form a bright contrast to the darkness of those which have preceded it, and should stir pride, patriotism, honor and ambition in the heart of every member of the race whose progress is thus depicted.

Throughout the play runs the thread of a love story which knits together two families, one in the North and one in the South, and that adds the flavor and color of romance to the stirring and sometimes sombre effect of the war scenes. The parts of the noted men of the day in government and in war are assumed with pleasing fidelity to features, dress and manner and an enlarged orchestra plays special music arranged in a most effective way so as to add greatly to the effectiveness of the pictures. The most startling and impressive scenes are the surrender of Lee, the assassination of Lincoln, the march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta and the Ku Klux raids.

The cast in the play includes:
Col. Ben Cameron.....Henry Walthall
Margaret Cameron, the elder sister.. ..... Miriam Cooper
Flora, the pet sister.....Mae Marsh
Mrs. Cameron.....Josephine Crowell
Dr. Cameron.....Spottiswode Aiken
Hon. Austin Stoneman, leader of the House .....Ralph Lewis
Elsie, his daughter.....Lillian Gish
Silas Lynch, mulatto Lieutenant Governor .....George Seigmann
Gus, a renegade negro.....Walter Long Abraham Lincoln.....Joseph Henabery

"The Birth of a Nation" will be presented at the [illegible] daily, afternoon and evening, and [illegible] interested in the history of the country in war should not miss seeing its vivid and forceful presentation of some of the most stirring scenes of these most stirring days.

CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES

LOS ANGELES EXAMINER

Date .....

"The Birth of a Nation."

Managers of several orphan asylums have requested William H. Kemble, manager of the Brighton Beach Music Hall where D. W. Griffith's $500,000 production, "The Birth of a Nation," is playing, to accommodate at some of the matinees except on Saturday and Sundays, several hundred boys and girls. The managers have been moved to make the appeal because the heads of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum and other institutions whose wards Manager Kemble had as his guests have informed them that the children enjoyed the pictures, which depict the most historical incidents of the Civil War period, more than they did a trip to the seashore.

Mr. Kemble, who has made it a practise to invite orphans to his theatre, has had several thousands this season to view "The Birth of a Nation." Because of its educational value, depicting in picture the stirring days of the Civil War period and showing such illustrious characters as Lincoln, Grant and Lee, Mr. Kemble thought it advisable to give the children an opportunity to see these notables portrayed in the sensational events of which they study in school.

Clune's Auditorium

Eighteen weeks of "The Clansman" and still showing to crowded houses. Remember, showing to crowded houses at Clune's Auditorium Theater means 2000 persons at a performance.

There are many good plays, dramas and comedies, books, paintings, operas and songs, but only here and there one that can stand repetition, and when it can it will go down in history as a masterpiece.

Last evening a demure little old lady remarked to her friend that it was the fifth time she had seen "The Clansman," and each performance was just as thrilling and stirring as the last.

Where else could one so safely witness a battle of 25,000 soldiers with 5000 cavalrymen and fifty companies of artillery, shelling and burning the city of Atlanta? The most amazing impersonations of Grant, Lee, Lincoln and Sumner and the gripping scene of Lee's surrender?

From the moment the curtain rises upon an old Southern home, the atmosphere of the South prevails. And until the last flash on the screen the audience is held [illegible]

SHERMAN'S MARCH TO THE SEA

Scene From "The Birth of a Nation" at Savoy—Extra Matinee Tomorrow Morning.

Owing to the tremendous demand for tickets for the "Birth of a Nation" picture at the Savoy theater, the management has decided to give an extra matinee tomorrow morning at 10.30. The picture has created no end of favorable comment and has been witnessed by thousands here. For those who are unable to attend any of the performances while the picture is being shown in this city, the announcement is made that they may see it at the Broadway theater, Long Branch, on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of next week. Without a doubt this picture has been witnessed by more people in this city than any other picture ever presented here. The sale of tickets has been almost continuous and times has nearly overwhelmed the attendants at the office. In addition to this have been hundreds of telephone reservations for seats.

BOSTON TRANSCRIPT
AUG. 18, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TO REMAIN

Extra Weeks Added to Long Engagement at Tremont Theatre

"The Birth of a Nation" announces an extra fortnight for its Boston engagement at the Tremont Theatre, and will not leave the house Saturday night, as had been intended. The limit of the engagement had been positively fixed and for four weeks announcement had been made that the photo-play would be seen for the last time at the Tremont Saturday evening. The demand for seats was so great, testing the capacity of the theatre at both afternoon and evening performances, and mail orders from out-of-town were so numerous, that it was seen that many thousands would be disappointed by the closing of the engagement this week. After protracted negotiations between Boston and New York an extra fortnight was arranged, but that was practically all that could be obtained, as it is imperative that bookings for the regular season at the Tremont, beginning on Labor Day, should be carried out. As it is, however, "The Birth of a Nation" will be able to take the record of the highest total performances given in a single engagement on the local stage. Other plays have stayed more weeks, but they were only for six evenings and two matinées, but "The Birth of a Nation" has been given every day since April 10, and the films make total receipts that take the lead on record. With the performance of tonight "The Birth of a Nation" will have been given 224 times to a total of 385,000 persons. The last performance will be given at the Tremont on Saturday, Sept. 4.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 18, 1915

GRIFFITH SET RECORD IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," the great pictorial drama which visualized the civil war, now in its seventh successful week at the Davidson, is acknowledged to be one of the leading figures in the motion picture industry. It is said Mr. Griffith, Thomas H. Ince and Mack Sennett, who specialize in comic productions, are producers who receive $100,000 a year each for their services.

There is nothing in the annals of motion pictures which approaches "The Birth of a Nation," and never before was so large a company of actors employed in the production of a play. To make the battle scenes realistic 18,000 persons were employed and 3,000 of them were mounted.

Before the big cast of principals was chosen, scores of available candidates were studied and the best dramatic artists were chosen. The big company was encamped in California and in the hills of Virginia eight months and the expenditures reached a total of half a million dollars. The investment, however, is regarded as a safe one as "The Birth of a Nation" is ranked as a photoplay of sufficient historic interest to be a constant production for

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 19, 1915

Griffith Had City "Built to Order"

D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," the pictorial drama of the slave problem and the civil war now running at the Davidson, had a city of tents built to order in the hills of Virginia large enough to accommodate a population of 20,000 people. After he had estimated that the services of this number of people would be required to reproduce battle scenes of the civil war, with infantry, cavalry and artillery all in action, he entered into contract to have the temporary living quarters erected, with supplies of food coming in by train every day. Hotel and restaurant stewards were consulted and on the figures they furnished the food problem was solved.

All the needs of the actors were anticipated and a force of cooks, waiters, chambermaids and other servants were engaged to work in the tented city. Doctors, dentists and druggists, tailors, dressmakers and cobblers—in fact, persons of many lines of employment—were offered advantages, and they joined the camp of war players and they lived there during the eight months time required to take the pictures.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
AUG. 19, 1915

Mae Marsh, featured in "The Birth of a Nation," to return to the Cort next week (top), and Mrs. Patrick Campbell at the Columbia in repertoire.

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 19, 1915

MACDONOUGH

D. W. Griffith's spectacular motion picture production in twelve reels, The Birth of a Nation, or as it is more generally known, The Clansman, continues to be the attraction at the Macdonough theater where it is being shown twice daily, a matinee at 2:10 and the evening at 8:15.

Although the Birth of a Nation is now in its sixth week at the Macdonough, its popularity continues unabated. In The Birth of a Nation, is a love story which arrives at a degree of poignancy unapproached in any drama of the stage. The Birth of a Nation or The Clansman will give its final exhibition at the Macdonough Sunday night.

The return of "The Melting Pot," Israel Zangwill's great play dealing in its largest aspect with the musical makeup of the United States, as a moving picture adds interest to the inspection of the new silent art. And when Walker Whiteside, one of the most skilled dramatic artists in the world, is found playing the leading role of the great Jew's stage place before the camera, the wonder grows as to when and where the possibilities of the photoplay will find a stopping place.

The Macdonough management has secured this most remarkable film attraction for one week commencing next Monday. Matinees will be given daily in conjunction with a continuous evening performance.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) STAR
AUG. 18, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION, $2 A SEAT PICTURE, AT OLYMPIC AUG. 29

Film Having 5,000 Scenes, 18,000 Actors, to Run Five Weeks —Other Attractions

Motion pictures at $2 for the best seats in the house will make its debut in St. Louis at the Olympic Theater Sunday, August 29, when the great film, "The Birth of a Nation," will be screened.

This film comes with a large symphony orchestra to interpret the patriotic and romantic score, which is said to be of grand opera caliber; and a special set of electricians and mechanicians is carried to produce sound effects in the battle scenes and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans.

The performance is three hours long. A matinee will be given daily and the film is booked to run five weeks.

The film has been heralded in St. Louis by those who have witnessed it in its long runs in New York and Chicago. It has 5,000 scenes, involving 18,000 people and is a spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days

7-18-15

$75,000 for "Birth of a Nation" in 14 States

The rights to fourteen states of "The Birth of a Nation" were offered for $75,000 last week.

The states are Minnesota, Iowa, South Dakota, North Dakota, Arizona, New Mexico, Colorado, Utah, Wyoming, Idaho, Nebraska, Kansas, Montana and Nevada. In the territory there are 565 playing points with 928 theaters and a population of 10,983,103.

The offer is made for the absolute right to present the feature in these states, the buyer to take all of the earnings up to the first $100,000, after which the original producing company is to share on the profits, receiving 33 1-3 per cent.

FARGO (N. D.) NEWS
AUG. 18, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION COMING TO THE NIXON

"The Birth of a Nation" will commence a run of five weeks at the Nixon Theater beginning Wednesday night, September 1, and continuing twice daily thereafter. Nearly 100 people are required to present this spectacle. Musicians, electricians and operators, men to handle mechanical effects and men in other departments make up this cast.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
AUG. 18, 1915

Birth of a Nation.

"The Birth of a Nation," gigantic spectacle of Civil War and Reconstruction days, involving 5000 scenes projected by especially devised lenses; a musical score, said to be grand operatic in its caliber, interpreted by a symphony orchestra to be brought here from New York, and electrical and sound effects, for which a full carload of newly invented instruments is carried, will inaugurate the season at the Olympic Theater, Sunday night, Aug. 29. The engagement is for five weeks with two performances daily, each consuming three hours.

For the first time in the history of motion picture art, the $2 seats of prices, charged for first-class theatrical attractions, will prevail for "The Birth of a Nation." When D. W. Griffith, the producer, announced this price before the first performance in New York, he was laughed at by the Broadway managers. But when the Broadway managers became the [illegible] [illegible] town, and when [illegible] followed suit with [illegible]

'CLANSMAN' WILL RETURN TO CORT

"The Birth of a Nation," or the Clansman," the world's greatest motion picture, is announced for a brief return engagement at the Cort Theater beginning Monday. The popularity of this mighty photographic spectacle remains undiminished.

More than $500,000 was expended and eight months required to produce "The Birth of a Nation." It unfolds page after page of the most potent events in American history. The picture is based on the famous novel, "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon Jr., but the noted producer of the picture, D. W. Griffith, has developed and enlarged upon the theme.

The battle scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" are the most spectacular ever staged, with 18,000 soldiers seen in action. Among the more important features depicted are Lincoln's call for volunteers, the siege before Petersburg, the bombardment and burning of Atlanta, Sherman's historical march to the sea, Lee's surrender to Grant, the assassination of President Lincoln, the rise in power of Thaddeus Stevens, and the formation of the Ku Klux Klan. The thrilling ride of the latter, in which thousands of horsemen are shown, is among the most extraordinary effects known to the screen.

KRON (O.) PRESS
AUG. 19, 1915

The Clansman of 1915

Thomas Dixon, in his book, "The Clansman," built a story around the operations of the "Klu Klux Klan," composed of men who banded together, pledged themselves to secrecy and struck horror to thousands by nocturnal raids in the south during the reconstruction period following the Civil war.

The clansman of that time wore a robe of white which covered his body, was ornamented by a bright red cross at the breast and topped by a pointed helmet. The fiery cross was the insignia of the band, which traveled by horseback in the silence of the night and bore its victims to death.

Dixon was severely criticized on the charge that he misrepresented the spirit of the south, and his story, dramatized, was barred from many cities. But if Dixon were to rewrite his story, following the lynching of Leo M. Frank, he would have to make only small changes in detail.

The clansman of 1915 used no disguise and traveled by automobile. There was no note of warning, couched in half mysterious phraseology and signed by the feared "K. K. K."

But the intent, purpose and end attained was the same.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
AUG. 19, 1915

806

[illegible] exhibition of [illegible] feature of "The Birth [illegible]

ALAMEDA (Cal.) TIMES-STAR
AUG. 19, 1915

MACDONOUGH THEATRE

"The Birth of a Nation" or "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle in twelve reels, based on Thomas Dixon's well known novel, now in its sixth big week at the Macdonough theater will give its final exhibition at the Macdonough theater Sunday evening.

Although "Birth of a Nation" is now in its sixth week at the Macdonough its popularity continues unabated. Two exhibitions are given daily, a matinee at 2:10 and the evening exhibition at 8:15.

In the production of this spectacular motion picture production, Griffith has framed an epical photodrama, which pictures as no history can describe, as no poetry can make vivid, as no story can depict, the trilogy of that period—the era previous to the war, the war time and the reconstruction epoch.

"The Melting Pot," with Walker Whiteside as its star, will be the next attraction at the Macdonough theater. It will commence a week's engagement next Monday afternoon, Aug. 23.

EUGENE (Ore.) GUARD
AUG. 20, 1915

"World's Greatest Film Play" to Be Shown in Portland

"The world's greatest moving picture," for a sight of which hundreds of thousands of persons in eastern cities have paid as high as $2 a head, is to have a showing in Portland next week.

It is "The Birth of a Nation," made by D. W. Griffith, the $100,000 producer, and it is to be exhibited at the Heilig theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" started out as a dramatization of Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," but it soon outgrew the original story. It worked backward from Mr. Dixon's romance of the reconstruction and included the civil war in an attempt to show that this country was not really born until it had proved its unity by a hideous time of bloodshed and rebuilding.

The film cost half a million dollars to make, employed thousands of men and horses for its action and hundreds of [illegible] for its setting. The principal players are stars whom Mr. Griffith himself [illegible] 'developed and taught the art of photoplay acting by his own standards. Mae Marsh, Henry B. Walthall, Robert Harron and Lillian Gish are in [illegible] number.

"Birth of a Nation" has had more [illegible] and newspaper publicity than any other one picture ever made. The [illegible] of Everybody's and Life are [illegible] periodicals devoting space to [illegible] this previously done [illegible]

BANGOR (Me.) COMMERCIAL
AUG. 20, 1915

RECORD PRICE FOR FILM

New England Rights Over Birth of a Nation, Which Excited Boston Negroes, Have Been Sold, According to Report.

Fifty-two thousand dollars has been paid by a small syndicate for the New England rights to the "Birth of a Nation," according to reports. The report could not be verified in Boston, the statement being made that any authoritative announcement would have to come from the New York office. In fact, the Boston manager doubted if any such purchase had been made.

This sum is probably the largest price ever paid for New England rights to a single motion-picture film. Among the purchasers, it is said, are Coleman Levin and William Mann, both of Boston, Samuel D. Kerr of Salem and Lewis B. Mayer of Haverhill. Although the purchase is understood to become effective immediately, control of the Boston rights does not go into the hands of the reported purchasers until after the close of the present engagement at the Tremont theatre. It is rumored the purchasers have been offered $35,000 for their right already. The films, it is stated, will be exhibited at Worcester, New Bedford and Providence and in other cities. Permit to show the film, with the objectionable features that caused so much discussion in Boston eliminated, has been granted in Providence.

[illegible] Scenes From the Great Griffith Production, "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible]

Left, President Lincoln to Dear [illegible]

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln is one of the stirring features of "The Birth of a Nation," which opens a five-week engagement at the Olympic Theater Sunday night, Aug. 29.

D. W. Griffith, producer of the spectacle of the Civil War and reconstruction days, built for this scene, the entire interior of Ford's Theater as it was on the night of the greatest tragedy in American history. The auditorium, crowded to its capacity, the actors who were playing, and the President's box set in its use of blue, are all reproduced from photographs and contemporary description.

The exact manner of the assassination of Lincoln is not known. Mr. Griffith, in his researches, found 17 distinct accounts, all of them differing in minor details. From these accounts he selected what he considered the most probable chain of events, and every movement made by the actors in the scene at the Olympic will be found by the student of history to be authenticated by one or other of the accounts. University professors who have seen the Griffith production have given it as their opinion that Mr. Griffith has admirably performed a difficult feat.

The care shown in staging the [illegible]

[illegible] Mr. Griffith's [illegible] of the Civil War [illegible] Ford's Theater [illegible] Abraham Lincoln [illegible] Mr. Griffith [illegible] veterans of the Civil War [illegible] principal [illegible] drama.

An Attractive Bill

The Jamestown Theater [illegible] acting week of [illegible] is made in illustrating [illegible] Petersburg, Mr. [illegible] of army engineers [illegible] said five miles [illegible] trenches and [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] thickets [illegible] city, and when [illegible] of [illegible] both sides, Mr. Griffith [illegible] totaling [illegible] men, and for [illegible] the action of the [illegible] was turned [illegible]

Other great [illegible] are the assassination of the President, the Ku Klux Klan [illegible] of Vicksburg, Grant's [illegible] Sherman to [illegible] storming of Atlanta [illegible] side of the [illegible] picture closes with [illegible]

Throughout the [illegible] of Thomas Dixon's [illegible] Thomas Dixon [illegible] not following the [illegible] The story is said [illegible] heart appeal that [illegible] the stirring [illegible] ture of the [illegible] scene, said to [illegible] every [illegible] American [illegible] romance from [illegible] dial symphony [illegible] herd from [illegible] score.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) WISCONSIN
AUG. 20, 1915

[illegible] Boyne, who is well known as an Irish [illegible] are prominent [illegible] the contingent. The musical part of the show is said to be new and novel.

On Sunday afternoon "The Birth of a Nation" will enter upon the [illegible]th and last week of its Milwaukee engagement at the Davidson. Capacity houses are viewing every performance, and visitors are coming from throughout the state to see this Griffith masterpiece. Reservations may be made for any performance and good seats obtained. The engagement of the photoplay closes August 28, and Joseph Santley opens the fall season on Sunday, August 29, in "All Over Town."

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
AUG. 21, 1915

[illegible] and happiness.

"THE CLANSMAN"—Contrasting with "The Birth of a Nation" is "The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's wonderful motion picture production, still holding attraction at the Cort for a brief period beginning with the matinee on Monday. Despite the length of its run in San Francisco, "The Birth of a Nation" would seem to possess as great drawing powers as ever, judging by the interest shown in the advance sale. It should, too, prove an ideal attraction for Exposition visitors who have heard of the wonders of this screen drama. During the engagement at the Cort the original incidental music will be given, interpreted by an augmented orchestra.

The twelve reels of "The Birth of a Nation" are based on the famous novel, "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, Jr., but it deals more broadly on its historical side than either the book or the well known play.

The famous raids of the Ku-Klux Klan with thousands of these white night riders in action, make for thrilling features not easily forgotten.

AUG. 21, 1915
SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN

"The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," [illegible] Griffith's motion picture production, will be the attraction at the Cort for a brief period beginning with the matinee Monday. Despite the length of its run in San Francisco, "The Birth of a Nation" would seem to possess as great drawing powers as ever, judging by the interest shown in the advance sale. It should, too, prove an ideal attraction for Exposition visitors who have heard of the wonders of this screen drama. During the engagement at the Cort the original incidental music will be given, interpreted by an augmented orchestra.

The twelve reels of "The Birth of a Nation" are based on the famous novel called "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon Jr., but it deals more broadly on its historical side than either the book or the well-known play.

CLIPPING FROM Express
Date Los Angeles (Cal.)
8-21-15

the "perfect horse" will be seen [illegible]

Tennessee
Date Knoxville
8-21-15

FEATURE FILMS FIND FAVOR WITH MASSES; INDUSTRY ADVANCES

Nation-Wide Demand for Better Motion Pictures is Being Recognized.

FILMS NEW AND CLEAN

Large Number of Really Great Productions to be Released in Fall.

Feature pictures that will surpass anything yet produced is the ambition of all the big producing companies. Beginning with "The Birth of a Nation," which has had the most remarkable run of any picture ever shown on the screen, movie fans may expect some startling announcements in the near future.

Knoxville is fortunate, in that these great productions are shown here almost simultaneously with the big cities, and the films are new and clean.

The nation-wide demand for better motion pictures has had a wonderful effect on the industry. It has caused four of the oldest and largest companies in the world to combine in an effort to give the best, and they have succeeded to a remarkable degree. Like combinations of other companies also have enhanced this character and quality of screen drama.

Great feature productions and mixed programs of great merit are demanded, for movie fans no longer pay their money for the novelty of seeing a motion picture. They demand something that has worth.

During the month of September a larger number of really great productions will be released than in any one month in the history of motion pictures, says authorities. Scenes that are startling and, to the uninitiated apparently impossible, have been taken, and the greatest stars of the speaking stage have been secured to participate in these big productions.

Pictures on educational lines, that show with astonishing clearness the dangers to which American citizens are subjected and the means of prevention, are made in such an attractive manner that one marvels at the result.

Greater strides have been made in advancement by the motion picture producers than in any other industry, and the result will be felt for good from every angle.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
AUG. 21, 1915

Beginning with the arrival of the first slaves in this land, the forces leading up to the main story of "The Birth of a Nation," to be unfolded to St. Louis theater goers at the Olympic, Sunday night, Aug. 29, and following its impelling lesson, range through the vital pages of American history.

The first rumblings of the abolition movement are heard ominously. The sovereign States, in their claims to the right to maintain the institution of slavery, reach the climax of their discontent in the election of Abraham Lincoln. The new President issues his first call for troops, and the Civil War, so long dreaded, comes to be a tragic reality. The story of the mighty conflict is told vividly in the works of the best historians, but D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is credited with a new vividness. Sherman marches to the sea before the eyes of the spectator, and the storming of Atlanta excites the veteran in the audience to the wildest pitch of enthusiasm. The battle of Petersburg is fought on a stage five miles in width, and the veteran recognizes the tree or the clump of bushes whose shelter he heroically abandoned to meet the bayonet charge of the enemy.

While the men of the North and the South are engaged in the fearful struggle, Griffith flashes before the eyes of the spectator the woman's part in the war. She is at home praying, or is ministering to the wounded in the hospitals, or is scanning with dreadful anxiety the lists of the slain. Then comes Appomattox Courthouse. Gen. Lee and Gen. Grant draw up articles that are to put an end for all time to strife in this nation, and when they walk toward each other and stretch out their hands for a brotherly clasp, the spectators, according to reports from the Eastern amusement centers, fairly rise to their feet and yell and cheer as if they were present at the actual scene of reconciliation.

Though the war is over, the nation must still go through some bitter throes before it becomes the wonderful reality it is today. Lincoln is assassinated; the enemies of the South in Congress, undeterred by the strong hand of the great leader, make possible the rule of the carpetbagger. The newly liberated race, under the influence of pernicious politicians, go to such excesses that the Aryans of the South are forced to band together secretly for their preservation. This gives rise to the Ku Klux Klans, and their wild rides on their errands of vengeance and mercy are among the most thrilling scenes.

The spectacle is rendered still more realistic by thousands of sound and electrical effects, especially devised for this production, and by a musical score blending patriotic and sentimental themes into an operatic whole, interpreted by a special symphony orchestra.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 21, 1915

DAVIDSON—

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation," the fascinating motion picture play of the slave problem and the civil war, which has attracted large crowds to the Davidson for seven consecutive weeks, will begin the eighth and last week of its remarkable engagement with performances Sunday afternoon and evening. The demand for the play has exceeded all previous theatrical records in Milwaukee and if the bookings of the theater could be changed Manager Sherman Brown has said he would retain it for a longer period of time. Existing contracts, however, limit the engagement to eight weeks and a total of 114 well attended performances. The last performance will take place Saturday night, Aug. 28.

D. W. Griffith, the producer, is credited with the greatest success of the motion picture industry. It is said that the cost of the play was $500,000. An idea of the magnitude of the production may be gained from the fact that 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses were seen in the flashing films which cover a wide range of interest including romance, history and realistic war spectacles.

Home life is depicted, also the home and field life of the slaves. Armies are mobilized and great battles are fought with the details worked out as accurately as possible and in accord with the records of history and the testimony of men who fought for the preservation of the union.

The vivid spectacle includes the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Gettysburg, the siege of Petersburg and the surrender of Leo to Grant at Appomattox, generals and statesmen being impersonated with lifelike realism. Other features of interest are revealed in a series of spectacles showing how the secret Ku Klux Klan of masked night-riders took justice itno their own hands in the crippled South after the war to subdue the negroes and the lawless whites who attempted to run the country. The racial differences of the whites and the blacks are depicted and by seeing these pictures one learns of the chaotic conditions which prevailed during the period of reconstruction in the South. The galloping Klansmen make a thrilling, never-to-be-forgotten spectacle.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) STAR
AUG. 21, 1915

6

Theaters An[illegible] First

"The Birth of a Nation" At Broadway House, August 29; Park Players Soon to Resume; American to Open August 29 — Attractions of the Coming Week Written of, and the Motion Picture World Discussed.

BY KATHERINE RICHARDSON.

The St. Louis theatrical season soon will be in full swing and the attractions promised for the season compare favorably with those of previous years.

The downtown season opens auspiciously with the great film, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Olympic Theater, Sunday night, August 29. This film will remain five weeks and will be the first time in the history of the city that films will be shown at $2.

The Shubert Theater will open in September and its first offering is Joseph Santley in "All Over Town," a musical comedy successful in New York and Chicago.

The American Theater announces its opening for Sunday, August 29, at the matinee, and the Park Theater announces the reopening of the Shenandoah Theater on the South Side and the resumption by The Players of production of new farces, comedies and dramas.

STORY OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen in St. Louis for the first time on the night of Sunday, August 29, at the Olympic Theater, has made its producer, David W. Griffith, the most conspicuous figure, not only in the world of film plays, but in the theatrical world as well.

Not since the days of "Ben Hur" has a theatrical attraction so set the amusement world on fire, and even "Ben Hur" is eclipsed in the rapidi[illegible] of the spreading of the flame. "Th[illegible] Birth of a Nation," in other wor[illegible] may be characterized as "glorifie[illegible] motion picture drama.

Griffith chose for the theme of h[illegible] spectacle the turmoil and travail [illegible] this country in the Civil War and re[illegible] construction days, out of which a ne[illegible] and united nation was born.

Those who have seen the pictur[illegible] cease to wonder how Griffith spen[illegible] $500,000 on the film. They wonder rather, how he could stage the tre[illegible]mendous spectacle at so moderate [illegible] cost. There is the battle of Peters[illegible]burg, for example, fought on a fiel[illegible] five miles in extent, employing som[illegible] 18,000 men. The field was laid ou[illegible] exactly like the old field of Petersburg with its roads, its trenches, its clump[illegible] of trees and even its heavy woodlands Then, there is Sherman's march to th[illegible] sea, culminating in the storming an[illegible] burning of Atlanta. The city had t[illegible] be built by Griffith, only to become th[illegible] food of flames. It was necessary, too for Griffith to establish the littl[illegible] Southern town in which the romanc[illegible] of his plot is laid, with its streets, it[illegible] old Colonial mansions, its venerabl[illegible] public buildings, and its quaint store[illegible] These, too, fall victim to the depreda[illegible]tions of vandals, black and white, an[illegible] to the torch. Ford's Theater had t[illegible] be constructed, with its entire audi[illegible]torium, stage and boxes, for the as[illegible]sassination of Lincoln. Three thou[illegible]sand horses of fire and nettle had t[illegible] be secured for the mad rides of th[illegible] Ku Klux Klans.

The romantic story of "The Birt[illegible] of a Nation" is founded on "Th[illegible] Clansman," though no attempt is mad[illegible] to follow the plot of the novel litera[illegible]ly, Griffith's aim being to depict hi[illegible]tory and romance after his own con[illegible]ception.

beauties—in seal[illegible]
[illegible]—they're fresh [illegible]rocer's.

Theaters Announce Openings and Changes; First $2 Film-Drama Comes to Olympic

"The Birth of a Nation" At Broadway House, August 29; Park Players Soon to Resume; American to Open August 29 — Attractions of the Coming Week Written of, and the Motion Picture World Discussed.

BY KATHERINE RICHARDSON.

The St. Louis theatrical season soon will be in full swing and the attractions promised for the season compare favorably with those of previous years.

The downtown season opens auspiciously with the great film, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Olympic Theater, Sunday night, August 29. This film will remain five weeks and will be the first time in the history of the city that films will be shown at $2.

The Shubert Theater will open in September and its first offering is Joseph Santley in "All Over Town," a musical comedy successful in New York and Chicago.

The American Theater announces its opening for Sunday, August 29, at the matinee, and the Park Theater announces the reopening of the Shenandoah Theater on the South Side and the resumption by The Players of production of new farces, comedies and dramas.

STORY OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen in St. Louis for the first time on the night of Sunday, August 29, at the Olympic Theater, has made its producer, David W. Griffith, the most conspicuous figure, not only in the world of film plays, but in the theatrical world as well.

Not since the days of "Ben Hur" has a theatrical attraction so set the amusement world on fire, and even "Ben Hur" is eclipsed in the rapidity of the spreading of the flame. "The Birth of a Nation," in other words, may be characterized as "glorified" motion picture drama.

Griffith chose for the theme of his spectacle the turmoil and travail of this country in the Civil War and reconstruction days, out of which a new and united nation was born.

Those who have seen the picture cease to wonder how Griffith spent $500,000 on the film. They wonder, rather, how he could stage the tremendous spectacle at so moderate a cost. There is the battle of Petersburg, for example, fought on a field five miles in extent, employing some 18,000 men. The field was laid out exactly like the old field of Petersburg, with its roads, its trenches, its clumps of trees and even its heavy woodlands. Then, there is Sherman's march to the sea, culminating in the storming and burning of Atlanta. The city had to be built by Griffith, only to become the food of flames. It was necessary, too, for Griffith to establish the little Southern town in which the romance of his plot is laid, with its streets, its old Colonial mansions, its venerable public buildings, and its quaint stores. These, too, fall victim to the depredations of vandals, black and white, and to the torch. Ford's Theater had to be constructed, with its entire auditorium, stage and boxes, for the assassination of Lincoln. Three thousand horses of fire and nettle had to be secured for the mad rides of the Ku Klux Klans.

The romantic story of "The Birth of a Nation" is founded on "The Clansman," though no attempt is made to follow the plot of the novel literally, Griffith's aim being to depict history and romance after his own conception.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 21, 1915

DAVIDSON

Scene Showing President Lincoln in "The Birth of a Nation," and Miss Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 21, 1915

AT THE DAVIDSON

Surrender of Lee at Appomattox in "The Birth of a Nation."

PAWTUCKET (R. I.) TIMES
AUG. [illegible]

Providence Opera

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's epic of photo dramas, which opened at the Providence Opera House last week, will be continued next week. The attraction drew capacity audiences afternoon and evening all of the week and owing to the extraordinarily large demand for seats which could not be filled Col. Wendelschaefer decided to run the photo play another week, opening with a special matinee Monday afternoon and continuing twice daily thereafter.

"The Birth of a Nation," a Civil War drama, which attracted wide attention everywhere it has been shown met with instant success in this city. A historical drama, founded on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon, it has taken the city by storm as the lines at the box office of the theatre every day will testify.

The attraction employs more attendants and workers in front and behind the curtain than 75 per cent. of the legitimate productions. It requires 25 men behind the scenes to produce the roars of battle, the thundering of many horses hoofs and other noises as the pictures are thrown on the screen. Ten more men are needed for the clearers. The orchestra, for which specially written music for [illegible] than that carried for the big musical shows. Fifteen musicians were brought here from Boston because they were familiar with the music which goes with the pictures and 10 local men were added to these.

Griffith has taken for his theme the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy of a nation, one and indivisible. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies and then the start of the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern states and the outbreak of the Civil War. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion the like of which has never been revealed before. Its termination is in an allegorical picture of the coming of permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

To get these varied incidents into his absorbing drama, the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses. He has written history in a spectacular way which was never dreamt of before.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal) CALL & POST
AUG. 2, 1915

Behind Footlights and Screens

[illegible] illustration can be seen showing the cost of seemingly trivial incidents in connection with the production of a big motion picture than in citing the instance where an ordinary wig worn by Ralph Lewis in D. W. Griffith's big picture, "The Birth of a Nation," [illegible] Clansman," which will return to the Cort Theater Monday for a brief return engagement, cost the Griffith company several thousand dollars.

Ralph Lewis as Austin Stoneman

Lewis, who portrays the character of Austin Stoneman (supposed to be Thaddeus Stevens), wore a dark brown wig as part of his make-up. The wig was of a peculiar shade and had been carefully trimmed to conform with the pattern of the artificial masculine hair dressing, as practiced by the men who were somewhat more or less bald-headed, during the period of the Civil War and reconstruction epoch.

More than half of the scenes in which Lewis appeared, wearing the wig, had been taken.

While awaiting his cue to appear before the camera, Lewis sat on the curbing near a manhole. A gust of wind came along at this time and wafted the wig directly into the opening.

Lewis worked diligently for several days to find an identical wig, but was unsuccessful.

The audience would easily have detected that the wigs worn in some of the scenes did not correspond with the one worn in the other scenes. There was only one alternative. All the previous scenes in which Lewis had worked had to be retaken in the new wig he secured.

The forthcoming appearance of William H. Crane with the famous Five Star Aggregation at the Cort Theater on Monday, September 6, in "The New Henrietta," recalls the long stage partnership of Crane and the late Stuart Robson, for it was in Bronson Howard's "The Henrietta" that the two toured the country for twelve successful years. "The New Henrietta" is a modernization of this well-known medium by Winchell Smith and Victor Mapes, and with Crane will appear Thomas W. Ross, Maclyn Arbuckle, Amelia Bingham and Mabel Taliaferro.

Wm. H. Crane in "The New Henrietta.

When Crane was recently here, on his Expositional vacation, he told many good stories in which his old partner Robson figured.

"It was in September, 1889, that Robson and I severed our stage partnership for purely business reasons, but in the best of friendship," said Crane.

"A reporter came to see me about it in Omaha at the time—one of those cock-sure fellows. I explained the situation to him fully, but he wouldn't be convinced and insisted that there had been some quarrel.

"'This is just between you and me?' I asked, and he eagerly assured me it was, getting his pencil ready to write at the same time.

"'Well,' I told him, 'Robson is older than I am but you'll remember that I always have to play his father.' Now Robson has a daughter. Of course, I didn't mind that, until I went to Chicago and found she had two children. Then I made up my mind I simply wouldn't go on playing father to a man with grand-children!'"

PEACE ALLEGORY IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

At the Savoy All Next Week, Afternoon and Evening

The Ku Klux Klan, whose deeds are so generously celebrated in Mr. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," at the Savoy all this week, occupy a peculiar position in history somewhere between the California Vigilantes and the Molly Maguires of odorous Pennsylvania fame. The marvel of it is that to the spectators they are naught but heroes. The tide of enthusiasm begins to rise with the initial appearance of these spectral southern horsemen on the screen, and as their gallant deeds crowd one upon the other, applause becomes practically continuous and even shouts and huzzas at their final triumph and rescue of the "downtrodden whites" from their carpet-bagger enemies.

Of course, the Ku Klux in Mr. Griffith's play are conventionial heroes. No one who sees a lot of white-clad horsemen racing like mad, performing thrilling mounts and dismounts, saving captive maidens and rescuing beleaguered folks in a cabin from attackers armed with shotguns can help applauding for all he is worth. Another and more unfavorable side of the Ku Klux is given in Judge Tourgee's novels, "Bricks Without Straw" and "A Fool's Errand." The Klans undoubtedly saved the southern people from the horrid fear of African massacre. But to those northerners who came to settle in the south after the Civil war, as well as to the luckless negroes, many of their clannish acts must have appeared as little else than outrages.

There are always "two sides of the shield" concerning secret force organizations which are outside the pale of the law. History distributes praise or blame according to the justification such secret societies had for their violence and also whether they were "able to get away with it." Most people suppose the Sicilian Mafia to be wholly brutal and murderous. But Marion Crawford informs us it was an "unwritten" organization of all the Sicilian masses to fight the grinding tyranny of the Bourbons. Only in later days did it degenerate to blackmail, holdups and bomb-throwing. Even the famed Neapolitan Camorra has some striking points of likeness with New York's Tammany of Tweed and Sweeney days.

The Klan was a sort of southern Mafia—a banding of the native sons against all the ills real and imaginary that were brought upon the southern people thru reconstruction. The fact that so many thousands of "good citizens" and even distinguished men belonged to the order, and the further fact that the good women of the south were their most ardent supporters, have lent a tinge of romance and chivalry to their history. Of these facts Producer Griffith took full account in making them the protagonists of "The Birth of a Nation" story.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) EXAMINER
AUG. 22, 1915

KU-KLUX PICTURE AT CORT.

"The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," D. W. Grifith's celebrated motion-picture production, will be the attraction at the Cort for a brief period beginning with the matinee to-morrow. Despite the length of its run in San Francisco "The Birth of a Nation" seems to possess as great drawing powers as ever, judging by the interest shown in the advance sale. It should prove an ideal attraction for exposition visitors who have heard of the wonders of this screen drama. During the engagement at the Cort the original incidental music will be given, interpreted by an augmented orchestra. The battle scenes, with 25,000 soldiers in action, the burning of Atlanta and the thousands of white-costumed riders of the Ku-Klux Klan, are among the features.

PPING FROM
NEW YORK SUN

te .....

tures include an educational feature, more war pictures and Percy Richards, "the man in white," who will sing.

LIBERTY THEATRE—"The Birth of a Nation" starts this week the seventh month of its run at the Liberty Theatre. The civil war spectacle with its views of the Ku-Klux Klan and other points of interest in the reconstruction period of the South bids fair to have one of the longest runs of any picture yet produced.

CLIPPING FROM Times
Los Angeles (Cal)
Aug 22-15

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Date ..... AUG 22

"Birth of a Nation" Coming Here

A stupendous pictorial narrative of War and the period of reconstruction in the South, which has aroused comment in New York, Atlantic City and elsewhere, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen in Philadelphia, beginning Saturday evening, September 4, at the Forrest Theatre. Few, if any, motion picture dramas on a large scale have been staged on such lines as "The Birth of a Nation." It is said that $500,000 was expended in preparing it for the films—in building towns, in laying out reproductions of the vast battlefields of the Civil war, in reproducing in detail Ford's Theatre in Washington, D. C., where Abraham Lincoln was killed.

No less than 18,000 persons and 2000 horses took part in the scenes enacted in this spectacular visualization of history. Fighting in the trenches at Petersburg, Sherman's march to the sea, Lee's surrender at Appomattox and dramatic events in the South after the war are all so he thrown upon the

---

NEW YORK WORLD
Date ..... AUG 22 191
week

BRIGHTON BEACH—The one hundredth presentation at Brighton Beach to-morrow of the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," will be the occasion of congratulations from his many friends of William H. Kemble, manager of the Brighton Beach Music Hall. Mr. Kemble had confidence, when no one else had, that the great photo play would be appreciated in Brooklyn. It was argued that but a small percentage of the many persons making up the great crowds that fill all corners of Coney Island would turn from lighter amusements to witness a presentation of "The Birth of a Nation." Manager Kemble insisted the picture would draw from Coney Island crowds and also bring many persons to the beach. He took a long chance. It is said he had to deposit $65,000 before he sold the first seat. Probably he had to, as 18,000 actors and 2,000 horses appear in the 500 scenes of the play which D. M. Griffith, its producer, says cost $500,000 to stage. That the picture has been presented by Manager Kemble to 100 crowded houses proves his judgment good, and among those that will congratulate him to-morrow will be not a few who predicted disaster for the venture.

The Coney Island season is drawing to a close, and but few more presentations of the historic drama are possible there, but as Manager Kemble has the sole right to show it in Brooklyn, the picture may have as long and as prosperous a run in the heart of the borough as has been its summer run at Brighton Beach.

NEW YORK TRIBUNE
AUG 22 1915
ate .....

LONG RUN FOR FILM

"Birth of a Nation" Begins Seventh Month.

"The Birth of a Nation" starts in next week on the seventh month of its run at the Liberty Theatre. The week will mark the 400th performance of Griffith's spectacle in greater New York.

With its 18,000 people and 2,000 horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes in the [illegible]

NEW YORK TELEGRAM

Date .....

AUG 22 1915

AT THE LEADING MOVING PICTURES

A new policy will be inaugurated at the Vitagraph Theatre to-day, when the pictures comprising the programme will be run continuously from one o'clock to eleven o'clock at night. For this week a three part drama, "To Cherish and Protect," will head the list of pictures. It was written by William Vaughn Pettit and produced by William Humphrey, with a cast including Harry Morey, L. Rogers Lytton, Bobby Connelly, Harry Northrup, Gladden James, Denton Vane and Estelle Mardo. Comedy will dominate the balance of the program.

"The Birth of a Nation" starts in next week on the seventh month of its run at the Li[redacted] week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York. With its eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes to the number of over five thousand, it is easy to estimate the reasons for the success the work has achieved.

Date Portland (Me)
8-22-15

...ved seats.

FF

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Shows may come and shows may go, feature films may be widely heralded and after brief exhibitions returned to the shelves, but "The Birth of a Nation" continues on its [redacted] way and will be shown at the R. F. Keith theatre in this city the entire week beginning Aug. 30. Besides the film spectacle itself, "The Birth of a Nation" music has taken a firm hold on the fancy of New England theatregoers. It revives most of the old tunes of the Civil war and includes also much elaborate orchestration in a more modern mode. For out-of-town patrons the matinee performances will be found at... the same as night and more ...dent to attend.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the biggest production so far made in the entire world. There were over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras finished their work in the West and South, but the process of selection, which plays such a telling part in these productions, has reduced this to 12,000 feet. The spectacle as it now stands takes about two and three-quarters hours to present.

The production cost over $500,000 and the first presentation was given in Los Angeles, since which the production has been shown in New York City, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Seattle, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Atlantic City, Brighton beach and Long Branch for a long run and playing to the house capacity at each performance.

While it was not at first thought that "The Birth of a Nation" would be seen in this city, owing to the tremendous demand for this mighty film spectacle all over the country in the largest cities, local theater-goers may thank Manager Smith of the Keith theater for his energy and effort to secure this mighty screen masterpiece for his patrons. Those who see "The Birth of a Nation" will never forget the wonderful spectacle as long as they live. For the first time in the history of art the spectator will see the great historical conflicts pass before him or her. There is the burning of Atlanta; Sherman's march to the sea; victory of the north;

PPING FROM Press
...iladelphia
8-22-15

"Birth of a Nation" Seen [redacted]

D. W. Griffith's spectacular motion picture "The Birth of a Nation" will be the opening attraction for the regular Fall and Winter season at the Forrest, beginning Saturday night, September 4. "The Birth of a Nation," which is universally acknowledged to be the world's greatest achievement in motion photography and interest, is now in its seventh month at the Liberty Theater, New York, and is enjoying long runs in Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, San Francisco and Los Angeles. This gigantic film production has intense dramatical and educational value. The unparalleled [illegible] of this [illegible] ...

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) EAGLE

Date .....

AUG 22 1915

[redacted] ENJOY WAR SPECTACLE

[redacted] of several orphan asylums have requested William H. Kemble, manager of the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where "The Birth of a Nation" is playing, to accommo[redacted] some of the matinees (except on Saturdays and Sundays), several hundred boys and girls. The managers made the appeal because the heads of the Hebrew Orphan Asylum and other institutions whose wards Manager Kemble had as his guests, have informed them that the children enjoyed the pictures, which depict historical incidents of the Civil War, more than they did a trip to the seashore. Mr. Kemble, who has made it a practice to invite orphans to his theater, has had several thousand this season to view "The Birth of a Nation."

NEW YORK SUN

Date .....

AUG 22 1915

Farce by Paul Dickey and Charles W. Goddard, begins his month [illegible] at this theatre [illegible] full of action from beginning to end. Every situation spells a laugh and there are many of them. FF

LIBERTY—"The Birth of a Nation" starts its next week on the seventh month of its run. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York. With its 18,000 people and 3,000 horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes to the number of over 5,000 it is easy to estimate the reasons for the wonderful success the work has achieved.

[illegible] OREGONIAN
AUG 22 1915

FF

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" IS CALLED WORLD'S GREATEST FILM

Thousands of Men and Horses Required in Staging Thrilling Performance, Which Deals With Critical Period of American History—Picture, Which Cost $500,000, Will Be Shown at Heilig Theater for Three Weeks.

Scene in "The Birth of a Nation"

THE world's greatest moving picture, for a sight of which hundreds of thousands of persons in Eastern cities have paid as high as $2 apiece, is to have a showing in Portland next week.

It is "The Birth of a Nation," made by D. W. Griffith, the $100,000 producer, and is [illegible] at the Heilig Theater for the next three weeks. "The Birth of a Nation" proves out to be a dr[illegible] ... original story and worked backward from Mr. Dixon's romance to the reconstruction and included the Civil War in an attempt to show that this country was not really born until it had proved its unity by a hideous time of bloodshed and rebuilding.

The film cost $500,000 to make and employed thousands of men and horses for its action and hundreds of acres for its setting.

"The Birth of a Nation" has had more magazine and newspaper publicity than any other one picture ever made. It is declared nothing previously done in motion pictures anywhere near approaches the massiveness and pictorial value of "The Birth of a Nation." To bring the film spectacle to the Heilig Theater is costing $12,000, the largest price ever paid for a motion picture in the Northwest. It is asserted. A battle was fought employing 18,000 men and 3000 horses, over miles of ground. To make it accurate it was mapped out after plans drawn by military experts. More than 200,000 feet of film were used in the taking of this picture, which for an evening's entertainment was cut down to 12,000 feet. The performance lasts three hours. Two performances will be given daily, a matinee starting at 2 P. M. and an evening performance at 8 P. M., accompanied by an augmented orchestra.

The play takes two families, one Southern and one Northern, through the war, interlinks their interests, and finally unites them by two marriages. After the war these two love stories are further tangled up by the political troubles brought on by giving the vote to the freed slaves, and the rising of the Ku-Klux Klan to set them right. The hero suffers many injustices from the mulatto who is elected Lieutenant-Governor of the state. He organizes the Ku-Klux Klan, which performs two dis[illegible]

Harvey Cramer & Dave Cameron

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) EAGLE

Date .....

FF

LILLIAN GISH
In "The Birth of a Nation, Nixon, September 1.

D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen at the Nixon theater beginning Wednesday evening, September 1, and continuing thereafter twice daily, exactlty as it is being given in New York and several other cities where it has made record-breaking runs.

This new force in the art of stage entertainment is perhaps the most widely discussed production ever made in America. It is above all else the greatest thing that has been achieved by one producer. Imagine condensing the living details of the most strenuous periods of American history into an evening's entertainment of less than three hours. You are not told about it nor is your imagination tested by rhetorical descriptions of what took place. Instead, you see it by lightning flashes. It is history revived and shown in its making. Some of the greatest names that are written large upon the scroll of our country's fame appear upon the program. The players who enact the roles have studied the minute descriptions of these men both from photographs and intimate life studies, and with tthis framework they make these wonderful characters live again. They pass before your vision in a panorama of achievement. The accomplishment is startling. The entire action ranges over three centuries. It beg'ns with the importation of the first African slave and it ends with the settlement of the question in the freedom of the enslaved. But before this end is reached the mightiest nation in the world passed through the throes of internecine strife, and the high lights of those struggles are vividly brought out. Great battles are fought before your eye. Cities are destroyed by fire. Thousands of horsemen dash in wild rides across bloodstained plains. The human note weaves in and through the entire thread and lends itself to the mightiest story ever unfolded.

CLIPPING FROM
Examiner
Date Los Angeles (Cal)
8/22/15

SCENE FROM "THE CLANSMAN"

State a w build en rets because with name as p s no was n s was storic repair
y. It as a h t poss g of

...ances of
...h of a Nation"
...(cont.) MINER
...UG. 22, 1915
...er of
...periodicals

in the number of performances given before it wears out its metropolitan welcome. To date over 400,000 people have attended the local presentations. The big attraction more than held its own in the face of the terrific weather last week and the returns were in keeping with its wonderful record made since it began its stay here.

With Summer Gardens and Playhouses Running Full Blast and Most of the Winter Amusement Places Either Just Opening or Getting Ready to Open, Mr. First-Nighter Has a Varied Menu Before Him.

FF

THE sensational and ... success of "The Birth of a Nation" in the various great amusement centers of America, such as New York, Chicago, Boston and San Francisco, indicates that this fifth spectacle, which is to be unrolled before the eyes of St. Louis for the first time at the Olympic Theater next Sunday night, has reached the highest point yet attained in the comparatively new art of the screen.

D. W. Griffith, the producer, who was the first man to take his courage in hand and charge $2 for a phantom drama, predicts that the $5 motion picture is a possibility of a future not very remote. He points to the phenomenal advance the art has made in five or six years. Formerly 5 cents was the price of admission, and $500 the outside cost of production. "The Birth of a Nation" cost approximately $500,000 to produce, and that $2 is not too much for a sight of it has been demonstrated everywhere the spectacle has been exhibited, where it has been presented to capacity houses. When the cost of production runs into the millions, Mr. Griffith believes, the $5 picture will come as surely as the $5 grand opera.

For "The Birth of a Nation," Mr. Griffith took as the skeleton the story of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," but he had in his head a far vaster conception than Dixon. It was his aim to reproduce an epoch in American history so vividly that the spectators would actually be carried out of the present and live for three hours in a past that is becoming remote and hazy. But he did not make the mistake of desiring to depict this period of the past in a naked and horrid realism. He was determined from the start to throw about it the glamour of romance that would soften the picture without distorting it. Whether or not he has succeeded, will soon be left to the judgment of St. Louis playgoers. The epoch Mr. Griffith chose is the most thrilling in American history.

The story is told in 5,000 scenes. Mr. Griffith has animated his screen phantoms by providing sound effects for almost every moment of the play, and combining them with a musical score made up of patriotic and sentimental themes in such a manner that the spoken word is not missed. The meaning, it is said, is never obscure, and the audience files out of the theater under the impression it has actually known the characters of the play and heard them talk.

Among the gigantic scenes of "The Birth of a Nation," to which much of its sensational effect is due, are the battle of Petersburg, fought by 18,000 men on a field five miles across; the march of Sherman to the sea, culminating in the burning of Atlanta, the assassination of President Lincoln in the crowded Ford's Theater, the entire interior of which, on that fatal night, is reproduced; the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klans, and the session of the South Carolina Legislature made up of members elected under the direction of the carpetbaggers.

Mr. Griffith was eight months in putting his spectacle together.

Date Pueblo (Col) 8-22-15

Scene From "The Birth of a Nation," At Keith's, Week of Aug.

CLIPPING FROM Pittsburgh Post
Date Pittsburg (Pa) 8-22-15

HOSPITAL SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

LIPPING FROM PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

Date AUG 22 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Griffith Motion Picture Spectacle Open Forrest's Season.

FF

Samuel F. Nixon has secured D. W. Griffith's motion picture spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," as the opening attraction for the regular season at the Forrest Theatre, beginning Saturday night, September 4. "The Birth of a Nation" is now in its seventh month at the Liberty Theatre, New York, and is in the midst of long runs in Boston, Chicago, Milwaukee, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Atlantic City.

Many thousands of dollars were expended in building towns, an exact reproduction of Ford's Theatre in Washington, in which Abraham Lincoln was killed and in laying out the vast battlegrounds for the picture. Then there were thousands of people to be paid and many horses were brought into use. Eight months were consumed before this series of picture spectacles was perfected. Stirring events of the civil war and the period of reconstruction are shown in striking detail. The fighting in the trenches at Petersburg, Sherman's march to the sea, the surrender of Lee at Appomatox and the saving of the South by the Scottish clans are reproduced. The last act is devoted mainly to daring deeds of the Klu Klux Klan, a white array of marshalled knights on prancing horses whirling to the rescue of their women and children. In addition to the historical scenes there is a love story with a thrilling and intense romance.

After the opening on Saturday night, September 4, performances will be given twice daily. The sale of seats will be opened at the box office of the Forrest Thursday morning, September 2.

N FRANCISCO (Cal.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 22, 1915

THE CORT

VIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 72
AUG. 22, 1916

Providence Opera House

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's epic in photodrama, which opened at the Providence Opera House last week, will be continued this week. The attraction drew capacity audiences afternoon and evening all of the week and owing to the extraordinarily large demand for seats which could not be filled Col. Wendelschaefer decided to run the photoplay another week, opening with a special matinee Monday afternoon and continuing twice daily thereafter.

"The Birth of a Nation," a Civil War drama which attracted wide attention everywhere it has been shown, met with instant success in this city. A historical drama, founded on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, it has taken the city by storm, as the lines at the box office of the theatre every day will testify.

The attraction employs more attendants and workers in front and behind the curtain than 75 per cent. of the legitimate attractions. It requires 25 men behind the scenes to produce the roars of battle, the pounding of many horses' hoofs and appropriate noises as the pictures are flashed on the screen. Ten more men are required as clearers. The orchestra, which plays specially written music for the pictures, is larger than that carried for the big musical shows. Fifteen musicians were brought here from Boston because they were familiar with the music which goes with the pictures and ten local men were added to these.

Griffith has taken for his theme the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy of a nation, one and indivisible. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies and then the start of the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern States and the outbreak of the Civil War. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion the like of which has never been revealed here before. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming of permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

To get these varied incidents into his absorbing drama the producer used 18,000 people and 3000 horses. He has written history in a spectacular way which was never dreamed of before.

Date Pittsburg (Pa)
8-20-16

"BIRTH OF A NATION," photoplay, with scenes of Lee's surrender to Grant, to be shown in the Nixon Theater beginning September 1.

David W. Griffith's photo production of "The Birth of a Nation" opens at the Nixon Theater Wednesday evening, September 1st, continuing twice daily thereafter for five weeks.

"Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird," supposed to be the high-water mark of stage spectacles, are said to be overshadowed by this photo spectacle of 5,000-scenes, 18,000 characters, 3,000 riders and 200,000 details, the result of eight months of labor and the expenditure of half a million dollars. The night riding of the Ku Klux Klan looks like a company of avenging spectres along the moonlit roads.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) REPUBLIC 808
AUG. 22, 1915

Things Are Perking Up, D —:o:— —:o:— —:o:—

Movies at $2 a Throw Will Be O the First Time Next Sunday Says Promoter, "We'll Ha

PPING FROM
NEW YORK PRESS
Date .....
AUG 22

FEATURE FILMS IN BROADWAY HOUSES

What the Chief Motion Picture Theatres Are Offering This Week.

In the Liberty Theatre "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's enormous spectacle, continues to draw large crowds afternoon and nights. This film is now in its seventh month, and there is no appreciable diminution in the demand for seats. It is one of the greatest spectacles ever filmed, if not the very greatest, there being thousands of horses and men in the action. Two incidents in particular cling to the memory. They are the march of Sherman's army across Georgia, with the sack of Atlanta, and the gathering of the Ku Klux Klan for the salvation of the South. Both of these incidents are probably the most dramatic ever shown on the screen.

...FROM
Gazette Times
Date Pittsburg (Pa)
8-22-16

"BIRTH OF A NATION COMING."

The magnitude of David W. Griffith's feat in stating "The Birth of a Nation" is almost appalling. Instead of scenery for his background Griffith has used nature. For subject he has covered 150 years of American history. Eighteen thousand people have done his bidding and in the hair-raising rides of the Ku Klux Klan 3,000 riders and horses sweep over the dusty roads.

No wonder that this historical spectacle is the talk of the country. It has established an entirely new art in the realm of the theater—the art of pantomimic screen spectacle with an orchestra score perfectly synchronized to the action. It has also created a tremendous sensation because of its forceful treatment of the theme of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," which both as book and play created the greatest furore of the last decade.

The great deeds of the Civil War and the horrors of reconstruction are made to live again and the nation reborn is apotheosized. Mr. Griffith, pioneer among directors, managed this achievement without aid of dialogue or speech, for motion pictures with music and [illegible] will vividly this thrilling tale of 50 years ago. [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation", will open at the Nixon theater [illegible] twice daily thereafter for [illegible] of five weeks.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD

Date AUG 22 1915

STRONG COMPETITION OF STAGE AND FILM

Elaborate Music Hall Enterprise in New York Is Indication of Efforts to Combat "Movies."

NEW PICTURES FOR SCREEN

Triangle Corporation's Ambitious Plans Are Stirring Producers.

Just as motion-picture producers, under the impulse of the enterprising spirits of the theatrical world, as inspired by the success of D. W. Griffith with his "Birth of a Nation," are becoming more pretentious and elaborate in offerings, so are innovators in the dramatic and musical entertainment field preparing to attract audiences by lavishness and magnitude of productions. An instance of this elaboration of presentation is in the establishment in New York by Ned Wayburn of a Continental music hall in the beautiful Century Theatre. Wayburn will establish himself in the house with a musical revue provided with a chorus of about a hundred young women and men, with a large number of supernumeries and with a formidable cast made up of such entertainers as Trixie Friganza, Vera Michelena, Blossom Seeley, Grace Field, Cross and Josephine, Lew Hearn, Bert Leslie, Will Rogers, Flanagan and Edwards and Adelaide and Hughes. One of the features of the house will be public dancing, and the numerous promenades will permit men to smoke during intermissions. A restaurant feature is also of importance in the scheme of things. It is a big undertaking and one that only generous patronage will permit to continue.

Necessarily theatrical managers will have to put forth their best efforts to compete successfully with the new output of films promised with the inauguration of the Triangle Film Corporation's season. Philadelphia may expect to see the films that this company will send forth from studios directed by Griffith, Thomas Ince and Mack Sennett, original promulgator of Charlie Chaplin as a screen comedian. The Triangle pictures are to have stars in every instance, and the stars engaged are among the foremost players in various lines on the American stage. Manner of presentation, with special orchestral accompaniment, will be an important matter, and from the fact that the pictures are to be shown at the best theatres there will be a direct competition with the spoken drama and with musical comedies such as has not yet been attempted. The effect of the Triangle activities upon the motion picture generally will unquestionably be to stir every film manufacturer to the greatest endeavor, and so it may be confidently expected that the best of the photo plays of today will soon be eclipsed by the output of the autumn, winter and spring. What seems to be presaged is the gradual elimination of the smaller picture houses, at least in big cities, unless those houses, paying more than ever before for film rentals, raise the price of admission from the one-time popular nickel. Patrons of the five-cent houses have been gradually demanding better things, and exhibitors discover that higher prices for the wanted pictures are not easily met with too small admission prices.

* * *

That there is need for improvement in the "movies" there are some patrons to affirm with positiveness. The Censor can have nothing to do with the imperative changes, for he is not empowered to demand elimination of scenes that might be merely in bad taste or slightly vulgar, nor can he go so far as to correct the spelling of captions or ungrammatical forms of speech shown on the screen. One such objecting patron was much disgusted when he saw the squirting of water from the mouth of a popular comedian into his baggy trousers, and the same patron was also perturbed at numerous screen-displayed errors in spelling. These are minor details, but they indicate that a form of criticism exists quite apart from the power of the Censor to correct. It is to be hoped that the new sort of films that will be offered this autumn in competition with the elaborate productions promised by the Triangle will take cognizance of the spirit of reform that persons of refinement and of discrimination would like to see spread.

SCENE FROM

Date Milwaukee (Wis.) 6-22-15

Slave Mart Scene in "Birth of a Nation"

Chronicle

Date

Questions and Answers on Your Favorite Screen Folks

By Emily Brown Heininger

Particular.—Yes, indeed, they use real negroes in the pictures when the parts demand it, for the simple reason that make-up shows too plain on the screen to use it as they do on the speaking stage. "Realism" is the watchword of progressive M. P. companies these days and they must have "local color," you know, and for the staging of such plays as "The New Governor," "The Birth of a Nation" and such they use the real thing when ever they possibly can; though sometimes the part requires so much dramatic ability that they have to use a white character acter or actress, but they have to be awfully good at make-up to get away with it.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 23, 1915

AUG 23, 1915
SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN

OSH (Wis.) DAILY NORTHWESTERN
AUG. 23, 1915

AMUSEMENTS.

In his never-to-be-forgotten spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is scheduled for [illegible]k's presentation at the Grand opera house, opening Sunday, August 29, D. W. Griffith, the world's master-producer, has painted the grim tragedy of war in the colors it deserves. It is a thrilling and awe-inspiring revisitation of war—war in all its cruelties; we behold not only the tragedy on the field of battle, where fall the dead and dying, but in the home where wait the aged parents and little brother and sister, or daughter or son, wait the message that too often comes telling that the dear one has died for the flag—the stars and stripes, or the banner of blue with the single star. On goes the story. It pictures the departing of the boy from home—gay, light-hearted, happy. It shows him dying under the fire of the enemy in the miles of flame streaked trenches, over which bursting shells carry death to the little force so gallantly defending the line of earth works, and over which shriek the deadly shrapnel. It is all there—the desperate defense, the determined assault, the fierce charge, the disastrous retreat—the field covered with the dead, as men in gray and blue fall by scores and hundreds. Daylight fades, and still the fight goes on. The scene is illuminated by bursting shells, the blaze from the mouths of the cannon and the red glare from burning homes. The blue of the flag of the south flutters here, while there the red, white and blue of the nation's emblem shows through the smoke in the red tinge of battle flame.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
AUG. 23, 1915

NIXON THEATER TO SHOW "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Beginning Wednesday night, September 1, the attraction at the Nixon Theater will be D. W. Griffiths "The Birth of a Nation." This spectacle holds the long-distance runs in New York, Boston, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco to date. It is a story of American history, showing the rise and fall of slavery in this country and the terrible suffering that was endured before a solution of this problem was reached.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 23, 1915

The THEATERS

ALHAMBRA

FANNY WARD WINS HEARTS—

Fanny Ward, with her whimsical comedy and appealing beauty, won the hearts of Milwaukee movie fans Sunday when she made her initial appearance as a photo dramatic star in the comedy "The Marriage of Kitty," at the Alhambra theater. The picture will be shown Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

Miss Ward proved that she can delight the spectators to a screen production as well as appearing in person on the stage, where she won so many laurels as a comedienne. "The Marriage of Kitty" is an amusing production, full of comedy, but not slighting scenic effects nor losing anything of its value as a picture drama as a result of its effort to amuse.

The picture tells the story of a country girl, left penniless by the death of her father, who comes to the city to variety entertainment.

"Birth of Nation" is Magnetic—

Numerous theatergoers from Wisconsin cities will be in Milwaukee this week to see "The Birth of a Nation," the great motion picture play of the slave problem and the civil war, at the Davidson. This is the eighth and last week of the production. Performances will be given every afternoon and evening, and the final one will take place Saturday evening, establishing a new record of theatrical attendance in Milwaukee.

Reservations have been made for inmates of the National Soldiers' Home, who have been told by their comrades that seeing the realistic war pictures is almost like fighting the enemy again. Old soldiers have sat in the theater and cheered when the pictures were flashed upon the screen showing the Union troops in triumphant conflict with the Confederates.

LAST TWO WEEKS FOR NIXON FILM

"Birth of a Nation" On Last Lap of Remarkable Run

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward David W. Griffith's wonderful new art of pictorialized spectacle with music, is now playing its last two weeks of its all-summer engagement at the New Nixon. This is the great offering that opened a new era in the theatres of New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where it ran simultaneously in as many productions for many, many months. Despite great opposition the play has never been suppressed, but has met the approval of censor boards, judges, municipal authorities, publicists, editors and clergymen everywhere.

The first half of the spectacle, which was suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" exhibits the salient events of the war between the States. In the second half the South's "second uprising"—this time against the carpetbagger regime—is shown in a thrilling story of Reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate Colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

But the great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Tremendous battle scenes and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. Eighteen thousand human actors and 3,000 horses were employed in the making of the picture, which cost half a million dollars and took eight months to produce.

On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted what was previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearance of the [illegible] characters and the movement of the [illegible] scenes. This score, [illegible] all instrumental music is played by a [illegible] orchestra of eighty, who are [illegible] in the traveling [illegible]

SCENE FROM

[illegible] periodicals [illegible]

[illegible] time.

[illegible] in the [illegible] before [illegible] welcome. [illegible] have atte[illegible] The big at[illegible] own in the [illegible] last week [illegible] ing with [illegible] who is [illegible]

[illegible] will be opened at Forrest Thursday [illegible] ber 2.

FRANCISCO CHRONICLE
AUG. 23, 1915

Marguerite Clark Coming to the Tivoli

Some of the attractive stars of the films who will be seen projected upon the screens of local motion picture houses next week.

"Clansman" Will Return to the Cort Next Week; "Marriage of Kitty" at the Imperial

THE dramatization of Anna Katherine Green's story of mystery, intrigue and adventure, "The Millionaire Baby," is proving an attractive offering this week at the Portola Theater. Harry Mestayer plays an important part in the success of the film. Besides "The Millionaire Baby" there is being shown a two-part Keystone comedy crowded with laugh provoking scenes.

Beginning tomorrow, the Portola will offer as one portion of a strong feature bill, the Aylesworth films of wild life and hunting big game in the Canadian rockies. Aylesworth is a well-known sportsman, who headed the expedition which provided these great motion pictures.

The pictures are not only entertaining, but very instructive as well, and are said to appeal to the sportsman as well as all who love the great outdoors. Other features will make up the strong programme.

✿ ✿ ✿ ✿

Another great double-header is announced to follow George Beban in "An Alien" at the Tivoli. Many requests have been made for a second week of Beban in "An Alien," but previous bookings necessitate a termination of the engagement tonight.

Marguerite Clark comes to the Tivoli next week in a Paramount production, "Helena of the North," which tells a story of intense dramatic appeal. As a second part of the programme, Harry D. Carey, a distinguished Broadway player, will assume the leading role in "Just Jim," a story of the San Francisco underworld. Picturesque and familiar settings about San Francisco, the bay and San Quentin, together with a powerful [illegible] part provide on a plane far above the average "convict" story.

✿ ✿ ✿ ✿

"The Birth of a Nation," or The Clansman, [illegible] to be the greatest motion picture ever produced, will be returned to the Cort Theater for a brief engagement, beginning next Monday and following the engagement of Tully's "Omar, the Tentmaker," which will be seen and heard at the Cort for the last time this afternoon and tonight.

The popularity of "The Clansman" remains undiminished, and its marvels as a photo spectacle are sufficient to attract all classes of theater patrons time after time. Over $500,000 was expended in producing the spectacle, with its mammoth battle scenes and its tremendous ensembles, involving the presence of upward of 20,000 persons.

COLUMBIA (S. C.) STATE
AUG. 23, 1915

BROWN SECURES PLAYS OF MERIT

Manager Announces List for Season.

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Forbes-Robertson to Make Final Appearance—"It Pays to Advertise" is Coming.

The 1915-16 season at the Columbia theatre as outlined last night by F. L. Brown, manager, has a large number of the best class of attractions in store for the theatregoing public of the capital city and nearby towns. A number of contracts have been signed, including some with the foremost actors and actresses of the American stage.

The season of 1915-16 in Columbia will open Tuesday night, September 7, with the production of "When Dreams Come True," which is described as a "musical play of youth." For the past year it has been appearing in New York, Boston, Chicago and Philadelphia, earning an opinion from a Chicago critic that it is "clean in theme and action."

Manager Brown last night announced the following plays and actors, who have been booked to appear in Columbia during the approaching season: "The Only Girl," "Daddy Long Legs," "A Pair of Sixes," Al G. Field, "Potash and Perlmutter," "The Red Rose," "Damaged Goods," Howe's pictures, "The Yellow Ticket," Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, "It Pays to Advertise," Mrs. Patrick Campbell, DeKoven's opera, "Robin Hood," "Twin Beds," "A Fool There Was," "Omar the Tentmaker," "Under Cover," "The Birth of a Nation" (moving picture), Henry W. Savage in "The Prince of Pilsen," "A Modern Cinderella," "September Morn," Elsie Ferguson, "The Garden of Allah," Louis Mann, William Faversham, "Sari," Adelaide French in "The Law of the Land," Neil O'Brien, John Drew, William H. Crane, Boston English Opera company, Ethel Barrymore, "Ben Hur," On Trial," Margaret Illington.

"The day of cheap stuff," said Mr. Brown, "has passed and theatregoers are demanding and the booking agencies and managers are sending out only the better class of shows—shows which will last and which are certain to have a success on the road. In order to obtain these better shows it is necessary, however, that the people pay the price and I believe that the theatre clientele of Columbia will gladly come forward in the support of shows which have made good on Broadway and on the road."

Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson, who is making the third and final lap of his final American tour, will play in repertoire, the plays being "Hamlet," "The Light That Failed," which is a dramatization of Kipling's novel of the same title, and "Passing of the Third Floor Back." Forbes-Robertson has taken three years to complete his farewell tour, and it is said that under no circumstances will he ever appear again in a city to which he has said farewell. In the season of 1913-14 he was in New York and last year played the cities of the West, Middle West and Canada. The final lap of his tour will commence at Richmond, October 11.

"Another big feature in the bookings is the moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacle produced by D. W. Griffith and which has been widely discussed in America. Special machinery and technical equipment [illegible] carried along with the picture; a [illegible] phony orchestra will play the [illegible] panying score.

"The Only Girl," one of the earlier bookings at the theatre, was written by Henry Blossom, while the music was composed by Victor Herbert. These men have been successful before in combination as with "Mlle. Modiste" and "The Red Mill." Zoe Barnett will star in "The Red Rose." Eol Cooper Megrue is the author of "Under Cover" and "It Pays to Advertise."

ENCE (R. I.) NEWS-DEM. 723
AUG. 23, 1915

[illegible] Opera House

The Birth of a Nation," bringing forth [illegible] W. Griffith's new art of musical [illegible]ctacle, with matinee and evening performances daily, will be repeated at the [illegible]ovidence Opera House this week. The [illegible]traction drew capacity audiences all of [illegible]st week and the management of the [illegible]hotoplay was prevailed upon by Colonel [illegible]Wendelschaefer to stay another week [illegible]here. The first half of the great picture [illegible]exhibits the salient events of the Civil War, which came to a close at Appomattox just 50 years ago. Lincoln's call for [illegible]troops, Sherman's march, the Battle of [illegible]Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and [illegible]the awful tragedy at Ford's theatre live [illegible]before the spectator of the Griffith drama. The second half the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpetbag [illegible]egime, is shown in a thrilling story of [illegible]econstruction days. The romance of "The [illegible]Little Confederate Colonel," Ben Cameron with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, [illegible]nd that of the Unionist Capt. Phil Stoneman with Margaret Cameron, the South [illegible]Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of [illegible]continuous love interest throughout the [illegible]tory.

The fun and frolic of the plantation [illegible]ays, as well as the heartache and pathos [illegible]f the stricken South, (are shown. The [illegible]reat out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Great battle scenes and the [illegible]ides of the clan are staged with thousands of participants. There are [illegible] scenes in the spectacle, and (it is estimated) no less than 200,000 interesting historical details.

On the musical side Mr. Griffith and Col. Wendelschafer have attempted something previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This is the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearance of the important character and the enactment of the principal scenes. This instrumental music is played by a large orchestra and supplemented by half a hundred singers behind the scenes.

CLIPPING FROM Times
Detroit Saturday
8-23-15

It is probable that the Empire will feature D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," when it is released for this state. The management is already negotiating with the Griffith forces for the production. This is the notable screen success now running for seven months in New York at $2.00 prices. The players include Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Spottiswood Aitken and hundreds of others. The first part of the picture shows the midst of the Civil War and the latter part the famous Ku Klux Klan period.

Tulsa Daily World
8-23-15

It is probable that the Empire will feature D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation," when it is released for this state. The management is already negotiating with the Griffith forces for the production. This is the notable screen success now running for seven months in New York at $2.00 prices. The players include Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Spottiswood Aitken and hundreds of others. The first part of the picture shows the midst of the Civil War and the latter part the famous Ku Klux Klan period.

CHICAGO (ILL.) JOURNAL
AUG. 23, 1915

The Colonial, long given to the uses of minor vaudeville, is the new location of "The Birth of a Nation." The swelling stream of traffic that has long been running to this great picture at the Illinois turned its course yesterday afternoon without losing volume. Indeed, the day and night attendance at the Colonial exceeded that of any Sunday at the Illinois, save one. Newly embellished, the lobby of the Randolph street theater presented a festival aspect, and the bevy of crinolined damsels who accompanied the picture from its old to its new home were anything but a blot upon the picture. "The Birth of a Nation" is the cinematographic wonder of the world. It is so vast in scope, so intimate in interest, so fraught with feeling, so believably real, so amazing as an example of courageous enterprise, and so firmly established in public interest that it would seem destined to occupy the Colonial for many months. Genuine showmanship always makes its way.

AUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 24, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WAR SCENES MAY BE USED IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Union Soldiers on the Firing Line.

Men who are interested in the production of motion pictures for educational purposes have consulted D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," the great photo play of the civil war, now in its last week at the Davidson, in regard to marketing the war pictures for use in public schools. The plan is to have the pictures used in the teaching of American history. "The Birth of a Nation" is conceded to be the greatest motion picture play ever made and its tremendous run in this city has already shattered all previous records. In a series of pictures made at a cost of half a million dollars, with 18,000 people as actors, the civil war is fought out and the slavery problem is settled in accord with authentic reports of American history. Realistic battles are fought on a field five miles long, depicting with thrilling emotion, artillery attacks, infantry fire, bayonet clashes and cavalry charges. Some of the pitcures were taken at night by the glare of giant bombs and the effects are spectacular in the extreme. The fields are strewn with bodies of the dead and dying and the effects of hunger and disease are shown in the scenes of camp and hospital life.

Among the notable spectacles in the pictures which make lasting impressions on those who see them are the battle of Gettysburg, Sherman's march to the sea, the surender of Gen. Robert E. Lee to Gen. U. S. Grant, the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln and the scenes of riot in the South which followed the war. Musically, the play is equal to a performance of first class grand opera, being accompanied by an inspiring musical score interpreted by an orchestra of forty pieces.

AUG. 24, 1915
MARQUETTE (Mich.) EAGLE STAR

AMUSEMENTS

MARIOTTE THEATER

Dramatic Spectacle Clashes Mark the "Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" contains many striking battle scenes of the civil war. Long lines of fighting soldiers are revealed, coming to close quarters in desperate bayonet clashes cavalrymen dash madly over the field, and cannon belch forth fire and smoke giving the effect of fury unrestrained. The battlefields are strewn with the dead, and the injured are seen being carried to the hospitals.

In the last part of the play the scenes reveal the trials of the south- [illegible] Klux-Klan, a secret organization of men. History states that the Ku-Klux-Klan' became such a powerful organization that special legislation was enacted to disband the order.

Do not miss the showing of this wonderful reproduction, when it comes to the Mariotte Theater for a weeks, the week of September 9 to 11, it will make a better American of you—be charmed and thrilled with its manifold glories; see all its superabundant sights and hear all its grand music.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) BULLETIN
AUG. 24, 1915

Providence Opera House.

The David W. Griffith spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," began the second week of its engagement at the Providence Opera House before a large audience last evening. It is not often that a photoplay audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case with this picture.

The psychology of the attitude of the audience lies in the fact that sound and action are synchronized. The special music by the orchestra, and the realistic sound effects produced behind the scenes sweep the audience forward from climax to climax. To produce the effects 5000 pounds of mechanical devices, controlled from a switchboard by an expert electrician, have been installed and a force of 20 men is used to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound and action are synchronized perfectly.

The switchboard, which notifies the men who control the effects, has over 30 different keys, each one calling for a different sound. The effects used consist of cannon boom, cannon rumble, church chimes, rifle shots, rifle rattle, rush of water, horse hoofs, smashing of door, breaking of window glass, and many other smaller effects. A group of 10 men makes the sounds for the mob scenes. All of the men work in complete darkness in order to read the vari-colored electric light signals correctly.

Asbury Park
TUESDAY, AUGUST 24, 19

"BIRTH OF NATION" IS GREAT PICTURE

In the production of "The Birth of a National," which began a week's run at the Savoy theater yesterday, D. W. Griffith has scored a distinct triumph in the art of moving pictures. Abounding in spectacular scenes, with thrilling battles, burning buildings and inspiring dashes of the Ku Klux Klan, "The Birth of a Nation" also has two pretty romances interwoven thru it, and the constant stirring of the emotions provide a series of sensations seldom furnished by silent dramas. Near-capacity audiences attended both performances yesterday.

A splendid orchestra that fills the orchestra pit and one of the boxes gives excellent interpretation of the various scenes, and adds realism to the production. Thousands of persons are engaged in the presentation of the two-act historical drama based on Thomas Dixon's story "The Clansman" and the leading parts are taken by movie artists of the highest rank.

Mr. Griffith was eight months making the entire production. During that time he employed a small army of men and women to get the desired results.

Over 17 authorities were consulted to get the proper atmosphere into the scenes in which President Abraham Lincoln appears.

The portions of Ford's theater shown in the story are exact reproductions of the surroundings on the night the president was assassinated. The actual distances were faithfully followed in the scene even to the 12-foot leap which Booth made from the box after firing the fatal shot. All the reproductions for this scene were vouched for by eye witnesses of the tragedy, who retain vivid recollections of what happened that night.

In the great battle scenes which are given in the earlier portions of the production Mr. Griffith employed many novel appliances to get his effects. For the first time in making motion pictures he utilized the telephone most extensively. Imagine a stage director handling thousands upon thousands of players in one scene and directing them by telephone.

This was done by laying underground wires to all parts of the battlefields. The director had a switchboard of 10 wires directly in front of him and in this way kept in touch with every part of the big conflicts.

The great battle scenes were also the first ever taken by a motion picture camera at night. The scenes showing the escape of the refugees from Atlanta, the bonfire effects in Piedmont and the great red battle effects were all realized by night photography.

DENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 726
AUG. 24, 1915

[illegible] will play afternoon [illegible] evening throughout the week.

Union Theatre.

The leading attraction on the first of the week programme at the Union Theatre is "The Mating," one of the most [illegible] "Mutual Masterpieces" that have been shown at this theatre. The story, in five parts, portrays the strange adventures that befell a country girl in search of an education. The picture is cleverly staged in such a way as to keep the interest of the audience at fever heat until its completion, and Bessie Barriscale, the talented New York Mutual Picture Company's star, is equal to the difficult part she plays as the country girl. The leading comedy attraction is a Keystone farce comedy, "Caught in the Rain," in which the leading role is played by Charley Chaplin [illegible] clearly as ever. Another comedy which contains more than the usual number of side-splitting actions, is "The Battle of Ambrose and Walrus," a rollicking parody on the military, in which Mack Swain and Chester Conklin play the two leading roles, like several recently made scenes.

[illegible] is a crack rifle shot [illegible] the leading part in "The Noon [illegible]" in which a knitting mill girl, forbidden by her parents to receive the attentions of a young man whom they disapproved in her courtship by her [illegible] "The Ceremonial Turquoise" [illegible] the attractive Reliance star, [illegible] novel mystery and incidentally [illegible] sweetheart from life imprisonment [illegible] an unusually clever detective drama. The remaining number is the "Universal Weekly," that includes several [illegible] from the war zone of Europe; [illegible] of the steamship St. Louis [illegible] name and American flag painted [illegible] as a caution against submarines, [illegible] the prominent business and [illegible] men's army training camp [illegible] that [illegible] N. Y., where they are [illegible] tactics under army officials, [illegible] test on the big lake [illegible]

[illegible] Theatre.

[illegible] himself justice as [illegible] the comedy film of [illegible] the feature of the [illegible] at the Strand. The story is based on Schmaltz's attempt to impersonate Count Mimmeldorf, who has renounced his title and joined the Socialists. The bogus count goes along well with his impersonation until he tries to make love to the only daughter of a rich brewer. Then he meets his Waterloo in the form of the lover of the brewer's daughter. In addition Schmaltz is discovered by his sweetheart, also an ardent Socialist. Count Mimmeldorf challenges Schmaltz and a duel follows. Eventually the matter is straightened out and Schmaltz is reconciled to his first love.

Harry D. Carey in "Just Jim," presents a strong characterization of a man, just finishing a jail sentence, who takes up his life again, determined to make amends for the past. Unusual circumstances nearly return him to prison, but love and his own determination bring about a happy conclusion. Other pictures are "In the Grasp of the Law," a drama, "A Dip in the Water," a comedy, and "How Sword Fish are Caught," a scientific picture.

Providence Opera House.

The David W. Griffith spectacle, "The Brith of a Nation," began the second week of its engagement at the Providence Opera House yesterday with large audiences. Mr. Griffith has taken for his theme the development of the nation and its relationship to the part the slavery problem played in bringing about Daniel Webster's prophecy of a nation, one and indivisible. The action begins with the introduction of slavery into the colonies and then the start of the abolition movement and the stirring times leading up to the secession of the Southern States and the outbreak of the Civil War. The audience is carried through the four years of strife to the death of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre. The eight years of reconstruction form the final episodes in a drama of history, romance and emotion the like of which has never been revealed here before. Its termination is an allegorical picture of the coming of permanent peace and the settlement of all local differences.

The special music by the orchestra, and the realistic sound effects produced behind the scenes sweep the audience forward from climax to climax. To produce the effects 5000 pounds of mechanical devices, controlled from a switchboard by an expert electrician, have been installed and a force of 20 men is used to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound and action are synchronized perfectly.

The switchboard, which notifies the men who control the effects, has over 30 different keys, each one calling for a different sound. The effects used consist of cannon boom, cannon rumble, church chimes, rifles shots, rifle rattle, rush of water, horse hoofs, smashing of door, breaking of window glass, and many other smaller effects. A group of 10 men makes the sounds for the mob scenes. All of the men work in complete darkness in order to read the vari-colored electric light signals correctly.

The Nickel.

The Nickel Theatre has an uncommonly enjoyable programme of new photoplays for the first three days of the week. Chief in interest was Bessie Barriscale, the former star of "A Bird of Paradise," who appears in a four-reel Mutual Masterpiece, "The Reward." This is a story of stage life, its facinations and temptations. The heroine is a chorus girl known among her associates as "The Iceberg" because of her indifference to masculine admiration. At last, lonely and discouraged, she gives up the struggle of living a clean, honest life and determines to go the way of her associates. How she is saved from moral destruction by a man who cares for her, a supposed cynic and idler, and how the maternal instinct is awakened in her, makes one of the prettiest and most dramatic stories see

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 24, 1915

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECORD
AUG. 24, 1915

BELIEVE BATTLE SCENES ARE REAL

It is difficult to impress upon some persons that the battle scenes in D. W. Griffith's famous photo-drama "The Birth of a Nation," that will be at the Broadway Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, are not representations of actual battles of the Civil War, that is, that the pictures were not taken on the battlefield in 1864, or thereabouts.

It is hard to imagine by what train of thought that mistaken idea is arrived at, and were there only a single instance of it it might easily and charitably be explained by the age of the person holding it; but there have been too many instances of this opinion for a simple explanation.

Lillian Gish in "The Birth of a Nation."

After the matinee yesterday in As- [illegible] manager, and when he [illegible] she said that she had a particular favor to ask of him. She was assured in Mr. Fred Zweifel's courtliest manner, that it would be a pleasure to serve her in any way possible. Then she made this remarkable request. She wanted a photograph of the big battle scene. Manager Zweifel tried to explain to her that the photograph would have to be over 1000 feet long and would consist of a multitude of photographs each about the size of a postage stamp, but she was persistent.

"Why do you wish for the picture?" she was asked.

"My husband was in that battle," she said, "and I think if I had the picture I could pick him out, and—"she added tearfully, "the only photograph I had of him was lost when our house was burned."

Then Mr. Zweifel explained that the picture she had just seen, while historically true in detail, was nevertheless acted before the camera within [illegible] years, and that her husband, who [illegible] killed in the war, could not possibly have appeared in the film. Convinced against her will the old lady [illegible] departed, her last hope dead.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
AUG. 24, 1915

CLIPPING FROM [illegible]
Date [illegible]

'BIRTH OF A NATION' AT NIXON THEATER BEGINNING SEPT. 1

THE RIDE OF THE KU KLUX KLAN.
In "The Birth of A Nation," at the Nixon theater beginning Sept. 1.

Wonderful Spectacle That Makes Vivid Civil War Days Required 18,000 Actors

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's massive spectacle, which comes to the Nixon theater Wednesday evening, Sept. 1, continuing twice daily thereafter, is considered one of the largest and most important productions of a decade, yet not a word is spoken throughout the performance of nearly three hours. Music supplies the absence of speech, mechanical effects and realism, while the wizard of the screen, David W. Griffith, unfolds in 12,000 feet of film the thrilling romance of the war between the states and the reconstruction of the southland. Some idea of its magnitude may be had from the fact that 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses took part, and that the staging of this great drama cost half a million dollars.

Several of the actors are of southern lineage. Henry Walthall, who plays the heroic role of the little confederate colonel, is a member of the well known Walthall family of Alabama. Miriam Cooper, who appears as Margaret Cameron, is a direct descendent of Charles Carroll, the Maryland signer of the Declaration of Independence. Mr. Griffith is the son of a brigadier general of the confederate army.

For every character, however small, Mr. Griffith has found just the personality needed. After that his masterly direction made each one give a perfect characterization of the widely varying roles.

FIRST SHOWN IN MARCH.

The premier performance was given March 3, 1915, at the Liberty theater, New York. There were subsequent productions in Boston, Chicago, Brighton Beach music hall, New York and Nixon theater, Atlantic City. All were long runs of many months and the five separate companies had a total attendance of 50,000 patrons weekly. Never before has a play run half a year simultaneously in so many cities, including also 17 weeks in Los Angeles and 18 weeks in San Francisco.

Some of the greatest battles of the Civil war are re-enacted in the play. It was suggested by Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman."

Alfred Burkhart 8 Monmouth st.,

Lillian Gish, starring in "The Birth of a Nation," gripping film drama at the Cort Theater this week.

"THE CLANSMAN" STILL APPEALS

D. W. Griffith's spectacular film drama, "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," opened at the Cort Theater yesterday for a return engagement of two weeks.

Despite the fact that this attraction already has had a run of fifteen weeks in San Francisco, the enthusiastic audience that packed the theater last night proved conclusively that it has lost none of its appeal.

"The Birth of a Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," possesses a double mental perspective. One is the reality of the fearfully striving periods of just before the civil war, during that combat and the equally trying and dramatic time immediately following the surrender of Lee.

The other drama, no less distinctly shown, is that of the psychology, the emotions, the thought processes of the clashing elements. Griffith, who gives a photodrama a mingled histrionic capacity with an exalted poetic sense of the proportions, has seemed to have read the minds, learned the very thoughts of those generations who have almost entirely passed from us, those who by clashing gave life and form to our present great nation.

PAWTUCKET (R. I.) TIMES
AUG. 24, 1915

TIMES, PAWTUCKET, R. I., TUESDAY, A[illegible]

Scene From "Birth of a Nation," at Providence Opera House.

PORTLAND (Me.) ARGUS
AUG. 24, 1915

706

[illegible] arrangements may be made for private parties during the afternoon hours, and these dances promise to be an attractive form of entertainment this winter.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

This great offering is of unusual interest to all Americans, for it unites pictorial spectacle, music and effects into a thrilling drama of the Civil war crisis, enlivened with delightful comedy and heightened by two charming love romances of the Blue and the [illegible]

The battle scenes are the greatest ever attempted by any director, the Klu-Klux "riders" retain their old potency to stir the blood, whilst it is difficult to keep the feet from dancing to the catchy tunes of 50 years ago.

Daily matinees will be given at Keith's during the entire engagement [illegible] the production will be presented [illegible] manner as that [illegible]

AUG. 24, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER

"The Brith of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Nixon theater Wednesday night, September 1, for a limited engagement of five weeks. Mail orders are now being received and filled in the order of their receipt; the seat sale opened Monday, August 30. It is the largest and most important production of a decade, yet not a word is spoken throughout the two hours and forty-five minutes' performance. Music supplies the absence of speech, mechanical effects and realism, whilst the wizard of the screen, David W. Griffith, unfolds in 12,000 feet of film the thrilling romance of the war between the states and the reconstruction of the southland. Some faint idea of its magnitude may be had from the facts that 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses took part and that the staging of this great "outdoor drama" cost half a million dollars. This city will be favored [illegible] the original production from New [illegible], where it was first shown.

CLIPPING FROM Herald
Date [illegible]

At the Colonial

The management of the "Birth of a Nation" is delighted at the throngs which have filled the theater since the opening at the Colonial on Sunday afternoon. George Bowles, the manager, said last evening that every seat was sold for the evening perfo[illegible]

[illegible] months [illegible] cents to [illegible]

DUBUQUE (Iowa) TIMES
AUG. 24, 1915

257

THE CLANSMAN OF 1915

Thomas Dixon, in his book, "The Clansman," built a story around the operations of the "Klu Klux Klan," composed of men who banded together, pledged themselves to secrecy and struck horror to thousands by nocturnal raids on the south during the reconstruction period following the civil war.

The clansman of that time wore a robe of white which covered his body, was ornamented by a bright red cross at the breast and topped by a pointed helmet. The fiery cross was the insignia of the band, which traveled by horseback in the silence of the night and bore its victims to death.

Dixon was severely criticised on the charge that he misrepresented the spirit of the south, and his story dramatized, was barred from many cities. But if Dixon were to rewrite his story, following the lynching of Leo M. Frank, he would have to make only small changes in detail.

The clansmen of 1915 used no disguise and traveled by automobile. There was no note of warning couched in half mysterious phraseology and signed by the feared "K. K. K."

But the intent, purpose and end sought was the same.

UCKET (R. I.) TIMES
AUG. 24, 1915

CAT THE

"Birth of a Nation" Great Photo Play at Providence Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," that wonderful motion play that has so stirred New England audiences, especially Boston for the past few weeks, is on its second week at the Providence Opera House this week, and one can but marvel at the extent of its manipulations.

Being as it is a photoplay of "The Clansman," by Rev. Thomas Dixon, one would expect to see something virile. We [illegible] see it to fully appreciate it. It is powerful in its very presence and can not fail to make a lasting impression on its audience.

Surrounded by the events of Civil War period, before and after as well, there is a spectacularity about it that is notable and the mind that created it must have been of extreme brilliancy. There is nothing left to the imagination as far as technique is concerned and the way in which the film seizes upon the onlooker is something remarkable. It may possibly be that the average spectator is heartily in sympathy with the object of the play, but there probably never was such a play film so constructed as to make its subject strike home more.

Beginning back in ante bellum days the story told carries one through the great conflict into reconstruction days and until the final settlement of war troubles with the nation for the first time united and cemented into a solid unit. There is a strong thread of love carrried throughout the play that is pleasing to see although there are heart wrenchings, and the affections of strong men are shattered as though they were but the most fragile thing imaginable. There is an atmosphere of horribleness surrounding a portion of the production yet it is necessary to complete the tale and while one shivers perhaps at some of the incidents and suggestions introduced he can but see that it is all a part of the great story told.

There are portions of the production which are said to be historically correct and they are interesting. The signing of the call for volunteers by President Lincoln and the surrender of Gen. Lee at Appomattox are scenes in themselves that can not help but enthuse the spectator.

As a spectacular production the play is a monument to the inventive imagination of man. There are battle scenes that are lifelike to the extreme, that is of the old fashioned way of fighting, where the men are not hidden in the ground and are not fired at 10 or a dozen miles away but where they get into hand-to-hand conflict, and the flashing sabre and the sharp pointed bayonet are brought into play in a deadly manner. There are the tense emotions of the fighters to be seen and as the one side or the other fights its way to victory the results are most faithfully portrayed. The work of the principals in the play is most admirable they filling every detail to a nicety.

The whole play revolves about the work of a fanatic in the days of reconstruction of the South to put the negro above the white man there and the way the proud Southerners resisted such efforts. The Ku-Klux Klan proved to be a mighty factor in this resistance and is called the saving grace of the South at that time. It is a production that one should not miss, not only because of its being an interesting one but what can be learned in the historical sense.

AUG. 25, 1915

BELIEVE BATTLE SCENES ARE REAL

It is difficult to impress upon some persons that the battle scenes in D. W. Griffith's famous photo-drama "The Birth of a Nation," that will be at the Broadway Theatre next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, matinee daily, are not representations of actual battles of the Civil War, that is, that the pictures were not taken on the battlefield in 1864, or thereabouts. It is hard to imagine by what train of thought that mistaken idea is arrived at, and were there only a single instance of it it might easily and suitably be explained by the whim of the person holding it; but there have been too many instances of opinion for a simple explana-matinee yesterday in Asbury Park an old lady inquired for the manager, and when he appeared she said that she had a particular favor to ask of him. She was assured in Mr. Fred Zweifel's courtliest manner, that it would be a pleasure to serve her in any way possible. Then she made this remarkable request. She wanted a photograph of the big battle scene. Manager Zweifel tried to explain to her that the photograph would have to be over 1000 feet long and would consist of a multitude of photographs each about the size of a postage stamp, but she was persistent.

Lillian Gish in "The Birth of a Nation."

"Why do you wish for the picture?" she was asked.

"My husband was in that battle," she said, "and I think if I had the picture I could pick him out, and—"she added tearfully, "the only photograph I had of him was lost when our house was burned."

Then Mr. Zweifel explained that the picture she had just seen, while historically true in detail, was nevertheless acted before the camera within two years, and that her husband, who was killed in the war, could not possibly have appeared in the film. Convinced against her will the old lady sadly departed, her last hope dead.

BROOKLYN (N. Y.) TIMES
AUG. 25, 1915

BIGGS. Grand

Scene in "BIRTH of a NATION." Brighton Beach

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
AUG. 25, 1915

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
AUG. 25, 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Thrives at Colonial.

THOSE of its management assert that now at the Colonial "The Birth of a Nation" is enjoying the finest presentation it has had any time in the country, excelling even the New York showing. The last week, spent in renovating the theater, saw every inch of its lofty foyer gone over, a new projection box installed on the first floor, much gold leafing, hangings, and lightings fixed. Twenty-five hours and a fleet of lenses were used in securing the most perfect adjustment of the screen.

The acoustics are particularly suitable to the orchestral needs of the production. The orchestra pit, modeled after the Wagnerian one at Baireuth, Germany, in which small orchestras were quite lost, is just the thing for this one.

The number of ushers has been doubled, for this house seats some 1,400 people, and the bright lights along the stairs balconywards twinkle even after the "sold out" sign is displayed.

In the center of the lobby the quiet eyed portrait of D. W. Griffith, maker of the picture, looks down on all comers.

This, according to the management, is the first time a house ever played a film without a picture in front. Not a sign of a picture or poster is showing. It is what is technically known as a "banking front," with the announcements printed in heavy gold leafed letters. A time [illegible] scenes [illegible] and

RICH COMEDY IN BIG SPECTACLE

Quiet, Refined Comedy in "Birth of a Nation" of Sure-fire Order

A great detal of big comedy is horseplay, but David W. Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation" which enters upon the last two weeks of its engagement at the New Nixon after an all summer's run, proves that quiet refined comedy is a big laugh maker and pleases people better than the old style crude methods.

One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" is the love-sick sentry in the hospital scene gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is on the "sure fire" order for never does an audience miss the rapt attention of the sentinal and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-miles-away look.

Paul LeBlanc is the name of the young actor who has made the unexpected hit in the part. He is a New Orleans Creole by birth and played comedy roles with Mme. Bertharde before going out to Los Angeles, where Mr. Griffith discovered him. The costuming of the young soldier is wonderfully accurate to the period of 1864. Some of the Civil War portraits in the magazines and newspapers are almost double-its of this sentry figure, showing what [illegible] care Griffith has [illegible] in reproducing the Civil War type.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
AUG. 25, 1915

NEXT WEEK FINAL FOR "CLANSMAN"

"The Birth of a Nation; or, The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's screen masterpiece, is more than fulfilling its former success at the Cort Theater, where capacity houses are the rule at the matinee and evening performances. The audiences contain a liberal sprinkling of Exposition visitors, for the fame of the picture has travelled far.

Sunday starts the second and final week of the engagement. "The New Henrietta," with its all star cast, including William H. Crane, Thomas [illegible] Richard Bennett, [illegible] Frederick Kerr, [illegible] Gertrude Berkeley, [illegible] in "The Clansman," [illegible] the [illegible] "The Clansman" [illegible] given on [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

EE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 25, 1915

TORIAL PLAY OF WAR DEPICTS HISTORIC EVENTS

Sherman's March to the Sea.

Crowds continue to throng the Davidson theater and to applaud "The Birth of a Nation," the pictorial play of the Civil War which shows a beholder how battles are fought. There are 18,000 soldiers and 3,000 cavalrymen in the stirring war scenes and their magnitude is evident from the fact that the cost of production was half a million dollars.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the first production of its kind, but it will be followed by other spectacles of great magnitude. D. W. Griffiths, its producer, is now associated with other experts in the Triangle Film corporation which will present special motion picture plays in the Knickerbocker theater in New York.

Thrilling scenes in this play of romance, history and war include Sherman's march to the sea, the siege of Atlanta, the siege of Petersburg and the battle of Gettysburg. A notable historic spectacle is the assassination of President Abraham Lincoln, every detail of which is true to history.

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECOR
AUG. 25, 1915

COMMUNICATIONS.

Protests "Birth of a Nation."

Eatontown, ~~Aug. 21, 1915~~.

Editor Long Branch Record:

I am sending you a copy of a petition that I have already mailed to the Board of Commissioners of Long Branch, voicing the protest of the colored citizens of Eatontown against the exhibition of the "Birth of a Nation" at the Broadway theatre, Long Branch, during the present week. We regard the proposed exhibition as being productive of more harm to the proper adjustment of relationship between the two races than can be easily determined.

At this state, when the Eastern world is at war and this nation facing the greatest crisis in its history, we believe that the ties of mutual interest should not be jarred as such an exhibition is apt to do, especially wherever those pictures are shown.

The Negro is not ashamed of the part he played in the days of reconstruction—when he was suddenly emancipated, ignorant, penniless and too trustful of those who should have been his best friends and teachers in civic responsibility. But he does protest against anything that will place him at a greater disadvantage than that under which he is at prestnt laboring.

Having in the past been helped by the "fair play" standard of your paper, we are requesting you to give us sufficient space in your valuable paper so that we may not only voice our protest to the constituted authorities, but be able to present our plea to the fair-minded public of Long Branch and its environs.

Thanking you for past favors,

Rev. WM. L. RHODES,
Eatontown, N. J.
Pastor Mt. Zion A. M. E. Zion Church

AUG. 25, 1915
CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS

REMOVAL BENEFICIAL TO 'BIRTH OF A NATION'

Colonial Brilliant in Its New Coat; Lighting Effects Bettered.

PICTURES NOW LARGER

Lincoln Episodes Especially Stand Out, Eclipsing Drama's More Vengeful Side.

D. W. Griffith has made a "production" of the Colonial theater itself, with much the same eye for effects and attention to detail as he devoted to the making of his master work, "The Birth of a Nation." Incidentally, the removal of that historical spectacle from the Illinois to the Colonial has demonstrated that motion pictures may be the means of "bringing back" a playhouse to its former position as a theater of the first class.

The foyer of the Colonial theater is now as beautiful in gilt freshness as on its dedication night years ago. Enthusiastic Griffith aids who superintended the work of rehabilitation place it on a par with the foyer of the library of congress. Hundreds of new lights, oil painting panels, a complete new coating of gold leaf, fresh tapestries and new carpets combine in the ensemble of splendor.

Gold and Cream Ivory Tones.

Gold and cream ivory are the prevailing tones—except in a "southern bower" in the balcony. It is a garden of real roses, real smilax, real birds—and a real southern girl, dressed in the voluminous mode of the '60s. While she tosses roses over the rail an orchestra eqipped with mandolas plays dreamy melodies redolent of "befo' de wah."

The artistic rejuvenation of the Colonial theater offered less troublous problems than preparing the motion picture mechanism in a manner to suit Griffith demands. An operator's cabinet of tile and concrete was built on the first floor of the theater. Twenty-five hours of continuous effort were consumed in obtaining the right camera projection in the new surroundings. A "shadow box" which "sterilizes" the screen free of lights or shadows was built on the stage.

Projection Results Improved.

At the Colonial even better projection results are obtained than when "The Birth of a Nation" reigned at the Illinois. The pictures are larger, clearer and many details of battle and disaster heretofore unseen are now brought to notice, offering fresh wonders in the realism of Griffith minutiæ. Dying soldiers, fleeing women and children and other tragic trivialities, until now swallowed by fire and smoke, become evident.

The superior visual results secured at the Colonial make the Lincoln episodes in "The Birth of a Nation" especially effective. These impressions of the great emancipator, staged with infinite study and pains, outlast all other recollections of the spectacle, including the vengeful melodrama of the later chapters.

Notes of the Photo Plays.

A private viewing of "The Victory of Virtue," first feature production of the United Photoplays company, will be given Sept. 2. The leading players are Gerda Holmes and Wilmuth Merkl. Natural backgrounds at Starved Rock and Highland Park were utilized in the production.

Francis X. Bushman has announced in New York that he has signed Miss Beverly Bayne to appear with him in future Metro productions. Their first offering will be "Pennington's Choice."

Thousands attended the Evanston theater on its opening evening under Hamburger management. The attractions this week at the suburban outpost of Hamburger amusement control are "The Melting Pot" and "When the Mountains Call." The theater has a capacity of 1,200. The pictures are given with a large orchestral accompaniment.

Miss Stickle Mouse Kiss" is the title of the first story by James Montgomery Flagg secured for motion pictures. Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Drew are the principals in the Vitagraph production of the versatile artist's story.

Herbert Brenon, Annette Kellermann and William E. Shay, with a party of players, camera men and others, sailed for Jamaica to film a successor to "Neptune's Daughter." Miss Kellermann's first and only "movie" play. Mr. Brenon produced "Neptune's Daughter" and Mr. Shay was leading man. In the forthcoming play they will occupy similar positions. The picture is being produced for the Fox Film company.

Saturday's children matinee performance at Orchestra hall was favored with the usual good attendance of children and grownups. The Strand Theater company program for this occasion consisted of "Pinnochio," a fairy tale; "Emmy Jane Makes Good," a juvenile comedy; "The Runaway Leopard," a nature study of jungle life; and violin selections by little Miss Nellie Wulf.

Post Aug. 26

THEATER MANAGER WILL DEFY MAYOR

Announces "Birth of a Nation" Film Will Be Shown Despite Prohibitive Order.

Although Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong yesterday declared the "Birth of a Nation," billed for a five-weeks' run in the Nixon Theater, would not be permitted to be shown in Pittsburgh, Thomas F. Kirk, Jr., manager of the theater, asserted the picture would be shown despite the mayor's ban, and a legal controversy is anticipated.

The mayor, acting in response to overtures made to him by representatives of negroes and others, directed Police Superintendent W. N. Matthews to notify the theater management the police would not permit the presentation of the film, which is based largely on the story of "The Clansman." In his statement the mayor said in part: "I take this stand for the reason that I do not think this picture or any other picture which tends to stir up racial feelings and rehash events in history, the unpleasant features of which have been forgotten and should remain buried in the interest of a united people, should be permitted to show in this city." He continues that representations made to him by various "prominent citizens and a delegation" satisfied him the picture was of the character mentioned.

Manager Kirk in response to the mayor's decision, said the film would be presented as advertised. He cited the decision of Chancellor Walker of New Jersey, handed down yesterday, in the form of a permanent injunction restraining the Atlantic City commission from interfering with the film's appearance in Atlantic City. The picture was being shown there under a temporary injunction against the city authorities. Affidavits presented in that proceeding, according to Mr. Kirk, showed no disorder or ill-feeling was caused by the picture among the negroes employed at the coast resort.

St. Louis Star
Date 8-26-15

"Birth of a Nation," Olympic.

Many of the critics who have been sternest in their exactions of American dramatists announce their belief that D. W. Griffith has "put over" the great American play at last, in the wonderful spectacle-drama, "The Birth of a Nation," the unique offering at the Olympic Theater next Sunday night.

For many years American dramatists wrote able plays of particular States, cities or localities, ranging from Alabama to "The Henrietta" and from "Way Down East" to "The Great Divide." But no one man seemed to grasp the whole spirit and genius of America until David Wark Griffith picked a suggestion for his theme out of Dixon's "The Leopard's Spots,' and "The Clansman" and started to develop it.

A remarkable thing about Mr. Griffith's plan is that words (except for leaders and titles) did not enter into it. He staged the great battles, struggles and critical events of 1861-70, under natural conditions as nearly as possible similar to the original. Griffith carries the magnificent story from the introduction of African slavery down through Civil War and Reconstruction days to the union of South and North in the bonds of love and peace.

...to the doors.

Wild Animal Pictures Are Hit at Portola

Pictures of Aylesworth's Wild Animal Expedition in the Canadian Rockies and Alaska are proving a big hit at the Portola this week. There are many exciting moments to these pictures, notably that of the capture of the bear in the improvised trap, and the animal's attempt to crush the hunter. A two-part Keystone comedy is a big laugh provoker.

Commencing with next Sunday the Portola will offer the filmatization of Cosmo Hamilton's sensational drama, "The Blindness of Virtue." Edna Mayo will appear in the leading role.

...r such deliberat...

six months ...
cents to ...

CLIPPING ..... Date 8-25-15

[illegible] WINDRICH, SCENE IN THE BIRTH OF A NATION AT THE NEW MENDOW THEATRE THIS WEEK.

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) NEWS
AUG. 26, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS AN ENLIGHTENING WAR PLAY

Procession in Atlanta at beginning of war.

When the civil war broke out and armies were mobilized by the north and the south, the confederates were confident of their ability to win and the demonstration in the streets of Atlanta and other large cities indicated that victory and a continuance of slavery were anticipated.

The feeling in the south is depicted in "The Birth of a Nation," the great motion picture play based on the war, which is offered at the Davidson in its eighth and final week of its successful run.

When the southern troops were mustered into service brilliant military balls and banquets took place. These events are reproduced in the fascinating play and the decline of the confederacy is shown with the development of hunger and poverty after the resources of the south have reached a dwindling state.

Later scenes of interest reveal the historic Klu Klux Klansmen, the masked nightriders who organized a secret order to subdue the negroes and unscrupulous whites who attempted to run the country after the war. Thrilling acts of rescue are performed in the pictures by the shrouded Klansmen. The play is regarded as an education in the hazards and horrors of war.

NEW YORK DRAMATIC MIRROR.
AUG. 5

BOOSTING THE PRICE HIGHER

DOES the memory of many film men go back to the time, a little over a year ago, when the business was in the throes of a crusade for higher admission prices? It's only a twelvemonth past, but it comes as considerable of a shock to remember that what most picture men so recently meant by "higher" was the 10-cent admission. The struggle was not for the 25 cent or higher scale—the bitter battle was waged to pull the 5-cent house up to the 10-cent level.

Shades of the penny-in-the-slot days! And last week's newspapers tell us of a picture exhibition that will ask from 25 cents to $2 for the privilege of seeing its productions. Where is the man who foresaw the death of the motion picture if we dared aspire to more than the nickel price? There were plenty like him—only a year ago, when the trade papers were massing weighty arguments in favor of the crusade to raise the prices. The 5-cent show still exists—but it is the exception; the 10-cent house is the rule, and the 10 to 25 cent theater is becoming common.

It remains for the next few months to show what measure of success shall be accorded the producers who are seeking to boost the admission price still one notch higher. New York has paid the top price for "The Birth of a Nation" for almost five hundred performances, but "The Birth of a Nation" is the exceptional film, and New York the unusual city. The [illegible] production could probably secure the higher scale in any city, at least for a limited period, while New York may be trained to pay higher prices for any entertainment it considers above the ordinary. "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] the future outcome of these [illegible] higher prices must come [illegible] of competition with the [illegible] feature programmes that are being shown at the lower prices.

But the answer of the medium sized cities will tell the tale—and time alone can give the answer. The kaleidoscopic rapidity with which conditions change in the picture field should be enough to deter any daring one who feels tempted to offer a prophecy. "Change alone is eternal," says the philosopher, and, in the picture field, "sufficeint unto the day is the fruit thereof, for the next few minutes may prove you either a wise man or a fool." If you must talk of the future, confine your remarks to centuries—because—like the poor—censorship shall have with us always.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
AUG. 25, 1915

'BIRTH OF NATION' OPENS AT OLYMPIC ON SUNDAY NIGHT

Mabel Wilber and Louise Allen Return to Park Company Next Week in "Follies of St. Louis," a Musical Review—Other Theatrical News.

The engagement of D. W. Griffith's motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will begin Sunday evening, for five weeks, at the Olympic Theater. This is the production which is still making a record run of over [illegible] performances in New York, where it created one of the sensations of the season. It is estimated that more than 2,000,000 people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the East. It has other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

Mr. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful story. He employed 18,000 people and 3000 horses and the total cost of the work reached half a million dollars. The story is one of romance and adventure linked to the most vital periods of American history. It records facts and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. Love and conflict are its basic theme, but a myriad of details illumine the narrative. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. An orchestra of 40 travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation.

Date St. Louis Times 8-26-15

BIRTH OF NATION TO OPEN SUNDAY

Next Week Will See Most of Theaters Starting Out on Winter Season Runs.

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward D. W. Griffith's new art of musical spectacle, will open an engagement of five weeks at the Olympic Theater Sunday night. The first half of the picture exhibits the salient events of the Civil War, which came to a close at Appomattox just 50 years ago. Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march, the Battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the awful tragedy at Ford's Theater live before the spectator of the Griffith drama.

In the second half the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpetbagging regime, is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of "the little Confederate Colonel," Ben Cameron with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist Captain, Phil Stoneman with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love interest throughout the story. The fun and frolic of plantations days, as well as the heartache and pathos of the stricken South, are shown.

The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Great battle scenes and the rides of the clan are staged with thousands of participants. There are 5,000 scenes in the spectacle, and (it is estimated) no less than 200,000 interesting historical details. On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempts something previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearance of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This instrumental music is played by a large orchestra.

Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatric cast ever assembled may be mentioned Joseph Henabery as President Lincoln; Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye as Gens. Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron, Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Miriam Cooper as the quartet of lovers, Mary Alden as Congressman Stoneman, Raymond Wells Atkins and [illegible] Dixon as Wade Allen and [illegible] Cameron.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN
AUG. 26, 1915

"The Clansman" Picture to Play Second Week

"The Birth of a Nation," or, The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's screen masterpiece, [illegible] duplicating its former success at the Cort Theater, where capacity houses are the rule at the matinee and evening performances.

Next Sunday starts the second and final week of the engagement, for the famous staged presentation of "The New Henrietta," with its all-star cast, including William H. Crane, Thomas W. Ross, Maclyn Arbuckle, Amelia Bingham and Mabel Taliaferro, is due at the Cort beginning Monday, September 6.

"The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," but Griffith has developed the theme of the book in extraordinary fashion.

[illegible]

CLIPPING FROM Bulletin
Date San Francisco 8-26-15

AUG. 26, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

NIXON.

The magnitude of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" which opens the regular season at the Nixon theater next Wednesday night, is almost appalling, at least to the devotees of the older theater. Where now are the little group of actors, the pinch back scenery and the petty properties of the so-called "legitimate" drama? By comparison with the new art, the "legitimate" is infinitesimal. For Griffith, in staging "The Birth of a Nation," used nature for his background, 150 years of American history as his subject, 18,000 people as his actors, and no less than 3,000 mounts of cavalry in the celebrated "rides" of the Ku Klux Klan. After it was all completed, he had an operatic score prepared and provided orchestral music worthy of Wagner.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Three hundred deaths are the lot of Miss Mae Marsh, who plays "Little Flora" in "The Birth of a Nation." She has already made that character almost as famous as "Little Eva" in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," and the extraordinary death scene has been the talk of picture experts the country over.

In David W. Griffith's first play in which Miss Mae was employed as an extra, she was supposed to die. She did this so realistically and displayed such wonderful ability for the work that in almost every picture in which she has played since she has died a tragic death.

In "The Birth of a Nation" as "Little Flora" she plunges to her death over a cliff.

"I have died so many times before the camera" said Miss Marsh, "that I am getting used to it and really enjoy the experience. When I die, I believe I have all the emotions of a person who is actually on a death bed. I try to imagine I am talking to the character I represent instead of merely playing the part. This makes it seem real to me. After I do a death scene I feel bad for a short time. Then it strikes me so funny that I really have to laugh when it is all over."

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

Date AUG 28 1915

With the inauguration of a season of "star stock" on Monday, the historic Walnut will be the first of the "downtown" houses to welcome the new dramatic season. The opening attraction will be "Fine Feathers," with Robert Edeson as the visiting star. The Globe will return to vaudeville after a summer season of pictures. On Saturday evening at the Forrest D. W. Griffith's photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will have its first local showing. Keith's bill will be headed by Victor Morley, and attractive vaudeville programs are announced at the Grand, Cross Keys and Woodside Theatres. At the Stanley the early week feature will be Hazel Dawn in her latest screen part, "The Heart of Jennifer." Film dramas of merit are listed at the Palace, where "The Secret Orchard" will be shown and at the Arcadia. A new series of Lyman H. Howe's Travel Pictures will be shown at the Garrick. Burlesque will be on view at the Trocadero, Gayety and Casino.

Robert Edeson in the flesh and not in a motion picture will inaugurate the "star stock" season at the Walnut on Monday evening, in the play in which he starred last season at the Garrick, "Fine Feathers." Mr. Edeson will appear for one week, and it is promised will be followed each week by players of equal reputation and ability. The supporting company will be a permanent stock company, including Constance Mollineaux, a former leading lady of the Orpheum Players here; William Slider, former leading man with Leslie Carter and also a former stock favorite; Bernard Steele and Maude Blair, members of the Orpheum Players; Henrietta Vaders, Cecil Lugrin and others. The company has been rehearsed by Mr. Edeson personally this week, and he is reported to be enthusiastic over the work of the members. A special scenic production, it is stated, has been built, duplicating the original, so that considering the star, the company, and the scenery, the production, it is promised, will be a "two dollar" one in every particular except the scale of prices, which will be moderate. Throughout the season there will be a matinee every day at prices about one-half the evening scale. The play "Fine Feathers" is one of the most successful in which Mr. Edeson has appeared. It is well constructed, full of tense situations, and aside from its entertaining features, points a moral. The week after next, following Mr. Edeson, will come Emma Dunn, the star of "The Governor's Lady," "Mother" and Sinners," in "The Governor's Lady." Succeeding stars, it is promised, will be just as prominent.

D. W. GRIFFITH'S film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will begin an engagement at the Forrest on Saturday evening. Following the local premiere there will be performances twice daily at 2.15 and 8.15 P. M. "The Birth of a Nation" has entered its seventh month at the Liberty Theatre, New York, where it has been the sensation of the theatrical world. In addition, it has record-breaking engagements to its credit now under way in Chicago and Boston as well as at other places. Mr. Griffith has aimed to present a new form of expression in this creation, combining the arts of music, drama and the cinematograph. The story is said to have the sweep and power of an epic. Basically the narrative unfolds various vital periods of American history. It begins with the advent of slavery as an issue in American politics, and then in ordered sequence it traverses the pages of history, reinforcing the interest of actual recorded deeds by lending the force of romance to their enlargement. By this device Mr. Griffith, it is said, illumines the pages of history and makes them live again before the vision. To supplement the pictorial appeal there has been provided a musical score which it is said brings an added charm to the narrative. In all, over 18,000 people were utilized to give life to the changing scenes, and 3,000 horses mounted by daring [illegible] dash of effectiveness in portions of the production. By way of vital contrasts there are moments in the action when are on view great battles in which tens of thousands of men and horses are participants, and the next instant the scene shifts to a maiden's boudoir and a teardrop glistens on the cheek of a young girl given over to silent of a young girl given over to silent contemplation of love. Bigness and care for the smallest of details are Mr. Grimth's forces of effectiveness. There has been some opposition in the presentation on the part of those who have misunderstood its purposes and its appeal, but it has passed careful scrutiny and has been given the seal of official approval.

Previous to her appearance in "The Heart of Jennifer," to be presented at the Stanley, the first half of next week, Hazel Dawn had appeared three times on the screen, in three distinct types of impersonation, each time adding appreciatly to her rapidly growing number of admirers. But in "The Heart of Jennifer" she is said to combine the qualities that distinguished each of her former creations, so that this role, it is predicted, will be her most complete screen success to date. The plot of the five-part feature from the pen of Edith Barnard Delano is described as novel and compelling. Miss Dawn, appearing in the title role of Jennifer, interprets the character, it is said, with evident understanding of its possibilities. James Kirkwood directed the production and appears as Miss Dawn's leading support. Russell Bassett as her father, and Irene Howley, as the sister of her husband, are also prominent. "The Incorrigible Dukane," described as a combination of drama, comedy and romance, announced for Thursday, Friday and Saturday, provides John Barrymore, it is said, with one of the most unusual characterizations he has yet impersonated on the screen.

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECORD
AUG. 26, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE BROADWAY NEXT WEEK

Scene in Piedmont, S. C., "The Birth of a Nation."

It is a well-known fact that lovers of photo-plays have their favorites among the actors in the cast, and rave over their cleverness and personal charm as ardently as if they were before them on the legitimate stage in actual flesh and blood.

Mae Marsh, who plays Flora Cameron, the little pet sister in the Southern household in "The Birth of a Nation," by her successful appearance in many photo plays during her three years before the camera, has attracted a host of admirers who greet with pleasure the appearance of her elf-like face on the screen.

Miss Marsh has many bits of fine acting in the picture. Among the most delightful are the welcoming of her brother back from the war, the making of "Southern Ermine" with raw cotton and chimney black, for the glad occasion; the scene in the cellar with her mother and sister when the guerilla troops raid the little town of Piedmont; the garden making that follows the return from the war; and the pretty scene where she rains kisses on her brother Ben's mouth to console him for the temporary loss of his sweetheart Elsie.

There is also a touch of comedy or of pathos where Miss Marsh appears. Her personality lends itself to fine temperamental treatment of any part she plays. Her expressive, ever-changing, mood-adapting face is one of the most valuable in the whole list of film favorites. She reminds a great many of our Lotta of other days, both in facial resemblance and in her method of work.

EUGENE (Or.) GUARD
AUG. 27, 1915

AMUSEMENTS

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

[illegible] The Birth [illegible] Being [illegible] James O. Clemmer, mgr. [illegible] for a motion picture in the [illegible] according to James O. Clemmer. He saw the picture in Los Angeles on a recent visit and was so impressed that he determined to bring it north, regardless of expense. [illegible] 29. This film employed 18,000 people and 3000 horses.

AUG. 26, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE

THOUSANDS ACT IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

The magnitude of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," which is announced to open the regular season at the Nixon Theater, September 1, is almost appalling, at least to the devotees of the older theater. Griffith in staging "The Birth of a Nation," used nature for his background, 150 years of American history as his subject, 18,000 people as his actors, and no less than 3,000 mounts of cavalry in the celebrated "rides" of the Ku Klux Klan. After it was all completed he had an operatic score prepared and provided orchestral music worthy of Wagner.

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECORD
AUG. 27, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" AT THE BROADWAY NEXT WEEK

The striking figure in D. W. Griffith's wonderful photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation" is Hon. Austin Stoneman, the leader of the house, the rabid Abolitionist, who may or may not be entirely sincere in his views, and who, for the purpose of the play, is made its villian.

He first comes into prominence and his true character is indicated in an interview with Lincoln, the martyred President, when, as leader of the House, he objects to the President's policy of pacification of the rebel states, and threatens to throw his influence against such a policy.

We next see him receiving the news of the assassination of Lincoln, and his face expresses the sorrow that he, in common with the nation feels at the tragedy, an expression that quickly changes to one of elation at the thought of the advance in political prestige the death of the President means to him.

Our next view of him shows him in the height of his power, in charge of reconstruction measures and having succeeded in making a mulatto Governor of South Carolina. But the natural result of his policy comes to him in a way that makes it appear forcible. The mulatto governor has fallen in love with Stoneman's daughter, she repulses him, and he goes to her father. Is not sauce for the goose sauce for the gander? He has been preaching the equality of the race but when the test comes, when his own daughter's happiness is involved, the matter is brought home to him, and sees things in different light. The mulatto's true character is revealed to him through the violence to which he is subjected and at the end we see him as a broken man whose ideals have disappeared in stern realities.

CLIPPING FROM
BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES

Date ..... Date .....

AUG 28 1915

"The Birth of a Nation."

That arrangements may be made with the Board of Education to enable the school children of the borough to see the play and also for the accommodation of the thousands of Brooklynites returning from their vacations, William H. Kemble, managing director of the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where D. W. Griffiths $500,000 spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is being presented, decided to keep the playhouse open until October 4.

It was the original intention of the management to give the last performance of "The Birth of a Nation" on Labor Day. Educators, veterans of the Civil War and officers of historical societies urged Mr. Kemble to continue to present the play until school opened that arrangements might be made to have the pupils of the public and the parochial schools see it.

The heads of several private Brooklyn institutions wrote Mr. Kemble advising that he keep the Brighton Beach Music Hall open until after the schools began their sessions that they might take their classes to see it in a body for its educational as well as entertaining value.

"The Birth of a Nation" has attracted the attention of educators and historians because it is a complete history of the Civil War period. It pictures the blessings of peace, the horrors of war and the famous reconstruction period through which the South passed after the conflict.

Strikingly realistic are the reproduction of the assassination of President Lincoln, Lee surrendering to Grant, Sherman's march to the sea, the Federal and the Confederate armies struggling on the battlefield, and 5,000 scenes in which more than 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses participated.

[illegible] matic work, and Suzanne [illegible] son makes herself a beautiful girl in most artistic manner.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

A development no one would have believed possible a few years ago is seen in the establishment of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" as a first class theatrical attraction which has been crowding the houses all over the country at "two-dollar top" prices.

"The Birth of a Nation" which will be shown at the Keith theatre, week of Aug. 30, is indeed more than a film, for nearly one hundred persons are employed in the music and the mechanical effects during the unreeling of this 12,000 feet of celluloid; yet never a word is spoken from the stage during the two and three quarters' hours performance. Mr. Griffith's photo-entertainment combines a picturial survey of Civil War history and of reconstruction days with a love romance of the North and South. The battle scenes, engaging thousands of combatant, drilled with the well known Griffith elan and realism, are particularly effective.

After seeing this marvellous production, many students of the subject predict that the historical novels of the future will be told in pictures rather than words. Certainly the "Indoor drama" cannot henceforth hope to cope with the photo play, so far as spectacular features are concerned.

[illegible] (Pa.) LEADER
AUG. 27, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" IS BIG SPECTACLE

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is decidedly the most remarkable historical spectacle ever presented in America. It will open at the Nixon Wednesday night, September 1. Petersburg and Atlanta, Appomattox and Ford's theater, the foothills of South Carolina and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan live again in Mr. Griffith's 12,000 feet of superb motion pictures, which took eight months to produce, cost $500,000, employed 18,000 people and 3,000 horses. The great spectacle is an epitome of scenes, incidents, characters, passions and emotions of the whole great period from 1861 to 1870—the period occupied by the Civil war and reconstruction. Suggested by Tohmas Dixon's "The Clanaman" and "The Leopard's Spots," it has a grandly epical quality of its own which stamps it as a masterpiece of genius. Mail orders are now being received; the seat [illegible] Sunday morning at the [illegible]

CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK PRESS

Date .....

[illegible] for a week in the Savoy at Asbury Park, "The Birth of a Nation" has broken its own [illegible] The house was completely sold out on Thursday for both afternoon and evening performances, and when it was decided to hold special morning performances yesterday and to-day the seats were all gone in a few hours.

SPRINGFIELD (Vt.) REPORTER
AUG. 27, 1915

[illegible] of the fine and costs imposed by the court both were committed to the county jail for a term of 10 days.

"The Birth of a Nation"

H. S. Davis of Cavendish, the manager of the Orpheum Motion Picture company that exhibited in our [illegible] hall so many times in the past, has secured the much-talked of production "The Birth of a Nation" and will run it for a week in the Shrine theatre at Rutland and from there take the show to Windsor. There are [illegible] restrictions upon it preventing it from being exhibited at a moving picture [illegible] and it can only be given in a [illegible] that takes only road shows. [illegible] great production is now [illegible] the Tremont theatre in Boston [illegible] it has packed the house [illegible] six months [illegible] cents to [illegible]

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
AUG. 27, 191

...eat Experts Arrange ...irth of a Nation" Seats

...rts responsible for the ...s of "The Birth of a Na... ...ting at the Liberty Theat... ...rk, arrived in St. Louis yes... ...ternoon and started work at ...pic Theater. The same scien... ...thods will be used in "The Birth ...ation" engagement here. To the ... of the Olympic orchestra stalls ...ons are laying a concrete base, ...ove which steel workers will build a ...t framework for the picture booth, ... assuring the picture machines' ...fect rigidity and steadiness. The ...erts have measured to fractions of ...inch the exact distance required for ...rfect focussing. They have likewise ...lected by means of eye-tests those ...cations in the house which will af... ...rd an optometrically perfect view of ...e film spectacle. Such seats are in ...e center and rear of the ground ...or and command $2 prices. Never ...fore in the history of the theater ...s minute scientific adjustment of ...is sort been attempted. Its com... ...ete success in New York shows the ...rvelous progress of picturized ...ama from the status of a toy to the ...stance of an art.

A great deal of film comedy is horse... ...y, but in "The Birth of a Nation," ... W. Griffith proves that quiet, re... ...ed comedy is a big laugh maker and ...ages people better than the old ...le crude methods.

One of the best laughs in "The Birth ... a Nation" is the lovesick sentry in ...e hospital scene gazing at Elsie ...nman. This particular bit is of ...e "sure fire" order, for never does an ...dience miss the rapt devotion of the ...tinel and the haughty expression of ...e young lady rebuking him with a ...illion-miles-away look. Paul LeBlanc ... the name of the young actor who ...s made the unexpected hit in the ...rt. He is a New Orleans creole by birth and played comedy roles with Bernhardt before going to Los Angeles where Mr. Griffith discovered him. The costuming of the young soldier is wonderfully accurate to the period of 1864.

Miss Lillian Gish wears her costume of Civil War and Reconstruction times that are heirlooms in her family. Through Griffith's skill it is said all the actors in the production are made to appear as if to the manner born and not awkwardly moving about in habiliments to which they are unaccustomed.

"Devoted Sentry" scene in which Lillian Gish and Paul Le Blanc are featured.

Ottawa (Can.) Press
Date 8-27-15

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

This is one of the 5,000 pictures which figure in "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's half million dollar screen drama which will constitute the Night Shows before the grand stand at the coming Ottawa Exhibition.

Abraham Lincoln (seated in the right) has just been shot by John Wilkes Booth, fanatical son of Booth, the great actor. The assassin is seen escaping. The prime donna rushed from the stage and was the first to bring assistance to the martyred president. He was removed to a house across the street and died in a few hours. Booth broke his leg on leaping to the stage but managed to reach a horse which was waiting for him at the stage entrance. He was tracked to a barn and was shot down resisting the soldiers.

Such an end had been expected by Lincoln for he had a drawer labelled, "assassin's letters." On the fatal night, April 14, 1865, he was attending a performance in Ford's theatre, Washington, held to celebrate the fall of Richmond, the end of the Civil War.

The Birth of a Nation abounds in such thrilling historical incidents connected with the reconstruction of the United States. The producer, Griffith has no rival in motion picture achievement and this is his masterpiece. It will be a long remembered attraction in Ottawa.

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECORD
AUG. 28, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

Lincoln Signing Call for Troops in "The Birth of a Nation."

Quite the most prominent figure in Part 1 of "The Birth of a Nation" coming to the Broadway, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, is that of Abraham Lincoln, the martyred President, overshadowing Austin Stoneman, the rabid Abolitionist and plotter. And it is a faithful portrait of the "rail-splitter" that one sees on the screen. The homely but kindly features are there and the tall, stooping form so familiar to readers of fifty years ago, and since.

History has been drawn upon for incident, and in the photo play he is seen in characteristic poses and engaged in kindly deeds. Here he is signing a pardon for the young Southern soldier condemned as a guerilla spy, and making glad the heart of the aged mother who has not pleaded in vain for the life of her boy; and again he is defending his policy as to the conquered South, a policy too humane for the revenegeful Stoneman. Last of all he is seen stricken to death at the moment of his great triumph, his noble head laid low by the bullet of the assassin. Were "The Birth of a Nation" to end with the ... Lincoln, its fame as a wo... would be secure, but it carries forward to the logical end the fateful story of the republic during the dark days that followed the death of Lincoln, and the failure to carry out his policy of clemency for the South. And so the great character influences the events of later days; when the folly of secession is realized and when wiser counsels prevail. "The Birth of a Nation" is and must of necessity have been the story of President Lincoln.

Not a little of the successful portrayal of the part of the President by Joseph Henabery is due to the apparent reverence with which the actor approaches his work. Lincoln was a kindly man, but far from being of morose disposition; but that part of his career with which the photoplay deals was saddened by the war and its awful sacrifices. Wonderful as is the actor's makeup which results in a portrait the counterpart of which still looks down from the walls of many an humble home in New England, more wonderful is the facial expression that indicates so surely what is going on in the mind of the great liberator. It is a tri...ph of the ac... tor's art.

...TLAND (Me.) ARGUS
AUG. 27, 191

AMUSEMENTS.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the most remarkable attraction of recent years in American stage annals. It uses 18,000 people to tell its story and 3,000 horses add their quota to its bigness. The epic links history and romance in a way never attempted before. Its basic scenes are founded in some of the most stirring events in the nation's developments and these are contrasted with human appeals and family interests which are after all the essentials of true drama. Great battles of the Civil War are fought before your eyes. Lee surrenders to Grant at Appomattox. Lincoln is assassinated as actually as the scene took place fifty years ago in Ford's Theatre, Washington. The South both before and after the war is pictured in its most interesting phases. Wild rides of the clansmen lend a dash and spirit to the performances. All remains exactly as it was given originally in New York City and Boston when this marvelous picture astounded the city and created more comment than all the plays that have been seen here in a decade.

There will be two performances daily at the Keith Theatre of "The Birth of a Nation." Matinees at 2, evenings at 8.

LOUIS (Mo.) STAR
AUG. 28, 1915

"Birth of a Nation," Olympic, Tomorrow; ~~Blanche Walsh in War Skit at Col~~

Olympic and Columbia Open Downtown Theatrical Season; the Park Offers New Company in Follies of St. Louis, a Musical Comedy; New Grand Central Will Have Theda Bara in "Lady Audley's Secret" —Other Programs Are Given.

BY KATHERINE RICHARDSON.

The Olympic Theater opens tomorrow night with the long-heralded "The Birth of a Nation," the 12-motion picture film. The Columbia Theater opens Monday matinee with Blanche Walsh in a war skit.

There will be daily matinees at both houses.

The prices at the Olympic at night and Saturday afternoons will be 25 cents to $2, and at all other matinees, including Sunday, the scale of 25 cents to $1 will prevail. These prices are the same as are being charged in New York, Boston and Chicago, where "The Birth of a Nation" has runs to its credit that eclipse the career of "Ben Hur." Theaters have been leased in both Chicago and New York to continue the run for at least one year more.

"The Birth of a Nation" covers a wide range of American history and touches only the highest points of interest in the great events that led up to and terminated the Civil War. The force that slavery played in producing this crisis is traced from its inception to its abolition.

Where directors of vast spectacles have dealt with hundreds in the past, Griffith employs thousands. Eighteen thousand people fill his stage which has a vast territory for its background. Three thousand horses pass before the view in wild dashes over miles of country roadway. The decisive battles of the Civil War are reproduced in faithful detail.

RIDE of the KU KLUX KLAN in "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"... Olympic

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

Date ..... G 28 1915 .....

SCENE in "THE BIRTH of a NATION" FORREST

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," continues to be the principal attraction of the summer season in the local theatres. The current week is the twenty-seventh consecutive one in the Liberty Theatre, and it is booked to remain there indefinitely. The run in Greater New York will reach the 488th performance at the end of the week. The great battle scenes, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, the wild rides of the Klansmen, and the comprehensive manner in which the spectacle covers the most vital points of American history are the influences which keep the interest alive in this wonderful work.

CHICAGO (Ill.) DAILY NEWS
AUG. 28, 1915

observation of the [illegible] The performance is continuous from 1 to 11 p. m.

"Birth of Nation's" Begins Week.

To-morrow "The Birth of a Nation" begins its second week at the Colonial theater, which has been redecorated and renovated. It is announced that the D. W. Griffith war spectacle finishes to-day the most prosperous week since the beginning of its run in Chicago last May. This growth of business occurred despite the fact that the play was shifted last week from the Illinois theater, and such a change is not always beneficial to an attraction during its run.

FALL RIVER (Mass.) HERALD
AUG. 28, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

The splendid advance sale of tickets at the Savoy for "The Birth of a Nation" already assures the management that the presentation of the production here is going to prove a great success and that the Fall River public appreciate its showing here while it is still in tremendous demand in the largest cities all over the country.

Tremendous publicity has been given "The Birth of a Nation" for more than a year now, and with the presentation of the picture in each separate town there always arises the question as to whether so much publicity has not grown monotonous, whether or not the people of that particular town, although they have not seen the picture, will not think that they are going to something not quite up-to-date and turn their attention to some more recent production, even though it be less notable.

Such has not proven the case in Fall River. A bigger advance sale could not be desired. "The Birth of a Nation" is holding its own and each day claiming new admirers. The probability is that it is so essentially an American classic that it will live forever. A man who saw the production twice in Boston said last night: "I would gladly pay $10 to see "The Birth of a Nation" if I thought it was my last chance. It puts before my eyes the incidents of United States history which have interested me most ever since my first glance into my school books. It shows me war more vividly than ever I imagined it. The Klu Klux Klan becomes a living, terrible factor in the story of my country. The great men of those days become living, breathing realities to me. There runs through it all the romance which I have always associated with the South, and, generally speaking, I see as a reality the incidents which at best I have never been fully able to imagine."

"Sell out the Savoy?" he replied to a question. "The Savoy will be sold out every afternoon and evening, mark my words. You say it is going to be the full production? It will prove the biggest boost for the Savoy in a decade."

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
AUG. 28, 1915

A PRIVATE WAR MADE TO ORDER

When David W. Griffith started the outdoor staging of the Civil War and Reconstruction scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," which enters upon the last two weeks of its engagement at the New Nixon after an all summer run, he was confronted with seemingly insuperable difficulties. An area of private war was required about as large as the corner of Belgium occupied by the Anglo-French forces. Thousands of cavalrymen had to be shown in an historic raid of the North Carolina clans. Their run was to be over many, many miles of typical Southern sandy roads. Though an acknowledged wizard of the films, Mr. Griffith is not a "war lord" with power to commandeer.

In this emergency, the county authorities of "The Birth of a Nation" producing locale were applied for. They finally consented to mark off an area of ten square miles for the use of the horsemen. Along all the roads within this area, the county commissioners posted notices forbidding all traffic on "the day of days."

Pedestrians were also warned off. But the roads themselves did not look Southern. David Griffith handled this difficulty—with the authorities' permission—by remaking such of the highways as would come within the camera's eye. Many tons of sand and gravel were spread by gangs of his workmen. Landscape engineering changed the look of the landscape to the rounded hills, piney woods and deep gullies of old North State, the race of the Northern clansmen to rescue their South Carolina brethren took place on the appointed day without an accident or flaw.

After it was over, Mr. Griffith's men scraped the sand off the macadam roads took down the signs, and life in the sleepy countryside resumed its normal course. It cost about [illegible] to do the [illegible]

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) SENTINEL
AUG. 28, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TO REACH FINALS SATURDAY

Joseph Santley in "All Over Town" Opens Week at Davidson Sunday Night.

The final performances of "The Birth of a Nation" are listed at the Davidson theater Saturday afternoon and night.

With the last presentation Saturday night, the engagement of eight weeks comes to a close. During that time, 114 consecutive performances of this film have been given, which is a record for a theatrical performance in this city and for a photoplay as well. All of these presentations were regular performances with the exception of the first night, when a private run of the twelve reels was given for the entertainment of the Milwaukee Press club and guests of Manager Sherman Brown, when the film was viewed for censorship.

Date ..... Daily News Chicago (Ill.) 8-28-15

MISS LILLIAN GISH.

A FILM ACTRESS IN A TIONAL CLIMAX IN "TH OF A NATION" AT THE STORMING THE TRENCHES.

In "The Birth of a Nation" at the Savoy Theater Next Week

He plays but an insignificant part in "The Birth of a Nation," yet he always gets a laugh. His role is of so little importance that this name does not appear on the program. In fact, he is more than suspected of "doubling up" in later scenes than the one in which his appearance causes merriment. He says nothing, of course, and his sole claim to fame in this story is a look.

He is one of Uncle Sam's soldiers, a private, acting as sentry at the entrance to the room in the Washington Military hospital, where Col. Ben Cameron, the wounded prisoner, is lying in an apparently dying condition; and the look referred to is the one he bestows upon Elsie Stoneman as she enters and leaves the room. It is the same look each time, and is composed of an expression, silly and sheepish in itself, that indicates admiration of one in a lower grade of society for one far above him. Yet, there is no humility about it, and his admiration is openly expressed when he is face to face with its object.

Of course, his sickly smile meets with the only possible response from a girl in Miss Elsie's standing—a decided snub, but he is not at all abashed. The smile is one of those that "won't come off" as long as the lady is in sight, and it is the last discernable feature of the picture as it fades away. The whole scene is indescribably funny and forms an important addition to the small stock of comedy contained in Mr. Griffith's wonderful photoplay.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

AUG 28 1915

late Sir Henry Irving, has been wooed and won by the silent drama after innumerable unsuccessful attempts. He will take the part of Eccles in "Caste."

* * *

FF Tom E. Davies, who has just become associated in the West with the new Griffith-Sennett-Ince combination and who is in business upon this side with the Western Import Company, returned this week from New York. He has brought along with him an advance copy of Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," for the trade show next week. Arthur Northam, the sales manager of the London Film Company, also stepped ashore after a business visit to his company's American agency, the Cosmopolitan Company of New York.

J. B. SUTCLIFFE.

AUG. 28, 1915
TSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

Ku Klux Klan on Film

[illegible] which [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] the Nixon next Wednesday night. [illegible] organized on a secret basis in the state of Tennessee in May, 1866. The title was taken from the Greek word Kuklos, meaning circle. The third word, Klan, was added by the members who were in a large percentage descended from the Scotch who settled in old Virginia. In subsequent years when the Klan went forth to put down the depredations who deserted down from the north to grab everything in sight in the south the riders adopted the emblem of the fiery cross which the Scotch Highlanders had long used as a call to battle in the early days of wars in their native land.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS (New York City)

AUG 28 1915

WANTED TO PASS SPECIAL ORDINANCE TO BAR "NATION" FROM TACOMA; COUNCIL DEFEATS PLAN

SEATTLE'S experience with "The Birth of a Nation" was uneventful. Spokane's developed no small measure of excitement, but Tacoma's promises to be decidedly warm.

The picture, still running in Spokane and calling forth daily protests from colored congregations and prompting "Vox Populi" and "Constant Reader" to send countless letters to the newspapers, is being sought by Manager Charles Heraldn, of the Tacoma theatre in Tacoma.

As soon as it became known that the booking was being considered, Colonel A. E. Joab and others drafted and presented to the city council an ordinance forbidding the exhibition of moving pictures that "tend to excite race prejudice."

The backers of the ordinance admitted that it was intended chiefly to keep "The Birth of a Nation" out of their city.

The members of the city council took none too kindly to the proposal. City Commissioner Owen Woods expressed the opinion of many present at the hearing when he remarked:

"We ought to pass this ordinance, just to sustain Tacoma's reputation as a freak town."

Tacoma already is widely known for an ordinance passed a year or two, forbidding any person to buy a drink for any other person.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

AUG 28 1915

Glynn.

REPORTED SALE OF "CLANSMAN" RIGHTS.

FF It has been rumored around Boston that the New England rights to "The Birth of a Nation" have been sold for the sum of $52,000. This sum is probably the largest ever paid for the New England rights to a single moving picture production. Interested persons are said to be Coleman Levin, William Mann of Boston, Samuel D. Kerr of Salem and Louis B. Mayer of Haverhill. It is stated the film will be shown in all New England cities, including Providence, R. I., where it was once rejected. It has been stated that the censoring authorities of that city are now willing to allow the film to be produced there. It will not be even subject to the expurgations which were ordered when it played the Tremont theater, Boston. It closed its Boston run on August 21.

Motion Picture News
Date .....

AUG 28 1915

"NATION" TOUCHES 400 MARK IN NEW YORK CITY

FF With the passing of the old theatrical season last week D. W. Griffith's great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" established the year's record run for continued performances. On Friday night the 400 presentation in New York City was reached.

The new season starts this week with the big production remaining one of the most talked of attractions on the list. This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty theatre. There are so many elements of appeal in Griffith's epical treatment of the subject that it looks as if it will establish the record for all offerings in New York.

The linking of history and romance and the wealth of detail crowded into the production are qualities which assist in making this offering so popular.

Evening Star
Date Aug 28 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATION' TO START OLYMPIC SEASON ON SUNDAY

Mabel Wilson and Louise Allen Rogers in Park "Frolics" Monday Night—Bert Vaughan at Grand Opera House in Other Bills.

The opening of the Olympic Honeymoon, with D. W. Griffith's photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" and the arrival of Bert Vaughan at the Columbia on Monday, will see the 1915 vaudeville season in full swing. The other two theaters, the Gayety and the Academy, will open by Tuesday, the first production at the former to be Jerome Hastley in "All Over Town."

AUG 28 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" PASSES FOUR HUNDREDTH PRESENTATION

FF With the passing of the old theatrical season last week, D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," established the year's record for continued performances. On Friday night the four hundredth presentation in New York City was reached.

The new season starts this week with the big production remaining one of the most talked of attractions on the list. This starts the twenty-seventh week of the engagement at the Liberty theater. There are so many elements of appeal in Griffith's epical treatment of the subject that it looks as if it will establish the record for all offerings in New York before its run is terminated.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS (New York City)

AUG 28 1915

FF Work of producing "The Fall of a Nation," a sequel to "The Birth of a Nation," will begin within a few days on the Pacific Coast. It will be made by the National Drama Corporation, of which Thomas Dixon is the director general. Mr. Dixon will be placed in film circles as the author of "The Clansman," the book which inspired "The Birth of a Nation."

"The Fall of a Nation" will deal with the invasion of America by foreign powers, a subject fertile in spectacular possibilities.

The present plan is to have five or six directors collaborate on the work of producing the picture. If this multitude of cooks can concoct a whole as good as "The Birth of a Nation" great will be the success thereof.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 28, 1915

Nixon—"The Birth of the Nation."

David W. Griffith's extraordinary achievement with his great spectacle, "The Birth of the Nation," is announced for the opening of the regular theatrical season at the Nixon on Wednesday night, September 1. In this photodrama he has touched the high peaks of American history—slavery, the War of Secession, the surrender of Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of reconstruction, and the reconciliation of the north and the south. These things, it would seem a year ago, were beyond the scope of the motion picture camera. But the master producer has successfully combined in 12,000 feet of celluloid a thrilling, consecutive presentation of national greatness with a vital and human love story. According to experts who have viewed the work, Griffith has not only surpassed in many ways the art of the "indoor theater," but he has also developed a new art-form far superior to the old-fashioned or historical novel. Eighteen thousand people were employed in taking the historical pictures. One sees Lincoln among his counsellors, issuing the call for troops, the battles of the conflict, Sherman's march, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appomattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the south in the throes of the change, the carpet-baggers' excesses, and the famous rides of the Ku Klux Klan.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

"The Melting Pot" continues at the Fine Arts theater.

* * *

Decorators and a large force of other workers began to prepare the Colonial theater for its reception of "The Birth of a Nation," early Monday morning, August 16. The big photoplay will be given its first presentation in the Colonial Sunday afternoon, August 22.

IPPING FROM
NEW YORK TRIBUNE

Date ..... AUG 29 19

"Birth of a Nation" Continues.

"The Birth of a Nation" begins its twenty-seventh week at the Liberty Theatre. By the end of the week the film will have been shown 125 times in greater New York. The battle scene, the assassination of President Lincoln, the rides of the Klansmen and the other bits of large scale production continue to interest large audiences.

Style

Evening Post
August 28 1915

PROSECUTOR SAYS HE'LL TRY TO STOP "BIRTH OF NATION"

He Will Issue Warrant Against Film Production Charging Conspiracy Against Morals.

Howard Sidener, Prosecuting Attorney, announced this afternoon that he would do everything in his power to prevent the film production, "The Birth of a Nation," which is scheduled to begin a five weeks' run at the Olympic Theater tomorrow night, at prices of 25 cents to $2 a seat.

He made this announcement after receiving protests from delegations of negroes, who said the play contained scenes which were unjust to the negro race, and tended to arouse race antagonism. The production has been stopped, on this ground, by the city authorities of Pittsburg, Pa., and of Springfield, Mass.

Sidener said that, if the management of the theater attempted to exhibit the film, he would issue a warrant charging them with conspiracy against the public morals. A new warrant will be issued for every time the production is repeated, he said. The management has advertised daily matinees.

Sidener said he had not seen "The Birth of a Nation," which has been running in New York and Boston for the last season, and in Chicago during the summer. He was satisfied, he said, that the complaints against it were well founded. The play is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," which portrayed the methods usd in the South, after the war, to deprive the negroes of political power.

The first part of the play shows Civil War scenes, ending in the assassination of President Lincoln. No objection has been made to this part and Sidener said he offered to let the first part be shown, if the later scenes, to which the negroes object, were omitted. The theater management replied that no omissions would be made.

The latter scenes of the play, Sidener said, were, in his opinion, calculated to incite disturbances of the peace, and did not represent the character of the negro of today. He said that as a peace officer, he felt obliged to act on the negroe's protests, which, he said, were seconded by a committee from the Civic League. He has asked the Police Department to have men at the Olympic tomorrow night, to make arrests if the performance is attempted.

OTTAWA (Can.) CITIZEN
AUG. 28, 1915

NIGHT ATTRACTION FOR OTTAWA EXHIBITION

Scene from Spectacular Motion Picture.

This is a scene from "The Birth of a Nation," the famous motion picture of D. W. Griffith, which the Central Canada Exhibition Association has secured for the night shows before the grand stand, at the coming Ottawa fair. The screen drama traces the reconstruction of the United States during and after the Civil War over slavery. In the picture, Austin Stoneman is visiting Abraham Lincoln after the South has been subdued. It seemed to Stoneman that Lincoln was pursuing too mild a policy with the prostrate people which had just been vanquished. Stoneman has just asked that the leaders be hanged and measures of reprisal taken.

"I shall treat them as if they had never been away," is the answer of Lincoln, called "The Great Heart" of the time.

In the 5,000 photographs, which cost half a million dollars, there are many such historic and intensely dramatic scenes.—(Advt.)

NEW YORK WORLD
Date AUG

offering [illegible] Scouts in [illegible]

BRIGHTON BEACH. [illegible] arrangements [illegible] with the Board of Education [illegible] schools children to see the [illegible] the accommodation [illegible] of Brooklynites remaining [illegible] vacations. William H. [illegible] managing director of the [illegible] Beach Music Hall, where D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is being presented, has decided to keep the playhouse open until Oct. 9. It was the intention of the management to give the last performance Labor Day. Educators urged Mr. Kemble to continue to present the play until schol opened that arrangements might be made to have the pupils of the public and the parochial schools see it. The heads of several private Brooklyn institutions want to take their classes to see it in a body for its educational as well as entertaining value.

NEW YORK WORLD
AUG 9

CHICAGO (Ill.) JOURNAL
AUG. 28, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The Birth of a Nation," mightiest and in every respect the best of the motion picture spectacles, goes into its second week at the Colonial. The earlier reels of this amazing picture show Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender, the assassination of Lincoln and other war-time scenes on a scale of vastness and vividness new to motion pictures. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of the reconstruction period with its carpet-baggers and Ku-Klux-Klan. Through all this is woven a sentimental adventure between a soldier of the south and a woman of the north. Music points and heightens all the scenes.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

Date AUG 29 1915

Forrest—"Birth of a Nation."

D. W. Griffith's production, "The Birth of a Nation," is booked for the Forrest Theatre, where it begins the local engagement on Saturday night. Performances will be given twice daily thereafter, with matinees at 2.15 and the night presentations at 8.15.

"The Birth of a Nation" is now in its seventh month at the Liberty Theatre, New York. Simultaneous runs are credited to the Illinois Theatre, Chicago, and the Tremont Theatre, Boston.

In unfolding his narrative Griffith has utilized new plans of dramatic attack. He has linked romance and history in the appealing form of drama alive with its human interests. He has encompassed the centuries of our national growth in which the great slavery question had its birth, its failures and the final adjustment of the economic differences which had to be threshed out before either side of this historical dispute was able to recognize the great vital truths that lay behind the misunderstandings. Lincoln, Grant, Lee, Sherman, Sumner and individuals who were closely linked with those momentous days are but players in the scenes which this dramatist has utilized. Decisive battles are fought as they were fought in the days of the civil war. Cities are destroyed, Cabinet officers advise with Lincoln as to policies, statesmen meet in grave to plan secret campaigns, legislatures are shown in moments of tense gatherings, families are torn asunder by the call of war, lovers are separated. As one part of the nation is trying to rehabilitate itself you see the guiding hand of Lincoln snatched from the lever of control. Then come the days of doubts and misunderstandings and the final adjustment of the differences and the reunion and re-birth of the great Republic.

Griffith has handled the theme upon a big scale. There are times when his action ranges over ten square miles of territory, and in the next flash you see the interest focused upon a glimpse of ecstacy in the eye of a girl very much in love. Accompanying the entire action is an operatic score worked out in synchronization to each scene of the narrative. Each dominant character is pursued by a theme typical of his or her emotional relationship to the entire story.

PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH
AUG. 29, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

The first attraction of the season at the Nixon Theater, beginning Wednesday night, September 1, will be D W Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will last for five weeks with daily matinees. This is the great production which is still making a record run of over 600 performances in New York City, where it created the sensation of the season. It is estimated that over 2,000,000 people have seen the production since it was originally brought out in the East. It has other sensational runs in Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles to its credit.

Mr Griffith was eight months making this wonderful story. He employed 18,000 people and 3,000 horses and the total cost of the work reached the enormous figure of half a million dollars.

The story is one of romance and adventure linked to the most vital periods of American history. It records its tale with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. Love and conflict are the basic theme, but a myriad of details illumine the narrative and lift it so far beyond anything our stage has ever known that the usual avenues of comparison do not offer a road to follow in this instance. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. This wonderful score, which is synchronized to the drama, is in itself an incomparable work of art. An orchestra of 40 travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation.

That part of history dealing with the rise and fall of the slavery problem is the vital spark upon which Griffith has built his story. The conflict which this question caused is reproduced in great battles and in all the thrilling things which are a part of war.

IS (Mo.) TIMES
AUG. 28, 1915

ST. LOUIS' 'FOLLIES' WILL BE FEATURED AT PARK NEXT WEEK

Blanche Walsh Inaugurates the Vaudeville Season at Columbia Beginning Monday—Other Bills for the Coming Week.

The opening of the Olympic tomorrow, with D. W. Griffith's photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" and the arrival of Blanch Walsh at the Columbia on Monday, will set the 1915 winter theatrical season on a sound basis. The other two theaters, the Shubert and the American will open by Sept. 12; the first production at the former to be Joseph Santley in "All Over Town."

The two favorite Park stars, Mabel Wilber and Louise Allen will return to the Park cast on Monday night. The Shenandoah will open one week from Monday and the Players, the Park dramatic company will commence their season at the Park on the same night.

Both "Ben Hur" and "The Blue Bird," which heretofore have held the record for spectacular theatrical productions, are said to be surpassed, as far as they surpassed their predecessors, by "The Birth of a Nation," which opens a five-weeks' engagement at the Olympic Theater tomorrow night.

[illegible] during [illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation" entered upon its tenancy of the Colonial with a week of sweeping success. The change from Jackson Boulevard to Randolph street has but added fuel to the fire of flaming interest in this stirring spectacle, and Manager Howles divulges that the opening matinee Sunday tops all of his attendance records for that performance. The theatre, refreshed with paint and gilding and garnished with vine-covered trellises, seemed to beam with the general rejoicing. A half-dozen more hoop-skirted girls have been added to the usher corps, and a string band tinkles merrily in the lobby. The 'Ben-Hur- of the movies" can enter upon its thirteenth week Monday with no fear of ill luck.

Pittsburg Gazette Date 8-29-15 which may be reasonably expected to pack the Grand Opera house throughout its entire week.

NIXON—After more extensive and sensational publicity than has fallen to the lot of any other theatrical enterprise, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will mark the opening of the regular theatrical season at the Nixon theater on Wednesday night, September 1, for an engagement of five weeks. The first class metropolitan production is guaranteed to be the one shown here, carrying two baggage cars of equipment, a symphonic orchestra of musical experts, and a complete traveling organization of 50 people.

Many circumstances have conspired to make "The Birth of a Nation" the most widely discussed play in the world. Suggested by Thomas Dixon's southern novels, it embraces a far wider scope than "The Clansman" play. Mr. Griffith's new art covers 150 years of history and pictorializes the greatest events of the war between the states as well as those of reconstruction.

Lincoln, Lee and Grant; the early glories of the Confederacy; the devastation of General Sherman's march to the sea; the awful siege of Petersburg; the signing of peace at Appomattox; the assassination of the president in Ford's theater, and the succeeding orgy of hate and oppression of the South—these personages and incidents pass rapidly before the enthralled spectator and lead up to the terrific climaxes of Part II, which is devoted to what has been styled "the second struggle between the North and the South, a struggle caused by the attempt to impose carpetbagger rule upon the conquered states. The wild adventures and achievements of the Ku Klux Klan dominate the final scenes, which yield a happy ending of a double romance of Southern and Northern sweethearts.

Mr. Griffith's treatment of the magnificent theme is so much greater and grander than the original play that there can be no comparison. For example, he presents 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses instead of the tiny "armies" of the theatrical boards. He shows 5,000 scenes in place of four or five; far-flung battle lines of many, many miles, and Ku Klux "rides" right out in the open, which surpass in thrills any Vanderbilt cup race. Yet the individual acting is as fine and artistic as in a "short cast" drama, the work of Henry Walthall as the "Clansman" and of Mae Marsh as "Flora," in particular, rising to heights of genius.

Other marvels of the work are the 200,000 faithfully accurate historical details; the musical score synchronized to the several thousand distinct and individual scenes; the wonderful reproduction of crowded interiors like the theater performance where Lincoln was shot, and the South Carolina legislature session of 1870; the taking of battle scenes by night by a secret process; the use of 25,000 yards of cloth for Ku Klux costumes; the master's Rembrandt-like management of light and shade; the depiction of the glorious beauty of out-door nature; his marvelous quiet, yet effective playing, the entire gamut of romance from lightest comedy to deepest tragedy; finally and supremely, the union of all the stage arts (except conversational speech) into a new art form of drama-spectacle.

Pittsburg Post Date 1-29-15

"The Birth of a Nation" Comes to the Nixon

Battle scene in "The Birth of a Nation." Insets, left, Lillian Gish as "Elsie Stoneman"; right, Miriam Cooper as "Margaret Cameron."

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date AUG 29 1915

NOTES OF THE THEATRE

While planning the battle of Petersburg for the great pictorial narrative of the Civil War, "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith, who produced it, drilled his regiments as faithfully as Kitchener in England, or McClellan on the Potomac. And like them, he had militia to work with—men who knew the manual of arms, but required training. After carefully drilling them, the director took these soldiers for a month's "campaign." Trenches were dug, embankments thrown up, and real shells discharged from cannon, to reproduce in vivid detail the scenes enacted on Southern fields more than half a century ago.

NEW YORK WORLD

Date AUG 29 1915

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," continues at the Liberty Theatre. The Civil War picture is now in its twenty-seventh week, and the performance Saturday night will be its 488th. Battle scenes, the assassination of President Lincoln at Ford's Theatre, Washington, the wild rides of the Ku-Klux Klansmen and other historical points are brought out.

Date Pittsburg Post 1-29-15

"The Birth of a Nation"—Nixon

St. Louis Republic Date 8-29-15

DAVID W. GRIFFITH'S most extraordinary achievement with his new photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Olympic Theater for a five weeks' engagement commencing Sunday evening, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history—the introduction of slavery, the War of Secession, the surrender at Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of Reconstruction, and the Restoration of the South to its own.

Within 12,000 feet of celluloid film he has successfully combined a thrilling, plausible and dignified presentment of national upgrowth with a real and human love story based on Thomas Dixon's book-romance, "The Clansman." As it appears to the newspaper and magazine critics, Mr. Griffith has not only surprised the art of the "indoor" theater, but he has also developed a new art-form far superior to the old style history or historical novel. The best characterization of it so far is that of an eminent public man who has called it "history by lightning."

Mr. Griffith employed 18,000 people in the taking of these historical pictures. The battle scenes were actual duplicates of several of the Civil War conflicts, and so were the facsimilies of important events. The spectator sees Lincoln among his counsellors issuing the call for volunteers, Grant and Lee shaking hands at Appomattox, the shot that John Wilkes Booth fired, the Freedman's Bureau, the carpet-baggers' excesses, and the famous rides of the Ku Klux. The realism is almost uncanny.

"Cabiria" and "Quo Vadis" marked great steps forward in the screen drama. "The Birth of a Nation" points a still more wonderful development the old dramatic form having been thrown away and the epic or historical form substituted. The old reproach against the 10-cent movie is forever removed.

The labor involved in this newest sort of picture-making is enormous. There are 5,000 separate and individually posed scenes involving about 200,000 interesting details. The musical score is as complex and elaborate as that of any grand opera. Although not a word is spoken on the stage, the musical and mechanical effects employ a hundred flesh-and-blood helpers nightly. In brief, the magnitude of the stupendous film dwarfs the average stage play into insignificance.

Theatrical producers and observers are wondering what will be the next evolution of the art. Will the cinema replace the text-book in the public schools? Will the Walter Scotts and the W. M. Thackerays of the future do pictures instead of novels? Will the historian be replaced by the cameraman, and the still life-painter by one who, like Griffith, can turn out hundreds of Rembrandt, Corot and Turner-like scenes in an evening's entertainment?

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date AUG 29 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" TO BE SHOWN HERE

Film Drama of Civil War Period at Forrest September 4

D. W. Griffith's stupendous production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen at the Forrest Theatre here, beginning Saturday night, September 4. Performances will be given twice daily thereafter, with matinees at 2:15 and the night presentations at 8:15.

"The "Birth of a Nation" is now in its seventh month at the Liberty Theatre, New York city, where it remains one of the sensations of the theatrical world. It is said to be necessary to see this gigantic production to get any adequate idea of its magnitude. In unfolding his narrative Mr. Griffith has utilized new plans of dramatic attack. He has linked romance and history in a drama of intense human interest, it is said. He has encompassed the centuries of our national growth in which the great slavery question had its birth, its failures and the final adjustment of the economic differences which had to be threshed out before either side of this historical dispute was able to recognize the great vital truths that lay behind the misunderstandings.

Mr. Griffith has made history live again. Lincoln, Grant, Lee, Sherman, Sumner and all the individuals who were so closely linked with those momentous days of civil strife are players in the scenes which this dramatist had utilized. Decisive battles are visualized, with 12,000 men and 300 horses to add the required realism to the action.

Cities are destroyed before one's eyes; Cabinet officers advise with Lincoln as to the policies to be pursued; statesmen meet in powerful groups to plan the secret strategies behind the conflict; legislative bodies are shown in the moments of their most tense gatherings. Families are torn asunder by the inexorable call of war; lovers are separated by the conflicting viewpoints of their associations. As one part of the nation is trying to rehabilitate itself, you see the guiding hand of Lincoln snatched from the lever of control. Then come the days of doubts and misunderstandings and the final adjustment of the differences and the reunion and rebirth of the great republic.

Trade
Pittsburgh Pa.
8-29-15

Man Who Created Big Picture Spectacle

D. W. GRIFFITH

D. W. Griffith is the most talked about, and probably the most sought-after man in America. He learned how to plan things, in the making of the 5,000 scenes of "The Birth of a Nation," or he would be lost. He gallops through the myriad-and-one business details of a theatrical success without turning a hair or developing the slightest case of "nerves." When the turmoil and the tumult dies, and the hours wax small, his refreshment is the dance or a friendly chat with a round table of chums.

It was said on the first night in New York that only the son of a soldier could have conceived and executed "The Birth of a Nation." As a Kentucky lad, the son of Brig.-Gen. J. W. Griffith, he drank in the Civil war narratives greedily. As he grew up came the poet's vision of the entire struggle and of reconstruction days. In the prime of manhood awoke the genius to make it a reality.

While planning the "Battle of Petersburg," Griffith drilled the regiments as faithfully as Kitchener in England or McClelland on the Potomac. Like them, he had national guardsmen to work with. They knew the manual of arms, but had to acquire the grand tactics of picture evolutions. After the drill was completed the director took his thousands of militiamen on a month's countryside campaign. Each squadron was commanded by a sub-director.

Pioneers preceded the soldiers to dig the long miles of trenches, to throw up embankments and reproduce the physical landmarks of the battle. Among the noted Petersburg landmarks was a high tower. Griffith made it serve a double purpose by using it as field headquarters. From its lofty eminence he commanded the whole range of mountain and valley. Right at hand was a modern telephone switchboard. From it field wires ran to his various sub-generals. Mostly these wires were in conduits under ground. They had to be or the camera would have produced the anachronism of field telephones in Civil war time.

Thus completely equipped as a modern Joffre or Von Kluck, Griffith saw everything and telephoned his instructions. In the artillery actions, real cannon were used, which discharged real shells. All were of the 1864 pattern. When the infantry got busy they used the antique Springfield muskets with the old-fashioned bayonets. As the men charge, it is to be seen that their uniforms are far from spick and span. Many of them are coatless and hatless, the clothing of others is tattered; the flags, even, have the look of battle-scarred ribbons. For the first time the grime, dirt, sordidness, as well as the glory of war, is accurately presented.

Plainly war, as Griffith makes it, is not a day's outing for a small and straggling crew of picture takers. It is hard, grueling, continuous work. Regiments, brigades, not companies, are employed. There's everything from the far-flung panorama of the general battle to the handgrips of personal combat. Many hundreds of separate and distinct scenes are taken. The amount of labor and detail in the battle of Petersburg alone would more than equal the combined labors of actors and stage directors in a dozen "indoor" productions.

PROVIDENCE (R.I.) EVE. TRIBUNE 726
AUG. 19, 1915

FF

Providence Opera House

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's sensational photoplay, will be continued another week at the Providence Opera House opening with a matinee to-morrow afternoon. This week will positively be the last week of the photoplay in this city. For two weeks it has been drawing capacity audiences and it was only by the hardest kind of work that Colonel Wendlschaefer was able to prevail upon the owners of the film to allow it to remain here another week, because cities all over New England are bidding for it.

It is not often that a photoplay audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case with this picture. The psychology of the attitude of the audience lies in the fact that sound and action are synchronized. The special music by the orchestra of 25 pieces and the realistic sound effects produced behind the screen, sweep the audience forward from climax to climax. To produce the effects 5000 kinds of mechanical devices, controlled from a switchboard by an expert electrician, have been installed and a force of 20 men is used to run the various pieces of apparatus. All the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound and action are synchronized perfectly.

The switchboard, which notifies the men who control the effects, has over 500 different keys, each one calling for a different sound. The effects used consist of cannon boom, cannon rumble, church chimes, rifle shots, rifle rattle, rush of water, horse hoofs, smashing of doors, breaking of window glass and many other smaller effects. A group of 10 men make the sounds for the mob scenes. All of the men work in complete darkness in order to read the vari-colored electric light signals correctly.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and South at war and the reconstruction period which was the afterwarth of the war. The story of the play is along the following lines: A Northern and Southern home are shown before the war. The call to arms comes and the sons of both houses leave for the front. Battles and battlefields are rolled out in marvellous perspective, the most striking scenes being the four years war, showing all of the principal events, including Sheridan's march to the sea. Then comes the assassination of President Lincoln, the getting into power of the men who exploited the negroes and the rise of the Ku Klux Clan. The love element is not lacking in the film. A Northern girl who visits in the South dismisses Colonel Ben Cameron, her lover, when she discovers he belongs to the dreaded Ku Klux.

The author of the photoplay would have the audience believe that the Southerners were doing the negroes a favor by supporting them in return for a little work after the war. No whipping posts are shown, no auction blocks, no brutal overseer, no mal treatment of any sort. On the contrary, the "happy cullud folk" are shown dancing and making merry in the noontime allowance for dinner.

The contrast after the war when the white carpet-baggers descended like devastating locusts upon the wretched and poverty-stricken South, when the injustice toward the Southern whites began, are shown. The Ku Klux are represented as the illegal, yet noble protectors of the honor of the South.

The principal roles are taken by Henry Walthal, Mirain Cooper, Mae March, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Lillian Kish, George Seigmann, Josephine Hemabery, Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye.

An orchestra of 25 pieces will play specialily composed music and appropriate numbers will be sung by a concealed chorus.

CLIPPING FROM
Examiner
Lebanon (Pa.)
8-29-15

Examiner
Lebanon (Pa.)
8-29-15

FF

MIRIAM COOPER
in "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"
at the COLONIAL.

TURN OF THE REEL

Judge Things, Not by Their Faults, but by the Good They Contain.

BY JAMES WARREN CURRIE.

FF

COLONIAL.

THE Colonial Theater in Randolph street has been transformed inside into a veritable Southland palace, and Randolph street has been transformed once more into the Rialto, and all because D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" has proved that anything is possible with a production of that kind.

The first week at the Colonial has closed with greater business than ever before for this spectacle in Chicago. The "sold-out" sign has been out almost continuously. All of the time from the opening of the box-office each day until the closing of it at night, the lobby has been crowded with theatergoers buying and trying to buy seats. Even with larger capacity than at the Illinois, the house has been sold out just as it has been all Summer long.

Much of the credit for the change in location and the successful opening of the house is due to John A. Barry, Griffith's personal representative. Barry came into Chicago only two days before the Epoch Producing Corporation took over the Colonial for a year. In one week he had the new Griffith home ready for the moving of the show from Jackson boulevard to Randolph street.

During that time the Colonial was thoroughly renovated, redecorated throughout, a new projection booth was built and the old one taken out, the shadow box for the protection of the screen from alien light and shade installed and the orchestra pit made larger for the accomodation of the great symphony orchestra under the direction of Orville Mayhood, which is one of the important features of the presentation.

Crinoline Girls was im

NEW YORK TIMES

Date AUG 29 1915

Birth of a Nation.

G. M. H.—Some time ago I witnessed "The Birth of a Nation" and was puzzled to know who "Stoneman" was. Was he Thad Stevens? Our historians tell us almost nothing about Stevens and absolutely nothing, as far as I can discover, about some of the things shown in this film, and yet they are represented as being taken from records at Washington. Was a colored man ever really Governor of a Southern State?

"Stoneman" is based on Thaddeus Stevens. If you will consult histories of the reconstruction period, or lives of the most prominent at that time, you will find his career and the period itself fully described. Nicolay and Hay's "Life of Lincoln," Rhode's "History of the United States," Vols. VI. and VII.; "The Reconstruction Period," by Schouler; Pike's "The Prostrate State," Bancroft's "The Negro," Life of Thaddeus Stevens, and of Seward, will give you plenty of light on this period.

About 1872, after the passing of the Fifteenth Amendment, colored men were chosen for local and State offices under the new Constitutions of the readmitted States. There were colored Lieutenant Governors of Louisiana, South Carolina, and Mississippi. In South Carolina the Legislature of 1868 contained ninety colored to fifty-six white. In 1870 ninety-one colored to sixty-one white, and in 1872 ninety-four colored to thirty white representatives. There were 85,476 negro voters and 62,647 white.

A "carpet-bagger" was Governor from 1868 to 1872, and a native white of South Carolina from 1872 to 1874; both were men of bad repute. The Lieutenant Governor, Treasurer, and other State officers were negroes. The President of the Senate and the Speaker, Clerk, and Chairman of the Ways and Means Committee in the House were also negroes during this period.

NEW YORK PRESS

AUG 29 1915

FILM HOUSES OFFER ATTRACTIVE BILLS

Hazel Dawn in the Strand and Robert Edeson in the Vitagraph.

FF

In the Liberty Theatre the astonishing run of D. W. Griffith's great picture, "The Birth of a Nation," continues, with no prospect of immediate cessation. There are now five films of the play in various theatres in the large cities and all of them report a reception equal or nearly equal to that received by the original film here. "The Birth of a Nation" is without doubt the finest motion picture ever put on a screen, for while its pictorial lavishness is in some respects surpassed by that of "Cabiria," the latter picture had none of its dramatic intensity, nor yet its magnificent photography.

Leader
8-29-15

BATTLE SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" - NIXON

PORTLAND (ORE.) OREGONIAN
AUG. 29, 1915

7

have an hour New York production [illegible] will [illegible] of the [illegible] Harris Co[illegible] The [illegible] announcement is awaited with [illegible] interest.

Can you imagine how the announcement reads of persons who are still saved at the 50 downstairs for "The Birth of a Nation," which continues in Brighton [illegible] theater and one in Brighton [illegible] to mention night or nine [illegible] in the principal cities? The Friendly Courtesy, which was [illegible] with David Griffith [illegible] and Thomas Ince, have announced that Monday, Nov. 1, at the Eighteenth Theater in Los Angeles, "The Land of Hope," with Raymond Hitchcock, Ann Murdock, Kathleen Kirkham, Mabel Normand and Douglas Fairbanks under Griffith direction, in "The Man and the Test," and Frank Keenan in "The Coward," a Civil War play by Thomas Ince. The opening date has not been announced, but it will be soon after the departure of "The Girl From Utah," which now occupies the stage.

BATTLE SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION," AT THE BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL

WITHIN another week the Montauk, Shubert and Keith theatres will be open and the Brooklyn theatrical season will be well under way. But the seaside season—Coney Island and Brighton Beach—is still in full blast and will be for some weeks. The Brighton Beach Music Hall, with "The Birth of a Nation" as the strong attraction, will remain open until October. Announcements of managers indicate that Brooklyn theatregoers are to see some of the finest attractions during this autumn, next winter and spring.

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL.—That arrangements may be made with the Board of Education to enable the school children of the borough to see the play, and also for the accommodation of the thousands of Brooklyn residents returning from their vacations, William H. Kemble, managing director of the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where D. W. Griffith's $500,000 spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is being presented, has decided to keep the playhouse open until October 4.

It was the original intention to give the last performance on Labor Day. Educators, veterans of the civil war and officers of historical societies urged Mr. Kemble to continue to present the play until school opened, that arrangements might be made to have the pupils of the public and the parochial schools see it.

"The Birth of a Nation" has attracted attention because it is a striking picture of the civil war period. It pictures the blessings of peace, the horrors of war and the famous reconstruction period through which the South passed after the conflict.

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) EAGLE
to ..... AUG 29 1915

LINCOLN SIGNING PARDON IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" BRIGHTON MUSIC HALL

NEW YORK (N. Y.) TELEGRAPH

"Birth of Nation" Breaks Records.

Oliver Theodore Mitchell, who performs literary chores for D. W. Griffith, says that "The Birth of a Nation" has broken all records at Asbury Park. The house, he declares, was completely sold out for the week by Thursday, and, in order to accommodate disappointed patrons, the management decided to give a special performance at 10 o'clock this morning.

Republic
St. Louis Mo.
8-29-15

STAR OF THE [illegible] LILIES
GRAND OPERA HOUSE
HARCOURT
GAY

GATHERINGS OF THE KU KLUX KLAN AND MIRIAM COOPER - "BIRTH OF A NATION" - OLYMPIC

Sun
Baltimore Md.
8-29

NIXON.

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward David W. Griffith's wonderful new art of pictorialized spectacle with music, is advertised to inaugurate the opening of the regular theatrical season at the Nixon on Wednesday evening September 1. This is the offering that opened a new era in the theaters of New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where it ran simultaneously in as many productions for many months. The first half of the spectacle, which was suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," exhibits the salient events of the war between the states. In the second half the south's "second uprising"—this time against the carpetbagger regime—is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Tremendous battle scenes and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. Eighteen thousand human actors and 3,000 horses were employed in the making of the picture which cost half a million dollars and took eight months to produce.

Aug 29
Courier Dec & Stats-Unis

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Ce spectacle, qui tient l'affiche depuis 27 semaines au Liberty Théâtre, remporte un tel succès qu'il continuera à y être donné pendant longtemps encore.

Les scènes de la grande bataille, de l'assassinat du président Lincoln, des chevauchées sauvages des hommes de Klans, et, par dessus tout, la manière claire et précise dont le spectacle explique les points principaux de l'histoire américaine sont, sans aucun doute les raisons pour lesquelles ce merveilleux spectacle a excité si longtemps l'intérêt du public.

user-like scenes in an evening's entertainment?

CLIPPING FROM Post
Pittsburgh Pa
8-29-15

LINCOLN'S ASSASSINATION pictured in "The Birth of a Nation" film, the photoplay spectacle, shown at $2 a seat in New York and elsewhere, coming to the Nixon Theater, opening Wednesday, September 1.

FF

Pittsburgh Post Aug 30

MAE MARSH in "The Birth of a Nation," photo spectacle scheduled at Nixon September 1.

At 9 o'clock this morning the Nixon Theater box office will sell seats for the photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is to start a five weeks' run Wednesday evening. It is estimated that D. W. Griffith took more than 3,000,000 scenes for the original make-up of his spectacle.

Portland
Oregonian-Or 8-29-15

cial ... Portland theater-goers will appreciate.

BIG PICTURE AT HEILIG TODAY

"Birth of a Nation," Half Million Dollar Spectacle, Offered

FF

The "Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's half-million-dollar masterpiece, will be offered to Portland folks at the Heilig today. The picture, which is founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," was viewed at private exhibition Wednesday night by the censor board and invited newspaper representatives.

The "Birth of a Nation" is the big picture that will set a new standard for admission charges, which started at $2 a seat in New York, and is still running after 14 weeks it had played to 1,000,000 people at that price. At the present time it is being shown in Toronto.

Those who are familiar with Thomas Dixon's novel and play, "The Clansman," will have a small idea of the "Birth of a Nation," for Dixon's work is but a small portion of Griffith's production. It goes back to the time of the coming of African slaves to North America, continuing with the varied phases of the slave question and its bearing on United States history. The civil war is covered with its depth and vistas. Then comes the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, the ordeal of the reconstruction period, with its trying times to the South, the Ku-Klux Klan uprising, and finally the coming of peace and prosperity.

News and Gossip of Plays and Players.

Date Fitchburg 8-29

...ith" ...e Cumings

...comb with his usual ... an enormous expense ... the patrons of his pop... the rights for the first ... in Fitchburg of D. W. ...gantic screen spectacle ... of a Nation."

...onderful production has ... more newspaper comment ...y other production ever pre..., either on the spoken stage, or ...e silent drama, rescribing as it ...s "The Birth of a Nation," of our ...n nation, and carrying it through ... troublesome, hazardous times of ...e Great Rebellion, and the causes of hostility between the North and South.

Founded as it is on the great dramatic story and play "The Clansman" D. W. Griffith has taken adventage (as only he can) of the many tense dramatic situations, and has interwoven a beautiful love story between the scenes of war and strife for supremacy.

The ever-changing scenes hold an audience spell-bound from the first sound of the special music, written especially to rthis gigantic masterpiece, until the curtain falls on the last scene of this stupendous production.

Produced at an actual cost of hundreds of thousands of dollars, with a cast of 18,000 men, women and children and 3000 horses and requiring over two years to complete "The Birth of a Nation" stands alone, pre-eminent; one feature in a class by itself, the one and only one that has commanded, and is playing the first class theatres at a $2.00 top price of admission.

At present playing at the Liberty theatre, New York City, where it is in its sixth month of continuous run, the Tremont now in its sixth month of continuous run and playing to capacity daily, the Illinois theatre, Chicago is still selling out three weeks in advance, with a three months' summer run to its credit. The Davidson theatre, Milwaukee, is another high class theatre that is breaking all records, and Atlantic City, Brighton Beach New York, and San Francisco, Cal. are each vieing with one another to pay homage to this greatest o fall attractions.

When this wonderful spectacle is presented to the patrons of the Cumings theatre it will be produced in the same gorgeous manner that characterized its New York and Boston engagements. A special stage setting will be erected, after the idea of a mammoth shadow box, such as is used to display large oil paintings, bringing out every detail of the subject.

The theatre will be decorated to correspond w ith the exact times that the production represents. A greatly enlarged orchestra of solo musicians will interpret the special music that was written for it.

The production will be given twice daily at the Cumings theatre, commencing Labor Day, Sept. 6, and continue for the entire week. The attraction closes in Boston on Saturday and comes direct to this city. Tickets go on sale on Wednesday morning.

Brooklyn, (N. Y.) Standard-Union

AUG 29 1915

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL—That arrangements may be made with the Board of Education to enable the school children of the borough to see the play and also for the accommodation of the thousands of Brooklynites returning from their vacations, William H. Kemble, managing director of the Brighton Beach Music Hall, where D. W. Griffith's $500,000 spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is being presented, decided to keep the playhouse open until October 4. It was the original intention of the management to give the last performance of "The Birth of a Nation" on Labor Day. Educators, veterans of the Civil War, and officers of historical societies, urged Mr. Kemble to continue to present the play until school opened, that arrangements might be made to have the pupils of the public and parochial schools see it. "The Birth of a Nation" has attracted the attention of educators and historians, because it is a complete picture of the Civil War period. It pictures the blessings of peace, the horrors of war, and the famous reconstruction period through which the South passed after the conflict. Strikingly realistic are the reproduction of the assassination of President Lincoln, Lee surrendering to Grant, Sherman's march to the sea, "the Federal and the Confederate armies struggling ..."

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER AUG. 29, 1915

Historic Episode in "The Birth of a Nation"

A Picturesque incident from the final days of the Civil War is depicted in a realistic manner in D. W. Griffith's big film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen at the Forrest next Saturday. When General Robert E. Lee, at Appomattox, wished to make some marginal notes on the papers of the final surrender, he asked the bystanders for a pencil. Strange to say, not one of the numerous officers and aide-de-camp was able to offer him one. At last, an officer of Lee's staff extracted a pocket inkstand and feather quill from his kit and with the aid of these the historic document was written and the names of Grant and Lee affixed at the bottom. General Grant is correctly represented in his fatigue uniform, dusty and travel-stained, while General Lee is shown in complete panoply of military dress

Date Philadelphia Pa. 8-29-15

...proach... the three principal streets which

Nixon--"The Birth of a Nation"

Social Picture in the Old South.

"THE Birth of a Nation," bringing forward David W. Griffith's new art of musical spectacle, will mark the opening of the regular theatrical season at the Nixon Theater when it is presented at that playhouse on Wednesday evening, September 1, for its initial performance. The first half of the great picture exhibits the salient events of the Civil War, which came to a close at Appomattox just 50 years ago. Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant, and the awful tragedy at Ford's Theater live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half of the South's "second uprising," this time against the carpetbagging regime, is shown in a thrilling story of Reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northerner Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story. The fun and frolic of plantation days as well as the heartache and pathos of the stricken South, are shown. The [illegible] days in Mr. Griffith's spectacle, and it is estimated no less than 20,000 interesting historical details. On the musical side Mr. Griffith attempted something previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearances of the important characters and the enactment of the principal scenes. This instrumental music is played by a large orchestra and supplemented by part-singing behind the scenes. Somehow the old war-time tunes, thus thematically treated, make the "counterfeit presentments" of long ago seem irresistibly real.

thousands of participants. There are 5,000 scenes in the spectacle,

Among the leading players in what was probably the largest theatrical cast ever assembled, may be mentioned Joseph Henabery as President Lincoln; Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye as Generals Grant and Lee; Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron; Henry Walthall, Lillian Gish, Elmer Clifton, Miriam Cooper as the quartet of lovers; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Spottiswoode Aitken and Josephine Crowell as the elder Cameronns, and Walter [illegible] as Lincoln. The sale [illegible]

AUG. 29, 1915
URGH (Pa.) DISPATCH

How the Lincoln Tragedy Was Reproduced

A Replica of Ford's Theater Built in a Studio and "Our American Cousin" Staged for the Film of "The Birth of a Nation"

A PLAY within a play is a bit of dramatic construction which has often been utilized by dramatists since the drama became an institution. Perhaps the earliest and most prominent utilization of this constructive detail as far as the English speaking stage is concerned is the player scene in Hamlet, which Shakespeare uses as an effective part of the earlier development of his tragic plot.

Nothing of this sort has ever been revealed upon so pretentious a plan as is shown in David W Griffith's motion picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," which is being so widely exploited at present. Griffith's scene is the reproduction in historic and dramatic detail of Ford's Theater, Washington, D C, on the night of April 14, 1865, when President Abraham Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth before the eyes of a gala audience gathered on that occasion to celebrate the close of the Civil War.

This scene is one of the tense dramatic moments in a story that is astonishing for its thrilling action. The drama is a complete story within itself and yet is a vital part of the entire story which is covered in the larger plan of the spectacle. From a technical viewpoint it is one of the most interesting achievements in the annals of the American stage.

Built in a Studio

In the language of motion picture production it is known as a studio scene. This means that it was built indoors and had to be specially constructed to get the desired dramatic effect. It is the largest interior set ever built for a motion picture story. The scene is in minute detail an exact reproduction of Ford's Theater as it appeared upon this historic occasion. Numerous authentic works upon the subject were studied to get the exact measurements and dimensions of the old theater. In this research the fundamentals were furnished by Nicolay and Hay's "Abraham Lincoln, a History." It will be recalled that the writers served as secretaries to President Lincoln and were in close touch with the stirring events of that period. A detail showing the thoroughness of the work is the picture of Booth's leap from the Presidental box after he had fired the fatal shot. The distance covered in this leap was 12 feet. The actor playing Booth had to be carefully rehearsed in this scene and to get in the important details of his spur-catching in the flag that draped the box. This accounts for the fall which resulted in Booth's fracturing his leg. The leap takes just one second in the picture, but it had to be rehearsed time and time again and Raoul Walsh, who played Booth before the real picture, was caught just as Booth made the jump to the stage and rushed out of the theater, via way of the stage door. Walsh wore out three pairs of trousers at the knees before the right picture was caught. This will give one an idea of the difficulties of the leaps he made.

This entire scene of Ford's theater was the most difficult to take, except the big battle scenes immediately preceding it. These being in the open, the camera men were not hampered by demands of accuracy to the minute extent that they were in taking this important exterior. Mr Griffith was fortunate in being able to secure the aid of several eye witnesses of the actual events, who were present with him when the picture was taken. Chief among these was Dr Chapman, the noted prohibitionist and lecturer, who lent material assistance in supply important facts. As stated, the night was a gala one to celebrate peace. Everybody of note was on hand, and the women were dressed in the height of fashion. The men in the audience included famous generals and statesmen who had just written their names into history. The play was "Our American Cousin," with Laura Keene playing her farewell engagement in Washington. Old prints, prompt books of the play and surviving actors of the cast supplied the fact regarding the appearance of the stage settings and the players on that night. Other eye witnesses told how the orchestra was arranged and the general appearance of the audience was further described by these attendants, in addition to the written data on the subject.

Man Who Played Lincoln

When it came time to take the picture many in the audience remarked upon the wonderfully realistic effect. They said the actress simulated Mrs Lincoln's dress and appearance so wonderfully that she seemed to be living over again the scenes of that night. Joseph Henabery, who portrayed President Lincoln, was selected from 20 different players who were coached and prepared for the part before he was voted the one. Mr Lincoln's appearance and mannerisms were carefully counterfeited, even to the small but interesting detail of the President reaching back for his cloak just a few minutes before Booth attacked him. It was a spring day in Washington, but a late frost set in that evening and it turned quite raw and cold. Mr Lincoln felt the chill of it, or else some mysterious force communicated the chill of the impending tragedy to him just a moment before the end came. As these scenes were being enacted and photographed the players who participated in the scene said that in all their long experience with making pictures nothing so impressive had ever been noted. Everybody in the scene apparently caught the deep tragedy of the situation and were depressed by the solemnity of it.

The entire scene was laid out upon a carefully arranged ground plan down to a copy of the decoration of the house. This explains the clean-cut manner in which it is all reproduced. The scene also fixes the time accurately and contradicts the general impression that the fatal shot was fired from the stage. As near as could be judged, after weighing the consensus of opinion, Booth entered the front of the theater a minute or two before 10 o'clock that night. He had to enter the house, and most everybody knew him. It was figured out that it took him about 13 minutes to move about and work his way down to the rear of the Presidental box without arousing suspicion. It was in this way that the time of the shot was set at 10:13. The detail showing the adjoining box being only partly filled is explained by history. This box was to have been occupied by General and Mrs Grant, but the latter prevailed upon the famous general to leave Washington that day.

FORD'S THEATER

PRESIDENT LINCOLN, AT FORD'S THEATER

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date Aug. 30-1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION," which to all intents and purposes is but a revival of Dixon's "The Clansman," has created in an opposite direction an impression which, considering the difference in the spirit of the times, may be likened unto that produced before the war by "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The difference is one of degree, not of kind.

Among other letters on the subject, urging me to take it up, I have before me one from Miss Hallowell, which seems to express the general conservative opinion. She says:

> I went to see it in Los Angeles. It is a most beautiful presentation, the finest of its kind I have ever seen, and the most pernicious! likely to incite race hatred and contempt for the negro by making a vile character a representative of his race. However we may feel, the negro is a citizen of the United States, and his education and protection are not only just treatment due to him, but from a selfish point of view necessary for the safety of the community. I was glad to see that Mr. Joseph Pennell feels as many others do about it.

Such an incident shows the importance of having the selection of films placed in safe and wise hands from the very first, does it not? So very much depends upon it.

PEGGY SHIPPEN.

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER

AUG 20 1915

Negroes Will Ask Mayor to Bar "Birth of a Nation"

Acting upon the belief that strife between white men and colored will follow the production here of the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," two colored orators, one Cherokee Indian, and Dr. Moses Stern last night asked several hundred persons on the East plaza of City Hall to support them in their appeal to the Mayor to halt the showing of the motion picture, which is scheduled to open here shortly.

E. A. Pennock and Charles F. White, the colored speakers, denounced the picture, and claimed that in other cities where it had been shown, strife, dissatisfaction and bad feelings between the negro and white residents had followed. Resolutions calling upon the Mayor to halt the play were adopted.

BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) TIMES

Date SEP 4 1915

"The Birth of a Nation."

Following the announcement by William H. Kemble, the managing director, that Brighton Beach Music Hall where the D. W. Griffith's $500,000 picture, "The Birth of a Nation," is being presented, would remain open until October 4 that school children and residents might be coming from their vacations might view it, fourteen educational and patriotic societies have made reservations for seats for theatre parties.

In deciding to keep open until after Labor Day, when he intended at first to close, Mr. Kemble was influenced by requests he received from country who expressed a left Brooklyn.

Several schools in the public and high schools have organize theatre parties intend the schoolboys and girls in order that they might see the stirring events of the Civil War pictured in chronological order by actors and actresses, portraying Abraham Lincoln, General Grant, General Lee and other famous characters who were the central figures in the great struggle of the Civil War.

The film is not a presentation of the acts of the Civil War from events the set presents in vivid form events. It also up to the outbreak Sherman's leading In battle scenes "Last Stand March to the Sea and the surrender of the Confederates," and the surrender of General Lee are among the chief features.

After these comes scenes in the White House, Ford's Theatre and the assassination of President Lincoln there, and the outbreaks in the South in the reconstruction period. The entire production is based and on the descriptions of historians and on the writings of the eye witnesses still living.

Date Pittsburg Dispatch 8-30

A NATION ... THIS WEEK.

...day, and running one ... will be thrown on ... B. F. Keith theater ...kable photo play in the ...irth of a Nation." This ...n shown in a majority of ... cities from coast to coast, ...prices that are ordinarily ...or seats to a high class dra... production or stellar musical ... has drawn packed houses con...

...person who has never seen this ... story of our own country can't ...in to realise what a wonderful ...ing it is. The action starts in the South just before war times, and carries us through the stirring scenes of the Civil war including such world famous incidents of history as the surrender of Lee, and the assassination of Lincoln. It hardly seems possible that real battles of the Rebellion and real characters of history can be so faithfully depicted, as in this remarkable picture, but the faithfulness to detail is such that many old soldiers, of the North and many Southerners have been astounded to see the reproductions of scenes which they themselves have actually witnessed.

There is a special orchestra which will be augmented by the regular Keith orchestra, for music forms no small part of the inspiration of this big picture, and also helps to make the impression created of realism much stronger.

By examining the price scale of seats in this issue it will be found that orchestra as well as balcony seats are to be obtained at a very reasonable figure considering the magnitude of the attraction.

With the approach of half a century after the actual scenes of the Civil war, this highest development of the motion picture art bears a keen relationship to current events. Aside from its dramatic appeal and poetic flight it brings back to a younger generation with a new-born realism the things which our fathers and grand-fathers went through that out of the travail could come the nation we are so proud of today. It is not a case of opening old wounds but is art suggestive the highest form of art, to point out to us the mistakes and misunderstandings of the past that we may face the crisis of the present with a calmness and determination to uphold the right.

The dramattic form has often been employed by the greatest minds of the world to express underlined truths and as regards the usages and the sufferings of war, no pen has been able to make as impressive a picture as Griffith has encompassed in this masterpiece. A born realist he cuts into the quick of "acts that he may establish his dramatic plot. He has not been concerned with factions of propagander but with the unerring view of the master of the new art he has made his impress upon our times in a way which is startlingly original and a force to be reckoned with in the future. He masses great armies upon a historic plane to reproduce the records of a mighty struggle and by the human interests of two families makes a great nation's efforts a topic of a dramatic construction which appeals to the heart and the sympathies as no bald narrative of facts could hope to do. To attain these results he employs the passions, the loves and the conflict of essential drama. He writes history by flashes of lightning and with it all has built up a spectacle that thrills the human soul, brings tears to the eyes, mingles pathos with laughter, and above all else, does something fine upon the most tremendous scale that was ever undertaken by a dramatist in the world's history.

It is well worth while and when one has seen it, it is easy to understand why it has created such a stir.

Broc...

PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE
AUG. 30, 1915

Charming Girl in "Birth of a Nation"

Miss Lillian Gish Portrays Part of Self-Sacrificing Woman in Southern Hospitals.

3,000,000 SCENES ARE SHOWN

LILLIAN GISH.

One of the most effective minor scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," which is announced to open at the Nixon Wednesday night, shows Miss Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the "Great Commoner" who led Congress in Lincoln's time, playing a guitar to solace a wounded Confederate officer in the Patent Office Hospital. To portray the fine flower of northern womanhood throughout the whole troublous era is the task of Miss Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman in this play.

Miss Gish is of the "golden aureole" blonde type which makes for photographic beauty. She is singularly graceful, and her features never lose their piquancy in in or outdoor scenes. The eyes before the camera are most expressive. The acting conveys sincerity as well as true feminine charm.

It is estimated that D. W. Griffith took more than 3,000,000 separate scenes for the original make-up of his great spectacle. As each scene lives before the vision for an infinitesimal part of a second, theater patrons can understand why such a large number is required to cover an entertainment of nearly three hours.

Pittsburg Gazette Times 8-30

BIRTH ... NATION

The Birth of ... Nation, which began a week's ... at Keith's this afternoon, is a Civ... War drama production which has attracted widespread attention everywhere it has been shown, is a historical drama in two parts founded on The Clansman by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and South at war and the reconstruction period which was the aftermath of the war. The story of the production is along the following lines: A Northern and Southern home are shown before the war. The call to arms comes and the sons of both houses leave for the front. Battles and battlefields are rolled out in marvelous perspective, the most striking scenes being the four years' war, showing all of the principal events, including Sherman's march to the sea. Then comes the assassination of President Lincoln, the getting into power of the men who exploited the negroes and the rise of the Ku-Klux-Klan, and their invasion of the blacks domain. The weird and mystical garb of these defenders of "Aryan race diplomacy" gave the director splendid opportunities, which he utilized to the fullest extent.

When these crusaders of the South are seen mounted on superb horses, dashing furiously through fields, forests and rivers, the audience never fails to respond with as liberal applause as during the wonderful battle scenes.

In the production Mr. Griffith took over 200,000 feet of film to obtain 12,000 feet of finished product. As a consequence much cutting and assembling was necessary. In this a producer may make or break any production, but with the great amount of such work necessary to put this picture on the market, the keen observer could not detect the spoliation of even the shortest flash cut back or scene.

An orchestra of 20 pieces plays especially composed music and a crew of 15 men work the mechanical effects back of stage.—Advertisement.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" FILM GETS NEW PERMIT TO RUN

"The Birth of a Nation," the feature film which opened at the Olympic Theater last night under an injunction granted by Judge Kimmel, will be shown again tonight and tomorrow night, as the judge today granted a continuance to the defendants in the suit brought by Prosecuting Attorney Howard Sidener to prevent the showing of the picture.

The continuance was granted until 2 p. m. Wednesday on the statement that the defense had not had time to arrange its plea.

Sidener, Associate City Counsel Charles B. Davis and W. R. Hill, negro associate counselor, were present to prosecute. About fifty negroes were present to protest the showing of the film, which they claim is unfair to the race.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
AUG. 30, 1915

"Birth of Nation" Thrills a Big Audience at Olympic

With Bold Faithfulness to the History of the Reconstruction Period, Griffith's Photo-Spectacle Insults No One.

By Raymond J. Walsh,
Dramatic Critic, St. Louis Times.

To a gallery that stamped and shrieked its approval, to a balcony that swayed in its nervous excitement, to a parquet that applauded in that usual characteristic manner peculiar to parquet, "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest photo-spectacle to date, was presented at the Olympic Theater, Sunday night. It was a most representative gathering and a sort of auspicious occasion. Judge Karl Kimmel, whose temporary injunction restrained the police from interfering with the opening night's presentation, was there. Chief Young, who heads the department which was restrained, was there. And, of course, the morality squad or Censhorship Committee took the notice of each and every one of the 5000 scenes. Whether the morality squad, or so-called censors, decided that the film did or did not conform to Nicolay's or Hay's or Wilson's theories of the reconstruction period, I am unable to say. I suppose these details will be determined by the censors later—if the court grants them the right to exercise the profound judgment necessary.

If the guardians of our morals and safety insist upon censoring "The Birth of a Nation," they may as well go into the classrooms of our public schools and delete the pages of American history. If St. Louis is robbed of future presentations of "The Birth of a Nation" it will lose the opportunity of viewing one of the greatest—if not the greatest and most stirring—achievements of the theatrical world.

A Remarkable Picture of a Romantic Period.

D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," tells us that his sole purpose in placing the picture before the public was to set forth the spectacular horror of war in the interest of peace. He may have had some other very personal reason, but certainly he has demonstrated that he did not go out of his way to offend the negro nor to stir up the hatreds buried with Lee's surrender. He has given us a most vivid portrayal of the hatreds which were not buried for a time; he has stirred up no new ones. He has picturized page after page of our own history—history that has no charms, but a history that was necessary in the process of our nation's unification. And if there arises from a viewing of the picture any of those skeleton forms at which the nation might tremble, that spirit will be the result of a people's weakness or plasticity and can not be charged up to either Mr. Griffith or his picture.

We see unfolded all the atrocities which marked the years immediately following the first freedom of the negro. The Drama has failed, history has failed and writers have failed to place before us the struggle of the South with the early menace which the South stamped out. "The Birth of a Nation" by setting its terrors before us in concrete form tells the whole story. And yet in "The Birth of a Nation" we get the finer impulses which actuated the faithful negroes of the South—those impulses and characteristics that have saved the race from its conniving white and mulatto leaders. The crimes of the negroes which "The Birth of a Nation" presents are shown clearly as not of the negro per se, but the result of a misguidance of which Stoneman and Lynch were guilty—acroundles who forced the negro race to play its role in the history of the reconstruction.

Nothing to Offend.

"One and Inseparable" is the moral of the story—a story, told in the romantic ways of war and love, of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of internecine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the war; Lincoln's call for troops to subdue the Southern States; the ball on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march and the awful ordeal of the Siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant of Appomattox; the assassination of the President; the harsh radical policy to the stricken South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan, and the overthrow of the carpetbagger regime—these great factors and events pass in review.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the struggle. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; a piquant Northern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr. Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where nature painted the background and army men directed the battle campaigns. Altogether, it is the first time in art production that history in the large has been presented in living pictures.

Of equal importance to the scenes is the music that interprets them. It consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged after Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. Now grave, now gay; now sounding the loud diapason of war, again sweetly harmonizing love's sighs and rhapsodies; anon bringing back the old plantation melodies, or the crash of rout and rapine, or the welcome Ku Klux Klan call that fell so gratefully on the ear of Southern whites sorely oppressed by the "servants in the master's hall"—fits the changing scenes of the story like a flowing garment.

Among the principals are Henry B. Walthall, the distinguished Alabama actor, whose family is historically connected with the story, in the role of the clansman; Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman; Mae Marsh and Miriam Cooper as Flora and Margaret; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Joseph Henabery, Howard Gaye and Donald Crisp as Lincoln, Lee and Grant, respectively; George Seigmann as the mulatto Lieutenant-Governor of South Carolina; Walter Long as the renegade negro, Gus, and Raoul Walsh as Wilkes Booth.

AUG. 30, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION SEATS PLACED ON SALE.

At the Nixon theater box office, the seat sale opened today for the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," which is to commence a two-week engagement at that playhouse beginning Wednesday evening. Mail orders for seat reservations have been most brisk, indicating that the public sale will outdo any previous theatrical standard for heavy buying. The same phenomenon has been noted in all other cities where the play has visited the present season.

LILLIAN GISH,
Who has leading part in production.

It is estimated that D. W. Griffith took more than 3,000,000 separate scenes for the original make-up of his great spectacle. As each scene lives before the vision for an infinitisimal part of a second it is easily understood why such a tremendous number is required to cover an evening's entertainment of nearly three hours.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
AUG. 30, 1915

"Birth of Nation" Sale.

At 9 o'clock this morning at the Nixon theater box office seats will go on sale for the five weeks' engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," which is to begin Wednesday night. The mail orders for seat reservations have been brisk, and the indications are Henry Walthall.

that the public sale will outdo any previous theatrical standard for heavy buying. It is ... [illegible]

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECORD
AUG. 30, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" AT BROADWAY TONIGHT

The Ku Klux Klan, whose deeds are so generously celebrated in Mr. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" at the Broadway Theatre, tonight, tomorrow and Wednesday, occupy a peculiar position in history somewhere between the California Vigilantes and the Molly Maguires of odorous Pennsylvania fame. The marvel of it is that to the spectators they are naught but heroes. The tide of enthusiasm begins to rise with the initial appearance of these spectral Southern horsemen on the screen, and as their gallant deeds crowd one upon the other, applause becomes practicall continuous and even shouts and huzzas mark their final triumph and rescue the "downtrodden whites" from their carpetbagger-negro enemies.

Another and more unfavorable side of the Ku Klux is given in Judge Tourgee's novels, "Bricks Without Straw" and "A Fool's Errand." The Klans undoubtedly saved the Southern people from the horrid fear of African massacre. But those Northerners who came to settle in the South after the Civil War, as well as to the luckless negroes, many of their clannish acts must have appeared as little else than outrages.

The Klan was a sort of Southern Mafia—a banding of the native sons against all the ills real and imaginary that were brought upon the Southern people through Reconstruction. The fact that so many thousands of "good citizens" and even distinguished men belonged to the order, and the further fact that the good women of the South were their most ardent supporters, have lent a tinge of romance and chivalry to their history. Of these facts Producer Griffith took full account in making them the protagonists of "The Birth of a Nation" story.

ST. LOUIS (MO.) GLOBE-DEMOCRAT
AUG. 30, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION THRILLS AUDIENCE AT THE OLYMPIC

Photo-Drama Battle Scene Most Vivid Ever Seen in St. Louis.

BY RICHARD SPAMER.

The gentlemen charged with the advance exploitation of D. W. Griffith's cinematographic spectacle, The Birth of a Nation, dealt largely in superlatives. This photodrama, they told us, was "the greatest ever," and the familiar arenic rhetoric was frequently resorted to. The picture's effect on self-satisfied New York, excitable Chicago and other important centers was their stock-in-trade description. They submitted startling figures of every kind, actual and imaginable, long ahead of their show.

And now some 2000 of all sorts and conditions of men and women have seen it—they saw it and it gripped them convincingly at the Olympic last night, and they pronounced it according to specifications in each and every particular. The reel runs true to form, to use a sporting phrase, which may or may not be admissible here.

All extravagance aside, the Birth of a Nation is almost precisely what is claimed for it—immense, stirring, startling. No matter how seasoned the motion picture habitue may be, here he will see something that will send new thrills into his heart. What will impress him most, perhaps, is the enormity of the photoplay's canvas. That Petersburg battle scene has no equal so far, in extent or detail. The Ku Klux Clan pictures are truly awe-inspiring, even to those spectators who are made acquainted for the first time with the terrible events here depicted. For those who have become fathers or grandfathers since the civil war, and who know much about this path-bound society from actual experience or reading, this phase of the picture is swiftly and searchingly recollective.

The cast is excellently chosen almost without exception. Infinite care is the keynote in the big as well as the little views that make up the work. The incidental music is a strong feature and but for too strenuous a speeding-up of the film at times, no fault can be found with its projection. Ample evidence exists that Mr. Griffith wants to give his audiences the worth of their money; hence he tries to hold them nearly three hours with but one intermission. The exhibition could be cut down 20 per cent and nobody would suffer on that account or feel that he was being denied any essential of what constitutes a motion picture of the thinkably highest class.

Getting down from generalities to particulars and these are resorted to merely because The Birth of a Nation is to abide with us five consecutive weeks—it seems well to particularize by repetition; and in this manner, whether you care for the "movies" or not, here is a "movie" you simply cannot pass up. On the technical side it is the cinematographic high-water mark. Dealing with a dark spot in our history and presenting it with extravagant detail it puts the beholder in the strong position of exercising his individual judgment of the scenes and incidents shown. To use a phraseful manner. The Birth of a Nation is the "argumentum ad hominem"—the appeal to the manhood, in each beholding person.

But when all is said and done The Birth of a Nation is a great, a truly great event in the entertainment and the education of the masses; for it is likely true that very many of us today are going to picture shows more regularly than to our libraries. We are more numerously spectators than we are readers. Here, then, is where such an enormous creation as The Birth of a Nation is of its direct and tangible effect.

Oregonian
Portland
Date 9-5-15

Pittsburg Leader
G, AUGUST 30, 191

"BIRTH OF NATION" SEAT SALE BEGINS

MAE MARSH
In "The Birth of a Nation."

This morning, at the Nixon theater box office, the seat sale opened for "The Birth of a Nation," which is to commence a five weeks' engagement Wednesday evening. The mail orders for seat reservations had been most brisk, indicating that the public sale would outdo any previous theatrical standard for heavy buying. Crowds thronged the lobby the entire day, showing great interest in the forthcoming production of D. W. Griffith's motion picture of Civil war and reconstruction times, as has been the case in each of the large cities where the production has been made. New York's Broadway, Chicago's Loop, Boston's Tremont Street looked like old times again with the box office forces doubled and the lines of "The Birth of a Nation" admirers stretching to the curb or even to the next street. The same phenomenon has been repeated in all other cities where the play has visited the present season. It is estimated that D. W. Griffith took more than 3,000,000 separate scenes for the spectacular make-up of his great spectacle. [illegible] for an limitless[illegible] year of a second you can understand why such a tremendous number is required to cover [illegible] evening's entertainment [illegible]

[illegible] stars of last season, Julia Sanderson, Donald Brian and Joseph Cawthorn.

"Birth of a Nation"

The beginning of the end has come for "The Birth of a Nation" at the Tremont Theatre. Notwithstanding the long-continued success which has prevailed ever since the first of April, the stay at the Tremont is positively limited and the farewell at that house must come next Saturday night. Two large audiences filled the theatre yesterday and expressed the greatest of enthusiasm over the photo-play dealing with the most thrilling period in American history. Sensational in the extreme were the early moments of the drama where the great battles of the war of the rebellion were reproduced with marvellous accuracy. The perfection of stage management was displayed in the reproduction of the assassination of President Lincoln in the crowded auditorium of the theatre, and the wonderful horsemanship of the leaders of the Ku Klux Klan made dashes that caused all spectators to cheer most enthusiastically. "The Birth of a Nation" is a photo-play of great heart interest. It holds the attention from start to finish and it will be greatly missed after its engagement here closes.

The assassination of Lincoln is portrayed with as nearly absolute adherence to historical facts as possible without being sordid. The calculations are based on the most authentic accounts of John Wilkes Booth's movements on entering Ford's Theater on the fatal night. So faithfully in this detail has the picture been drawn that one scene shows Mr. Lincoln draw to one side in his box and pull a cape around his shoulder, history recording the fact that the night suddenly grew cool, and that he did this very thing. The picture shows exactly how Lincoln was shot—not from the stage, as is erringly supposed from some accounts. Ford's Theater is reproduced in minute detail as it was than 50 years and more ago. A great battle scene is enacted at night. This is said to be the first photo reproduction of this nature. It is extremely realistic and convincing.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" THRILLS

Heilig Audience Awed by Historical War-Time Photo-Drama

"The Birth of a Nation," the historical photo-drama founded on historical incidents and facts in connection with the Civil War and the reconstruction period, and for its plot based on Thomas Dixon's famous book, "The Clansman," continues to hold capacity audiences at the Heilig Theater, Broadway at Taylor street, and will remain another week or more.

With a large cast that includes some highly dramatic actors and actresses and scenic settings and executions that are perhaps the most spectacular of any ever produced, the play has brought every audience at the Heilig to its toes, so to speak. It is a vivid, realistic and unusual presentation on a mammoth scale of a historical drama that is close to the hear of every American. Its faithfulness to detail of history is amazing, and Cabinet officers in the days of Lincoln's Presidency, Senators, President Lincoln himself, generals and other military personages who have figured in history are characterized with marvelous adherence to likeness. The famous Ku Klux Klan in action, the picturesque plantation scenes, governmental administration and a hundred and one graphic presentments add to the interest of the big picture.

Here are some of the facts about the picture which explain why there are 14 reproductions of it being shown in other parts of the country, and why the film stays from one to three or five weeks in cities the size of Portland. It [illegible] stays [illegible]

AUG. 30, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER

"BIRTH OF NATION" SEAT SALE BEGINS

MAE MARSH
In "The Birth of a Nation."

This morning, at the Nixon theater box office, the seat sale opened for "The Birth of a Nation," which is to commence a five weeks' engagement Wednesday evening. The mail orders for seat reservations had been most brisk, indicating that the public sale would outdo any previous theatrical standard for heavy buying. Crowds thronged the lobby the entire day, showing great interest in the forthcoming production of D. W. Griffith's motion picture of Civil war and reconstruction times, as has been the case in each of the large cities where the production has been made. New York's Broadway, Chicago's Loop, Boston's Tremont Street looked like old times again with the box office forces doubled and the lines of "The Birth of a Nation" admirers stretching to the curb or even to the next street. The same phenomenon has been repeated in all other cities where the play has visited the present season. It is estimated that D. W. Griffith took more than 3,000,000 separate scenes for the original make-up of his great spectacle. As each scene lives before your vision for an infinitesimal part of a second you can understand why such a tremendous number is required to cover an evening's entertainment of nearly three hours.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE
AUG. 30, 1915

[redacted] Opera [redacted] performances [redacted] It is said that Manager [redacted] had to guarantee the [redacted] $2000 in order to keep it here for a third week.

"The Birth of a Nation" is an historical drama in two parts founded on "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and the South at war and the reconstruction period. The love element is not lacking. A Northern girl, who visits in the South dismisses Col. Ben Cameron, her lover, when she discovers he belongs to the dreaded Ku Klux Klan.

It is not often that a photo play audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case in this picture. Sound and action are synchronized. The special music by the orchestra of 25 pieces and the realistic sound effects produced behind the screen carry the audience from climax to climax. To produce the effects 5000 pounds of mechanical devices, controlled from a switchboard by an electrician, are employed to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. In this way sound and action are synchronized.

BUTLER (Pa.) EAGLE
AUG. 31, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

"The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Nixon theater, Pittsburgh Wednesday night, September 1, for a limited engagement of five weeks. Mail orders are now being received and filled in the order of their receipt; the seat sale opened Monday, August 30. It is the largest and most important production of a decade, yet not a word is spoken throughout the two hours and forty-five minutes' performance. Music supplies the absence of speech, mechanical effects and realism, whilst the wizard of the screen, David W. Griffith, unfolds in 12,000 feet of film the thrilling romance of the war between the states and the reconstruction of the southland. Some faint idea of its magnitude may be had from the facts that 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses took part and that the staging of this great "outdoor drama" cost half a million dollars. Pittsburgh will be favored with the original production from New York, where it was first shown.

QUINCY (Mass.) LEDGER
SEPT. 1, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION

Facts About the Declaration of Independence.

SIGNING OF THE DOCUMENT.

The Last Name, Thomas McKean, to Go on the Precious Parchment Was Not Appended Until 1781—The Mecklenburg and Maryland Declarations.

Of the fifty-six men who finally affixed their signatures to the Declaration of Independence, a document that heralded the birth of a nation, to the support of which they pledged their lives, their fortunes and their sacred honor, none was so old as to be liable to a suspicion of senility and few so young that they might be accused of immaturity of judgment. Even John Hancock, rather a roving blade and none too stable in his personal habits and predilections, was thirty-nine years old when the general congress met in Independence hall, Philadelphia, to sit in judgment upon the wording of the historical document.

The oldest man in the assemblage was Benjamin Franklin, then six months past his seventieth birthday, and the youngest was Thomas Lynch, Jr., of South Carolina, who was born Aug. 5, 1749, and was therefore a month short of being twenty-seven years old.

The first of the signers of the Declaration to die after the execution of the instrument was Button Gwinnett of Georgia, who passed away on May 27 of the following year. Charles Carroll of Carrollton, Md., lived the longest after the memorable date. He remained until Nov. 13, 1832.

James Smith of Pennsylvania was the only signer who lived to a more advanced age than Charles Carroll. He was ninety-six years old when his life ended on July 11, 1806. There were three others who became nonagenarians—John Adams of Massachusetts, who passed away at ninety-one years; William Ellery of Rhode Island, at ninety-three years, and Francis Lewis of New York, at ninety-one years of age. The youngest to die was Arthur Middleton of South Carolina, who was only forty-four years old at his demise on Jan. 1, 1788.

Of the fifty-six signers but seven had advanced past the age of sixty years on July 4, 1776. Nine were between fifty and sixty, there were nineteen between forty and fifty, the same number, nineteen, between thirty and forty and two below the age of thirty years. The average age was 43.87 years.

But, contrary to popular belief, the Declaration of Independence was not signed on July 4, 1776. As a matter of fact, the last signature was not appended until five years later, in 1781. Thomas McKean, a member from Delaware, who had been present on July 4, 1776, but "absent with the army at the general subscription of said instrument," applied for permission to sign. An act was then passed permitting him to affix his signature, and "he added thereto the date of such subscription." Another delegate, Matthew Thornton of New Hampshire, who had been present at neither the reading on July 4 nor at the later date of general subscription, presented his credentials on Nov. 4, 1776, and was permitted to sign.

Pittsburg Leader Sep 1 9/15

Pittsburg Leader
Date ..... A 31-15

Providence Opera House.

"The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith's spectacular motion picture, opened its third and final week at the Providence Opera House yesterday. The same great enthusiasm that has been shown by the audiences during the past two weeks was again very much in evidence, applause being frequent, especially in the scenes where the Ku Klux Klan riders appeared.

The remarkable photoplay includes 5000 scenes, 18,000 characters and 3000 horses, and the cost of its production is estimated at $500,000. Among the features are the burning of cities, battles re-enacted, [illegible] meets Ford's Theatre in Washington and the Lincoln assassination, rides of the Ku Klux Klan and night photography of battle scenes, with artillery duels in which real shells are used. An orchestra of 40 pieces and a corps of men to add the realistic sound touches to the pictures are added features in the presentation of the play.

AUG. 31, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) LEADER

The seat sale, which opened yesterday at the Nixon theater, for the five weeks' engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," has surpassed all records in the annals of theatrical history. As soon as the announcement was made of the coming of the extraordinary film success to this city mail orders came pouring in and a like activity was noticeable in the lobby of the theater at the opening of the public sale. Reserved seats for all performances may now be procured. D. W. Griffith's great production has broken so many records in so many different ways that it is hard to keep track of them. Everybody interested in the possibilities of war finds a thrilling association with the issues of today. The great crisis of 1861-'70, as pictured in the play, present a lesson for the Americans of today. The north and the south in internecine struggle; the strategy of the Petersburg campaign and of Sherman's march to the sea; Lee's surrender to Grant, and the aftermath of war in the Reconstruction period—all these form a series of martial and political events that enchain the spectator's interest. Out of the terrible conflict a new nation, united by spiritual as well as geographical ties, was born. The fire of American patriotism never burned brighter than it burns today and "The Birth of a Nation" will be gladly welcomed at its local presentation at the Nixon.

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
AUG. 30, 1915

JOSEPH HENABERY AS ABRAHAM LINCOLN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION," AT NEW NIXON THEATER TO-DAY.

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE
AUG. 31, 1915

Providence Opera House.

The David W. Griffith spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," began the third week of its engagement at the Providence Opera House before a large audience last evening. Col. Wendelschaefer gave $2000 to keep the photoplay here this week. It is not often that a photoplay audience is moved to such a pitch of enthusiasm that it applauds the action, but such is the case with this picture. The reason is that sound and action are synchronized. The special music by the orchestra and the realistic sound effects produced behind the scenes sweep the audience forward from climax to climax.

To produce the effects 5000 pounds of mechanical devices, controlled from a switchboard by an expert electrician, have been installed and a force of 20 men is used to run the various pieces of apparatus. All of the sound effects are timed to the second by the electrician, who, anticipating every movement, signals to his men by an elaborate electric light system. The switchboard, which notifies the men who control the effects, has over 30 different keys, each one calling for a different sound. The effects used consist of cannon boom, cannon rumble, church chimes, rifle shots, rifle rattle, rush of water, horses' hoofs, smashing of door, breaking of window glass and many other smaller effects. A group of 10 men makes the sounds for the mob scenes. All of the men work in complete darkness in order to read the vari-colored electric light signals correctly.

CHICAGO (Ill.) EXAMINER
AUG. 31, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation," under the command of Barry and Brehany, representatives of Griffith and the Epoch Company respectively, de[illegible]ed upon and captured St. Louis under cover of darkness, Sunday night. Their success was announced yesterday in a brief telegram sent to George Bowles, manager of the spectacle here.

"Opened to-night under injunction and focal adjustments to $1,130," it says. "Show went over in true Southern style. Looks like St. Louis engagement will make history. Our capacity 2,200. [illegible] look to your laurels [illegible]

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH
Date Aug 31-1915

"Birth of a Nation" Saturday

Inquiries for seats are reported to be coming thick and fast for the first presentation here at the Forrest, next Saturday evening, of D. W. Griffith's photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." The first matinee will be on Labor Day and matinees will be given every day at 2.15 and night performances at 8.15. The box-office will be opened on Thursday morning. Realism is said to be the keynote to the success of "The Birth of a Nation" and it is asserted that it will make a lasting impression on children and grown-ups alike. Running through the historical scenes are two romantic love episodes of appealing character.

Aug 31-15

The Pittsburg Dispatch

The seat sale which opened yesterday at the Nixon Theater for the five weeks' engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" has surpassed all records in the annals of theatrical history. As soon as the announcement was made of the coming of the extraordinary film success to this city mail orders came pouring in and a like activity was noticeable in the lobby of the theater at the opening of the public sale. Reserved seats for all performances may now be procured.

The opening week of vaudeville at the New Davis Theater, beginning Monday afternoon (Labor Day, September 6), is to be signalized by the first appearance in [illegible]

IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

(Me.) ARGUS
AUG. 31, 1915

THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

A Grand, Thrilling, Inspiring, Informing and Comprehensive Epitome of the Civil War and the Reconstruction Period Visualized In Pictures.

When Director Griffith mooted his idea of picturing this story of the grand old U. S. A., he stipulated to the photo-play management that he must have a free hand in the preparation of the scenes, and carte blanche in the matter of expense. It was a great subject and had to be worked out upon a scale commensurate with its unbounded importance. It was a magnificent theme and demanded unstinted treatment. No cheap makeshifts should be introduced into the stirring scenes of war and adventure, no tawdry furnishings or costuming should be tolerated, and everything that shows the sham and absurdity of many pretentious productions should be avoided. Upon this understanding the immense photoplay was with infinite pains wrought to a finished work of art in a veritable "eighth wonder of the world."

In bringing this tremendous attraction to Keith's for the present week, the local management acts with commendable enterprise, and evinces great confidence in the taste and appreciation of the Portland public. To see the world's greatest masterpiece in a field of art made possible by the genius of Thomas A. Edison, this country's greatest inventor, is the natural desire of every person of intelligence. Not only is "The Birth of a Nation" the greatest and best of kinetoscopic triumphs today, but it is likely to hold first place for years to come. For no matter how many ambitious scenarios may be filmed, under perhaps improved methods, none of them can have a subject of such impelling heart and historical interest as this one.

"The Birth of a Nation" has been severely criticised because of the fearlessness in treating events which reflect upon racial and sectional questions, but these objections are unreasonable in the present stage of the Country's history. In no instance is any living individual, or any state government held up to public view as enemies of society and of the Nation. Even the Generals of the Confederacy are shown only as fighting for a cause they thought was right, and accepting the result of a restored Union as being all for the best. The illustrations of some phases of the southern negro problem aroused opposition from the colored leaders of Boston; but they are incidents of a by-gone era which time and education have put an end to, like certain chapters in history, the picture would not have been complete if these events had been left out.

The scenes of the Civil War are authoritative in their realism, and are the most valuable portion of the work. Actual photographs and drawings of the eye witneses on the field, and the official reports of the Government, were consulted with a view to attaining minute accuracy. The battles of Gettysburg and Vicksburg are full of detail, and the spectator will want to see them more than once to catch all that is transpiring on the screen. The Surrender of Lee and the Assassination of Lincoln are other dramatic representations of actual happenings. The history of the Civil War forms the first act of the photoplay.

The second act is based on the well known novel, "The Clansman, by Thomas Dixon. The stirring emotional story affords opportunity for superb spectacular effects, and the love romances that run through it are intensely appealing. The music of the play throughout is adapted to the different incidents with consummate skill. At times the excitement is so great that shouts of approval, or dismay as the situation may call for, are evoked from the audience. All of our National airs, and of the old negro melodies of the South are introduced. In one scene, at a military ball at the home of the Southern characters, a flag is presented to the regiment while the orchestra plays "The Bonny Blue Flag," which arouses enthusiastic applause even from a Portland audience. In fact there is not a particle of sectional feeling shown at any part of the play.

The audiences at the first presentations of this great picture were up to the full capacity of the house. Nothing like it has been seen at Keith's since the Edison talking [illegible] are brought out here, but at that time mere [illegible] crew, the crowd, while in "The Birth of a Nation" it is the merits of the play itself.

PORTLAND (Me.) PRESS
AUG. 31, 1915

PORTLAND DAILY

"BIRTH OF A NATION" MADE BIG HIT HERE

Immense Audience and Tremendous Enthusiasm at Keiths

"The Birth of a Nation," that tremendous feature film, the climax of motion photography, which has been secured for a week in Portland was given its first local presentations Monday at the B. F. Keith theatre. It was greeted by immense audiences, audiences that thronged the big playhouse to the doors, and the spectators reached a pitch of enthusiasm that would have seemed almost impossible for a mere motion picture. And yet the word "mere" can in no sense be applied to "The Birth of a Nation." These scenes, depicting incidents of the Civil war and of the Reconstruction period in the South which followed, are staged on such a magnificent scale that the beholder's first sensation is one of awe. There are tremendous battle scenes, which are the acme of realism, scenes depicting the bombardment of cities, scenes which give a glimpse of the soldiers in the trenches, scenes which introduce the audience to Lincoln's executive chamber, to Ford's theatre on the night of the assassination, to the secret councils of the Ku Klux clan. All these great historical events which bore such a moving and dramatic part in the upbuilding of the nation were presented with absolute historical accuracy.

Of the terrible, gripping realism of the play, and of its picturesqueness, much may be said. Much may be said, also, of the appeal of the two pretty love stories which are played out in the midst of this great, sweeping drama of war and hate, of murder and lust, of greed and political machinations amid the throes of which was born a Union which should be "one nation, indivisible, now and forever."

It is almost impossible to give a detailed story of the events which "The Birth of a Nation" depicts. It involves too many characters, sweeps over too many pages of history. Suffice it to say, however, that the first act of this great film drama has to do with the events of the war, with the great battles that were fought for supremacy between the blue and the gray, with scenes in the military hospitals, scenes in the camps, and scenes in the riddled homes of the South, and that it comes to a practical climax with the surrender of Lee at Appomattox court house. The second period, dealing with the Reconstruction, introduces as characters the Radical leader during the Lincoln administration, a man who with the aid of his negro henchmen endeavors to build up a political equality between blacks and whites, and who is repaid in his own coin when his mulatto leader demands the hand of his daughter in marriage.

Through this latter part of the play the Klu Klux clan is constantly brought into prominence, and there are wonderfully vivid and picturesque incidents showing the battles between the clansmen and the negro supporters, in which the streets literally run blood, and in which there are scenes of excitement and violence almost impossible to describe. These end with the sweeping victory of the clansmen, and then are shown scenes at Hampton institute which demonstrate better than any other medium possibly could the completeness of the reconstruction that has taken place in the South.

It is a picture wonderful from an educational standpoint, and so dramatic that it holds an audience as do very few dramas either upon the stage or upon the screen. The enthusiasm of those who watched this great spectacle play was almost as inspiring as the scenes themselves. As one man they applauded to the echo when the Stars and Stripes were planted over a redoubt in the battle scenes, and when Lee signed papers of surrender at Appomattox, while when the Klu Klux clansmen swept into the rioting village, quelling the uproar as by magic the excitement reached its highest pitch, and men and women applauded until their hands fairly ached, while the boys in the gallery stamped and shouted themselves hoarse. Not one person attempted to leave the theatre until the concluding strains of "The Star Spangled Banner" were played.

"The Birth of a Nation" is presented with a cast of film favorites totally adequate to act even this great spectable play, and the incidental music by an orchestra of 20 musicians is one of the big features.

Pittsburg Sun
Aug. 31-15
TUESDAY AFTERN

For Women and the Home

UGLY DUCKLING IN FILMDOM BECAME A SWAN AFTER ALL

MAE MARSH.

Miss Mae Marsh, who played the captivating little Flora in D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is advertised to be at the Nixon, beginning Wednesday evening, is a prodigy of filmdom. Film experts declare her to be the best "find" of the last 30 months in this wonderfully advancing art. The young girl, who lives near Los Angeles, met so many rebuffs at first that she almost gave up hope of a stage career. A small job at spear holding with the "merry, merry" was at last promised her. While awaiting this, she decided one day to sneak behind her "big sister" to the motion picture studio where the latter was employed. The tall director, Mr. Griffith, saw the young stranger and asked her whether she wanted to act. Everybody laughed, for wasn't Mae Marsh awkward and freckle-faced and unprepossessing, the very antithesis of motion picture charm? Griffith was in earnest, however. He saw under the freckles a visage born to comedy and tragedy, the high lights and deep shadows of feeling. He sensed also a temperament of electrical quality. Under his tutoring she lost some of the awkwardness and kept the rest for "slavey" parts. Fine frocks made a wonderful difference. The other actors found that Mae Marsh, with equal facility, could queen it in a palace or play a "biddy" in a kitchen. This chameleon quality led the director to entrust her with important characters. Lately he has been using her in the very greatest emotional roles. The ugly duckling is at last a swan!

Pittsburg Gazette Telegraph
Sep. 5/15

MOVING-PICTURE SHOWS MARK GREAT GROWTH

No other industry in the same given time ever grew as rapidly in America as the business enterprises that are commonly classified as motion picture industries. The thing began as a five-cent enterprise. In 10 years' time it has steadily grown until today great institutions all over the land are devoted to the manufacture of moving pictures. The one man who has done more than all others to dignify the new form of art is David Wark Griffith, whose tireless energy and art are responsible for the first $2 moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation," showing at the Nixon. It is conservatively estimated the big attraction will ultimately earn over $8,000,000. Not a bad income on an original investment of $500,000. This prospect stamps "The Birth of a Nation" the greatest piece of theatrical property the current century has brought forth, if not the greatest winner of all ages.

Pittsburg Leader
Sep. 8

NIXON—No other industry in same given time ever grew as rap in America as the business enterpr that are commonly classified as mot picture industries. In capital inve and financial returns from these in tions the moving picture is now fifth greatest combination in Ame The thing began as a five cent e prise. In 10 years time it has ste grown until today great institu all over the land are devoted to manufacture of moving pictures. high finance has take notice o once lowly "movie" and films ar a common stock for dealings o great exchanges of the country. one man who has done more th others to dignify the new form is David Wark Griffith, whose t energy and art are responsible first $2 moving picture, "The B a Nation." It is estimated that this great production has exhau earning capacity it will be see million people in America. it will exceed these figures in countries of the world. It is tively estimated the big attra ultimately earn over $8,000 Birth of a Nation" is no sented at the Nixon t remain to some

BIDDEFORD (Me.) JOURNAL
SEPT. 1, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"The Birth of a Nation," the sensational and spectacular Griffith Photo Drama production of the Civil war period, in 12 parts based on the book "the Clansman," breathes the spirit of that well-known work. The two great out-standing features of it are its controversial spirit and splendor and magnificance of its production. Taken as a whole it is the most tremendous offering ever projected through a motion picture lens. This appears at Keiths theater, Portland, this week only, at 2 every afternoon, and 8 every evening.

The greatness of the film is in its spectacular points and the historical reproductions yet so clearly defined is the drama and so very carefully presented that it grips the audience hard. The appeal is far-reaching and there probably never has been a picture offered to the American public that can approach the "swing" of its powerful pulling sometimes almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

From a technical viewpoint it may be placed on a pedestal by itself.

Nothing approaching "The Birth of a Nation" as a picture production has ever been seen in Maine.

Beginning with the troublous times just preceding the Civil war "The Birth of a Nation" takes us through that awful struggle, culminating in the assassination of Lincoln, into and through the reconstruction period, which has been classed by many as the darkest period of United States history.

PORTLAND (Me.) ARGUS
SEPT. 2, 1915

[illegible] Friday morning and t[illegible] surely be a big demand for a[illegible] advance especially for the Labo[illegible] Performances.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

If you have not seen "The Birth of a Nation" at Keith's this week you have missed the most astonishing achievement in dramatic portraiture introduced to the American stage. Imagine 18,000 people vizualizing the story of intense human interest and dramatic purposes and then add 3000 horses ridden by some of the most reckless and daring riders in the world, dashing in great cavalcades over picturesque roads and through war-strewn valleys and plains, and you can begin to form a vague idea of the scale upon which this narrative is unfolded.

The plot of the drama deals with the relationship of the slavery question to the developments of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of the disputing States there arose the mightiest nation in the world.

With history as its background reated a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodigal details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dramatist who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people and as his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hindered stage spectacles.

Given his story and the people Griffith has secured startling results. His mammoth canvas often reveals battlefields covering an area of a dozen square miles and by following historical details he reproduces the stern battle effects as they actually took place half a century ago.

In all the expanse of scene and action he never loses sight of his basic story and the smallest detail becomes as astonishing a part of the narrative as the largest incident in it. The completeness and the wonder of the work make it unusual.

BIRTH OF A NATION ROAD CO.

New York, Aug. 28.—The Birth of a Nation has broken all records at Asbury Park, where it was booked for this week to play a special date at the Savoy Theater. The house was entirely sold out for the week by Thursday morning, and in order to accommodate his patrons Manager Walter Rosenberg induced the managers of the big spectacle to put in a special performance, beginning this morning at 10 a.m. The announcement of this extra performance was made Thursday night, and by noon yesterday every seat in the Savoy was sold. The company playing Asbury Park will be at Long Branch the first half of next week, and then goes into the Forrest Theater, Philadelphia, for a limited engagement.

FALL RIVER (Mass.) HERALD
SEPT. 1, 1915

AMUSEMENTS

LARGE AUDIENCE APPLAUDS.

"The Birth of a Nation" Scores An[illegible] Triumph at Savoy.

The second day of "The Birth of a Nation," which is presented twice daily at the Savoy all this week, was another great triumphant event to be likened unto no other theatrical presentation in the histo[illegible] of the city. Those who have seen the picture will recognize the truth of the statement that there is about this great historical spectacle an atmosphere probably never before associated with the theatre. It is something of the feeling that time has been set backwards half a century that we of the present day might live for a spell in those turbulent days when the fate of this nation hung in the balance.

Those who have seen the picture will tell you, also, that there is not one moment which is not filled with interesting detail. A brief scene in "The Birth of a Nation" is in reality sufficient for the climax of an average picture. The Savoy management, then, especially urges that everybody be seated when the performance begins. The house is necessarily darkened for the presentation of the picture, and it is almost impossible to find the required seats without some confusion. Again, it is generally necessary to ask somebody to rise, temporarily shutting off some other person's view of the picture. The afternoon performance begins at 2, and the evening performance at 8 sharp.

LILLIAN GISH,
Appearing in "The Birth of a Nation."

At last night's performance, the appreciation of the audience was again the cause of great rejoicing on the part of David Dow, the traveling manager of the picture. It was of course justified, but many believe that however excellent a picture may be there is no occasion for applause because the actors are not there in person to hear. So, when the Savoy resounded with round upon round, a group of men was listening in the rear for that applause as no group of actors ever strained for the welcome sound. For, to an extent almost unbelievable, those connected with this picture, from the great Griffiths down to the bill poster, have nothing but the greatest admiration for it, and a personal pride in it amounting to absolute devotion.

Seats are on sale for every performance during the entire week. The advance sale is very large, but there are still good seats for every performance, and courteous attention will be given

MOTION PICTURE NEWS (New York City)

"NATION," PASSED BY CENSORS, WILL BE SHOWN IN PHILADELPHIA

"The Birth of a Nation" has passed the Pennsylvania Board of Censors and will have its initial showing in Philadelphia within the next two weeks. Samuel F. Nixon, managing director of several of the most important legitimate houses in this city, announces that this famous screen play will be the opening attraction of the regular winter season at the Forrest theatre, one of the finest of the Quaker City's playhouses. Saturday evening, September 4, is the date fixed for the opening.

In view of the protests already made by the colored people in that city, it will be interesting to note if any active steps will be taken by them in this regard.

Not anticipating such an early showing of this picture, a prominent colored organization (the Emancipation and Civil Rights League) decided to celebrate Emancipation Day, September 22, by a large mass meeting protesting against the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" in Philadelphia, instead of the usual parade which marks the day. This action was taken after a committee had viewed the play in Atlantic City. All churches, societies and other organizations of color were invited to join in this demonstration.

WALTHAM (Mass.) FREE PRESS
SEPT. 1, 1915

[illegible]BUNE, WEDNESDAY, SE[illegible]

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

To be Shown at Scenic Theatre

With the approach of half a century after the actual scenes of the Civil War, this highest development of the motion picture art bears a keen relationship to current events. Aside from its dramatic appeal and poetic flight, it brings back to a younger generation with a new-born realism the things which our fathers and grandfathers went through that out of the travail could come the Nation we are so proud of today. It is not a case of opening old wounds, but is art suggestive, the highest form of art, to point out to us the mistakes and misunderstandings of the past that we may face the crisis of the present with a calmness and determination to uphold the right. The dramatic form has often been employed by the greatest minds of the world to express underlined truths and as regards the usages and the sufferings of war, no pen has been able to make as impressive a picture as Griffith has encompassed in this masterpiece. A born realist, he cuts into the quick of facts that he may establish his dramatic plot. He has no been concerned with factions of propaganda, but with the unerring view of the master of the new art he has made his impress upon our minds in a way which is startlingly original and a force to be reckoned with in the future. He masses great armies upon historic plane to reproduce the records of a mighty struggle and by the human interests of two families make a great nation's efforts a topic of dramatic construction which appeals to the heart and the sympathies as no bald narrative of facts could hope to do. To attain these results he employs the passions, the loves and the conflicts of essential drama. He writes history by flashes of lightning and with it he has built up a spectacle that thrills the human soul, brings tears to the eyes, mingles pathos with laughter and above all else, does something fine upon the most tremendous scale that was ever undertaken by a dramatist in the world's history.

LILLIAN GISH.

"The Birth of a Nation" is well worth while and when one has witnessed it, it is easy to understand why it has created such a gigantic stir. The engagement of this greatest of all film spectacles opens at the Scenic Theatre for three days (matinee and evening) beginning Monday, Sept. 13.

Lincoln Answering the Mother's Prayer in "The Birth of a Nation."

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

Remarkable Film Drama at Keith's, Portland, This Week.

The famous photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," which has been shown from coast to coast before packed houses is for this week only at the Keith's theatre in Portland, and thousands of Maine people will avail themselves of the opportunity to witness the remarkable film drama, the only time that it has been thrown on the screen east of Boston.

Both matinees and evening shows are over in time for Biddeford and Saco people to get conveniently early cars home, the matinee commencing at 2, and the evening film starts at 8 o'clock.

No person who hasn't seen this picture can begin to realize what a spectacular and at the same time realistic thing it is. The battle sceness are so grappling that veterans of the Civil war gasp with astonishment and the wonderful charges of the Ku Klux Clan and their wild rides across the country never fail to keep the audience at fever pitch of excitement and enthusiasm.

THE NEW YORK REVIEW, SEPTEMBER 4, 1915.

D.W. GRIFFITH WHOSE MASTER-PIECE "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" IS AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE PHOTO BY SAVGS

CHICAGO EXAMINER
Sep 4 1915

central distributing [illegible] best photoplays [illegible] point of sales and it is always clamoring for more and better pictures. Welcome the season of 1915-16.

COLONIAL.

Playing to larger houses than ever before since its opening in Chicago, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," at the Colonial Theater, is in its fourth month here, with every likelihood of breaking all past records for a successful run. In a delightfully attractive new home, the spectacle bids fair to stay on Randolph street all Winter.

There is no letup in the line that forms every day long before the box-office opens. From out of town men and women come with lunch boxes and wait in line. Rather than take a chance on being left, they sit on the stairs in the lobby and eat their lunches.

"Looks like a daily world series," said a baseball fan as he stood in front of the theater and watched the crowd.

The rose feature is becoming more and more popular with the women. Thousands of roses are tossed from the balcony by one of the pretty little crinoline girls as the women enter the house. It is a pleasing touch that adds much to the spirit of the audience before the first shrill bugle call that announces the opening of the show.

BOSTON JOURNAL
SEPT. 8, 1915

Paid in the Movies—

By E. F.

"The Birth of a Nation," which closed a 2-weeks' run at the Tremont Saturday night, will start a supplementary run at the Majestic Theatre this afternoon, under practically the same conditions that prevailed during the record-establishing engagement at the Tremont.

In this instance there is no need of emphasizing the fact that the original cast remains unchanged. The prodigious film itself is now under different management, so far as New England is concerned, and it looks as if the New England owners had picked up one of the finest bargains on the theatrical counter. You would believe it if you knew the price they paid for the Northeastern rights and if you saw the jam in the lobby of the Tremont all last week.

But the principal tidings are that the few hundred thousand out of the million and a half people in the metropolitan theatre zone who have not already seen the famous Griffith cast in the most stirring of all the photo-spectacles of the time can slack their curiosity for the next few weeks or so at the Majestic.

In the "Birth of a Nation" cast is one of the most gifted character actresses so far associated with moving picture productions—a prepossessing young woman who smothers her identity in the character of Lydia Brown, Congressman Stoneman's mulatto housekeeper, but whose successful portrayal of this difficult part is all the more admirable for that particular reason. Miss Alden is evidently an artist. The accompanying picture of her is one that is seldom been seen outside of the [illegible] offices.

PORTLAND (Me.) JOURNAL
AUG. 29, 1915

712 'BIRTH OF NATION' FILM IS VIVID STORY OF EARLY DAY EVENTS

Audience Cheers Stirring Features Shown at Heilig at Opening Performance.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a drama with the power of life.

It will help to link the north and south more closely. It wins northern sympathy for the southern viewpoint and the southern viewpoint is truthfully shown.

At the Heilig yesterday when the film was first shown a crowded audience passed through three intensely emotional hours. The tragedy, the romance and the slight amount of comedy that surrounded the years of the Civil war passed before their eyes. So tremendous was the subject, so vivid its depiction, that not only did the actors seem the originals in the parts they played but the audience was drawn in some mysterious way into the play

History Is Depicted.

The happiest moments of the unbroken south, they saw; the most dreadful days of war; the despair of southern people when Lincoln, their best friend, was assassinated; the terrible reconstruction days when dread dwelt in every southern woman's heart and horror filed the days of all.

In the southern home of Dr. Cameron, Elsie Stoneman, whose father is a power in Washington, visits before the war.

The war comes. Mrs. Cameron, striving not to be seen weeping, sends out her three sons to fight for principals that the south as conscientiously believed right as the north thought them wrong.

March to Sea Realistic.

The war passes with the hateful realism of its battles and where others fall, fall also the two sons of Dr. Cameron of the south and the second son of Stoneman of the north.

The march to the sea seems to have been photographed as it took place. The thousands of marching men, the hundreds of fearing, crouching people, the burning homes and barns and destroyed crops and stock, the gleaming of flames and the suffering—all are shown so well that almost the crash of cannon, the rattle of the guns, the shouts, the screams may be heard.

By the magic of the film the scene sweeps northward. The little colonel, one of the sons sent out to battle by Mrs. Cameron, is in a prison hospital. Elsie Stoneman visits him. The mother, worn with grief, defies the sentry to keep her from her boy after her painful journey to see him. She learns he is to be shot as a guerilla. She appeals to the "great heart"—Lincoln. He cannot deny her plea. The little colonel is freed.

Assassination Is Shown.

The scene is set in Ford's theatre. The play is under way. The president enters and the cheers that greet him stop the performance. The bodyguard leaves his place at the door of the president's box that he may see the play. John Wilkes Booth enters, the shot is fired that shocked both north and south.

Grant and Lee met in the same tent.

SEPT. 2, 1915
PITTSBURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH

BIG PHOTOPLAY CREATES STIR IN PITTSBURG

"The Birth of a Nation," Under Official Ban, Wins Public Approval

A MOVIE MASTERPIECE

Temporary Injunction on Municipal Interference to Be Argued Friday

Undoubtedly the greatest motion picture entertainment ever conceived is "The Birth of a Nation," which opened to a large audience at the Nixon last night. In every phase it is a wonderful film, surprising alike to regular theatergoers and to movie fans. The theme, our Civil War, is so resourceful, so tremendous, so full of possibilities as to be overwhelming. The incidents selected for the screen are so well chosen, so neatly dove-tailed, so elaborately presented, that the auditor, whether he be old enough to remember the days of 61-65, or just a youthful student of his country's history, will carry away mental pictures that he will never forget.

The piece is splendidly cast, the principals being actors of sufficient merit to make one forget that all this is posed. The spectacular effects give one a feeling of awe—you don't want to applaud; you just want to be silent. The posing of the large scenes is stupendous beyond comprehension. The reproductions of places, scenes and events, made as historically correct as genius could devise, were so real and convincing that they were greeted by spontaneous applause. The detail is so clever that one cannot tell about it—one must see to understand. Scenically the

May Marsh,
t sister in "The Birth of a Nation."

a wonder, the audience sometimes g down a vista for miles, and all action. The photography is the ever seen here in film work, and is a continuity of things, even when cture man carries along three themes ries at once, that amazes an audi-besides the photographic and posing there is a story running through the that is gripping, natural, pregnant human interest and convincing. The ry end of the show is not deficient. of the great scenes are the battles n Union and Confederate soldiers. are fought with a fidelity to fact or ity that makes old soldiers go into s of wonderment and appreciation. elaborate but none-the-less inter- scenes, such as Lee's surrender, and his Cabinet, Lincoln's assas- all bear the earmarks of the most consideration. In the whole there ending of pathos and tragedy that y's emotions to the highest point of y, and here and there a touch of comedy to relieve the strain. Part he Birth of a Nation" is a histor- nument.

It is an elaboration of Rev Dixon's The Clansman," and the same ob- lodged against the play will hold the film. Of course, an elabora- scenario in the Ku-Klux episode the film much more interesting than y, yet in both there is a too long out presentation of incidents that greeable. Rev Mr Dixon thought, books and plays, that he had a mis- d emphasized a dark page of our history to make his point plain. as unessential in a masterpiece of work. The dragging out to great of the chase of a girl by Renegade play the drunken scene in Lieuten- the ne Lynch's apartments, is as the Fort it seems unnecessary to engagem

SEPT. 2, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES

"Birth of a Nation" . . Is a Great Spectacle

By CHARLES M. BREGG.

IN ASSEMBLING the series of pictures for his remarkable photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith has evidently reached the apotheosis of photographic drama. This very marvelous display was presented at the Nixon last night for the first time in Pittsburgh, and its general character, the breadth of its treatment and its overpowering wealth of physical accomplishment justify its use at maximum prices as the opening attraction of the theatrical season in a house devoted to more legitimate dramatic entertainment. I have never been an enthusiastic partisan of the dumb drama as a substitute for the vocal and human art of the theater; and even now can hardly imagine that the scope and influence of this style of drama can ever seriously take the place of the spoken play. But the more than two hours and a half of Griffith's great historical pageant convinces one that the screen may impart the most thrilling emotional effects and that human action may be used dumbly to indite the most vivid and startling dramatic sequences. In "The Birth of a Nation" the producer has combined an overwhelming sense of physical resources with acting expression that conveys a thrill in nearly every movement and gesture. The players are dumb to the audience, but they convey a meaning and an emotional impulse so strong at times as to almost lift you out of your seat. By the lifting of a hand in one scene the whole gamut of maternal grief and joy is sounded.

Perhaps in approaching this supreme expression of photo-drama the first thing that strikes the beholder is its immense display of physical resources. All other picture plays that I have seen are insignificant compared with the Griffith screen in this particular. The effect is of vastness, both as to perspectives and figures. What seem to be thousands of horsemen appear approaching in the distance and coming to the very edge of the canvas and then dissolving in rapid movement. Mr. Griffith has devised uses for the camera that are revolutionary and daring. He dissolves his views of moving scenes in startling fashion and secures mere glimpses, fleeting visions that lend a peculiarly vivid dramatic effect in interpreting the story. For instance, one scene last night in which the militant horsemen of the Southern clans are silhouetted against the night sky in crossing a distant hill top, called for merited applause, and got it. It was one of the most remarkable pictorial effects I have ever seen.

But the massiveness of this new photoplay art is astounding. The battle scenes of the Civil War are beyond comprehension to the layman. The conflict around Petersburg, Va., where the dying Confederacy was fighting with its back to the wall, is inconceivably great, both in scope and action. We are actually confronted with wide-flung battle lines that draw nearer and nearer until we look into the faces of men in the throes of a superhuman struggle. Sherman's march to the sea is largely in perspective, but it, too, is a startling manifestation of the camera's power, while the burning of Atlanta produces light effects that are vivid and ghastly, carrying a keen sense of the dramatic along with the appeal to the eye. The same may be said of the reproduction of the scene at Appomattox when Lee surrendered, and that supremely tragic pictorial representation of the assassination of Lincoln in Ford's Theater. Here the detail is wonderful in its effect. The stage, the players, the audience, the beloved victim and his murderer, are given in such accurate form and with such a fine sense of dramatic values that it amazes and overwhelms the mind. It is in these great physical resources that Griffith has accomplished for the photodrama a place that I question will ever be excelled, if it is ever equaled. Other subjects as comprehensive may be treated, but I am inclined to believe that motion photography has reached its top-notch in "The Birth of a Nation."

But beyond this stupendous appeal to the eye from the first scene to the last, the selection and treatment of the theme is wonderful. The psychology and dramatic swing of this picture-drama is a triumph beyond that of the mere scene builder. It is a dramatic epic, a poem of love and hate, a tense tragedy, a point of bitter controversial possibilities, for it handles history with gloves off. In this respect one is not surprised at some of the antagonisms it has provoked, though that there should be racial passions over its display at this late day is foolish. The reconstruction in the South after the war was inevitable, and while terrible in some of its phases, no permanent schism between blacks and whites resulted. The fact that the assassination of Abraham Lincoln was a direful calamity for those on both sides who hoped quickly to weld the two sections together, is finely and clearly portrayed, and the pictures at the close emphasize the contrasts between that period of hate and sudden frenzy and the present amity, progress and prosperity of the better classes of the colored race in the South. The views of Hampton Institute and the activities of the students present a cheering and optimistic note in a series of graphic and historically tragic views of the period just following the war in the South.

SEPT. 2, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) CHRONICLE

"Birth of a Nation" Presented at Nixon

Motion Picture Spectacle Reproduces Scenes of Civil War and Southern Reconstruction Period.

MUSIC IS A NOTABLE FEATURE

"The Birth of a Nation," D. G. Griffith's motion picture spectacle founded on the theme of American Civil War history and the trying period of reconstruction days makes good all the claims that were made for it in advance. The audience that witnessed the opening of its engagement at the Nixon Theater last night saw not only a masterpiece of animated photography but likewise were thrilled by an entertainment altogether novel and unique. It is a photodrama on a mammoth scale set to music, and the success of the production is due to the painstaking care in handling every detail, and particularly in the arrangement of the incidental music. In this case, however, the music is not incidental; it is more than half the show. It is the Wagnerian idea fitted to the screen drama and the synchronization is so perfectly adapted to this story that it becomes a most important part of the epical form of narrative. The score was arranged by Joseph Carl Breil who spent months with Mr. Griffith while he was making the picture. It is perhaps the most unusual score ever devised.

The photography is superb. The battle scenes, the riding of the Ku-Klux and the melodramatic incidents are faultless. Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" furnishes the thread for the plot, but the Griffith production assumes the burden of telling practically the whole story of the sufferings of the South from the fall of Fort Sumter through Appomattox down to the race riots in South Carolina in the '70's. Many historical scenes are introduced. These are acted out in tableau form before the motion picture camera and indicate that great effort has been made to have them historically correct. With few exceptions the actors have done their work well and the pictures are of no small educational value. However, the Lincoln should be done over. The man playing this role has spoiled the character by putting on too much of the cadaverous make-up. It would be well, too, to let Simon Cameron and not Edwin M. Stanton appear as secretary of war in the picture of Lincoln's cabinet in the period of 1861. At the formal surrender at Appomattox it would be well to suppress Gen. Grant's cigar. It has often been commented upon that this was one occasion on which Gen. Grant forgot his weed. Following the drama a reel of motion picture views of the colored training school at Hampton, Va., was shown.

CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK TIMES
Date SEP 5 - 1915

I HAVE been waiting a long time for that, and now that it has come it is a great victory for the films." The speaker was J. J. McCarthy, head of the Epoch Producing Company, which controls the picture, "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. McCarthy was standing in his office in the Longacre Building looking out of the window at a hoarding perched on the roof of a building below Forty-second Street.

CLIPPING FROM Date Sunday News
9-3-15

GRIFFTH MAKES HISTORY LIVE

"Birth Of Nation" is Startling In Its Realism

David W. Griffith's most extraordinary achievement with his new photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" which closes its all summer's successful run at the New Nixon on Monday, September 6th, is that of making history live. He has touched the high peaks of American history—the introduction of slavery, the War of Secession, the surrender at Appomattox, the death of Lincoln, the miseries of Reconstruction, and the restoration of the South to its own.

Mr. Griffith employed 18,000 people in taking these historical pictures. The battle scenes were actual duplicates of several of the Civil War conflicts and so were the facsimiles of important events.

The labor involved in this newest sort of picture-making is enormous. There are 5,000 separate and individually posed scenes involving about 200,000 interesting details. The musical score is as complex and elaborate as that of any grand opera. Although not a word is poken on the stage, the musical and mechanical effects employ a hundred helpers nightly. In fact, the magnitude of the stupendous film dwarfs the average stage play into insignificance.

H...the lir Cdetaoin shrdlu etaoin hrdlu

IPPING FROM Standard
BROOKLYN, (N. Y.) CITIZEN
ate 1915
SEP 5

BRIGHTON BEACH MUSIC HALL.—Following the announcement by William H. Kemble, the managing director, that Brighton Beach Music Hall, where D. W. Griffith's $100,000 picture, "The Birth of a Nation," is being presented, would remain open until October 4, that the school children and residents returning from their vacations might view it, fourteen educational and veteran societies have made reservations for seats for theatre parties. In deciding to keep open until after Labor Day, when he intended at first to close, Mr. Kemble was influenced by requests he received from educators and Brooklynites in the country who expressed a wish to see the performance before it left Brooklyn. Several school principals and a number of teachers in the public schools have told Mr. Kemble that they intend to organize theatre parties among school children.

SEPT. 2, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) POST

The young men's Republican Tariff Club will hold a reception for candidates Tuesday evening.

"Birth of Nation" Stirs Big Crowd

Swiftest succession of stirring scenes ever projected on a screen stirred last night's big attendance in the Nixon Theater to frequent applause for the marvels of animated pictures shown in D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle of "The Birth of a Nation" swept along with unparalleled speed. When Southern troops were represented coming through the streets of Piedmont, S. C., to the swinging march played by the special orchestra, while quick "cut-ins" pictured the rush and excitement and tearful partings between sons and mothers, the sight drew from the spectators an outburst of admiration—a tribute to the effective representation of martial spirit.

A hush followed when the scenes took the spectators to the flash and torture of the battlefield, and eyes dimmed with tears when they looked upon the sorrow of bereaved motherhood. The red flaming scene described as the torch of battle laid against the breast of Atlanta caused a murmur of wonder which broke into renewed rounds of applause at the sight of the conquering Sherman's army pictured on the march to the sea.

The entire photo spectacle, approved by the Pennsylvania board of censors, is shown at the Nixon, including such scenes as an attack on a girl, representing features in the negro question confronting the South in the reconstruction period.

The musical accompaniment is a distinctive feature of this photo production. Last night's spectators were greeted in the theater by the novel vision of two girls in crinoline dress of the sixties, with white continuations ruffling around each ankle.

CLIPPING FROM Post
Date Pittsburgh Sept 1 (Sun)
Sept 1

TALKED IN THE FOYERS

Motion Picture Prices—"Birth of a Nation"—A Racial Talent, Etc.

A QUESTION that appears to be agitating the motion picture world a good deal at present is that of price. The success of "The Birth of a Nation" with its regular theater prices, and the contemplation of other high-priced feature pictures is causing a good deal of discussion among patrons as well as producers and exhibitors. The new Triangle Film Corporation, which will handle the Griffith-Ince-Sennett photoplays, has leased the Knickerbocker Theater, New York, is building in it small private boxes in a horseshoe like that of the Metropolitan Operahouse, and will establish a scale of prices from $3 down. To people in this vicinity such prices look pretty high for a moving picture. It is such a very little while ago since a dime was the limit, that the thought naturally occurs, "What will we get that will repay us?"

If photography is ready to give us new wonders, new artistic effects, no doubt the people will be willing to pay for them; but it is not likely that the public (outside of New York) will be eager to pay high prices for mere extravagance, for large orchestras or great singers to accompany the pictures, or even for the picture appearances of great stars who are valuable to the camera more for their names than anything else. The motion picture public has not yet forgotten the little old storeroom where a nickel bought an hour or two's delight and wonderment. It was the cheapness and consequent democracy of the motion picture that built it up as a great industry, and it would not be at all strange if the great mass of the people would resent any great forcing up of the prices. The value of the motion picture has been in the fact that it filled a need—low-priced entertainment. If combinations of motion picture interests are to result in an artificial price the theatrical situation is likely to be quite different that it is at present.

The president of the Paramount Picture Corporation recently put himself on record as distinctly opposed to the $1 and $2 picture house, stating that in his opinion 50 cents should be the highest price asked for any picture likely to be made. In an interview printed in The Christian Science Monitor, he said:

As long as five years ago my experience had convinced me that increased charges of admission to motion picture entertainments, that is, admission up to 50 cents, were feasible, but this price should be restricted to a limited number of seats in the largest and finest amusement places in the largest cities, and at that time I thought, and still think, that the average admission of 10 and 20 cents should prevail to permit of the best being given to the public, and that there is no necessity for an average price exceeding this.

There are many fundamental reasons for this belief. Possibly the one most readily appreciated is the fact that if a certain percentage of the population could afford to pay $1 to $2 for motion pictures, at least 10 times as great a number could afford to pay 10 and 20 cents. If 1 per cent of the United States' public will pay $1 and $2 to see a particular motion picture, there will be at least 10 per cent who can afford to pay 10 and 20 cents, in either case making the same amount of money available for production purposes. It is doubtful if the $1 and $2 picture could continue in competition with the 10 and 50 cent picture in opposition, as even the most fastidious would find the surroundings of the beautiful places conducting exhibitions at from 10 to 50 cents not only equal but superior to the accommodations offered by the places of small seating capacity attempting to cater to the select at exclusive prices.

In the very near future subjects will be put into film that will be worthy of being seen by the entire public and a very large percentage—say from 25 per cent to 50 per cent—will see them. And if from 25 per cent to 50 per cent of the public see them at prices ranging from 10 to 50 cents, the revenue will be so great that the producer will be warranted in spending any amount in making the pictures.

On the other hand, there is no doubt of the present eagerness of the public to see one particular picture, "The Birth of a Nation." The phenomenal run of this picture in New York, as well as in a few other large cities, and the glowing accounts heard from all who have seen it, have whetted curiosity, and it is likely that, high prices notwithstanding, it would enjoy a prosperous run at one of our local theaters. The racial objections which have been made to this picture have been elsewhere silenced as unnecessary and foolish. (The picture is historical, and in order to be truthful is obliged to depict some unpleasant incidents.) It will probably be seen at the Hartman during the season.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) TELEGRAPH
SEP 5

DECISION FAVORS GRIFFITH FILM

Producing Company May Show "Birth of a Nation" in 17 Western States.

DAVIS CAN'T GET INJUNCTION

The Epoch Producing Company, organized to exploit "The Birth of a Nation," won another court victory on Tuesday of last week when Supreme Court Justice Shearn dissolved a temporary injunction obtained by George H. Davis, a California theatrical manager, against the film company. The Epoch Producing Company, together with the author, Thomas Dixon, controls the motion picture rights of "The Clansman." The injunction, which was set aside by the court, forbade the producing company from exhibiting the picture in seventeen Western States.

The plaintiff sued the Epoch Producing Company for specific performance of an alleged contract giving him the right exclusively, so he claimed, to exhibit the films in the seventeen States. The papers in the case show that no formal contract was ever signed, but that conversations in California were held last June between Davis and David W. Griffith of the producing company.

According to the plaintiff, the film company sold to another company the right to produce the picture in Portland, Ore., for $8,000, while he, Davis, was on the way East to sign the contract. Despite the fact that Oregon was one of the seventeen States Davis says he was willing to pay the original price agreed upon.

The Producing Company refused to sign the contract, however, and in its answer to the complaint alleges that Davis had failed to meet one of the terms stipulated by the defendant company in that he had not consented to give bond to insure against the manufacture of duplicate films from the company's original pictures. The company alleges that, while it might appear to the lay mind that duplication of films in the seventeen States which it was proposed to cover by the contract would interest Davis only, the owners of the film were vitally parties at interest, because of the possible effect upon its reputation of any inferior duplicate films that might be put on the market.

Justice Shearn ruled that the question whether or not a contract had been made would have to be determined at the trial of the case.

Pittsburg Post Sep 1/15

Tonight will see the first showing of David W. Griffith's photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," in the Nixon Theater. The advance sale of seats indicates that the house tonight will be the largest that has assembled in many seasons. The engagement will continue four weeks more, twice daily, except Sundays.

Pittsburg Sun Aug. 31/15

UGLY DUCKLING IN FILMDOM BECAME A SWAN AFTER ALL

MAE MARSH.

Miss Mae Marsh, who played the captivating little Flora in D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is advertised to be at the Nixon, beginning Wednesday evening, is a prodigy of filmdom. Film experts declare her to be the best "find" of the last 30 months in this wonderfully advancing art. The young girl, who lives near Los Angeles, met so many rebuffs at first that she almost gave up hope of a stage career. A small job at spear holding with the "merry, merry" was at last promised her. While awaiting this, she decided one day to sneak behind her "big sister" to the motion picture studio where the latter was employed. The tall director, Mr. Griffith, saw the young stranger and asked her whether she wanted to act. Everybody laughed, for wasn't Mae Marsh awkward and freckle-faced and unprepossessing, the very antithesis of motion picture charm? Griffith was in earnest, however. He saw under the freckles a visage born to comedy and tragedy, the high lights and deep shadows of feeling. He sensed also a temperament of electrical quality. Under his tutoring she lost some of the awkwardness and kept the rest for "slavey" parts. Fine frocks made a wonderful difference. The other actors found that Mae Marsh, with equal facility, could queen it in a palace or play a "biddy" in a kitchen. This chameleon quality led the director to entrust her with important characters. Lately he has been using her in the very greatest emotional roles. The ugly duckling is at last a swan!

Aug 30/15

Frl. Lilian Gish in „The Birth of a Nation."

Das Olympic Theater wurde gestern für die Saison mit der Wandelbild Vorstellung „The Birth of a Nation" eröffnet. „The Birth of a Nation ist für fünf Wochen gebucht.

SEPT. 2.
PITTSBURGH (Pa.) C

BIG
CR

"Th

PEACE ALLEGORY IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

At the Savoy All Next Week, Afternoon and Evening

The Ku Klux Klan, whose deeds are so generously celebrated in Mr. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," at the Savoy all this week, occupy a peculiar position in history somewhere between the California Vigilantes and the Molly Maguires of odorous Pennsylvania fame. The marvel of it is that to the spectators they are naught but heroes. The tide of enthusiasm begins to rise with the initial appearance of these spectral southern horsemen on the screen, and as their gallant deeds crowd one upon the other, applause becomes practically continuous and even shouts and huzzas mark their final triumph and rescue of the "downtrodden whites" from their carpetbagger enemies.

Of course, the Ku Klux in Mr. Griffith's play are conventionial heroes. No one who sees a lot of white-clad horsemen racing like mad, performing thrilling mounts and dismounts, saving captive maidens and rescuing beleaguered folks in a cabin from attackers armed with shotguns can help applauding for all he is worth. Another and more unfavorable side of the Ku Klux is given in Judge Tourgee's novels, "Bricks Without Straw" and "A Fool's Errand." The Klans undoubtedly saved the southern people from the horrid fear of African massacre. But to those northerners who came to settle in the south after the Civil war, as well as to the luckless negroes, many of their clannish acts must have appeared as little else than outrages.

There are always "two sides of the shield" concerning secret force organizations which are outside the pale of the law. History distributes praise or blame according to the justification such secret societies had for their violence and also whether they were "able to get away with it." Most people suppose the Sicilian Mafia to be wholly brutal and murderous. But Marion Crawford informs us it was an "unwritten" organization of all the Sicilian masses to fight the grinding tyranny of the Bourbons. Only in later days did it degenerate to blackmail, holdups and bomb-throwing. Even the famed Neapolitan Camorra has some striking points of likeness with New York's Tammany of Tweed and Sweeney days.

The Klan was a sort of southern Mafia—a banding of the native sons against all the ills real and imaginary that were brought upon the southern people thru reconstruction. The fact that so many thousands of "good citizens" and even distinguished men belonged to the order, and the further fact that the good women of the south were their most ardent supporters, have lent a tinge of romance and chivalry to their history. Of these facts Producer Griffith took full account in making them the protagonists of "The Birth of a Nation" story.

Pittsburg Press
Aug 31/15

Seats on Sale at Nixon.

The seat sale which opened yesterday at the Nixon theater for the five weeks' engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" has surpassed all records in the annals of theatrical history. Everybody interested in the possibilities of war finds a thrilling association with the issues of today. The great crises of 1861-'70 as pictured in the play have their lesson for the Americans of today. The North and the South in internecine struggles; the strategy of the Petersburg campaign and of Sherman's march to the sea; Lee's surrender to Grant, and the aftermath of war in the Reconstruction period—all these form a series of martial and political events that enchain the spectator's interest. Out of the terrible conflict a new nation, united by spiritual as well as geographical ties, was born.

St Louis Times Aug 30/15

"Birth of Nation" Thrills a Big Audience at Olympic

With Bold Faithfulness to the History of the Reconstruction Period, Griffith's Photo-Spectacle Insults No One.

By Raymond A. Walsh,
Dramatic Critic, St. Louis Times.

To a gallery that stamped and shrieked its approval, to a balcony that ...ed in its nervous excitement, to a parquet that applauded in that usual ...asteristic, manner peculiar to parquets, "The Birth of a Nation," the great... photo-spectacle to date, was presented at the Olympic Theater, Sunday night. ...w a most representative gathering and a sort of auspicious occasion. Judge ...Dimmel, whose temporary injunction restrained the police from interfering ...d opening night's presentation, was there. Chief Youig, who heads the ...ment which was restrained, was there. And, of course, the morality ...ir Censhorship Committee took due notice of each and every one of the ...nes. Whether the morality squad, or so-called censors, decided that the ... or did not conform to Nicolay's's or Hay's or Wilson's theories of the re...ction period, I am unable to say. I suppose these details will be deter...y the censors later—if the court grants them the right to exercise the ...judgments necessary.

...ts of our morals and safety insist upon censoring "The Birth ...may as well go into the classrooms of our public schools ...American history. If St. Louis is robbed of future ...Nation" it will ... opportunity of viewing ...t and m... ...achievements of ...

Aug 29/15

Staatsanwalt verbietet Aufführung von „The Birth of the Nation".

Die Aufführung des Stückes „Birth of the Nation", das von heute an fünf Wochen lang im Olympic-Theater aufgeführt werden soll, wurde von dem Staatsanwalt Howard Sidener verboten, da er zahlreiche Protestschriften von der Bürgerschaft erhalten hat, die sich gegen das Stück aussprechen. Der Staatsanwalt wird sich heute an den Polizeichef Young wenden, um ihn Polizisten vor dem Theater anstellen zu lassen, die die Aufführung des Stückes verhindern sollen. Der Staatsanwalt erklärte, daß seine eigene Anschauung in diesem Falle mit der der vielen Protestschriften übereinstimme. Er habe sich überzeugt, daß der Inhalt des Stückes nur dazu beitrage, um ein starkes Gefühl des Hasses zwischen der schwarzen und weißen Rasse zu erwecken.

Der Inhalt des Stückes ist aus dem Bürgerkriege genommen und dient dazu, wie die Vertreter einiger Negervereinigungen der Stadt dem Staatsanwalte schrieben, um dem verderblichen und mörderischen „Ku Klux Klan" den Schein der Glorie umzuhängen. Ein ziemlich langes Schreiben des bittersten Protestes wurde dem Staatsanwalte durch den St. Louiser Zweig der International Association of the Colored People unterbreitet. Zudem kamen die Protestschreiben vieler Vereinigungen der weißen Rasse, so daß sich der Staatsanwalt veranlaßt sah, die Aufführung des Stückes zu untersagen.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT. 5, 1915

THE GIRL WITH THE SPEAKING FACE.

Mae Marsh.

Mae Marsh, who plays the role of Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Nixon Theater, is known all over the country as the girl with a thousand faces. Miss Marsh has only been in pictures two years, but she already has reached the top of the ladder. A few seasons ago she came to the Griffith studio to watch her older sister work. She was raw and undeveloped, but Griffith's keen eye saw great possibilities beneath the surface of her anxious eyes and mobile countenance. He wanted a half-grown girl for a work he was finishing and he selected her. Now she has the most likable role in all the thousands of characters that crowd the Griffith photoplay. This California girl can express almost any action the feminine mind can grasp. She has played tomboys and heroines, consumptive girls and athletic girls. No part frightens her when Griffith is directing.

SEPTEMBER 2, 1915.

"Birth of a Nation" . . . . Is a Great Spectacle

By CHARLES M. BREGG.

IN ASSEMBLING the series of pictures for his remarkable photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith has evidently reached the apotheosis of photographic drama. This very marvelous display was presented at the Nixon last night for the first time in Pittsburgh, and its general character, the breadth of its treatment and its overpowering wealth of physical accomplishment justify its use at maximum prices as the opening attraction of the theatrical season in a house devoted to more legitimate dramatic entertainment. I have never been an enthusiastic partisan of the dumb drama as a substitute for the vocal and human art of the theater; and even now can hardly imagine that the scope and influence of this style of drama can ever seriously take the place of the spoken play. But the more than two hours and a half of Griffith's great historical pageant convinces one that the screen may impart the most thrilling emotional effects and that human action may be used dumbly to indite the most vivid and startling dramatic sequences. In "The Birth of a Nation" the producer has combined an overwhelming sense of physical resources with acting expression that conveys a thrill in nearly every movement and gesture. The players are dumb to the audience, but they convey a meaning and an emotional impulse so strong at times as to almost lift you out of your seat. By the lifting of a hand in one scene the whole gamut of maternal grief and joy is sounded.

Perhaps in approaching this supreme expression of photo-drama the first thing that strikes the beholder is its immense display of physical resources. All other picture plays that I have seen are insignificant compared with the Griffith screen in this particular. The effect is of vastness, both as to perspectives and figures. What seem to be thousands of horsemen appear approaching in the distance and coming to the very edge of the canvas and then dissolving in rapid movement. Mr. Griffith has devised uses for the camera that are revolutionary and daring. He dissolves his views of moving scenes in startling fashion and secures mere glimpses, fleeting visions that lend a peculiarly vivid dramatic effect in interpreting the story. For instance, one scene last night in which the militant horsemen of the Southern clans are silhouetted against the night sky in crossing a distant hill top, called for startled applause, and got it. It was one of the most remarkable pictorial effects I have ever seen.

the massiveness of this new photo-art is astounding. The battle scenes of the Civil War are beyond comprehension to the layman. The conflict around Petersburg, Va., where the dying Confederacy was at bay with its back to the wall, is incontrovertibly great, both in scope and action. We are actually confronted with wide-flung battlelines that draw nearer and nearer until they fade into the faces of men in the throes of a superhuman struggle. Sherman's march to the sea is largely in perspective, yet it, too, is a startling manifestation of the human power, while the burning of Atlanta produces light effects that are vividly realistic, carrying a keen sense of the horrible along with the appeal to the eye. Nothing may be said of the reproduction of Lee at Appomattox when Lee surrendered, and that supremely tragic picture, the presentation of the assassination of Lincoln in Ford's Theater. Here the detail is marvelous in its effect. The stage, the boxes, the audience, the beloved victim and the patriot murderer, are given in such accurate detail and with such a fine sense of dramatic fitness that it amazes and overwhelms the spectator. Yet it is in these great physical resources that Griffith has accomplished for the photoplay that I question will ever be surpassed or even equaled. Other subjects more comprehensive may be treated, but I am inclined to believe that motion photography has reached its top-notch in "The Birth of a Nation" is to

PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS SEPT. 6, 1915

Photoplay Sale Large.

The performances of D. W. Griffith's wonderous spectacle drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Nixon theater, commence promptly at 2:15 for the matinees and 8:15 for the evenings. Owing to the long line of ticket-purchasers and the crowded condition of the theater lobby, it is advisable to purchase seats in advance, for theater patrons buying seats for a current performance are forced to stand in line for some time, thus often time missing the opening of this impressive performance.

Theater und Sommergärten

Noch nie, seit den Tagen, als „Ben Hur" zum ersten Male die Gemüter der Theaterbesucher von St. Louis bewegte, hat ein Stück soviel Aufsehen erregt, und noch nie hat das St. Louiser Publikum einer Theateraufführung soviel Erwartung und Spannung entgegengebracht als „The Birth of the Nation", das heute abend seine 5 wöchentliche, tägliche Aufführung beginnt.

Schon am vergangenen Mittwoch kamen die 50 Künstler, die in dem Stücke auftreten von einem wahren Heer von Elektrikern und Mechanikern, wie anderen Bühnenarbeitern begleitet in St. Louis an. Sogar ihr eigenes Symphonie-Orchester hat die Künstlerschaar mit sich gebracht.

Die Aufführung des Stückes kostet nahezu $500,000 und dennoch werden niedrige Preise, zwischen 25c und $2 für die Abendvorstellungen und 25c bis 1 Dollar für die täglichen Matinees verlangt.

Herr Griffith hat sich Thomas Dixons „The Clansman" für sein hervorragendes Stück, „The Birth of a Nation" ausgesucht und schildert in demselben eine Epoche der amerikanischen Geschichte, die jeden Amerikaner, ganz gleich welcher Abstammung von einem heiligen Schauder erfassen lassen wird; den Bürgerkrieg, die Geburt der Nation.

Die Geschichte behandelt nicht weniger denn 5000 Szenen und das Publikum wird denselben mit großer Spannung und reichem Applaus bis zum letzten Fallen des Vorhanges zusehen. Die Schlacht bei Petersburg, bei der nicht weniger als 18,000 Männer in einer fünf Meilen langen Schlachtfront sich feindlich gegenüberstanden; der Marsch von General Sherman nach der See; das Inbrandstecken von Atlanta, das gerade erst in den letzten Tagen durch das über Leo Frank verhängte Lynchgericht in den Vordergrund trat; die genaue Szene der Ermordung des Märtyrerpräsidenten Abraham Lincoln in dem vom Volke bis aus Die mit dem 26. September beginnende Woche bringt „The Law of the Land", ein neues Drama, das in New York Aufsehen erregte. Während des Monats Oktober gibt es eine Operettennovität, namens „The Only Girl", „Dancing Ground" eine große Revue, in welcher Al Jolson die Hauptperson ist; „Marit in America"", ebenfalls eine Novität aus einer Reprise von „The Bird of Paradise".

Für den weiteren Verlauf der Saison werden in Aussicht gestellt: Eine neue Version von Du Maurier's „Trilby", „A Full House", „A Pair of Sixes", William Faversham in „The Hawk", „The Lilac Domino", „Hands Up" mit Maurice und Walton, „Experience", „Androcles and the Lion", die große Produktion vom Wallack Theatre, New York, „The Passing Show of 1915", „At Last Alone", „A Pair of Silk Stockings", „The New Henrietta" mit W. H. Crane, Thomas W. Roß, Maclyn Arbuckle, Amelia Bingham, Mabel Taliaferro und ein „all-star" Schauspieler, Louis in einem neuen Spiel, Walker Whiteside in „The Ragged Messenger", Taylor Holmes in „Myd's Mystery", „A Modern Eve", „The Delinquent", „Omar the Tentmaker", sowie William Hodge, Marie Dreßler und Grace George, alle in neuen Partien.

Die Vorführung dieses grandiosen Schauspieles, das die dunkelsten Seiten von Amerika und dessen Wiederauferstehung packenden Szenen beschreibt und dem gespannten Zuschauer vor Augen führt und miterleben läßt, hat in New York, Buffalo, Chicago und anderen Großstädten des Landes riesiges Aufsehen erregt und glänzende Erfolge erzielt, und wird jedenfalls auch in St. Louis gebührend gewürdigt werden.

Herr Griffith hat acht Monate an der Fertigstellung des Stückes gearbeitet.

Lillian Gish, Olympic.

Aug 30/15

Aufführung der „Birth of Nation" unter temporärem Einhaltsbefehle gestattet.

Kreisrichter Kimmel verbietet Einmischung der Polizei und des Staatsanwaltes.

Ein temporärer Einhaltsbefehl, der das Polizei-Departement und den Staatsanwalt davon abhält, die Aufführung des Wandelbildes „The Birth of Nation" zu verhindern, dessen erste Vorführung im Olympic-Theater auf Sonntag angesetzt war, wurde am Samstag Abend von Richter Kimmel vom Kreisgericht No. 9 in seiner Wohnung erlassen. Ein Gesuch um einen solchen Einhaltsbefehl wurde von der Epoch Producing Company gegen den Polizeirath, Polizeichef Young, Geheimpolizeichef Allender und Staatsanwalt Sidener eingereicht. Ein Verhör in dem Falle wird heute Nachmittag um 2 Uhr stattfinden. Man beabsichtigt, den Film fünf Wochen lang hier zu zeigen. Das Gesuch wurde eingereicht, nachdem Staatsanwalt Sidener erklärt hatte, daß er alles thun werde, was in seinen Kräften stehe, um die Aufführungen zu verhindern, da der Film Szenen enthalte, welche die Negerrasse ungerechterweise angriffen und Rassenvorurtheile hervorrufen würden. Das Gesuch der Epoch Producing Company gab an, daß das Wandelbild von der National-Censorbehörde gutgeheißen worden sei und dieselbe in ihrem Bericht vom 20. Januar dasselbe „enthusiastisch indossiert und erklärt habe, daß es ein großer Fortschritt in der Wandelbilder-Produktion sei."

Das Wandelbild sei viele Wochen in Boston, New York, Chicago, Milwaukee und anderen Städten aufgeführt worden, ohne Vorurtheil hervorgerufen zu haben. Die Beklagten hätten ohne gesetzliche Autorität gedroht, die Kläger zu verhaften, wenn sie das Wandelbild aufführten. Bei der Ausführung des Kontraktes zur Aufführung des Wandelbildes in St. Louis hätten die Kläger bereits $3000 ausgegeben, welche sie nebst anderen Beträgen verlieren würden, wenn der Einhaltsbefehl nicht erlassen werden würde.

Die „Birth of a Nation" ist das erste Wandelbild, das in St. Louis zu Preisen von 25 Cents bis $2 aufgeführt wurde. Es ist auf Thomas Dixons Buch „The Clansman" begründet, welches über Zustände im Süden unmittelbar nach dem Bürgerkriege handelt. Der erste Theil zeigt Kriegszeiten und endet mit der Ermordung des Präsidenten Lincoln. Der zweite Theil betrifft die sog. Reconstructions-Periode und zeigt mehrere Negerszenen, welche hiesige Negervereinigungen zu Protesten veranlaßten. Komiteen von Negern und Weißen wandten sich an Sidener, um gegen die Aufführung dieser Szenen zu protestieren. Die Film-Gesellschaft soll sich geweigert haben, diese Szenen auszulassen.

SEPT 4, 1915
MILWAUKEE (WIS.) NEWS

PABST—

"Birth of a Nation"

David W. Griffith's wonderful moving picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," will be the attraction at the Pabst theater for seven days beginning Monday, Sept. 13. Two performances will be given daily, one at 2:15 in the afternoon and one at 8:19 in the evening.

The return of this film drama, following so closely upon the close of its phenomenally successful run of eight weeks at the Davidson theater, is in response to many requests, not only from those who were unable to see the production during the summer run but from many who have seen it. The many astonishing features of the pictures make the second, or third view of them even more interesting and gripping than the first.

Those who have seen the pictures do not need to be reminded of the wonderful battle scenes, the representation of historic events and the dashing pictures of the Ku Klux riders and the turbulent events of reconstruction days. Those who have not seen them can form no conception of their impressiveness and grandeur. Thousands of men and horses and hundreds of women were utilized in the big scenes and the battle pictures, depicting a conflict extending over miles of territory are little short of marvelous. It is said that the production cost half a million dollars and that a year's time was occupied in making the pictures. An orchestra of forty pieces renders the music which carries the pictures through from beginning to end.

SEPT. 2, 1915
PITTSBURGH (Pa.) Dispatch
Aug 30/15

BIG FIGHT MOB IS CRUSHED IN "BIRTH OF A NATION" FILM

"The Birth of a Nation" Gathering at Olympic Applauds Stirring Scenes of $2 Photoplay.

By CARLOS F. HURD.

BEFORE the second act of "The Birth of a Nation," $2 photoplay, was put on the Olympic Theater's screen last night, announcement was made to the well-filled house that the act related to events of a half-century ago, and that the film was not intended to show "any race as it exists today." The same statement appeared, a minute later, on the screen.

Then began a drama in which negroes invaded and set fire to the homes of white families, besieged white women in huts and in cellars, drove white men from the polls, and dominating a Legislature, passed what was termed "a law for intermarriage of negroes and whites." A Southern girl of gentle breeding was pursued by a negro in soldier's uniform, and leaped to death to escape him. Before the horror of this incident had passed, a negro politician was shown, attempting to force a Northern white girl into immediate marriage with him.

Drama Is Stirring.

The scenes of this drama—and it was drama of the most stirring sort—were enacted before the motion camera with- [illegible] two years, by negroes of the [illegible] the negroes whom one can [illegible] city or town in the central, [illegible] the Southern, states.

[illegible] the management gives assur- [illegible] at these pictures were not rep- [illegible] tions of "any race as it exists to- [illegible] doubtless everyone will view in the calm light of history, and [illegible] eed not fear a recurrence of the [illegible] d excitement, which, a few years followed the presentation of the [illegible] version of "The Clansman," and [illegible] ch culminated in wholesale lynchings in Springfield, Mo., and in Springfield and Cairo, Ill. Act 2 of "The Birth of a Nation" is taken from "The Clansman."

[illegible] e Ku-Klux Klan appeared on the [illegible] as the corrector of black misrule, [illegible] sheeted members performed [illegible] s deeds of rescue, such as men [illegible] might be proud to perform in [illegible] nd without disguise. By way [illegible] historical authority for this [illegible] of the Ku-Klux, the manage- [illegible] ced sentences from Woodrow [illegible] historical works.

What Wilson Said.

[illegible] hese sentences told of the de- [illegible] on of certain northern leaders [illegible] use white South under the heel [illegible] the black South." In Wilson's His- [illegible] ory of the American People, from [illegible] which this quotation was taken, there [illegible] also this description of the work of [illegible] he Ku-Klux.

"Brutal crimes were committed; the innocent suffered with the guilty; a reign of terror was brought on, and society was infinitely more disturbed than defended."

Describing the final phase of the Ku-Klux, in the same chapter, Woodrow Wilson tells of the suppression, by Federal authority, of "the secret orders or the reckless fellows who plied their means of intimidation without scruple, or principle, or public object."

This is the view of a historian who cannot be accused of bias against the South, and who shows a discerning sympathy for the Southern people in the hardships and abuses which unquestionably attached to "carpet-bag" rule. It is worth reading, after one has seen, and has applauded, the scenes shown last night.

[illegible] ittsburg Press Sep 6/15

Photoplay Sale Large.

The performances of D. W. Griffith's [illegible] onderous spectacle drama, "The Birth [illegible] f a Nation," now playing at the Nixon [illegible] heater, commence promptly at 2:15 [illegible] r the matinees and 8:15 for the even- [illegible] gs. Owing to the long line of ticket- [illegible] urchasers and the crowded condition [illegible] the theater lobby, it is advisable to [illegible] urchase seats in advance, for theater [illegible] atrons buying seats for a current per- [illegible] ormance are forced to stand in line [illegible] some time, thus often time mis- [illegible] the opening of this impressive [illegible] nstance.

[illegible] Post Sep. 6/15

[illegible] raction on the Alvin stage next [illegible] ll be George Broadhurst's melo- [illegible] "The Law of the Land," which [illegible] season in New York. It is about [illegible] der of a husband by a wife and [illegible] ing of her crime when the de- [illegible] ender her provocation. Julia [illegible] part of the wife.

[illegible] ondrous photo specta- [illegible] Nation," continues [illegible] for the most [illegible] Owing to

Times Daily
Aug 31/15

BIRTH OF A NATION THRILLS AUDIENCE AT THE OLYMPIC

Photo-Drama Battle Scene Most Vivid Ever Seen in St. Louis.

BY RICHARD SPAMER.

The gentlemen charged with the advance exploitation of D. W. Griffith's cinematographic spectacle, The Birth of a Nation, dealt largely in superlatives. This photodrama, they told us, was "the greatest ever," and the familiar arenic rhetoric was frequently resorted to. The picture's effect on self-satisfied New York, excitable Chicago and other important centers was their stock-in-trade description. They submitted startling figures of every kind, actual and imaginable, long ahead of their show.

And now some 2000 of all sorts and conditions of men and women have seen it—they saw it and it gripped them convincingly at the Olympic last night, and they pronounced it according to specifications in each and every particular. The reel runs true to form, to use a sporting phrase, which may or may not be admissible here.

All extravagance aside, the Birth of a Nation is almost precisely what is claimed for it—immense, stirring, startling. No matter how seasoned the motion picture habitue may be, here he will see something that will send new thrills into his heart. What will impress him most, perhaps, is the enormity of the photoplay's canvas. That Petersburg battle scene has no equal, so far, in extent or detail. The Ku Klux Clan pictures are truly awe-inspiring, even to those spectators who are made acquainted for the first time with the terrible events here depicted. For those who have become fathers or grandfathers since the civil war, and who know much about this oath-bound society from actual experience or reading, this phase of the picture is swiftly and searchingly recollective.

The cast is excellently chosen almost without exception. Infinite care is the keynote in the big as well as the little views that make up the work. The incidental music is a strong feature and but for too strenuous a speeding-up of the film at times, no fault can be found with its projection. Ample evidence exists that Mr. Griffith wants to give his audiences the worth of their money; hence he tries to hold them nearly three hours with but one intermission. The exhibition could be cut down 20 per cent and nobody would suffer on that account or feel that he was being denied any essential of what constitutes a motion picture of the thinkably highest class.

Getting down from generalities to particulars and these are resorted to merely because The Birth of a Nation is to abide with us five consecutive weeks—it seems well to particularize by repetition; and in this manner, whether you care for the "movies" or not, here is a "movie" you simply cannot pass up. On the technical side it is the cinematographic high-water mark. Dealing with a dark spot in our history and presenting it with extravagant detail it puts the beholder in the strong position of exercising his individual judgment of the scenes and incidents shown. To use a phraseful manner, The Birth of a Nation is the "argumentum ad hominem"—the appeal to the manhood, in each beholding person.

But when all is said and done The Birth of a Nation is a great, a truly great event in the entertainment and the education of the masses; for it is likely true that very many of us today are going to picture shows more regularly than to our libraries. We are more numerously spectators than we are readers. Here, then, is where such an enormous creation as The Birth of a Nation is of its direct and tangible effect.

Pittsburg Gazette Times
Sep 6. 1915

The performances of D. W. Griffith's spectacle drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Nixon Theater, commence at 2:15 for the matinees and 8:15 for the evenings. Owing to the long line of ticket purchasers and the crowded condition of the theater lobby, it is advisable to purchase seats in advance, for theater patrons buying seats for a current performance are forced to stand in line for some time, thus oftentime missing the opening of the performance.

Pittsburg Press Sep 7/15

NIXON.

Big houses greeted and apparently were deeply impressed with "The Birth of a Nation" at the Nixon yesterday. The beauty of this remarkable film at times called forth applause as hearty as if the audience had been applauding living actors on the stage. From thrilling battle scenes to pretty love scenes, the assassination of Lincoln and typical scenes of life in the south in the reconstruction period after the Civil war, the story moves along in a way to keep the audience constantly keyed up to a high pitch of interest. The plot is a decidedly interesting one, well worked out and added to its interest is the apparent historical value of the big picture production.

Aug 30/15

'BIRTH OF A NATION' WINS BIG APPLAUSE AT THE OLYMPIC

897 of the Audience Sign Cards Approving the Morals of the Production.

BY KATHERINE RICHARDSON.

Enthusiasm ran so high at the Olympic Theater last night at the first production of "The Birth of a Nation," the widely heralded $2 motion picture play, that 897 persons of the almost overflow audience signed cards petitioning Circuit Judge Kimmel to let the play be shown in St. Louis for the five weeks it is booked. A temporary injunction was granted by Judge Kimmel at 10 o'clock Saturday night to permit last night's performance. A second hearing will be held by him today, and the 897 cards will be presented to him as the best argument for the play's continuance.

A master mind visualized "The Birth of a Nation" and a master hand directed its production, and David Griffith, owner of both, has produced the masterpiece of the screen. In acting, scenic arrangements, spectacular performance and true human interest the film surpasses.

No smallest detail is overlooked to render the whole a living, moving spectacle of the Civil War period, and the audience is divided in its sentiments between the North and South, only to be gathered into one cheering whole for the United States of America.

The play follows fairly accurately the story told in "The Clansman." Griffith also makes a plea through his sub-titles for world peace, but the temper of last night's audience—reflected in its shouts of encouragement when the Confederate soldiers stormed the Union trenches—indicated a strong love of battle well fought.

As the play runs three hours, it is not possible to give any detailed description of scenes or of the story, or plot. The first part of the play deals with the events leading up to the Civil War, and shows several of the battles, and Sherman's march to the sea, and the burning of Atlanta. These are the great spectacular scenes in the first part, and the incidental music is at all times thrilling. The large symphony orchestra plays Tschaikowsky's "Burning of Moscow" during the burning of Atlanta. This picture, and that of the terrible aftermath of battle, with the dead lying on the field, are Griffith's best arguments for world peace.

Interwoven is the theme of the friendship of two Northern brothers, the Stoneman sons, for two Southern brothers, sons of Dr. Cameron of Piedmont, S. C. A Stoneman falls in love with a Cameron girl, and a Cameron girl with a Stoneman boy.

The surrender of General Lee to General Grant is shown—with the scenes adapted from historical descriptions—and the signing of the peace pacts. Abraham Lincoln is shown in several intimate studies, and his assassination by Booth in Ford Theater, Washington, provides one of the big moments of the film.

Stoneman, the radical leader of the house, comes into power, and in the second part, he is shown dispatching his carpet-baggers to the South. A reign of terror then begins, with Silas Lynch as the leader. He becomes Lieutenant Governor of the State, and a negro majority is given in the Legislature. Ensuing scenes are taken from descriptions in the history of the State.

The Ku Klux Klan is formed to protect the whites from the negroes, and the statement is made that while there were 400,000 of these men in the South, the identity of none was ever known.

The mighty rides of these clansmen; how they rescue the oppressed whites, and strike terror to the hearts of the negro, brought cheers from last night's audience.

There are no revolting scenes. The pitifulness of the way the negroes were used as tools through the cupidity of the "carpet-baggers" from the North is shown, rather than any effort made to present them as acting brutally on their own initiative.

It is no exaggeration to say more than 10,000 are employed in the film's making, and it can readily be believed that the film cost more than $100,000. There will be daily matinees and night performances during the next five weeks, if the court proceedings today favor "The Birth of a Nation."

PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER
SEP 7 1915

PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS
SEPT 4, 1915

Griffith Wins Way.

David Griffith who startled the world with his wonderful combination of film and operatic drama called "The Birth of a Nation" which is drawing capacity audiences at each performance at the Nixon theater, is a native of Kentucky. He is recognized as the greatest director of motion picture productions in the world today. He has gained this eminence in seven years and commands the largest salary ever paid a director of any amusement enterprise in this country.

"Birth of a Nation" at Forrest

Interest in the remarkable Griffith motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," was shown in the enthusiasm displayed by the audiences which viewed this masterpiece at the Forrest Theatre yesterday. As an example of the degree of perfection to which this style of entertainment has reached, it would seem that this has about all the attracting elements. There is romance, thrilling episodes and comedy all intentionally interwoven. [illegible] the Ku Klux Klan [illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation" Master Mind of Motion

True American History and Romance Marvelously Produced in Film Drama

FEATURES OF A GREAT STORY

D. W. Griffith's marvelous spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which has been creating a furore around the country, is to come into the Forrest Theatre next Saturday night, September 4, for a limited engagement.

Following the opening the show will be seen twice daily, the first matinee being Labor Day matinee, on Monday afternoon.

The afternoon performances start at 2.15 and the nights at 8.15.

This is the great drama of American history and its relationship to the slavery question that has aroused the interest of more people than ever saw one production on the stage in this country before.

Griffith is the master mind of motion pictures, but this is his greatest achievement.

First-class Film, First-class House

It is also the first silent film drama that ever went into the first-class theatres and charged the same prices as are paid for such great shows as "Ben Hur" and the like, as well as the best-known stars on the stage.

When it was produced in New York last year everybody predicted that the public would not pay these prices to see a film story.

But when they saw the piece and were able to gauge its magnitude they discovered that the public would pay even bigger prices to see it than they were asked for the best dramatic offerings.

The New York newspapers without a dissenting voice proclaimed it the greatest thing that had ever been shown on the stage.

St. Louis Star
Aug. 31/15

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WINS INJUNCTION IN PITTSBURG

The fifth of legal battles in which "The Birth of a Nation" has been engaged, has just been won in Pittsburg, according to a telegram received at the Olympic Theater today. The spectacle was scheduled to open at the Nixon Theater in the Pennsylvania city tonight. As in the case of St. Louis, an attempt was made by the authorities to prevent the showing of the film. Late last night an injunction was secured, forbidding the police to interfere, and the opening will take place as announced. The fight had been on in Pittsburg for several weeks. The argument to make the temporary injunction, granted last Saturday night by Judge Kimmel permanent in St. Louis, will be heard in Division 7 of the Circuit Court tomorrow afternoon.

NEW YORK (N. Y.) HERALD
SEPT. 5, 1915

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's spectacle, passes its five hundredth presentation in New York, and the anniversary last week was the fourth birthday of the [illegible] many weeks that it has been on exhibition in the Liberty Theatre. Mr. Griffith has linked romance and history in his drama of American life.

"The Birth of a Nation" Mister Mind of Motion

(Continued from page 6)

with an allegory showing the re-birth of the nation and the dawn of a peaceful era at last in the war-scarred South.

It is a great story; a marvelous production and it teaches you things about our national history you never knew before.

It has no purpose of propaganda but is a powerful dramatic narrative that thrills you by its intense action and entertains you with an epical sweep which is irresistible.

It is good entertainment and is highly instructive.

Efforts to Suppress Scenes

There has been some opposition stirred up by the negroes and their followers who are trying to suppress scenes in the play which depict the efforts of negro men to marry white girls.

There is a society in this country which believes in the intermarriage of blacks and whites.

This society has fomented the trouble against this wonderful work of art.

The enlightened colored men and women and their following among the best class of negro citizens have seen nothing wrong in the production and they have not opposed it.

The professional stump speakers and the agitators have had a great deal to say.

The big picture has come through these attacks with a clean bill of health.

It has been indorsed and sustained by every official into whose care it has been entrusted.

It has never been interfered with in any official way.

It would be a crime against the rights of free speech and free thought to suppress an iota of this picture.

Lesson of Merit

It is clean and truthful and while at times it depicts things which are unpleasantly true the lesson taught is of the highest worth.

It shows that the colored men in the first dawn of their liberty were abused by scheming politicians and made to mistake liberty for license.

It also shows the wonderful progress these people have made and inculcates in all the sure rewards which are the measure of good citizenship.

It is a masterpiece of drama and is sure to make a great impression upon any one who sees it and studies its mighty purposes and its fine dramatic effectiveness.

Special for Philadelphia

The Philadelphia engagement is one specially devised and follows in every respect the remarkable success which has been achieved by this big story in New York where it is turning into its eighth month of a run which has been the sensation of two seasons.

Atthe same time it is rounding out its three hundredth performance in Boston and Chicago.

This story, it must be emphasized, is the masterpiece of a man who has made a new form of expression live in the annals of the American stage.

Griffith is a product of the motion picture world but by his inventive faculty and his grasp of the dramatic effectiveness of a new art he has created an epoch.

Beside his achievement the old line of stage spectacles look like miniature imitations of a poetic fancy.

His imagination has greater scope in a larger field.

He sees battles as they were fought fifty years ago in the tense struggle which welded our national union.

America Before the Eyes

He places these before the eye as clearly and forcefully as if we were looking back through the years of the bygone days and actually seeing the men of that period fighting through the momentous struggle.

Into his mise-en-scene come Lincoln, Grant, Lee, Seward, Hay, Sherman, Porter, Logan, Jackson, in fact the giant figures of those soul-stirring days.

They are not fleeting phantoms of the past as gathered from history but flesh and blood representations of these men.

The places where they lived and achieved and passed out are shown in accurate detail.

The battlefields they fought upon are once more thrown up into the perspective.

You see it all as clearly as if it were but yesterday.

Romance and Family

You also see the lovers and their families and the motives which stirred the common people and each acts out his little drama which was part of the mightier story which made this nation understand itself and go forward to its larger destiny.

It is drama which stirs you with the pulse of human understanding.

Nothing like it was ever attempted before because it was the dawn of a new art which made it possible to scale such heights.

Harmony Synchronized

Then also there is a score of operatic emotion, which is worked out in thematic juxtaposition to the unfolding of the epic.

This is synchronized to the fraction of a second to progress with the narrative.

It is all part of a great idea worked out in a bigger and newer way.

St. Louis Times Aug 31/15

OF A NATION" WINS FIGHT IN PITTSBURG

[illegible] of the legal battles in [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" has [illegible]ged, has just been won in [illegible], according to a telegram re[illegible] the Olympic Theater Tues[illegible] Griffith's spectacle was sched[illegible] at the Nixon Theater in [illegible] city Tuesday night. [illegible] of St. Louis, an attempt [illegible] by the authorities to prevent [illegible] the film.

Monday night an injunction [illegible] issued, forbidding the police in [illegible] and the opening was delayed [illegible] announced. The film had [illegible] preceding national works, and [illegible] more attractions than the [illegible] in Boston and Chicago.

Pittsburg Chronicle Sept 4/15

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

The success of D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Nixon Theater is the talk of the town.

David W. Griffith is a southerner and has been a close student all his life of the Civil War and reconstruction periods. The facts given herewith are the result of his studies in that field. The clans sprang into life during the Reconstruction struggles of 1869-71. Nathan Bedford Forrest, the dashing cavalry leader, was the organizer and first leader. John W. Morton, afterwards secretary of state of Tennessee, was adjutant general. The incident in "The Birth of a Nation" of the North Carolina clansman massing to aid their South Carolina brethren is actual fact. Henry Walthall, who plays the role of the Ku Klux Klan leader, is the son of a clansman. The rites used are taken from the ritual book of the order which was secretly published at Pulaski, Tenn. The "underground railroad" was an important part of the system. A general amnesty finally removed the ban of secrecy and since that time the stories of their doings and thrilling escapes have developed into tales like those that Sir Walter Scott wrote of their ancestors.

[illegible] and made him fa[illegible]er's first success [illegible] nous. [illegible] This week the new revue, "The [illegible]lies of St. Louis, Old and New," is making a hit.

Olympic Theater.

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Olympic is writing another sensational chapter in its history. D. W. Griffith's spectacle of Civil War and reconstruction days opened at the Olympic Theater Sunday night to the largest first-night audience in five years in St. Louis and the largest summer-night audience in the history of the Olympic. During the week the crowds have held up to the standard set by the opening night. Managers of the spectacle say they already regret that they did not book the show for an indefinite run instead of for an engagement of only five weeks.

Pittsburg Chronicle Sept 6/15

Scene in "The Birth of a Nation"

One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" now showing at the Nixon is the lovesick sentry in the Hospital scene gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is of the "sure fire order," for never does an audiencce miss the rapt devotion of the sentinel and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-miles-away look. Paul LeBlanc is the name of the young actor who has made the unexpected hit in the part. He is a New Orleans Creole by birth and played comedy roles with Mme. Bernhardt before going out to Los Angeles where Mr. Griffith discovered him. The costuming of the young soldier is wonderfully accurate to the period of 1864. Miss Lillian Gish wears her costumes of Civil War and Reconstruction times that are heirlooms in her family. Through Griffith's skill all the actors in the production are made to appear as if to the manner born and not awkwardly moving about in habiliments to which they are unaccustomed.

St. Louis Times Aug 30/15

"Birth of Nation" Thrills a Big Audience at Olympic

With Bold Faithfulness to the History of the Reconstruction Period, Griffith's Photo-Spectacle Insults No One.

By Raymond A. Walsh,
Dramatic Critic, St. Louis Times.

To a gallery that stamped and shrieked its approval, to a balcony that swayed in its nervous excitement, to a parquet that applauded in that usual characteristic, manner peculiar to parquets, "The Birth of a Nation," the greatest photo-spectacle to date, was presented at the Olmpic Theater, Sunday night. It was a most representative gathering and a sort of auspicious occasion. Judge Karl Kimmel, whose temporary injunction restrained the police from interfering with the opening night's presentation, was there. Chief Youig, who heads the department which was restrained, was there. And, of course, the morality squad or Censhorship Committee took due notice of each and every one of the 5000 scenes. Whether the morality squad, or so-called censors, decided that the film did or did not conform to Nicolay's's or Hay's or Wilson's theories of the reconstruction period, I am unable to say. I suppose these details will be determined by the censors later—if the court grants them the right to exercise the profound judgment necessary.

If the guardians of our morals and safety insist upon censoring "The Birth of a Nation," they may as well go into the classrooms of our public schools and delete the pages of American history. If St. Louis is robbed of future presentations of "The Birth of a Nation" it will lose the opportunity of viewing one of the greatest—if not the greatest and most stirring—achievements of the theatrical world.

Sep 2/15

SEPT. 2, 1915
PITTSBURGH (Pa.)

...NY TO OPEN ...NDAY; "BIRTH ...N" AT OLYMPIC

BIG ...HT CR...

... dramatic company ...ished itself in public fa... long season of 44 weeks, ...en weeks ago for the sum... open its season Monday next ...ark in "Within the Law." The ... Company has been reorgan... "Th...nd strengthened in many ways ...e season of 1915-16. Mr. Charles ...lair will direct the productions as ... old. Mr. Bob McClung, character comedian, who returns to the company, will have charge of the stage, and Mitchell Harris, the popular young leading man, will again head the company. Miss Evelyn Varden will play leads, Miss Elsie Hitz, ingenue roles, and Miss Loretta Wells will capitalize many years of experience in the best companies as character woman. Vessie Farrell, Henry Hull and Louis Calhern return to The Players in their old roles.

This week, "The Follies of St. Louis."

"Birth of a Nation."

The bookings for "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Olympic Theater, have been so arranged as to keep the big spectacle in the big amusement centers of the country indefinitely. St. Louis will be the only city in which it will be seen in this neighborhood for scores of miles around this season. The spectacle has been billed and advertised in every small city and town within a radius of 75 miles of St. Louis, and many of the visitors at the Olympic even at this early date have been "our country cousins." The same policy has been pursued everywhere since "The Birth of a Nation" started its sensational career in Los Angeles last February. Runs that broke all records for length in Los Angeles and San Francisco drew from the population hundreds of miles in various directions.

Pittsburg Leader Sep 3/15

"The Birth of a Nation"

At each performance of "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Nixon theater, the audiences increase both in size and enthusiasm for the wonderful D. W. Griffith spectacle of Civil war time and reconstruction days. In addition to the picture there is written, especially for this production, an operatic score, Wagnerian in idea, and fitted to the screen drama. It is so perfectly adapted to this story that it becomes a very important part of the epical form of narrative. It is estimated that Mr. Griffith took more than 3,000,000 separate scenes for the original make-up of his great spectacle. These were subsequently assembled into the story as it now appears in dramatic form upon the stage and reduced to a total of approximately 200,000 distinct scenes.

Pittsburg Leader Sep 3/15

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WARNING AGAINST WAR; PICTURES WONDERFUL

The depiction of the ...rs of war is the surest guarantee of a profound and lasting peace. It is this undercurrent of pitiless woe that lends dynamic force to "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's marvelous photo drama, presented at the Nixon theater last night. With the perfect balance of the dramatic "unities," the panoply and passion of the battlefields and the glare of a flaming city transcended even the depiction of a parent's grief and other sad scenes attendant upon conflict. Although some of the scenes were declared to be historical most of the dark and blotted pages of reconstruction days in the south were very much exaggerated. This tendency serves to mar an otherwise perfect picture, without lending any essential strength to a masterpiece. Isolated cases of bestiality, culled from "The Clansman," caused the recurrence of the criticism that greeted that drama, because the pitiless realism of motion photography leaves nothing to the imagination. This is as unfortunate as it is unnecessary. The chase of a frightened girl by a drunken renegade, the drunken scene in Lieutenant Gloverior Lynch's apartments, are unpleasant to those who believe that the broad sweep of national history can take no cognizance of the crimes of individuals. Some of the grewsome scenes jarred and could well have been eliminated. "The Birth of a Nation" is, however, the greatest pictorial masterpiece that the public has ever seen or can ever hope to see for many years. Aside from the overdrawn Klu-Klux-Klan figures and the exaggerated scenes of carpetbagger and negro rule in the South the pictures marvellously visualized American history with fidelity of detail and loyalty to the canons of art. An orchestra of 25 pieces aids the production.

MIRIAM COOPER in the greatest photoplay achievement, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Nixon Theater.

At each presentation of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Nixon Theater the attendance continues larger, and enthusiasm is pronounced for the wonderful D. W. Griffith spectacle of Civil war time and reconstruction days. This is the production playing to record-breaking houses in New York, Chicago, Boston, Atlantic City and Brighton Beach for many weeks. In addition the musical accompaniment is perfectly adapted to the scenes. It is estimated that Mr. Griffith took more than 3,000,000 separate scenes for the make-up of his great spectacle.

St. Louis Star Sep 6/15

'BIRTH OF A NATION' ENTERS ON SECOND WEEK AT OLYMPIC

Spectacle Draws Large Labor Day Crowd and Audiences Are Enthusiastic.

"The Birth of a Nation," the great photo-drama spectacle at the Olympic Theater, is drawing larger crowds at each matinee and night performance, and today had overflow Labor Day audiences.

Each person who views the great film becomes immediately a "booster" for it, as it contains many wonders never before equaled on stage or in motion pictures. The finished acting of its principals; the wonderful staging of battle scenes in which hundreds of men fight with such realism that the spectators shudder with the horror of war; and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are each in themselves a memorable picture.

In the "Birth of a Nation" there are so many daring acts, so many clever feints, falls and dashing rides that one forgets to marvel at them. Here a man falls headlong from a porch roof, apparently shot through the heart by a raider; in the battle scenes soldiers are shown falling under fire, diving from trenches, and reeling from horseback. Many spectacular falls are made by the clansmen in the Klan rides. One scene shows the mighty fight of a young blacksmith in a negro dive, in which he fells a dozen men with his naked hands, but himself falls under a bullet fired into his back.

The plan runs three hours, with an intermission of three minutes. A symphony orchestra of about twenty pieces, plays throughout the performance, and through combination of popular airs suitable to the scenes depicted, have worked out a symphony which might itself well be called "The Birth of a Nation."

The drama has entered on its second week, and will continue until into October.

St. Louis Republic Sep 5/15

Olympic Theater.

When David W. Griffith started the outdoor staging of the Civil War and Reconstruction scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," which is being shown at the Olympic Theater, he was confronted with seemingly insuperable difficulties. An area of private war was required about as large as the corner of Belgium occupied by the Anglo-French forces. Thousands of cavalrymen had to be shown in a raid of the North Carolina clans. Their run was to be over many, many miles of typical Southern sandy roads.

In this emergency the country authorities of "The Birth of a Nation" producing locale were applied to. They finally consented to mark off an area of 10 square miles for the use of the horsemen. Along all the roads within this area the County Commissioners posted notices forbidding all traffic. Pedestrians also were warned off. But the roads themselves did not look Southern. David Griffith handled this difficulty—with the authorities' permission—by remaking such of the highways as would come within the camera's eye. Many tons of sand and gravel were spread by gangs of workmen. Landscape engineering changed the look of the landscape to the rounded hills, piney woods and deep gullies of old North State.

The race of the Northern clansmen to rescue their South Carolina brethren took place on the appointed day, without an accident or a flaw. After it was over Mr. Griffith's men scraped the sand off the macadam roads, took down the signs, and life in the sleepy countryside resumed its normal course. It cost about $25,000 to do the trick.

St. Louis Daily Sep 5/15

Second Week of Birth of a Nation.

AT THE Olympic tonight the second week of D. W. Griffith's enormous photo-spectacle, The Birth of a Nation, begins at 8:20. There are hundreds of scenes and incidents in this marvelous pseudo-historical picture account that have impressed themselves deeply upon the minds of [illegible] million spectators. Gone more so than [illegible] which Gen. Ulysses S. Grant receives the surrender of the army of the South from Gen. Robert E. Lee.

As the scene unfolds, Grant is discovered seated at a plain table reading the draft of the terms of surrender. Lee is seated at the left of the room. The staffs of the two generals are grouped about. The expression on Lee's face clearly indicates his thoughts. A forlorn leader of what is even no longer a forlorn hope, he sits with bowed head most of the time, while Grant is reading an important document.

As Grant, having finished reading, and having fixed his signature, rises, the contrast between the two men is striking. Grant, about 5 feet 8 inches tall, his square shoulders, inclined to stoop, is without his sword, and is wearing fatigue uniform. He wears ordinary top boots with trousers inside. Boots and clothing are spattered with mud. Lee presents a different picture. He is carefully and correctly dressed, his 6 feet of stature and faultless form towering over his conqueror—a statue in gray. The contrast in manner is equally marked. Grant, with hand in pocket, approaches Lee with an easy swing, cigar in mouth, as usual, and offers his hand in a way that means much to the defeated Southerner. It is not preliminary to a formal meaningless handshake. It is the act of one who would be a friend, and is accepted by such as the man in gray, who grasps the extended hand, and the great generals of the great war for a moment face each other. Then, with military salute, they part, and the incident of Appomattox Courthouse is closed.

There has been a finer adjustment of this scene by the operators at the Olympic, which doubtless will enhance its value as a wonderfully instructive moment in the greatest civil war drama of all time.

Daily matinees will be given at 2:20 until further notice.

St. Louis Republic Sep 5/15

Olympic Theater.

When David W. Griffith started the outdoor staging of the Civil War and Reconstruction scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," which is being shown at the Olympic Theater, he was confronted with seemingly insuperable difficulties. An area of private war was required about as large as the corner of Belgium occupied by the Anglo-French forces. Thousands of cavalrymen had to be shown in a raid of the North Carolina clans. Their run was to be over many, many miles of typical Southern sandy roads.

In this emergency the country authorities of "The Birth of a Nation" producing locale were applied to. They finally consented to mark off an area of 10 square miles for the use of the horsemen. Along all the roads within this area the County Commissioners posted notices forbidding all traffic. Pedestrians also were warned off. But the roads themselves did not look Southern. David Griffith handled this difficulty—with the authorities' permission—by remaking such of the highways as would come within the camera's eye. Many tons of sand and gravel were spread by gangs of workmen. Landscape engineering changed the look of the landscape to the rounded hills, piney woods and deep gullies of old North State.

The race of the Northern clansmen to rescue their South Carolina brethren took place on the appointed day, without an accident or a flaw. After it was over Mr. Griffith's men scraped the sand off the macadam roads, took down the signs, and life in the sleepy countryside resumed its normal course. It cost about $25,000 to do the trick.

CLIPPING FROM Gazette

Date Sunday Sep 7-8-15 program of vaudeville will also be offered Saturday.

"Birth of a Nation" F

"The Birth of a Nation," which will be seen at the Tivoli theatre during the week beginning September 20, is a most happy and strong combination of spectacle and story. It is divided for exhibition purposes into two acts, each of them about 5,500 feet long. The first act is devoted to the struggle between the north and the south. In this act come the terrific battles of the Civil war, Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the downfall of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant and the assassination of Lincoln.

The second half is devoted to the "Clansman's" story of the reconstruction period. In this comes the enfranchisement of the slaves and the subsequent attempt of the carpet-baggers to rule the white [illegible] south [illegible] the [illegible] and the answer of the white men in the form of the Ku Klux Klan. Contrasting the [illegible]

Emotional Stars Although in Their Teens

THE Gish sisters, Lillian and Dorothy, are perhaps two of the best-known emotional actresses on the moving-picture screen. Lillian, the elder, is not 19 years old, while Dorothy is but 17, yet these ambitious girls have won laurels for themselves equal to those of the most proficient of screen stars. Lillian has had regular stage experience since she was a little girl of 6, when a company playing in her home town needed the services of a clever child. She went out on the road with the company and stayed with it several weeks. Another notable experience of hers was when she played one of the fairy dancers in Sarah Bernhardt's company, while Mme. Bernhardt was on one of her American tours. Lillian was with the notable French actress two years, then she quit the stage and entered a girls' school and remained until she was 15. She was engaged by D. W. Griffith shortly afterward to play child and juvenile parts in the Biograph Company, and from that time her rise to stardom has been rapid. Her itest success is in the Birth of a Nation, a play in which she was featured as one of the principal characters, that of "Elsie Stoneman."

Dorothy Gish, although a year and a half younger than her sister, is almost as well known and is a star in her own right. She has also been under the direction of Griffith, and perhaps her most notable achievement was the part she played in Judith of Bethulia, a play in which she was featured, and which won her much praise and commendation for her artistic portrayal of the character.

The Gish sisters are very beautiful blondes, and are natural emotional actresses. Mrs. Gish, their mother, is justly proud of her talented daughters, and is to be found in the vicinity of the studios where her girls are playing, keeping the home bright and cheerful for them when they come home tired from the day's work.

Reedy's Mirror St Louis Sep 7/15

Bookings for "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Olympic Theater, have been so arranged as to keep the big spectacle in the big amusement centers of the country indefinitely. St. Louis is the only city in the Mississippi Valley in which it will be seen this season. The spectacle has been advertised in every small city and town within a radius of seventy-five miles of here, and many of the visitors at the Olympic even this first week have been "our country cousins." This policy has been pursued everywhere since "The Birth of a Nation" started its career in Los Angeles last February. Record runs there and in San Francisco drew from the population hundreds of miles in various directions. People living in the vicinity of New York have seen the spectacle only at the Liberty Theater and Brighton Beach. Boston has taken care of the New England territory to date. Chicago has a monopoly of the Lake basins. The show at the Olympic Theater will go to the heart of Texas at the end of this engagement. The smaller cities hereabout will not be visited for at least a year, perhaps not that soon, owing to the great demands for the piece in such places as Denver, Kansas City, Portland, New Orleans, Indianapolis, Buffalo, Atlanta, and many others, not yet provided for, where there will be runs at least as long as the one scheduled here.

Pittsburg Sun Sep 7/15

THRILLING FILM DRAMA IS SHOWN

"Birth of a Nation," Which Opened in Nixon Last Night, Is Impressive Spectacle.

Thrill following thrill in the gripping scenes of "The Birth of a Nation," which opened last night at the Nixon Theater, proving this one of the most remarkable photoplays ever produced. The story is woven around incidents of the Civil war, the scenes are so cleverly dovetailed that there is not a dull moment in the entire performance, and the spectator, whether he remembers the stirring days of the conflict to save the Nation, or is merely a student of their history, cannot help get a new conception of that period.

The play is brilliantly cast, and the spectacular effects are so startling that they awe. Reproductions of scenes and events are so realistic that the audience is completely carried away and forgets that it is a cleverly staged drama and not real life that one is watching.

"The Birth of a Nation" was filmed on the old battlefields of the Civil war, on the plantations and cities of the South, and not a detail, comic, tragic or pathetic, has been overlooked that would add interest to the realism of the piece. It is unquestionably one of the most remarkable examples of motion picture taking ever shown in this city, and the interest in the plot is inevitably divided by amazement at the skillful manner in which the drama was filmed.

Part two is an elaboration of Rev. Dr. Dixon's play, "The Clansman," and it is this feature to which so much objection was raised. The scenario in the Ku-Klux episode makes the firm more interesting than the play, but in both the disagreeable scenes seem to be too long drawn out.

The dragging out to great lengths of the chase of a girl by Renegade Gus, and of the drunken scene in Lieutenant Governor Lynch's apartments, is as unpleasant as it seems unnecessary to carry a lesson.

As a peace propaganda exhibition it is the most impressive yet put forth in any line. The horrors of war are so poignant that a lesson goes with the unrolling of the picture. Students may even find it useful in visualizing important historical events.

An orchestra of 25 pieces plays incidental music throughout the photoplay, and its apropos adaptations make it one of the most pleasing of all the different essential features.

When this film was first advertised in Pittsburgh a delegation of negroes waited upon Mayor Armstrong and appealed to him to prohibit its showing in Pittsburgh, as it was offensive to their race. The mayor ordered it prohibited. The promoters then went into court and secured a temporary injunction upon the authorities interfering with the production. It will be argued in court tomorrow.

Enquirer Date 1-5-15 Ohio

OLYMPIC—"AMERICANS."

The Olympic will have one of its big attractions for the coming week in the elaborate show provided by the "Americans." There will be three burlettas, all of them extravagantly mounted. One of them is a take-off on the big moving picture production, "The Birth of a Nation," and called "The Worth of a Nation." "Girls and Jingles" is the name of the closing burlesque. The scenery is all new and the six sets are said to be worth while seeing. The company is strong on comedy talent. Ed Johnston heads the list, assisted by Ben Small. Among the women are Jeannette Buckley, Monica Redmond, Vogan and the Lawrence sisters. Robert Hall and Hughey Bernard.

As special features will appear Louie Cook, with some good stuff to hand out. The Tom and Tania, the barefoot [illegible] The special nights will [illegible]

CLIPPING FROM Philadelphia, (Pa.) North American

Date 1915

"Kick In."

Not the least important feature of "The Birth of a Nation," is the elaborate musical program presented by an orchestra of forty pieces. The dumb "movie" actors have ever had interpretative assistance from musical art, but the orchestra appearing daily at the Forrest is a distant relative of the tin-pan pianos of the first nickelodeon. It suggests that the time may come when, with the aid of the perfected phonograph, the motion-picture machine may "can" histrionic masterpieces for future generations. And certainly this is the best argument, from the artistic standpoint, for the existence of the "movies."

Openings

NIXON-TWO CHARACTERS IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" PHOTO PLAY

Post-Dispatch 9/5/15

WITH the coming of Labor Day and the announced opening of most of the theaters we may regard the local theatrical season as officially under way after Monday. Of its prospects, its hopes and fears more will be said in the future. In several particulars the opening are auspicious. The Nixon has already gotten by with its much-discussed 12 motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation." It is enough just here to say that if there was ever a photo spectacle (or play) worth $2 this Griffith marvel is certainly entitled to the price, and it is hard to conceive how future producers can do better, even at double the price. The antagonisms which the pictures provoke are, in a sense, natural, but its compensatory virtues are quite enough to atone therefor.

Post-Dispatch 9/5/15

THE GIRL WITH THE SPEAKING FACE.

Mae Marsh.

Mae Marsh, who plays the role of Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Nixon Theater, is known all over the country as the girl with a thousand faces. Miss Marsh has only been in pictures two years, but she already has reached the top of the ladder. A few seasons ago she came to the Griffith studio to watch her older sister work. She was raw and undeveloped, but Griffith's keen eye saw great possibilities beneath the surface of her anxious eyes and mobile countenance. He wanted a half-grown girl for a work he was finishing and he selected her. Now she has the most likable role in all the thousands of characters that crowd the Griffith photoplay. This California girl can express almost any action the feminine mind can grasp. She has played tomboys and heroines, consumptive girls and athletic girls. No part frightens her when Griffith is directing.

Post-Dispatch 9/5/15

"Birth of a Nation" Presented at Nixon

Motion Picture Spectacle Reproduces Scenes of Civil War and Southern Reconstruction Period.

MUSIC IS A NOTABLE FEATURE

"The Birth of a Nation," D. G. Griffith's motion picture spectacle founded on the theme of American Civil War history and the trying period of reconstruction days makes good all the claims that were made for it in advance. The audience that witnessed the opening of its engagement at the Nixon Theater last night saw not only a masterpiece of animated photography but likewise were thrilled by an entertainment altogether novel and unique. It is a photodrama on a mammoth scale set to music, and the success of the production is due to the painstaking care in handling every detail, and particularly in the arrangement of the incidental music. In this case, however, the music is not incidental; it is more than half the show. It is the Wagnerian idea fitted to the screen drama and the synchronization is so perfectly adapted to this story that it becomes a most important part of the epical form of narrative. The score was arranged by Joseph Carl Breil who spent months with Mr. Griffith while he was making the picture. It is perhaps the most unusual score ever devised.

The photography is superb. The battle scenes, the riding of the Ku-Klux and the melodramatic incidents are faultless. Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" furnishes the thread for the plot, but the Griffith production assumes the burden of telling practically the whole story of the sufferings of the South from the fall of Fort Sumter through Appomattox down to the race riots in South Carolina in the '70's. Many historical scenes are introduced. These are acted out in tableau form before the motion picture camera and indicate that great effort has been made to have them historically correct. With few exceptions the actors have done their work well and the pictures are of no small educational value. However, the Lincoln should be done over. The man playing this role has spoiled the character by putting on too much of the cadaverous make-up. It would be well, too, to let Simon Cameron and not Edwin M. Stanton appear as secretary of war in the picture of Lincoln's cabinet in the period of 1861. At the formal surrender at Appomattox it would be well to suppress Gen. Grant's cigar. It has often been commented upon that this was one occasion on which Gen. Grant forgot his weed. Following the drama a reel of motion picture views of the colored training school at Hampton, Va., was shown.

ST. LOUIS, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 3, 1915 PRICE FIVE CE

Reflections

By William Marion Reedy

The Birth of a Nation

AS history the film show, "The Birth of a Nation," is strongly pro-Southern. All good history has a bias. As drama, the piece is over-wrought, but without emphasis, without darkening here and lighting there, we should not have much drama. "Reconstruction" was hell for the South—no doubt about that. If there were no negro Lieutenant-Governors insisting upon marrying white ladies, as Lynch does in this drama, that is only a detail; the author had to get the big punch. The incident of the attack of a negro upon a little girl is handled without pushing realism to any extreme of obscenity. It is told with not quite such a wealth of detail as may be found in any newspaper story of such an event today. The Ku-Klux Klan is presented solely as a band of high-minded heroes. We know they became a bad gang of night-riders; wrecking private vengeance on white men and playing lynch law politics. But we must stand for some romancing in the Southern view. The antics of ignorant negro Legislatures, dominated by carpet-baggers, are not overdone, and drink-crazed negroes in riot are pictured as they were and are. Lop-sided as the drama is, it is hardly an appeal to race-prejudice. I don't think audiences take the negro villain, Lynch, seriously. Neither are they worked up by the suggestion that Southern negroes hoped to marry white women. There's nothing in the play to make anyone hate a negro to-day, just as there's nothing in a man's opposition to race-segregation that commits him to belief in intermarriage. Simply, "The Birth of a Nation" paints the horrors of Reconstruction by laying on with a trowel the colors, red and black—and the horrors were bad enough without that. As for the lynching, why gag at it on the stage when we read about it every other day, when the fate of Leo Frank, in Georgia, is still fresh in our minds? Why should we blink facts? This thing of evading controverted matters is a bad thing. Shall no man have an opinion on anything that may jar his neighbor's opinion? Shall we dodge all reference to things we can't refer to without starting an argument? Is each creed as good as every other creed? Are men to have no convictions? Tolerance, so understood, means an utter absence of character, the vanishing of the old quality of standing up for one's idea of right. The South's view of Reconstruction, of the great Rebellion, may offend Northerners or negroes, just as a pro-Northern play may offend Southerners, but for that reason shall they be suppressed? Out upon the soft-minded philosophy that would hide everything that hurts, that would make life a lollipop. Take away pain and life would be sloth. Take away conflict of opinion, attrition of action, fighting, in short, and then—what? Submission to any evil which is. "The Birth of a Nation" gives a Southern view of our fraternal strife. Why not? The strife was a fact. The difference between Northern and Southern view made the strife. And now, after fifty years, we may view this side or the other, presented with whatever of exaggeration, and see what horrible mistakes were made. The audience at the Olympic Sunday night was quite impartial in its applause. It was strong for Lincoln and for the picturesque vigilantes, the Ku-Klux Klan. The films are truly wonderful in the mass scenes; the battle of Petersburg, Sherman's March to the Sea, the riots, the gathering of the Klan at the sign of the Fiery Cross, the assassination of Lincoln. "The Birth of a Nation" is a colossal cinematographic masterdrama, unprecedented both in detail and in breadth of scenic sweep. Some of the titles are rhodomontade and clap-trap—very Thomas Dixon—Marie Corelli—Augusta J. Evans and that sort of thing—Woodrow Wilson is misquoted by partial quotation, Thaddeus Stevens is transmogrified into an ogre; but the main thesis is true, that Reconstruction was an abomination beside which war was a game of glad idlesse. It does not make one hate the negro. It only shows negroes half a century ago cruelly deceived and misled by fanatics and thieves into fantastic misuse of a freedom they could not understand. The drama is intensely interesting—every minute of it; some of the acting bad, egregiously pronounced, not pantomimetic but studied grimacery. The Lincoln is something execrable, so the Grant and Lee—wooden to the limit, less in ligneosity; Stoneman barely escapes a like conventionality. But all the others are very well done indeed. I do not think this town will be at all tired of five weeks of "The Birth of a Nation." And I don't think it's a lesson against war. If I am not mistaken, it brings out in us the delight of all Jungle-folk in "good hunting."

✣ ✣

The Eternal City is a [illegible] highest and most [illegible] and enriches the [illegible] with one of the finest efforts—Advertisement.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

There is one point worth considering in motion picture plays—you always get the original cast. In producing The Birth of a Nation, which is at present doing sensational business all over the Country, the selection of players must have been a most trying and serious problem for Mr. Griffith, as the range of players and characters and the work they had to perform covered a multitude of things that could not have been imposed upon ordinary workers in drama or musical comedy.

The Birth of a Nation is the greatest sensational success in stage annals of the world, for the first time in history of art you see the great historical conflicts pass before you, the burning of Atlanta, Sherman's march to the sea, victory of the North, General Grant and General Lee at Appomattox, reconstruction struggles, 18,000 people and 3,000 horses in action, the pinnacle of film spectacles, love and romance of history, tremendous battle scenes, the assassination of President Lincoln, the dauntless rides of the ku-klux klans and a tender domestic drama and charming comedy. The Birth of a Nation took eight months in the making and cost $500,000.

The Birth of a Nation is shown at Keith's Theater every afternoon and evening this week, and the audiences see the same cast as the audiences in New York City, Boston, Providence, San Francisco, Philadelphia and other cities throughout the Country for in motion pictures there are no No. 2 companies, you always see the original cast.—Advertisement.

Dixie-Land Bea[illegible] in "Birth of a Nat[illegible]

[illegible]am Cooper, who plays [illegible]n heroine in "The Birth [illegible]," at the Olympic Tea[illegible] genuine Southerner, of a [illegible]tte type, and of aristo[illegible]h. She is a direct de[illegible] of Charles Carroll, the [illegible] signer of the Declaration [illegible]endence.

Cooper was chosen b[illegible] D. W. producer of "The [illegible]th of [illegible]," as a sharp contrast to [illegible]illian Gish, who plays the [illegible] heroine. Readers of [illegible]Dixon's novel, "The Clans[illegible]nnot fail to note the ex[illegible]curacy of Miss Cooper's [illegible] of Margaret Cameron, as [illegible] by the author.

[illegible] Cooper, according to Grif[illegible] the most beautiful eyes [illegible]und in the entire world of [illegible]ctresses. In "The Birth of [illegible]on," Griffith has devised a [illegible]hat displays this remarkable [illegible]es to its fullness. Miss [illegible]'s eyes look out with a [illegible], melancholy expression, and [illegible]roop with the grace and per[illegible] of a Juno's, in a Homeric [illegible]ption.

[illegible]spite of her wonderful art in [illegible]aying the secrets of a wounded [illegible] Miss Cooper, in real life, is [illegible]hing but melancholy. She is an [illegible]round athlete, but excels es[illegible]ally in horseback riding.

Three [illegible]ractive Poses of Miriam Cooper.

Triumph of the Film In "Birth of a Nation"

Brilliant, Luminous, Resplendent Spectacle Attracts Appreciative Thousands

ALL PHILADELPHIA IMPRESSED

THRILLS for every act, American excitement for all patriotic sentiment, picturesque precept for vital enlightenment are among the distinguishing qualities of "The Birth of a Nation," the reigning sensation of Philadelphia.

This film recalls the period of civil strife, with its mingling of horror and heroism, as no amount of reading ever could. The waste and devastation, the maddening terror, the futile agony caused by the red plague of war is depicted with grim fidelity.

In convincing detail, such campaigns as Sherman's march through Georgia to the sea, and Grant's "hammering" before Petersburg, are portrayed.

After viewing the masses of cavalry, artillery and infantry in the grapple of battle, it is easy to accept the assertion of the producer, D. W. Griffith, that 18,000 men and 3,000 horses were employed in the staging of this vast drama.

Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Lincoln, with his Cabinet, the murder of the President in Ford's Theatre, the mother pleading with "the great heart" to spare her son—all are pictured with convincing realism.

Throughout the film runs the story, adapted from Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," of a Southern officer's love for the daughter of an unscrupulous Northern Senator.

This romantic element is interesting; but it is of secondary import in comparison with the great conflict which serves as its background.

Of special interest is the revelation of conditions in the home of old Doctor Cameron, a Southerner, two of

CABLE ADDRESS CLIPSURG

CLIPPING FROM

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Philadelphians Urged Not to Patronize Film Play Which Stirs Race Prejudice

To the Editor of Public Ledger:

Sir—Where is Philadelphia going to stand on the questions that present themselves with the coming of the much-talked of film, "The Birth of a Nation"?

The Mayor's decision in this regard, as in all such others, in no way settles the stand we are going to take as individuals. That the play is appearing here merely gives us the freedom of choice. But we must remember that we act not only as individuals, but as organic members of a whole—the community. "L'état c'est moi" —is as true today in a democratic sense as it was in Louis XIV's autocratic minority. So that the way in which the people of Philadelphia receive "The Birth of a Nation" is going to express the stand Philadelphia takes on some of the most vital question of today.

Does Philadelphia stand for the development of still greater race hatred for the negroes? Can the "City of Brotherly Love" allow race prejudices to still further develop and express themselves? Even today we must be damning our flickering spark of Christianity when we refuse decent, respectable hospitality to the negroes in our restaurants, equal enjoyment with the white people of our theatres and churches, and in many subtler and more insidious ways we try "to keep the negro in his place." If we are going to see "The Birth of a Nation" we are practically sure of developing our hatred and prejudice.

There is a villain in every genuine movie, and we can smile complacently when the mob hoots and hisses, and then burst into wild enthusiasm as the hero restores the chivalry of the race—which has been imperiled by the perfidious actions of some one individual. But can we smile thus complacently, and mayhap let ourselves be carried away by this mob spirit, when it is a whole race being falsely typified as the villain, and our own race very undeservedly steps in and plays the part of the hero? We are getting and creating an impression that will be difficult to destroy, one that may set us back another decade in our struggle against race prejudice.

And is Philadelphia going to be carried away by pseudo-historic sentimentality that is not true to facts? Intellectually we should be far beyond accepting plays built on historic untruths, and morally we must be sufficiently advanced to refuse to allow ourselves to be influenced by a play that is not built on facts of life, but one that takes advantage of our weakness, and works upon it.

Will Philadelphia go and see a play that to develop that ungrounded, un-Christian attitude toward the negro, and that uses blatant for this purpose—all for the final end money? According as we receive [illegible] Philadelphia's attitude towards [illegible] negroes, and we show [illegible] for film [illegible]

Date .....

500TH FOR THE NATION FILM

New York, Sept. 4.—The Birth of a Nation passed its 500th presentation in New York on last Tuesday night. The run at the Liberty Theater was marked last week by the fourth largest number of admissions of the twenty-seven weeks that the picture has been on Broadway. It is said that 453,000 people have seen the picture here, and that the gross receipts have been considerably over $300,000.

[illegible] Sept. 4.

only one showin[illegible]

[illegible] Bell. Thomas

[illegible] Pantomime Ken[illegible]

[illegible]st P[illegible] By "B[illegible]

D. W. Griffith's Pl[illegible] Achieves Reco[illegible] Boston

D. W. Griffith's photo[illegible] Birth of a Nation," [illegible] week of its engagem[illegible] Theater tomorrow n[illegible] twice daily at 8:15 an[illegible]

Nothing like this [illegible] been seen in local th[illegible] here exactly as it [illegible] York, where it has [illegible] In addition the pro[illegible] record engagements [illegible] San Francisco and [illegible] It covers a wide ra[illegible] tory and touches on [illegible] interest in the great [illegible] and terminated the C[illegible] that slavery played [illegible] crisis is traced from [illegible] abolition.

Where directors of [illegible] dealt with hundreds [illegible] employs thousands; [illegible] the scenes; 2,600 horse[illegible] view in wild dashes [illegible] try roadway. The d[illegible] Civil war are repr[illegible] built up only to be d[illegible] and verity to the dr[illegible] enormous battlefield[illegible] over an area of 10 a[illegible] these plains and t[illegible] clash.

There are tears and [illegible] fices and heroic deed[illegible]

"Th[illegible]

If you [illegible] a Nation" [illegible] astonishing [illegible] portraiture [illegible] stage. Im[illegible] izing the [illegible] terest and [illegible] add 3,000 [illegible] the most re[illegible] the world, [illegible] cades over [illegible] through [illegible] plains, and [illegible] vague idea [illegible] this narrati[illegible]

The plot [illegible] the relationship of the slavery question to the developments of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of the disputing states there arose the mightiest nation in the world. With history as its background and reared a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodical details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dr[illegible] who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people and [illegible] his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hindered stage spectacles.

The premier production of "The Birth of a Nation" is at the Cumings [illegible] Labor Day, Sept. 6, and will [illegible] afternoon and evening [illegible] the week. Tickets on sale

...ore Wat...oo" Is ...lled by Olympic Film

SOUTHERN BALL BEFORE THE BATTLE OF BULL RUN.

...he romance of war, as well as its ...ctacular horror, is depicted in "The ...th of a Nation" at the Olympic The... Consciously or subconsciously, ...W. Griffith's mind ran in the same ...as Lord Byron's in working ...epic masterpiece. Even those ...e ears the name "Childe Har... only vaguely familiar, recall ...he stirring lines in which the ...l-blooded of all English poets ...s the ball before Waterloo, that ... revelry which started so gayly ...eetly and ended so sadly and ...ly.

...he Birth of a Nation" Mr. Grif... made use of the same thrilling ...t between the joy of life and the ... emptiness of death that stirs ... Byron's immortal poem. On ... of Bull Run, just before the sol...re to leave for the front, a great ... held in the little Carolina town where the scene of the story is laid. It is one of those brilliant, old-fashioned functions, where the aristocracy of birth and breeding were as apparent as at the ball at Brussels. Mr. Griffith's staging of this gathering of "beauty and chivalry" is artistically perfect. The "shadow shapes" on the screen sway to the stately music of the audible orchestra, and the audience has no difficulty in imagining itself present at the ball, though somewhat in the character of "wall flowers."

As in the case of the Brussel's ball, a deep sound strikes like a rising knell. Tears spring to soft eyes that looked "love to eyes that spake again," for they cannot mistake the distant roar of the cannon. There are hurried partings. "Chivalry" rides to the field of glory and of death, while beauty is left in the joy-deserted halls to weep. It is one of the most stirring scenes in the remarkable picture.

...RYPORT (Mass.) NEWS
SEPT. 9, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

...t Production in This City on Thursday Next.

...he Birth of a Nation" is the most ...rtable attraction of recent years ...erican stage annals. It uses 18,... people to tell its story and 3000 ... add their quota to its bigness. ...e epic links history and romance ...a way never attempted before. Its ...ic scenes are founded in some of ...most striking events in the na...'s development and these are con...sted with human appeals and family ...rests which are after all the es...tials of true drama. Great battles ...he Civil war are fought before your ... Lee surrenders to Grant at Ap...matox. Lincoln is assassinated as ...lly as the scene took place 50 ... ago in Ford's theatre, Washing... The South before and after the ... pictured in its most interesting ... Wild rides of the Klansmen ...dash and spirit to the perform... All remains exactly as it was ...orginally in New York and Bos... When this marvellous picture as...ded all and created more comment ... all the plays that have been seen ... decade.

...is a picture in a life time; one ...will in all probability never be ...ted and for that reason should ...wed by every man, woman and ...n this city. Once seen it is never ...rgotten and since the Premier ... will undoubtedly be crowded ...uring its engagement of this ...ble spectacle which com... Thursday, Sept. 16, for a pe...ree days, it would be wise ... engage seats at the earliest ...moment.

...will be two performances ... matinees starting prompt...clock, while the evening ses...ll start at 7.45 oclock. The ...are requested to reach the ... plenty of season to be seat... the opening of the mighty ...

...SEMENTS.

...r "audiences are the rule ... at the Nixon Theater, ... Birth of a Nation" is play... to the excellent cooling ... the theater the temperature ... agreeable. As a matter of ...oto drama is an ideal form ... for warm weather as ...

NEW BEDFORD (Mass.) STANDAR
SEPT. 9, 1915

The Ku Klux Klan.

To the Editor of The Standard:

"The Birth of a Nation" has come and gone. It defended and justified murder. It glorified the Ku Klux Klan, the worst and most cowardly gang of assassins that ever went unhung. It is claimed that a New Bedford audience actually applauded the presentation of that infamous spectacle. If that be true, then Massachusetts is sowing the wind and will one day reap the whirlwind. This play is nothing but a part of the southern propaganda to make the Negro odious and educate northern minds to see things through southern lenses. Thomas Dixon, the author of "The Birth of a Nation," wrote a book, "The Leopard Spots," in which he portrayed the black man as low as the beast without a soul. Does New Bedford and New England subscribe to that idea? The one is just as logical as the other, just as humane, just as Christian. New England should close her doors to all such rot and clap-trap as "The Birth of a Nation." The officials who permitted it to show here are guilty of a great wrong. Why? A young girl not yet out of her teens was heard to say after witnessing the show, "I felt like killing every Negro I met." That's the reason why. It is not only misleading, but is a miserable, contemptible, historical lie, and no community ought to subject its young to such vile influences. The south has lowered her standard of civilization, trampled law under foot, disgraced the name of liberty; now she seeks to proselyte northern minds to the same degredation. An occasional lynching, north of Mason and Dixon's line provokes an excess of enthusiasm in the south. It is a triumph of their ideas, a vindication of their principles and portends the future peonage of their former slaves. All those who saw and applauded "The Birth of a Nation" can now have an opportunity to hear the truth about the Ku Klux Klan, and see a mental picture of the other side of the shield. Hon. J. C. Manning, a southerner to the manor born, will deliver an address at Zion A. M. E. church, Elm street, Rev. Dennis Scott, pastor, Wednesday, Sept. 8, at 8.30 p. m. He is familiar with the history of those midnight assassins, the Ku Klux Klan, and will tell you the unvarnished truth about them and their bloody reign of terrorism. He will also discuss the lynching of Leo Frank; the exile of Governor Slaton, disfranchisement and the entire gamut of southern infamy and outrages. Come out and hear him and then see if you are disposed to applaud the scurrilous travesty mis-named "The Birth of a Nation."

B. M. McKay,
428 Kempton Street.

LONG BRANCH (N. J.) RECORD
SEPT. 9, 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" AGAIN AT ASBURY

It will be welcome news to residents of Long Branch that they are to have another opportunity to see D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which was presented at the Broadway Theatre last month. The spectacle is not coming back to Long Branch but a return engagement is announced for the Savoy Theatre, Asbury Park, to begin next Monday and continuing for the entire week. There will be daily matinees and prices to fit all purses. The Asbury Park engagement will be in the nature of a farewell to the Jersey coast as the spectacle will not be presented in Long Branch, Red Bank or any other towns in this section of the State. Seats are now on sale and can be reserved by telephone.

There would be more horses than the present 3,000 shown in "The Birth of a Nation" if the European war had not broken out when this part of the big production was being completed. The foreign drain on American horseflesh is something the average citizen has no comprehension of. Griffith had to beg, borrow and buy horses for his big scenes and they were corralled from all parts of the country. He found agents of the English, French, Italian and Russian governments competing with him for these horses and while he only rented them by the day the foreign demand was so great that many shrewd horsemen forced him to buy at war prices in order to complete his picture within a given time.

CLIPPING ...
Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Date .....

HISTORY UNDER FALSE PRETENSES.

To the Editor of Public Ledger:

Sir—Your editorial page is, as a rule, fair and constructive. I'm wondering whether or not you've seen the "Birth of a Nation" playing here after being produced on the Pacific coast at 25 cents for the best seat and $2 here for the best seat.

It could more properly be called the "Death of the Negro," for of all the travesties on history and tawdry slapstick falsities—except for a few mitigating features, one of which was the, as usual, splendid work of Henry Warthall—this over-advertised film is the worst that I've sat through. It has the effrontery to exploit a crazy-brained ex-actor (sometime a clumsy spy for the Confederate army) and the murder of our most sombre and human Chief Executive. Most certainly the most lurid bacchanalian scenes that our Board of Censors has—and no doubt properly—declared unshowable can in no way compare with the main theme of this film.

It purports to be history. It isn't anything of the sort. It is false pretense from the start. And it's a mighty bad thing for women to witness. The Frank case would be a far more legitimate story to film. As photography it is superb, though decidedly trick photography in most of the conflagration scenes. As an epic—well, go see it.

A READER.

Philadelphia, September 8, 1915.

VARIETY (New York City)
SEP 10 1915

CAMPBELL'S "SLAVE" FEATURE

The phenomenal success of "The Birth of a Nation" is having its effect upon the theatrical and film fraternity. It has started a number of picture producers off with a new standard of perfection to be attained, and the box office takings are making it easier to secure financial assistance for other "big" pictures that might otherwise be chary.

The latest competitor for highest honors is "Bob" Campbell, son of the late Bartley Campbell, who has the backing of two men whose aggregate bank-roll would total $1,000,000. Not that these men will put it all into the film industry, but they profess to stand ready to finance the screen adaptation of "The White Slave" and, if it shows cause, to follow it with a similar adaptation of Bartley Campbell's "Siberia."

Those in show business know tha "The White Slave" has been acted fo over 30 years, during which time it made a profit of approximately a million dollars. Young Bob's present scheme is to do this piece as a feature picture on a scale to equal, if not surpass, if possible, the "Nation" production.

The story is entirely dissimilar, and it bears no resemblance to the "white slave" traffic. Bob is the owner of a number of his late father's manuscripts, many, in their day, successful melodramas that will lend themselves readily to filming on a large scale.

VARIETY (New York City)
SEP 10 1915

PIRATING GOING ON.

From indications now on hand, locally the South American and Australian points are scheduled to receive their share of pictures this fall. Arrangements have been made by J. D. Williams for the feature, "Hypocrites" to make a complete tour of the Antipodes. "Cabiria" has already been contracted through Australia and a bid was made for "The Birth of A Nation," but the Nation demand was considered too high.

Sam Blair, who for several seasons has been taking pictures to Australia and Hawaii, knows conditions pretty well and contends that much picture pirating is going on in foreign points, the piracy idea proving much cheaper and more remunerative in the long run than to book up the American feature direct and place on booking commission basis. Many films are bought in London and shipped into the Antipodes from Barcelona, Spain. This is done in many cases where some busy "pirates" try to slip some films over without paying premiums desired.

...FIVE CE...

...nd see what ... The audience ...is quite insp... ...ong for Lin... ...ites, the Ku-Klu... wonderful in ... ...etersburg, S... ...riots, the gath... the Fiery Cr... "The Birth ... ...atographic m... ...ix, detail and ... you of the ... ...very Th... ...sta J. E... ...w Wilson ... ...w York, Thadd... in ogre; ... ...econstruction ...ch war was ... ...not make ... ...negroes half ... ...and misled ... ...tic misuse of ... ...nderstand. Th... ...every minute ...gregiously p... ...ut studied p... ...hing exercis... ...n to the limi... ...rely escapes ... the others ... not think th... ...e weeks of "Th... don't think it's ... ...not mistake, ... of all Jungle-lif...

WALTHAM (Mass.) FREE PRESS
SEPT. 10, 1915

BIG FILM HERE NEXT MONDAY

"Birth of a Nation" at the Scenic For Three Days Only

Short ... falling off to almost nothing ... the close have been the invariable rule with motion pictures hitherto.

The film spectacle of "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the ... Theatre next Monday, September 13th, for three days, is not a feature in the ordinary sense, but a mighty panorama and pictorial exposition of the most vital points of American history which are particularly interesting to Americans now on account of the threatened complications with a foreign power. Super-added to history is a delightful love romance of the North and South, whilst the whole is lit up and made fascinating by Mr. Griffith's remarkable gift of quiet humor and ... eye for the sligh... Indeed there are ... than 200,000 deta... "As a work ...

$4.50

Sterling Silver Cigar ... and Va... ities, with space for powder, mirr... and coins of three different denom... ations. Polished or embossed desi...

[illegible]st Point Reached By "Birth of a Nation"

[illegible] W. Griffith's Photo Spectacle in the Nixon Theater Achieves Record Runs in New York, Chicago, Boston and Other Largest Cities.

[illegible] W. Griffith's photo spectacle, "The [illegible]th of a Nation," begins the second [illegible] of its engagement at the Nixon [illegible]eater tomorrow night. It is shown [illegible]e daily at 3:15 and 8:15 p. m.

[illegible]ything like this attraction has ever [illegible]n seen in local theaters. It is given [illegible] exactly as it is presented in New [illegible]k, where it has broken every record. [illegible] addition the production has piled up [illegible] engagements in Chicago, Boston, [illegible]ancisco and Los Angeles.

[illegible] covers a wide range of American his[illegible]y and touches only highest points of [illegible]rest in the great events that led up to [illegible] terminated the Civil war. The force [illegible] slavery played in producing this [illegible]is is traced from its inception to its [illegible]olition.

Where directors of vast spectacle have [illegible]alt with hundreds in the past, Griffith [illegible]ploys thousands; 18,000 people are in [illegible] scenes; 3,000 horses pass before your [illegible]w in wild dashes over miles of coun[illegible]y roadway. The decisive battles of the [illegible]vil war are reproduced. Cities were [illegible]ilt up only to be destroyed to lend force [illegible]d verity to the dramatic narrative. One [illegible]normous battlefield is shown stretching [illegible]er an area of 10 square miles and upon [illegible]hese plains and trenches 10,000 soldiers [illegible]ash.

There are tears and smiles, noble sacri[illegible]ices and heroic deeds. Youthful dreams of [illegible] fruitition are rent assunder by th[illegible]ons of war; home ties snap before [illegible] to arms. Suffering is depicted in [illegible] story made when men surrendered [illegible] to passion.

[illegible] see the war start after being shown [illegible] causes which precipitated it. You see [illegible] great generals of the contending sections playing their resperate games of human pawns moved into the field of slaughter.

Then comes the agreement for peace and Lincoln in his task of healing the wounds by the application of that great love which made him the towering figure of his age.

A fanatic's bullet stills his heart. The South is thrown back into a worse fate than war. Their lands are overrun by a horde of political grafters. The negro is cajoled into a false understanding of liberty and in his ignorance is led into excesses by these scalawags.

Out of it comes the ghostly garbed crusaders of a terrible era to once more set things aright and return lands and liberties to their rightful owners and over the land's miserere sounds the chorus of brotherly love in an allegorical dream which visions the reunion of the divided sections and the welding of that national spirit which has made this nation great after its baptism of blood.

A musical score accompanies the narrative. It is all done on a big scale.

Ku Klux Klan in "The Birth of a Nation"

HILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS

SEP 6 1915

"BIRTH OF NATION" EXCITES APPLAUSE

No Disorderly Scenes Attend Presentation of Much-Heralded Movie Play.

(From "The Sunday Press.")

Grim tragedy and romance [illegible] to make "The Birth of a Nation," [illegible] had its initial opening here last night at the Forrest, before a packed house, one of the most remarkable photoplays ever produced. The production attracted the largest crowd here with which it has been favored on the entire circuit.

When D. W. Griffith staged the tremendous production, he combined in it all of the realities, horrible though they may have seemed, of the days of the carpet-bagger in the South, after the assassination of President Lincoln. But into these is blended a beautiful romance that makes the picture one that reaches the heart of the most skeptical critic.

The great spectacle is founded upon Thomas Dixon's now famous novel, "The Clansman," but the much talked-of racial prejudice was conspicuous by its absence. There is nothing in "The Birth of a Nation" that could even tend to excite any racial prejudice and it was received by the audience with outbursts of patriotic applause rather than jeers and cheers combined as had been predicted by those opposed to the photoplay.

Scenes Are Wonderful.

Many of the scenes that are thrown upon the screen are little less than wonderful. Some of them are historically accurate, including the signing of the Proclamation of Emancipation, Lee's surrender at Appomattox Court House, the assassination of the martyred President and the formation of the Ku Klux Klan.

A cast of 18,000 persons and 3000 horses was required in the production of the play. It is said to have cost $500,000 and taken eight months to produce.

The scene begins with events leading up to the Civil War and into this come prominently the lives of four persons, two of Northern birth and two of Southern. A Southern gentleman falls in love with the picture of the sister of his Northern college chum, who is the son of the leading radical politician of Congress. On the other hand, the Northern boy is attracted by the charms of his Southern friend's sister.

War Divides Sweethearts.

But between these hearts steps a war that divides them into two factions. As the war ends the Northern Congressman, upon the death of President Lincoln, holds the power with which he sends the carpet-bagger into the South for political reasons. It is not the colored man who is held accountable for his acts during that reign of terror, but the white scalawags who take advantage of the colored man's ignorance to incite him to riots and violence. The final expulsion of the carpet-bagger by the Ku-Klux Klan, into which is woven numerous exciting incidents, and the establishment of the colored race as an asset to the South, brings the production to a close. True love triumphs over prejudice and the lovers are left standing upon the mountains, watching the birth of a strong and united nation.

Director Porter's fears that "The Birth of a Nation" might result in race riots proved to be unfounded. There was plenty of applause, for the picture merited that, but only once was a hiss heard. That was when John Wilkes Booth was seen sneaking behind President Lincoln's box in Ford's Theater, Washington.

Colored Folk Applaud.

There was a sprinkling of colored folk through the audience and their actions spoke their feelings in the matter. Not once is there a scene to which anyone could take exception and in several instances where the Ku Klux Klan figured, the colored spectators joined the whites in their applause.

A detail of police was sent to the theater in case of eventualities, but was not needed. "The Birth of a Nation" is a masterpiece and begins a new era in photoplays in Philadelphia. It is probably the first of a number of high class, well-acted moving pictures that will find ready favor in this city.

[illegible]TCHBURG (Mass.) SENTINEL 321

SEPT. 8, 1915

[illegible] delayed.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Photo Drama at Cumings Presents Vivid Picture of Civil War and Reconstruction Period

"The birth of a nation," the sensational attraction which created so much comment at the Cumings theater on Monday and Tuesday, has only three more days to remain in this city. It is doubtful if a week is long enough to enable all to attend the theater, but the management was unable to secure it for any longer period. Boston had the production for months and its engagement was twice extended and now it has moved to another theater so that it can be realized that "The birth of a nation" is something far superior to anything else of its kind. The local management had to pay a big guarantee to secure it for Fitchburg and the theatergoers of this vicinity are showing their appreciation by turning out in good numbers every day.

"The birth of a nation" is a historical drama in two parts founded on "The clansman," a novel by Thomas Dixon. It shows the North and South at war and the reconstruction period after the war. A Northern and Southern home are shown before the war. The call to arms comes and the sons of both houses leave for the front. Battles and battlefields are shown in a marvelous manner during which many important and historical scenes are shown. Then come the scenes after the war, the rise of the men who exploited the negro, the rise of the Ku Klux Klan. The love element is not lacking and adds to the interest. It is a wonderful spectacle while the company is superb.

Few people believed that the Cumings could present "The birth of a nation" in such a satisfactory manner. The presence of a 16 piece orchestra, the appearance of the two pretty program girls in the dress of the early 60s, and the ushers in the Blue and Gray lend a distinction and class to the production that has been lacking in anything else shown in Fitchburg. It lifts "The birth of a nation" into a class by itself and the production holds it there.

The reserve seats for the remainder of the engagement are now on sale and as the sale is pretty good for each of the remaining performances it would seem a wise policy to engage seats as soon as possible.

[illegible]TCHBURG (Mass.) NEWS

SEPT. 4, 1915

Coming Week

"The Birth of a Nation"

If you have not seen "The Birth of a Nation" you have missed the most astonishing achievement in dramatic portraiture introduced to the American stage. Imagine 18,000 people vizualizing the story of intense human interest and dramatic purposes and then add 3,000 horses ridden by some of the most reckless and daring riders in the world, dashing in great cavalcades over picturesque roads and through war-strewn valleys and plains, and you can begin to form a vague idea of the scale upon which this narrative is unfolded.

The plot of the drama deals with the relationship of the slavery question to the developments of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of the disputing states there arose the mightiest nation in the world. With history as its background reared a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodical details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dramatist who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people and uses his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hampered stage spectacles.

The premier production of "The Birth of a Nation" is at the Cumings [illegible] Labor Day, Sept. 6, and will [illegible] every afternoon and evening [illegible] the week. Tickets on sale [illegible]

Sam[illegible] 1.

only one show[illegible]

a Bell[illegible]

Thomas

CLIPPER STICKER IS WORLD.

SUMMER GARDEN

A Scene From "The Birth Of A Nation"

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" OPENING AT OLYMPIC THEATER AUGUST 29

VARIETY (New York City)
AUG 3 - 1916

ginning with the arrival of the slaves in this land, the forces up to the main story of "The of a Nation," to be unfolded to uris theater goers at the Olympic ay night, Aug. 29, and following pelling lesson, range through the ages of American history.

first rumblings of the abolition it are heard ominously. The n States, in their claims to the maintain the institution of reach the climax of their dis content in the election of Abraham Lincoln. The new President issues his first call for troops, and the Civil War, so long dreaded, comes to be a tragic deality. The story of the mighty conflict is told vividly in the works of the best historians, but D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is credited with a new vividness. Sherman marches to the sea before the eyes of the spectator, and the storming of Atlanta excites the veteran in the audience to the wildest pitch of enthusiasm. The battle of Petersburg is fought on a stage five miles in width, and the veteran recognizes the tree or the clump of bushes whose shelter he heroically abandoned to meet the bayonet charge of the enemy.

While the man of the North and the South are engaged in the fearful struggle, Griffith flashes before the eyes of the spectator the woman's part in the war. She is at home praying, or is ministering to the wounded in the hospitals or is scanning with dreadful anxiety the lists of the slain. Then comes Appomattox Courthouse, Gen. Lee and Gen. Grant draw up articles that are to put an end for all time to strife in this country and when they have signed each other and stretch out their hands for a brotherly clasp, the spectators, according to reports from the Eastern amusement centers fairly rise to their feet and yell and cheer as if they were present at the actual scene of reconciliation.

Though the war is over, the nation must still go through some bitter throes before it becomes the wonderful reality it is today. Lincoln is assassinated; the enemies of the South in Congress, undeterred by the strong hand of the great leader, make possible the rule of the carpetbagger. The newly liberated race, under the influence of pernicious politicians, go to such excesses that the Aryans of the South are forced to band together secretly for their preservation. This gives rise to the Ku Klux Klans, and their wild rides o ntheir errands of vengeance and mercy are among the most thrilling scenes.

The spectacle is rendered still more realistic by thousands of sound and electrical effects, especially devised for this production and by a musical score blending patriotic and sentimental themes into an operatic whole interpreted by a special symphony orchestra.

"NATION" WANTS TO STAY.

"The Birth of a Nation" wants to stay at the Liberty. Its contract under the present terms (flat rental) expires this week. A new agreement is being negotiated for, which will give the house management (Klaw & Erlanger) a guaranteeed amount weekly, to be considered as rental, with a percentage of the receipts over a certain figure.

"The Nation" film is still doing around between $11,000 and $12,000 weekly at the Liberty. A condition of the renewal of the "Nation's" agreement for that house is said to be an arrangement with "The Moloch" to postpone its booking. "The Moloch" is a K. & E. production of last season that "flopped" on its road premiere. It was reported the firm had decided to shelve it, but now the "Nation" people have learned it is a Liberty booking, which may mean a bonus will have to be paid to cancel the show's time there. The Charles Dillingham production for Elsie Janis was also a possibility for the Liberty, if Griffith's film left there.

AY FORUM — What's What and W in Movie P

Most Famous Producer of Moving Pictures

'Tis Said He Gets $100,000 a Year

DAVID W. GRIFFITH

DAVID W. GRIFFITH'S masterpiece, the "Birth of a Nation," is the biggest thing that has come out of moving pictures to date. The new art of dramatic expression has given us some splendid spectacles, "Cabiria," "Quo Vadis?" "Judith of Bethulia," and many more, but none of them can approach the "Birth of a Nation," which is stupendous in its size and magnificence.

The story of the spectacle, which is in two parts of five reels each, is taken from the Rev. Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." The first half deals with the civil war, and the second part is the history of the reconstruction in the South just after the civil war.

The Ku Klux Klan plays an important part in the unfolding of the story, and the fight of the Southern people to free themselves of carpet-bag rule is made much of.

Eighteen thousand people were necessary to produce the great feature, and 3000 horses are used in the battle scenes. Gen. Lee's last stand at the battle of Petersburg, Va., is reproduced on a magnificent scale. The country seems to be covered with men for miles in some of the battle scenes. The burning of Atlanta, Ga., is reproduced with historical exactitude, and the whole main street of a Southern town was built just as it existed immediately after the war, to give color to a scene.

Sherman's march to the sea is reproduced with much detail, and an exact replica of Ford's Theater at Washington is used to show the scene of the assassination of President Lincoln.

David W. Griffith, the director of the "Birth of a Nation," is easily the biggest man in motion pictures, just as his masterpiece is the biggest thing that has come out of the new art of photographic drama.

Griffith has been one of the leading directors and producers on the silent stage for several years. He is one of the pioneers of the art who has risen to really great heights. Griffith is the originator of many new ideas, and creator of much movi[illegible] picture technique. He originated what is known in moving pictures as the "close-up," and he eliminated the early habit of gestur[illegible] and pantomimic mannerisms among [illegible]

[illegible] Kentuckian by birth, and [illegible] director he has perhaps a [illegible] dramatic than any man [illegible] on the silent stage.

(New York City)

AUG 3 - 1915

[illegible] Park, N. J., Sept. 1 — [illegible] Nation" at the Sa[illegible] about $11,500 gross, [illegible]pts for this city, and [illegible] so with a moving pic[illegible] gave three shows [illegible]ay and Saturday, giv[illegible] days at 10.30 a. m. [illegible] picture will return to [illegible]3.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

SEP [illegible]

[illegible] The Empress theater at Paola, Kan., has changed its policy in regards to its program. The program has been changed to make Thursday night a big feature film night. "The Rosary," "The Spoilers," "The Island of Regeneration," "The Eternal City" and the "Birth of A Nation" will be shown in the near future. On these nights the seats will be reserved and the sale of the tickets will begin the first of each week. Owing to the length of the pictures the time of the opening has been changed from 7:30 o'clock to 8 o'clock and only one showing will be made.

Evening Mail 8/31/15

"Birth of a Nation" Stays.

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" passed its twenty-eighth week in the Liberty Theatre Saturday night. On Tuesday night the 500th performance in New York was given. This is one of the biggest records of recent years. It enters the present week upon the record run of the Liberty Theatre. The record for the Liberty heretofore was held by the "Spring Maid," which ran for twenty-eight weeks. "The Birth of a Nation" continues at the Liberty indefinitely.

ARGONAUT (San Francisco)

AUG 2 1 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Cort.

"The Birth of a Nation; or, The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's wonderful motion picture production, will be the attraction at the Cort Theatre for a brief period, beginning with the matinée, Monday, August 23d. Despite the length of its run in San Francisco "The Birth of a Nation" would seem to possess as great drawing powers as ever, judging by the interest shown in the advance sale. It should prove, too, an ideal attraction for Exposition visitors who have heard of the wonders of this screen drama. During the engagement at the Cort the original incidental music will be given, interpreted by an enlarged orchestra.

The twelve reels of "The Birth of a Nation" are based on the famous novel called "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, Jr., but it deals more broadly on its historical [illegible] than either the book or the well-known play.

It is not too much to say that "The Birth of a Nation" represents the very acme of art and realism in motion pictures. It includes the most spectacular battle scenes ever staged. In these battle scenes are shown 35,000 soldiers in action, including infantry, artillery, and cavalry.

The night battle scenes represent the greatest feats in the history of motion-picture photography. The burning of the city of Atlanta at night is graphically shown. The scene does not show merely a few buildings in flames, as is usual in motion pictures, but depicts the entire city on fire.

The famous raids of the Ku-Klux Klan, with thousands of these white-hooded riders in action, make for several thrilling features not easily forgotten.

The New Bill at the Orpheum.

The Orpheum will have as its chief novel feature next week Thomas Egan, Ireland's famous tenor, who will make his vaudeville début in this city and will sing the most de-

---

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
SEPT. 1, 1915

COMEDY SCENES IN NIXON FILM

Delicate Comedy in the "Birth of a Nation" is Foil for Pathos

The general character of "The Birth of a Nation" which closes its all Summer's run at the New Nixon Theater on Monday, September 6th, is of necessity, sober and somber. It represents a critical period in the history of the States. It pictures a time that "tired men's souls" and is not to be approached in levity or with the view that there is "a laugh in every line." It is not a farce; it is not a comedy, it is simply a truthful picture of the times it portrays and there was little of a comic nature about those times and events. Yet there is comedy in D. W. Griffith's lmed spectacle. Comedy of the most delicate sort, but comedy nevertheless.

There is the typical Southern home where all is good cheer. War's alarms have not yet disturbed its serenity. A Northerner is visiting his old college chum. Youth will be served, and in their playful wrestling and chasing each other about the old mansion and grounds we have pure comedy and the best of good feeling, no matter if within a few months they are to die on the field of battle, enemies but clasped in each others arms.

Again there is the scene in "the quarters" where the negroes are "showing off" for the benefit of northern visitors. Later in the play they have their serious roles.

And so through it all there are bits of the lighter shade of life to be overcast by the somber shade later on.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

SEP [illegible]

NEW ENGLAND GOSSIP.

"The Birth of a Nation" closed its run in Boston during the past week. The Griffith spectacle is now showing in Providence, R. I., Brockton and New Bedford. It is meeting with the same success in those cities as it did in the Hub. Chandos St. J. Brennan and Manager

---

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

Date ..... SEP 7 .....

"The Birth of a Nation"

D. W. Griffith's "The [illegible] of a Nation," the first film to lift [illegible] into [illegible] "Two Dollar" class, [illegible] at the Forrest yesterday before two capacity audiences which reaffirmed the verdict of those who attended the local premiere on Saturday, that the picture marks the highest point yet reached in motion picture photography. In vastness [illegible] in fidelity to historical fact, [illegible] interest of the double [illegible] which the story is built, the [illegible] ciently remarkable to justify [illegible] bestowal for it.

THE STAGE'S WORLD.

SUMMER GARDEN

A Scene From "The Birth Of A Nation"

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" OPENING AT OLYMPIC THEATER AUGUST 29

VARIETY (New York City)
AUG 8 - 1919

ginning with the arrival of the slaves in this land, the forces up to the main story of "The of a Nation," to be unfolded to ours theater goers at the Olympic ay night, Aug. 29, and following spelling lesson, range through the ages of American history.

first rumblings of the abolition are heard ominously. The States, in their claims to the maintain the institution of reach the climax of their discontent in the election of Abraham Lincoln. The new President issues his first call for troops, and the Civil War, so long dreaded, comes to be a tragic deality. The story of the mighty conflict is told vividly in the works of the best historians, but D. W. Griffith, producer of "The Birth of a Nation," is credited with a new vividness. Sherman marches to the sea before the eyes of the spectator, and the storming of Atlanta excites the veteran in the audience to the wildest pitch of enthusiasm. The battle of Petersburg is fought on a stage five miles in width, and the veteran recognizes the tree or the clump of bushes whose shelter he heroically abandoned to meet the bayonet charge of the enemy.

While the man of the North and the South are engaged in the fearful struggle, Griffith flashes before the eyes of the spectator the woman's part in the war. She is at home praying, or is ministering to the wounded in the hospitals or is scanning with dreadful anxiety the lists of the slain. Then comes Appomattox Courthouse, Gen. Lee and Gen. Grant draw up articles that are to put an end for all time to strife in this country, and when they [illegible] each other and stretch out their hands for a brotherly clasp, the spectators, according to reports from the Eastern amusement centers fairly rise to their feet and yell and cheer as if they were present at the actual scene of reconciliation.

Though the war is over, the nation must still go through some bitter throes before it becomes the wonderful reality it is today. Lincoln is assassinated; the enemies of the South in Congress, undeterred by the strong hand of the great leader, make possible the rule of the carpetbagger. The newly liberated race, under the influence of pernicious politicians, go to such excesses that the Aryans of the South are forced to band together secretly for their preservation. This gives rise to the Ku Klux Klans, and their wild rides o mtheir errands of vengeanre and mercy are among the most thrilling scenes.

The spectacle is rendered still more realistic by thousands of sound and electrical effects, especially devised for this production and by a musical score blending patriotic and sentimental themes into an operatic whole, interpreted by a special symphony orchestra.

"NATION" WANTS TO STAY.

"The Birth of a Nation" wants to stay at the Liberty. Its contract under the present terms (flat rental) expires this week. A new agreement is being negotiated for, which will give the house management (Klaw & Erlanger) a guaranteeed amount weekly, to be considered as rental, with a percentage of the receipts over a certain figure.

"The Nation" film is still doing around between $11,000 and $12,000 weekly at the Liberty. A condition of the renewal of the "Nation's" agreement for that house is said to be an arrangement with "The Moloch" to postpone its booking. "The Moloch" is a K. & E. production of last season that "flopped" on its road premiere. It was reported the firm had decided to shelve it, but now the "Nation" people have learned it is a Liberty booking, which may mean a bonus will have to be paid to cancel the show's time there. The Charles Dillingham production for Elsie Janis was also a possibility for the Liberty, if Griffith's film left there.

AY FORUM — What's What and W in Movie P

Most Famous Producer of Moving Pictures

'Tis Said He Gets $100,000 a Year

DAVID W. GRIFFITH

DAVID W. GRIFFITH'S masterpiece, the "Birth of a Nation," is the biggest thing that has come out of moving pictures to date. The new art of dramatic expression has given us some splendid spectacles, "Cabiria," "Quo Vadis?" "Judith of Bethulia," and many more, but none of them can approach the "Birth of a Nation," which is stupendous in its size and magnificence.

The story of the spectacle, which is in two parts of five reels each, is taken from the Rev. Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." The first half deals with the civil war, and the second part is the history of the reconstruction in the South just after the civil war.

The Ku Klux Klan plays an important part in the unfolding of the story, and the fight of the Southern people to free themselves of carpet-bag rule is made much of.

Eighteen thousand people were necessary to produce the great feature, and 3000 horses are used in the battle scenes. Gen. Lee's last stand at the battle of Petersburg, Va., is reproduced on a magnificent scale. The country seems to be covered with men for miles in some of the battle scenes. The burning of Atlanta, Ga., is reproduced with historical exactitude, and the whole main street of a Southern town was built just as it existed immediately after the war, to give color to a scene.

Sherman's march to the sea is reproduced with much detail, and an exact replica of Ford's Theater at Washington is used to show the scene of the assassination of President Lincoln.

David W. Griffith, the director of the "Birth of a Nation," is easily the biggest man in motion pictures, just as his masterpiece is the biggest thing that has come out of the new art of photographic drama.

Griffith has been one of the leading directors and producers on the silent stage for several years. He is one of the pioneers of the art who has risen to really great heights. Griffith is the originator of many new ideas, and creator of much movi[illegible] picture technique. He originated what is known in moving pictures as the "close-up." and he eliminated the early habit of gesturing and pantomimic mannerisms among [illegible] Kentuckian by birth, and [illegible] actor he has perhaps a [illegible] dramatic than any man [illegible] the silent stage.

(New York City)

AUG 3 - 1915

Park, N. J., Sept. 1 [illegible] Nation" at the Sa- [illegible] about $11,500 gross, [illegible] pts for this city, and [illegible] so with a moving pic- [illegible] gave three shows [illegible] day and Saturday, giv- [illegible] days at 10.30 a. m. [illegible] William [illegible] picture will return to [illegible] 33.

Evening Mail 8/31/15

"Birth of a Nation" Stays.

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" passed its twenty-eighth week in the Liberty Theatre Saturday night. On Tuesday night the 500th performance in New York was given. This is one of the biggest records of recent years. It enters the present week upon the record run of the Liberty Theatre. The record for the Liberty heretofore was held by the "Spring Maid," which ran for twenty-eight weeks. "The Birth of a Nation" continues at the Liberty indefinitely.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

SEP [illegible]

[illegible] the Empress theater at Paola, Kan., has changed its policy in regards to its program. The program has been changed to make Thursday night a big feature film night. "The Rosary," "The Spoilers," "The Island of Regeneration," "The Eternal City" and the "Birth of A Nation" will be shown in the near future. On these nights the seats will be reserved and the sale of the tickets will begin the first of each week. Owing to the length of the pictures the time of the opening has been changed from 7:30 o'clock to 8 o'clock and only one showing will be made.

ARGONAUT (San Francisco)

AUG 2 1 1915

[illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Cort.

"The Birth of a Nation; or, The Clansman," D. W. Griffith's wonderful motion picture production, will be the attraction at the Cort Theatre for a brief period, beginning with the matinée, Monday, August 23d. Despite the length of its run in San Francisco "The Birth of a Nation" would seem to possess as great drawing powers as ever, judging by the interest shown in the advance sale. It should prove, too, an ideal attraction for Exposition visitors who have heard of the wonders of this screen drama. During the engagement at the Cort the original incidental music will be given, interpreted by an enlarged orchestra.

The twelve reels of "The Birth of a Nation" are based on the famous novel called "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, Jr., but it deals more broadly on its historical [illegible] than either the book or the well-known play.

It is not too much to say that "The Birth of a Nation" represents the very acme of art and realism in motion pictures. It includes the most spectacular battle scenes ever staged. In these battle scenes are shown 35,000 soldiers in action, including infantry, artillery, and cavalry.

The night battle scenes represent the greatest feats in the history of motion-picture photography. The burning of the city of Atlanta at night is graphically shown. The scene does not show merely a few buildings in flames, as is usual in motion pictures, but depicts the entire city on fire.

The famous raids of the Ku-Klux Klan, with thousands of these white-hooded riders in action, make for several thrilling features not easily forgotten.

The New Bill at the Orpheum.

The Orpheum will have as its chief novel feature next week Thomas Egan, Ireland's famous tenor, who will make his vaudeville début in this city and will sing the most de-

---

ATLANTIC CITY (N. J.) REVIEW
SEPT. 1, 1915

COMEDY SCENES IN NIXON FILM

Delicate Comedy in the "Birth of a Nation" is Foil for Pathos

The general character of "The Birth of a Nation" which closes its all Summer's run at the New Nixon Theater on Monday, September 6th, is of necessity sober and somber. It represents a critical period in the history of the States. It pictures a time that "tired men's souls" and is not to be approached in levity or with the view that there is "a laugh in every line." It is not a farce; it is not a comedy, it is simply a truthful picture of the times it portrays and there was little of a comic nature about those times and events. Yet there is comedy in D. W. Griffith's lmed spectacle. Comedy of the most delicate sort, but comedy nevertheless.

There is the typical Southern home where all is good cheer. War's alarms have not yet disturbed its serenity. A Northerner is visiting his old college chum. Youth will be served, and in their playful wrestling and chasing each other about the old mansion and grounds we have pure comedy and the best of good feeling, no matter if within a few months they are to die on the field of battle, enemies but clasped in each others arms.

Again there is the scene in "the quarters" where the negroes are "showing off" for the benefit of northern visitors. Later in the play they have their serious roles.

And so through it all there are bits of the lighter shade of life to be overcast by the somber shade later.

MOTION PICTURE WORLD (N. Y. City)

SEP [illegible]

NEW ENGLAND GOSSIP.

"The Birth of a Nation" closed its run in Boston during the past week. The Griffith spectacle is now showing in Providence, R. I., Brockton and New Bedford. It is meeting with the same success in those cities as it did in the Hub. Chandos St. J. Brenon [illegible] and Manager [illegible]

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

Date .....

"The Birth of a Nation"

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," the first film to lift [illegible] into the "Two Dollar" class, [illegible] at the Forrest yesterday before two capacity audiences which reaffirmed the verdict of those who attended the local premiere on Saturday, that the picture marks the highest point yet reached in motion picture photography. In vastness of [illegible] in fidelity to historical fact, and in the interest of the double [illegible] which the story is built, the [illegible] elently remarkable to justify [illegible] be acclaimed for it.

RTLAND (Me.) ARGUS
SEPT. 1, 1915

.TH OF NATION."

art of a musical spectacle ped by L. W. Griffiths "The a Nation" has achieved a adjustment of music to pic-than has hitherto been thought ble. When, for example, Huperck's music was adapted to the ma-play called "The Miracle" yards music, so to speak, was sawed off fit successive reels of the story.
one thought of adapting the music ne by scene, as music is adapted to ds in Grand Opera.

The average motion picture scene sts from four to fifteen seconds.
There are several thousands such enes in a twelve-reel play. Griffith and his musical director, Joseph Carl Briel, were undaunted. They provided ach principal character with a musical theme or motif. This was done during the actual picture taking.
A provisional score of the "opera" was prepared on the field. After the camera had completed its work, the provisional score was amplified and syncronized.

The immense labor of fitting the almost innumerable screen and "flashes" each with its bit of appropriate music, may be imagined. The job was fairly done, however, before the opening in New York, the parts for the forty symphonic players written. Since then many improvements have been made. A musical plot exhibits the title of every important scene, the name of the proper music-motif, and the exact duration by seconds of that particular bit of photography. The timing is said to be perfect.

Will the Grand Opera of the future get along without prima-donnas and star tenors? Will it substitute pictures for words, gestures and scenery?

These novel inquiries are certainly suggested by Mr. Griffith's marvelous achievement in musical spectacle, which apparently welds action and sound into one harmonious whole.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be presented at the B. F. Keith's theater every day this week. Matinees at 2 and evenings at 8 o'clock.

Mirth Amer. Lyc.

OTION PICTURES

—"The Birth of a Nation," the word" in motion pictures, of nich, "Quo Vadis," "Cabiria," "Hypocrites" and "The Avenging Conscience" are remote ancestors. Like "Quo Vadis," the piece is historical. The south, after the war, furnishes the setting, and the action is part and parof the ante-bellum, social and econ-ic chaos out of which, as historians lieve, a new nation was born. Scenicily, the piece is in many respects to be tupendous. Battle scenes are depicted with historic accuracy. Among the notable scenes is the assassination of Lincoln in Ford's Theater. D. W. Griffith produced the film, following in a general sort of way "The Clansman," Thomas Dixon's novel, which was widely read a few years ago.

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & POST
JULY 24, 1915

Two Film Knockouts

D. W. Griffith, creator of "The Clansman"

Miss Marsh, the attractive film star who plays the part of Florence Cameron, the vivacious Southern girl in D. W. Griffith's spectacular motion picture production, "The Birth of a Nation," or "The Clansman," now having a record run at the Alcazar Theater, was a visitor in San Francisco during the past week and was an interested onlooker at one of the exhibitions of the production.

She enjoyed the novelty of watching her own death on the motion picture screen. In "The Birth of a Nation," Miss Marsh is supposed to plunge to her death over a steep cliff, and this scene is the most dramatic feature of the production. Miss Marsh sat in the back part of the theater. A number of men and women in the audience sitting near her were in tears. "It is a peculiar sensation to watch yourself die," said the young screen star. "When I watch myself die, it does not seem to be me at all.

"I can hardly realize that the girl on the screen going through the scene is myself. It seems silly, but I sympathize with her and feel sorry for the girl.

In staging the big free-for-all fight in "The Birth of a Nation," Director Griffith had a hard time in persuading one of the players, an ex-prizefighter, to allow himself to be knocked out for the benefit of the motion picture camera. The ex-pugilist had the role of White Arm Joe, but when Griffith told him to get knocked out by the young blacksmith he protested vigorously.

"I've never been knocked out yet and never will be," the ex-pugilist protested. "My friends will all laugh at me if they see me get knocked out, and besides, the blacksmith (Wallace Reid) is not able to put me out." Finally after considerable persuasion, the ex-pug consented to be knocked out. The fight started, the blows seemed to have the same effect on the fighter as the smell of powder to a warhorse. "Get knocked out now," commanded Griffith, but the fighter paid no heed. He dealt out hooks and jabs to his opponent freely. The blacksmith was having a hard time holding his own in the contest. "Lay down and end the fight," commanded Griffith. "Remember, it isn't a really for sure knockout," said the ex-pugilist as he finally fell to the floor.

"It's the last time I ever lay down in a fight," said the fighter at the conclusion of the fight scene, "no matter how much money I am offered."

Dreadnaught Orchestra for "Birth of a Nation"

A "dreadnaught orchestra," a musical organization worthy of playing at the head of a regiment of six-foot grenadiers, supplies the powerful accompaniments for "The Birth of a Nation" at the Illinois Theater. Every man of the fifty players is not only an accomplished artist, but a harmonic Hercules, performing a nightly endurance test which would appall a hardened athlete.

Three solid hours of playing, with only one rest interval of six minutes, is the task undertaken twice daily by the special orchestra with D. W. Griffith's spectacular masterpiece. The whole gamut of orchestra harmony, from soft plantation tunes and croons to the terrific battle music, is run by the lengthy score written for "The Birth of a Nationa." The quick changes and violent contrasts from soft to heavy, from gay to tragic, impose a severe tax on the nerves of the musicians, whose vigilance must never relax for a moment during the three hours of playing.

Every musician in the Griffith orchestra was selected not only for artistic proficiency but because of hardy physique, chest measurement, lung expansion and comparative absence of "nerves."

With "The Birth of a Nation" the position of orchestra leader advances to a plane of new importance in the world of entertainment. O. L. Mayhood is the conductor. There are 214 separate music cues in a performance of "The Birth of a Nation." The cue is marked by certain action seen on the screen by the director, and this he must communicate by baton or spark lever to his many subordinates. Some of these cues call for agreeable the softest melody, dainty to the de- drama of gossamer. With the quickness for war, ting the orchestra must the wildest, fiercest fanfare of savage war music. The suddenness of the changes is accounted by the fact that Director Griffith tells the story of "The Birth of a Nation" with swift transitions from battle scene to quiet fireside, from sweet love episode to deed of violent murder. And the music of thirty musicians must shift in theme with the quickness of whirling celluloid film.

Mayhood is qualified for the leadership of this skillful corps of musicians. For two years he was in the United States regulars as bandmaster of the Third Infantry. One of the most stirring incidents in "The Birth of a Nation" is the review of a confederate regiment, leaving bravely and gaily for the front at the beginning of the civil war. The playing of "Dixie" by the orchestra is rendered with a vim and a dash which sets the blood of every spectator tingling. Later on "Marching Through Georgia" is rendered in the same dashing manner.

Trumpet calls in the battle scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" are real military calls, not the languid edition of these signals given by the average orchestra cornist. Three trumpeters, all with military experience, are members of the orchestra. They are able to sound "revielle" with the expert staccatto of an army "tooter" and clarion the battle order "charge" with wild and joyous ferocity. Likewise they sound "taps" for the dead with the lingering mournfulness that reaches every heart.

The rallying call of the "Klu Klux Klan" is a weird, haunting combination of two notes and heads the musical theme of the second part of "The Birth of a Nation." It is a trumpet call peculiarly consistent with the secret purposes of the white-clad night riders of the South.

U. S. Govt. Statement April 1st, 1915, Sworn to A ...e Sunday Circulation for Six Months, 157,908. We Challen... Comparison

The Philadelphia Sporting PRESS

Sport News | Auto News Up to the Minute

PENN FALLS VICTIM TO NIDDIES, 3-0

DESCRIBES NEW POWER PLANT FOR ELECTRICS

MOVE TO ABOLISH TOLL GATES ON LANCASTER PIKE

SAYS DEALERS GIVE TOO MUCH FOR USED CARS

WILLYS KEEN ON SPORTS FOR HER

TAKING CARE OF STORAGE BATTERY

Clipping
from
The Philadelphia Press
9/4 1915

Compliments of Amusement
~~Automobile~~ Advertising Manager.

F. B. Cunningham

PORTER SAYS HE WILL BAR FILM

Fears Disturbance in Theater To-night if "Birth of a Nation" Is Shown.

Director Porter announced positively last night that he would prevent the showing of "The Birth of a Nation," scheduled to open to-night at the Forrest Theater. Of course, if the producers go into court and obtain an injunction to prevent the Director from interfering, his hands will be tied, but if this is not done, there will be no showing.

"I know from information I have collected myself that hundreds of colored persons have bought tickets with the purpose of creating a disturbance in the theater if the show is given," said Mr. Porter to a "Press" reporter. "I have seen the tickets in their hands. Regardless of the merits of the picture, if it stirs up race feeling like that, it ought not to be given, and I will stop it. I have given orders to that effect."

Overruled by the Courts.

If Director Porter prevents the picture from being shown, his action will follow by a day the decision of Judge Ambrose B. Reid, of the Court of Common Pleas in Allegheny County. The Pittsburgh Judge yesterday overruled Mayor Armstrong and the city of Pittsburgh and restrained them from interfering with the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in any way.

Thus Pittsburgh drops into line with Chicago, Los Angeles and Atlantic City, in each of which municipalities the courts have overruled city officials who sought to enjoin the producers from showing their spectacle.

The Pittsburgh Judge made a strong point of the approval of the State Board of Censorship.

A delegation of colored folk called on Director Porter yesterday and got from him the assurance that the picture would not be shown. Spokesmen for the visitors were Abel P. Caldwell and Charles Fred White.

Director Porter said last night that he had received representatives of more than thirty thousand colored persons. His position, he said, was stated in a letter written on July 29 to J. Louis Breitinger. His suggestions in the letter never were taken up.

The Director's Letter.

In the letter the Director said:—

"My Dear Mr. Breitinger.

"Through your kindness, I had the pleasure last Friday of witnessing a presentation of the 'Birth of a Nation' at Atlantic City.

"This production is the best and most stupendous I have yet seen, and under certain conditions, do not see how anyone can take offense.

"As an educational film, I think it is marvelous, but, personally, if I had the say as to whether it should be produced in Philadelphia I have some doubt as to whether I would sanction it.

There can be no doubt that it engender a race feeling, and brings back memories among some of those living to-day of events which they would like to forget. Philadelphia has a very large colored population, probably larger than any other Northern city, and I would want to be the last to offend their sensibilities. They are not unlike their white brethren in their desire to keep hidden in the closet the skeleton which is always bobbing up.

"If, in this production, the despicable character of the 'carpet bagger' had been depicted in his true light, and that side by side with the colored man was unwittingly his dupe, then I doubt if there could be much ... for criticism but, as it stands, I have a very serious doubt in my mind if it should be permitted in Philadelphia.

"What do you think ... the advisability of ... come ... representative ... colored ... I suppose ... Railway, ...

STORY OF LINCOLN LIVES IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

The incident of the young C... ate's release by President Lin... dent, which gets a round of ... handclapping when presented ... Birth of a Nation," was verba... actual historical event by ... spectators. G. L. Mordecai, of ... Eighty-sixth Street, New York ... the man to whom it happened. ... the New York run of the play ... ited D. W. Griffith's offices ... this remarkable story:—

"My father, a wealthy tra... Charleston, S. C., was engaged ... tensive blockade running opera... tween the Confederacy and th... Islands. I had served in the ... ate army, but had been hon... charged on account of sickness ... ther then wanted me to go as ... to Nassau. The only channel ... course was closed, however, ... Federals captured Fort Fishe... ther suggested that I should ... slip through the Northern ... thence take steamer from New ...

"In civilian dress I managed ... the Union pickets in Virginia ... the Potomac, took stage for Was... ton, but in the latter place I wa... rested and thrown into prison ... Confederate enemy. It was fear... I would be court-martialed and ... ed, or at best held prisoner ... close of the war. My dances ... Alderman Samuel Lewis, of New ... later acting Mayor, came to Was... ton and worked in my behalf. Not... standing Stanton's opposition, he ... ceeded in convincing President Li... that I was not a spy. 'I will relea... young man,' said Mr. Lincoln, ... condition: that he takes oath ... return to the Southern States during ... war.'

"I gladly took this oath and was ... leased. Before leaving for the ... for my marriage and residence in A... ham Lewis' family, I desired to th... President Lincoln. On being pres... to Mr. Lincoln, I remembered he ... me by the hand and said: 'I am ha... to know that I have been ... an enemy.' I have never for... great President's generosity ... heartedness to a foe, and w... the picture that early exper... vividly recalled.

Times
Aug 19, 1915
THURSDAY St Louis

Assassination of Lincoln Is One Feature of "The Birth of a Nation"

From the Great Griffith Masterpiece. Top—Battle of Petersburg, Burned. Bottom—Right, Section of Ku Klux Klan on March; Left, President Lincoln in Box at Ford's Theater Just Before his Assassination.

U. S. Govt. Statement April 1st, 1915, Sworn to Aver. Circulation for Six Months, 157,908. We Challenge Co

The Philadelphia PRESS

SUNDAY, MARCH 18, 1915

Sport News | Auto News Up to the Minute

PENN FALLS VICTIM TO MIDDIES, 3-0

DESCRIBES NEW POWER PLANT FOR ELECTRICS

MOVE TO ABOLISH TOLL GATES ON LANCASTER PIKE

SAYS DEALERS GIVE TOO MUCH FOR USED CARS

WILLYS KERN ON SPORTS FOR MEN

TAKING CARE OF STORAGE BATTERY

Clipping from The Philadelphia Press

9/2/15 191

Compliments of Harry B. Cunningham

Automobile Advertising Manager.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" WINS IN PITTSBURGH

Word has reached the local headquarters of D. W. Griffith from Pittsburgh that an injunction had been granted to the representatives of "The Birth of a Nation" against Mayor Armstrong and the chief of police of Pittsburgh, restraining them from prohibiting the opening of the big spectacle at the Nixon Theater to-night.

Mayor Armstrong received a delegation Friday, and late Saturday served notice upon the manager of "The Birth of a Nation" and Manager Kirk, of the Nixon Theater, that he would suppress the spectacle. Neither the Mayor nor chief of police had seen the picture production. When this fact was made clear to the Court, an injunction was issued immediately.

This makes the fifth legal move the owners of the big picture have had to undertake to secure their rights. In each case they have been successful in getting injunctions, which permit them to continue their presentations. These injunctions have been granted in Los Angeles, St. Louis, New Jersey, Chicago and Pittsburgh.

At present "The Birth of a Nation" continues to draw huge crowds at the Nixon Theater in Atlantic City, where many Philadelphians at the shore are enjoying the picture spectacle.

Pass lips striking [illegible] that class of entertain- [illegible] shown as "chick."

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

As the remarkable run of "The Birth of a Nation" continues at the Savoy [illegible] demand for seats becomes more and more urgent. As [illegible] justified in asking if there is anybody in Fall River who is willing to have "The Birth of a Nation" go away without having seen it. The management believes in the picture, not only as a business proposition, but as a work of art, enlightening and educational. It has the assurance of men [illegible] in educational work that no history, nor volumes of history, could [illegible] to set forth to the youth of this [illegible] so forcibly and eloquently the [illegible] which comes to them from [illegible] fathers who 50 years ago saved [illegible] for them. Those who have [illegible] the picture will not permit it to [illegible] the city without insisting that children see it, and it is to be [illegible] that the word may spread until [illegible] school child in Fall River is [illegible] to benefit by it.

[illegible] is doubtful if there is a Grand [illegible] man in this city, who, if he has already seen "The Birth of a Nation," is not planning to see it before [illegible]. Certainly, no soldier of the [illegible] Army of the Republic has ever [illegible] to appreciate the reproduction [illegible] great war spectacle in the original of which he was himself an heroic figure. And it is significant that [illegible] degree as the picture produces [illegible] sympathy for the South there is no [illegible] more ready to enthuse than the [illegible] of the North who knows the [illegible] of the South.

[illegible] the management respectfully [illegible] that the patrons make every [illegible] to be in their seats when the [illegible] dance begins, and urges, also, [illegible] reservations be claimed as early [illegible] possible.

CLIPPING FROM Pittsburgh Gazette Times
Date 9-5-15

New Season Offers Tempting Novelties

CORREST—"The Birth of a Nation" is booked for a limited season at this house.

D. W. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful production. He has crowded into it a multiplicity of detail which is astonishing. Thousands of men and horses are used in great battle scenes which faithfully reproduce some of the most stirring days of the great Civil War in America. History leading up to and during those momentous days of half a century ago is made to live as realistically as if one were looking at it from a safe distance under present conditions. There is a stir and thrill in its tense moments. Griffith, with the true dramatic instinct, has never subordinated his main story to effect. He attains his interest by the use of conflicting characters in the style of romance, comedy and the more effective drama which borders upon tragedy. While it depicts history in the making and introduces as dramatic characters such notables as Grant, Lee, Lincoln, Sherman, John Hay, Seward and all the other giants of that strenuous era, the great human appeal attaches to the less prominent figures in a story of love and simple aims which holds the attention at all times to the ultimate developments of the plot. Further than this Griffith has utilized an operatic score which gives a touch of unusual power. It is quite the biggest thing ever attempted on our stage. There will be two performances daily—2.15 and 8.15, the first matinee being a matinee tomorrow.

120,000 FEET OF FILM.

Wonderful Production of "Birth of Nation" at Colonial

Shows may come and shows may go, feature films be widely heralded and after brief exhibitions returned to the shelves, but "The Birth of a Nation" continues on its triumphant way and will be shown at the Colonial theatre directly after its Boston engagement, for one week, starting Monday. Besides the film spectacle itself, "The Birth of a Nation" music has taken a firm hold on the fancy of New England theatregoers. It revives most of the old tunes of the civil war and includes also much elaborate orchestration in more modern mode. For out of town patrons the matinee performances will be found attractive, the same as night, and more convenient to attend. No Sunday shows are given, but, with that exception, Mr. Griffith's spectacle is being performed twice daily.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the biggest production so far made—there were over 120,000 feet of film when the cameras finished their work in the west and south, but the process of selection, which plays such a telling part in these productions, has reduced this to 12,000 feet, the spectacle, as it stands now, takes about two and three-quarters hours to present.

The production cost over $150,000 and the first presentation was given in Los Angeles, since which the production has been shown in New York city, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco, Seattle, Philadelphia, Pittsburg, Atlantic City, Brighton beach and Long Branch for a long run and playing to the house capacity at each performance.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger
Date .....SEP 4 - 1915

GRANT AND LEE SHOWN IN PHOTOPLAY

GEN. U. S. GRANT — GEN. LEE

ALTHOUGH the leaders of the opposing forces in the Civil War appear but a moment in D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," the scene in which General Grant receives the surrender of the Army of the South from General Lee, as it was shown in New York, is one of the most striking in the photoplay.

As the scene unfolds, Grant is discovered seated at a plain table reading the draft of the terms of surrender. Lee is seated at the left of the room. The staffs of the two generals are grouped about. The expression on Lee's face clearly indicates his thought. A forlorn hope of what is no longer even a forlorn hope, he sits with bowed head most of the time while Grant is reading the important document.

As Grant rises, having finished reading, and having affixed his signature, the contrast between the two men is striking. Grant, about 5 feet 8 inches tall, his square shoulders inclined to stoop, is without his sword, and is wearing fatigue uniform. He wears ordinary topboots with the trousers tucked inside. Boots and clothing are spattered with mud. Lee presents a different picture. He is carefully and correctly dressed, his six feet of stature and faultless form towering over his conqueror—a statue in gray. The contrast in manner is equally marked. Grant, with hand in pocket, approaches Lee with an easy swing, cigar in mouth, as usual, and offers his hand in a way that means much to the defeated Southerner. It is not preliminary to a formal, meaningless handshake. It is the act of one who would be a friend, and it is accepted as such by the man in gray. He grasps the extended hand and the great generals of the great war for a moment face each other. Then with military salute they part and the incident of Appamattox Court House is closed.

FALL RIVER (Mass.) NEWS
SEP 2,

Amusements.

BALL ROOM SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"The Birth of a Nation" continues on its great run at the Savoy. Each day brings an added demand for reservations, and yesterday saw the theater filled to capacity at both performances. The great spectacle, after the many months during which it has been discussed more or less impersonally in this community, has at last become a personal experience to all who desire to keep abreast of the times. So many have come to see the picture a second, and even a third time, that it is no longer commented upon in the Savoy box office.

Those who have seen "The Birth of a Nation" readily appreciate how difficult it is to give any adequate idea of the picture in writing. They will, however, realize better, perhaps, the truth of the following comment, selected from the volumes of material which have been written about the picture.

"With the approach of half a century after the actual scenes of the Civil war, this highest development of the motion picture art bears a keen relationship to current events. Aside from its dramatic appeal and poetic flight it brings back to a younger generation with a new-born realism the things which our fathers and grandfathers went through that out of the travail could come the nation we are so proud of to-day. It is not a case of opening old wounds, but is art suggestive, the highest form of art, to point out to us the mistakes and misunderstandings of the past that we may face the crisis of the present with a calmness and determination to uphold the right."

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) BULLETIN
AUG. 30, 1915

"The Clansman" Starts Eighteenth Big Week

With the matinee and evening performances yesterday at the Cort Theater, "The Birth of a Nation; or, The Clansman," started on the second, and what must be the final week of its return engagement. "The New Henrietta" is due at the Cort Theater beginning next Monday evening.

Although "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown in its eighteenth week in San Francisco, its popularity remains undiminished, for the attendance at the Cort durng the week just concluded was as great as any it has played to here.

The augmented orchestra and special singing chorus add not a little to the entertaining powers of the picture.

CLIPPING FROM Pittsburg Press
Date .....
9-5-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."
At the Nixon.

CHARACTER OF PLAY IS SOBER AND SOMBER.

The general character of "The Birth of a Nation" is of necessity sober and [illegible] It represents a critical period in the history of the states. It pictures a time that 'tried men's souls" and is not to be approached in levity or with the view that there is "a laugh in every line." It is not a farce; it is not a comedy, it is simply a truthful picture of the times it portrays, and there was little of a comic nature about those times and events. Yet there is comedy in D. W. Griffith's filmed spectacle. Comedy of the most delicate sort, but comedy nevertheless.

Through it all there are bits of the lighter shade of life to be overcast by the somber shade later on. And that is what makes "The Birth of a Nation" such a truthful picture of the times whose life it portrays, for tragedy follows comedy ever.

PICTURES AND MUSIC

Majestic—The Birth of a Nation.

A FILMED spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope, now transferred for the autumn to the Majestic, after a spring and summer run at the Tremont. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion-pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and the Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheosis of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music accompanies the whole spectacle.

The Theatrical Mirror
Date .....
9-4-15

The Birth of a Nation starts in next week on the seventh month of its run at the Liberty theatre. The week will mark the 460th performance of Griffith's spectacle in Greater New York. With its 18,000 people and 3,000 horses moving through a drama that links romance with the vital periods of American history in a series of thrilling scenes to the number of over 5,000 it is easy to estimate the reasons for the wonderful success the work has achieved. The indications are that it will remain at the Liberty for the longest run i nthe history of the New York stage.

...poses of the
...uers of the South.

CLIPPING FROM Dispatch
Pittsburg Pa
9-5-15

Birth of a Nation

D. W. GRIFFITH'S [illegible] making [illegible], "The Birth of a Nation," following its record-breaking runs at New York, Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles, is in the second week of its limited engagement at the Nixon Theater. This work, partly from the nature of the new art, partly from the opposition aroused, has excited keener curiosity than any other offering of the current season, and the extraordinary advance sale indicates that the playhouse will enjoy capacity audiences at every performance.

"The Birth of a Nation" tells by film and music the story of a nation reborn through the storm and stress of intercine strife. Instead of the four to six scenes of the conventional play, its technique permits of filming literally thousands of scenes and covering a wide range of history and characters. Slavery, the prime cause of the war; Lincoln's call for troops to subdue the Southern States; the fall on the eve of Bull Run, and the first triumph of Confederate arms; the devastation wrought by Sherman's march and the awful ordeal of the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of the Federal president; the harsh radical policy to the broken South; the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan, and the overthrow of the carpetbagger regime—these great factors and events pass in review before the thrilled spectator.

The love interest of the play is based on the friendships between the Camerons of South Carolina and the Stonemans of Pennsylvania, two families involved in the strife. Ben Cameron, the gallant clansman of the Dixon stories, appears again in the role of romantic hero; the piquant southern girl, Elsie Stoneman, as the heroine. Mr Griffith took most of the scenes in the great out-of-doors, where nature painted the backgrounds and army men directed the battle campaigns. The scenes indoor scenes, like Ford's Theater on the night of the Lincoln tragedy, the surrender at Appomattox, and the South Carolina Legislature of 1870, are exact facsimiles of the original.

Of equal importance to the scenes is the music that interprets them. It consists of an elaborate symphonic score arranged by Mr Griffith's suggestions of the musical motifs for the leading characters. Now it is now gay; now sounding the loud roll of war; again sweetly harmonizing Earle's sighs and rhapsodies; anon it takes back the old plantation melodies, the crash of riot and rapine, or the [illegible] Ku Klux Klan call that fell so heavily on the ear of Southern whites, [illegible] oppressed by the "servants in the hall"—it fits the charming scenes of history like a flowing, beautiful garment.

[illegible] the distinguished principals are [illegible] B. Walthall, the distinguished Alabama actor, whose family is historically linked with the story, in the role of the Clansman; Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman; [illegible] Marsh and Mirian Cooper as [illegible] and Margaret; Ralph Lewis as Congressman Stoneman; Joseph Henabery, [illegible] Gaye and Donald Crisp as Lincoln and Grant, respectively; George [illegible] as the mulatto Lieutenant Governor of South Carolina; Walter Long as the [illegible] Negro, Gus; Raoul Walsh as [illegible]; Mary Alden as the octoroon [illegible], Lydia, and many others.

WALTHAM (Mass.) FREE PRESS
SEPT. 4, 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATION'

At the Scenic Theatre Week After Next.

If you have not seen "The Birth of a Nation," you have missed the most astonishing achievement in dramatic portraiture introduced to the American stage. Imagine 18,000 people visualizing the story of intense human interest and dramatic purpose and then add 3000 horses ridden by some of the most reckless and daring riders in the world, dashing in great cavalcades over picturesque roads and through war-strewn valleys and plains, and you can begin to form a vague idea of the scale upon which this narrative is unfolded.

The plot of the drama deals with the relationship of the slavery question to the developments of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of disputing states there arose the mightiest nation in the world.

With history as its background reared a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodigal details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dramatist who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people and as his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hindered stage spectacles.

Given his story and the people, Griffith has secured startling results. His mammoth canvas often reveals battlefields covering an area of a dozen square miles and by following historical details he reproduces the stern battle effects as they actually took place half a century ago. In all the expanse of scene and action he never loses sight of his basic story and the smallest detail becomes as astonishing a part of the narrative as the largest incident in it. The completeness and the wonder of the work make it unusual.

The premier production of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Scenic Theatre will take place on Monday, September 13th and will continue three days. You should see it even at the expense of other pleasures.

LEOMINSTER (Mass.) ENTERPRISE
SEPT. [illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation."

The new art of a musical spectacle as developed in D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" has achieved a closer adjustment of music to pictures than has hitherto been thought feasible. When, for example, Huperdinck's music was adopted to the motion play called "The Miracle" yards of music, so to speak, was sawed off to fit successive reels of the story. No one thought of adapting the music scene by scene, as music is adapted to words in grand opera.

The average motion picture scene lasts from four to fifteen seconds. There are several thousands such scenes in a twelve-reel play. Griffith and his musical director, Joseph Carl Briel, were undaunted. They provided each principal character with a musical theme or motif. This was done during the actual picture taking. A provisional score of the "opera" was prepared on the field.

Will the grand opera of the future get along without prima-donnas and star tenors? Will it substitute pictures for words, gestures and scenery?

These novel inquiries are certainly suggested by Mr. Griffith's marvellous achievement in musical spectacle, which apparently welds action and sound into one harmonious whole.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be presented at the Cumings theater, Fitchburg, commencing Monday for an engagement of one week, complete in every detail, as shown at the leading theaters in its different record-breaking runs. Seats now on sale.

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK AMERICAN

Date .....

On Tuesday night D. W. Griffith's great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," passes the 500th presentation of this story in New York City. The run at the Liberty Theatre continues the one outstanding success of the year, which has kept right on through the Summer without a break. The attendance last week was the fourth largest of the twenty-seven weeks that it has been on Broadway. In that time the production has been seen by approximately over 300,000.

[illegible] and New [illegible] Park Opera [illegible] attraction at the popular Delmar Avenue house.

The Birth of a Nation Is Popular.

D. W. Griffith's colossal photodramatic spectacle, The Birth of a Nation, has started in most [illegible] at the Olympic Theater. The matinees, as well as the evening showings, are surprisingly well attended, considering that this is the first film exhibited in St. Louis at grand opera prices. In New York, Chicago and Boston the same satisfactory condition of affairs prevails, although in the cities mentioned the picture has been on continuous exhibition twice daily for many months, there being meanwhile no intimation whatever of a lessening of public interest. Since Sunday the reel time of The Birth of a Nation at the Olympic has been cut down somewhat and other improvements in projection have been brought about. More than that, one visit to the Broadway house is not enough to even approach the multiplicity of things to be seen in this camera's wonder.

FREEPORT (Ill.) PRESS
[illegible] 1915

brother.

The Birth of a Nation, a able picture [illegible] Keith's [illegible] has proved an attraction to [illegible] Among those attending were [illegible] Mrs. George E. Coombs, Mr. [illegible] F. E. Gore, Mrs. N. W. Blanchard and Mrs. William H. Rowe, Martha Crockett, Mr. Harold A. [illegible] Mr. and Mrs. E. O. Hathaway [illegible] young son, Mr. and Mrs. W. O. Stoddard, Miss Mabel Marston, Mr. Charles L. Marston, Mr. Leone Doughty, Miss Alice Campbell, Miss Lucy Humphrey, Messrs. Homer Humphrey, A. H. [illegible] roles.

ST. LOUIS (Mo.) TIMES
SEPT. [illegible] 1915

This week, "The Follies of St. Louis."

"Birth of a Nation."

The bookings for "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Olympic Theater, have been so arranged as to keep the big spectacle in the big amusement centers of the country indefinitely. St. Louis will be the only city in which it will be seen in this neighborhood for scores of miles around this season. The spectacle has been billed and advertised in every small city and town within a radius of 75 miles of St. Louis, and many of the visitors at the Olympic even at this early date have been "our country cousins." The same policy has been pursued everywhere since "The Birth of a Nation" started its sensational career in Los Angeles last February. Runs that broke all records for length in Los Angeles and San Francisco drew from the population hundreds of miles in various directions.

The headliner at the Columbia next week, beginning with the Monday matinee, will be Molly McIntire, star of "Bunty Pulls the Strings." In vaudeville she has the assistance of a company in an act of extraordinary merit. Second place on the program will be given Richard Havemann and his 10 fine jungle kings, including big lions and tigers. Imhoff, Conn and Coreene, "The Girl From Milwaukee"; the Empire Comedy Four; the Crispo, Dawson, Lanigan and Covert, Selma Braatz and the Orpheum Travel Weekly will complete the bill.

Blanche Walsh in "The Spoils of War" is the current headliner.

Grand Changes.

In the array of attractions selected by Manager Wallace for next week at the Grand Opera House, the leading item of the bill is the special engagement of Olympia Desval, the equestrienne queen, and her performing horses and dogs. Mlle. Desval has a fame in her department, and during her week's engagement at the Grand Opera House she will present "The Fox Hunt," one of the most beautiful animal acts in vaudeville. Brown, Harris and Brown, William Lytell & Co., the Three Alvarettas, Earl & Nell, Wartenberg Brothers, Dick Ferguson and the Animated Weekly will complete the bill. The week's bill is headed by the "Six Water Lilies."

Gayety.

The "Majestics" has long been known as one of the strongest attractions on the Columbia Amusement Company Circuit. Mr. Fred Irwin, manager for the Fred Irwin Amusement Company, is one of the founders of organized burlesque, and knows, if anyone does, what the people want. In the first place he shows extremely good judgment in the selection of principal performers, and his cast, this season, includes Florence Bennett, the charming leading lady; Marie Hartman, Vennetta Preslar, the four X Sisters, Stefi Anderson and Miss E Hollander. The "Majestics" will the attraction at the Gayety The next week.

[illegible] seen here [illegible]

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

A great deal of film comedy is horse play, but David W. Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation" proves that quite refined [illegible] a big laugh-maker and pleases people better than the old-style crude methods.

One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" is the love-sick sentry in the hospital scene gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is of the "sure-fire" order, for never does an audience miss the rapt devotion of the sentinel and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-mile away look.

Paul LeBlanc is the name of the young actor who has made the unexpected hit in the part. He is a New Orleans creole by birth and played comedy roles with Mme. Burnhardt before going out to Los Angeles where Mr. Griffith discovered him. The costuming of the young soldier is wonderfully accurate to the period of 1864. Some of the recent Civil war portraits in the magazines and newspapers are almost doublets of this sentry figure, showing what care Griffith has used in reproducing the Civil war type.

Miss Lillian Gish wears her costumes of Civil war and Reconstruction times that are heir-looms in her family. Through Griffith's skill all the actors in the production are made to appear as if to the manner born, and not awkwardly moving about in habiliments to which they are unaccustomed.

STAGE

PORTLAND LIKES BIRTH OF NATION

At Same Time, Pittsburg's Mayor Issues an Order Forbidding Its Exhibition

"The Birth of a Nation" taken to Portland by [illegible] Nelson of the Casino theater here for an engagement at the Heilig theater, opened its run Sunday. Accounts in the Rose City papers indicate that Oregon theatergoers have taken kindly to the film. "The audience that witnessed the film production yesterday," says the Oregonian of Monday, "went wild with enthusiasm. They applauded, cheered, they stood up in the intensity of their emotions as they saw a great army of the mounted [illegible] ride [illegible] road.

Globe Sep. 11/15

LIBERTY.—D. W. Griffith's gigantic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," passed its twenty-eighth week in the Liberty Theatre Saturday night. On Tuesday night the 500th performance in New York was given. This is one of the biggest records of recent years. The record for the Liberty heretofore was held by "The Spring Maid," which ran for twenty eight weeks.

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT 4, 1915

[illegible] mining stock promoter invades his little paradise—the back parlor of his delicatessen shop.

David Wark Griffith who startled the world with his wonderful combination of film and operatic drama called "The Birth of a Nation" which is drawing large audiences at each performance at the Nixon Theater, is a native of Kentucky. He began his public career as an extra actor in a Louisville stock company. He also studied grand opera and developed a splendid baritone voice. His [illegible] in pictures as [illegible]

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date .....

TO THE SEA

Spectacles That is Seen in Motion Picture.

Scenes pictured in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Forrest is Sherman's march to the sea, burning of the city of Atlanta. There is a view of a long, ferocious, extending for miles, apparently over the hills. Moving through the country, in straggling formation, or no formation, is the army of General Sherman. The view is so extensive that the soldiers appear but little more than ants, yet the photograph is so clear that the form of each man is sharply outlined. Now and then a puff of smoke indicates return fire upon "snipers" in farm buildings. Now and then a barn is fired in evident retaliation for a deadly bullet, and the army of human ants is ever moving forward. Atlanta is reached. Whether the burning of the city was a military necessity, or whether the conflagration was of accidental origin, chroniclers of the time fail to agree, but Atlanta was delivered to the flames and the conflagration is realistically pictured in "The Birth of a Nation." Few make any attempt to save household effects, so great is their haste to escape the flames and the Yankees. Up the hills they rush, men, women and little children, an endless parade of misery and hopelessness. Sherman's army has cut its fearful swath through the heart of the South. Another link has been forged in the chain that shall bind the Confederacy to the stake. Another move has been made in the big war game that is to end at Appomattox Court House with the surrender of Lee. It is a picture the like of which has never appeared on the screen.

Inquirer, Sep 5

New Season Offers Tempting Novelties

FORREST—"The Birth of a Nation" is booked for a limited season at this house.

D. W. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful production. He has worked into it a multiplicity of detail that is astonishing. Thousands of men and horses are used in great battle scenes which faithfully reproduce some of the most stirring days of the great Civil War in America. History leading up to and during those momentous days of half a century ago is made to live as realistically as if one were looking at it from a safe distance under present conditions. There is a stir and thrill in these moments. Griffith, with the dramatic instinct, has never subordinated his main story to effect. He attracts interest by the use of conflicting characters in the style of romance, comedy and the more effective drama which borders upon tragedy. While it depicts history in the making and introduces as dramatic characters such notables as Grant, Lee, Lincoln, Sherman, John Hay, Seward and all the other giants of that strenuous era, the great human appeal attaches to the less prominent figures in a story of love and simple aims which holds the attention at all times to the ultimate developments of the plot. Further than this Griffith has utilized an operatic score which gives a touch of unusual power. It is quite the biggest thing ever attempted on our stage. There will be two performances daily—2.15 and 8.15, the first matinee being the holiday matinee tomorrow.

Press Sep 5

AT THE FORREST

Last night at the Forrest D. W. Griffith's great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" had its local premiere. In another section of the paper this subject is handled. The piece is booked here for a limited engagement and will be given twice daily, the first matinee being the holiday matinee to-morrow.

The production has registered a sensational success everywhere. It is now sliding into the eight month of its run in New York and bids fair to break records for continued performances at the metropolitan stage. It also has performances to its credit in Boston and Chicago where it is still running. In the light of these facts, a similar success during its limited stay in Philadelphia seems already assured.

In selecting the Forrest for this engagement the management secured an house for the proper presentation of a new form of art. Griffith is one of the foremost directors of motion dramas in the world. He is bringing forward steadily with achievements which attracted attention. This is hailed as his master piece, the first utilization of the motion means of dramatic expression which has ever been brought forward upon a par with the spoken drama.

Big production plays in the regular theaters and at the same scale of prices which prevails for all the great works of the legitimate stage. Being a production it has to make its own scale of comparison. In numbers and breadth of the territory covered and touch-making. Eighteen thousand men and 3,000 horses were used to get the desired dramatic effects. It is done on a spectacular scale which is unique.

The bigness, however, the producer has not lost sight of fundamentals or necessary details. He has built his theme around a story of human interests and gives his narrative the touch of personal interest. He also uses an operatic sweep which is synchronized to the fraction of a second of time. He has realized a soul stirring drama of history and romance with touching effectiveness and when it is over the theatre can readily understand why it has agreeably stirred the air it has all over been a dramatic [illegible]

GRIFFITH SPECTACLE ACHIEVES SUCCESS

"The Birth of a Nation" Surpasses Anticipation of Merits of Motion Picture Creation.

MARVEL OF MIMETIC ART

Wonderful Detail in Staging Production — Presentation Given in Spite of Protests.

The anticipation of violent protest that Director of Public Safety Porter had over the showing in this city of the motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," seemed to have little justification—at least in so far as the demeanor of the crowd of spectators assembled last evening in the Forrest Theatre was concerned. Granting of a temporary injunction yesterday, restraining the Director from interfering during five days with the showing of the picture here, made possible the presentation of last evening. No disorder arose and had there been the slightest disturbance prompt interference on the part of the numerous "plain clothes" men seated in various parts of the house would have put a quietus upon the disturbers.

But those who assembled last evening in the Forrest were present because of a genuine interest in a motion picture declared to be the greatest and most dramatic achievement in photography yet brought forward. David W. Griffith, to whose splendid executive and artistic abilities tribute has already been paid by thousands of Americans, is the creator of the spectacular work known as "The Birth of a Nation," and with the Rev. Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" as the basis of the production, Griffith has built up a marvelous creation. In conception, as well as in execution, the spectacle is on the most elaborate scale and yet there is as splendid and as effective treatment of incidents of intimate sort as there is of great happenings on the field of battle, of momentous events in the growth of the nation and of those historic details that only the most careful student could have devised.

There is so much of incident in the story as it is told with absorbing interest on the screen that an outline of the plot would be futile. The spectator follows the story without difficulty, although there is no wasting of time and only the essentials are limned in the action. Griffith, with individualistic art, has unerring grasp of the dramatic elements of any scene, and there is a succession of contrasts in the shifting of scenes from the tumultuous to the most pacific, and from grave to gay. Great numbers of men are seen in the representations of battles of the civil war, and the conflicts wage with desperate energy, with men almost turned back to savagery and to hate in the fight for a "cause."

One is stirred deeply in the wonderful scenes depicting the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre at Washington. The throng at the play and the martyred President himself seem to be actually living the tragic scene. Days of reconstruction when the blacks were seriously threatening the liberties of the whites in South Carolina are reproduced with awakening thrill and there is the utmost realism in the pursuit of a beautiful white girl by a renegade negro, in her leap from a cliff and in her death from her awful injuries.

Yet there is again the shift of scenes so that the harrowing may not be too lasting, and toward the conclusion of the story there is a modern touch in the showing of pictures of Hampton Institute, with the young colored people of the country finding their place through industrial education. The Ku Klux Klan, that dashing body of Southerners intent upon saving themselves from aggression, is seen in picturesque attire and the riding of the groups of men and their vigorous and determined actions cannot but be impressive.

The excellence of the musical accompaniment to the picture and the rumble of battle, the clatter of hoofs and the shouts of victorious men as they are simulated have a great deal to do with the effectiveness of the picture. The music is especially agreeable and fitting, and as a gay party dances to "Comin' Thro' the Rye" or the Ku Klux Kian rides to the Valkyries music appropriateness of the melodies is particularly striking. Splendid acting has a full share in the success of the film in a dramatic way. Henry Walthall is an important figure, Mae Marsh and Lillian Gish are delightful, and Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, George Seigman, Joseph Hanabery, who is seen as President Lincoln, and others aid materially in the effectiveness of the presentation. The pictures are clear and distinct, with many unusual effects in photographic art, and the whole spectacle is really a triumph such as quite transcends expectations.

Throughout the course of the performance a group of colored men who claimed they were representatives of fraternal and social organizations remained near the theatre at the curbline, but did nothing to provoke even a warning from any of the half-score of policemen stationed near by. Among the organizations said to have been represented are the Emancipation and Civic League, the Professional Club, the Knights of Pythias, the Elks and Odd Fellows. It was said that tomorrow night a parade of protest will be held against the action of Judge Ferguson granting the temporary injunction.

Press Sep 5

"BIRTH OF NATION" EXCITES APPLAUSE

No Disorderly Scenes Attend Presentation of Much-Heralded Movie Play.

Grim tragedy and romance combine to make "The Birth of a Nation," which had its initial opening here last night, at the Forrest, before a packed house, one of the most remarkable photoplays ever produced. The production attracted the largest crowd here with which it has been favored on the entire circuit.

When D. W. Griffith staged this stupendous production, he combined in it all of the realities, horrible though they may have seemed, of the days of the carpet-bagger in the South after the assassination of President Lincoln. But into these is blended a beautiful romance that makes the picture one that reaches the heart of the most skeptical critic.

The great spectacle is founded upon Thomas Dixon's now famous novel, "The Clansman," but the much talked-of racial prejudice was conspicuous by its absence. There is nothing in "The Birth of a Nation" that could even tend to excite any racial prejudice and it was received by the audience with outbursts of patriotic applause rather than jeers and cheers combined as had been predicted by those opposed to the photoplay.

Scenes Are Wonderful.

Many of the scenes that are thrown upon the screen are little less than wonderful. Some of them are historically accurate, including the signing of the Proclamation of Emancipation, Lee's surrender at Appomattox Court House, the assassination of the martyred President and the formation of the Ku Klux Klan.

A cast of 18,000 persons and 3000 horses was required in the production of the play. It is said to have cost $500,000 and taken eight months to produce.

The scene begins with events leading up to the Civil War and into this come prominently the lives of four persons, two of Northern birth and two of Southern. A Southern gentleman falls in love with the picture of the sister of his Northern college chum, who is the son of the leading radical politician of Congress. On the other hand, the Northern boy is attracted by the charms of his Southern friend's sister.

War Divides Sweethearts.

But between these hearts steps a war that divides them into two factions. As the war ends the Northern Congressman, upon the death of President Lincoln, holds the power with which he sends the carpet-bagger into the South for political reasons. It is not the colored man who is held accountable for his acts during that reign of terror, but the white scalawags who take advantage of the colored man's ignorance to incite him to riots and violence. The final expulsion of the carpet-bagger by the Ku-Klux Klan, into which is woven numerous exciting incidents, and the establishment of the colored race as an asset to the South, brings the production to a close. True love triumphs over prejudice and the lovers are left standing upon the mountains, watching the birth of a strong and united nation.

Director Porter's fears that "The Birth of a Nation" might result in race riots proved to be unfounded. There was plenty of applause, for the picture merited that, but only once was a hiss heard. That was when John Wilkes Booth was seen sneaking behind President Lincoln's box in Ford's Theater, Washington.

Colored Folk Applaud.

There was a sprinkling of colored folk through last night's audience and their actions spoke their feelings in the matter. Not once is there a scene to which anyone could take exception and in several instances where the Ku Klux Klan figured, the colored spectators joined the whites in their applause.

A detail of police was sent to the Forrest in case of eventualities, but were not needed. "The Birth of a Nation" is a masterpiece and begins a new era in photoplays in Philadelphia. It is probably the first of a number of high-class, well-acted moving pictures that will find ready favor in this city.

North Amer. Sep 5

BIRTH OF NATION OPENS AT FORREST

Film Depicting Civil War and Reconstruction Days Stirring and Spectacular

Melodramatic Tinge to Story Filled With Incidents of Historical and Dramatic Interest

David W. Griffith's much-discussed film production of "The Birth of a Nation," which stands as one of the biggest achievements in the field of motion picture drama, had its initial showing in the city last night before a large audience at the Forrest Theatre, and incidentally ushered in the season of 1915 and 1916 at this playhouse.

A successful application for an injunction was made earlier in the day to prevent Director of Public Safety Porter from stopping the exhibition. The injunction is operative for five days. The film drama which is in two parts depicts certain incidents of the Civil War and the reconstruction period which followed the conclusion of the great conflict. The romance of the gallant Colonel Ben Cameron, of the Confederate army, and Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the leader of the House of Representatives as he is programmed and his eldest son, Phil Stoneman, and Colonel Cameron's eldest sister furnish much of the motif of the story. Interwoven with it are the doings of some of the historic personages of the time, President Lincoln, Generals Grant and Lee and many pathetic and stirring scenes such as the battles before Petersburg, the surrender of General Lee, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, the plots and counterplots of the carpet baggers and their enemies the KuKlux Klan and many other scenes of dramatic and historical interest.

This, as will be recognized, forms material for an interesting and dramatic story, and a series of scenes that allow of big ensemble effects and moving characterization. A resume of the picture as a whole cannot help but class it as the largest achievement thus far in the field of moving picture drama, both from the standpoint of size, photographic art and ensemble and stage effects. The individual characterization is by no means the smallest part of the production and the work as a whole is well up to the best standards of motion picture acting. Of particular merit was the work of Henry Walthall as Colonel Cameron, Miriam Cooper and Mae Marsh, as the elder and younger sister respectively. Josephine Crowell and Spottiswood Aiken as the father and mother, Ralph Lewis and William Gish as Representatives Stoneman and daughter and George Seigmann as Silas Lynch, the leader of the carpet baggers. Faithful pictorial depictions of Generals Grant and Lee were shown by Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye respectively.

Throughout the film story Mr. Griffith's attention to small details to make his story effective is noticeable, while the larger scenes are distinguished more by their expert handling of large bodies of people and properties and centring of attention on the salient features than by mere mass. The photography is crystal clear and artistic in its finish. The careful attention paid to securing historical accuracy both as to furnishings, costuming and locale is another commendable feature.

Praise, however, must be extended chiefly to the spectacular side of the film as the story, while containing many moments that are touching, dramatic and stirring is necessarily episodical in its nature. The scenes of the reconstruction period adapted largely from Rev. Thomas Dixon's story of "The Clansman," are like the incidents of that book in a large degree melodramatic and overdone and fall below the dignity and effectiveness of the first half of the drama, despite the fact that there is a large basis of historical fact. The orchestral accompaniment was an element which lent much atmosphere to the production.

Public Ledger Sep 5

FORREST—A review of "The Birth of a Nation," the much-discussed film drama of the Civil War, which opened at this theatre last night, will be found in the news section of this morning's PUBLIC LEDGER. It is announced that this spectacle will remain here for a limited engagement. Performances will be given twice daily. The work is produced by D. W. Griffith. In obtaining the great spectacular effects for the films 18,000 men and 3000 horses are said to have been employed.

Record Sep 5

Forrest—"Birth of a Nation."

At the Forrest Theatre D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is booked for a limited engagement, and will be seen twice daily, the first matinee being tomorrow. The production is now heading into the eighth month of its run in New York. It also has 300 performances to its credit in Boston and Chicago, where it is still showing. Griffith is known as a foremost director of motion picture dramas, and this is his masterpiece. It is done upon a spectacular scale, but in all the bigness the producer has not lost sight of fundamentals or necessary details. He has built his big scheme around a story of human interests and gives his narrative the touch [illegible]

...CTIONS THAT STA...

...Griffith's colossal spectacle of a Nation," which be... at the Forrest ...

BIRTH OF A NATION SHOWN AT FORREST

Film Spectacle of Civil War Period Favorably Impresses Audience

The widely heralded panoramic melodrama in motion pictures of vital events in the Civil War and the period of reconstruction, "The Birth of a Nation," was revealed at the Forrest Theatre last night to an audience which filled the house to overflowing. Vivid, spectacular and exciting, this stupendous visualization of history riveted the attention of its beholders throughout the performance. They came there to be thrilled, and they were not disappointed.

It is no exaggeration to say that the film recalls the period of civil strife, with its mingling of horror and heroism, as no amount of reading ever could. The waste and devastation, the maddening terror, the futile agony caused by the red plague of war is depicted with grim fidelity.

In convincing detail, such campaigns as Sherman's march through Georgia to the sea, and Grant's "hammering" before Petersburg, are portrayed. And after viewing the masses of cavalry, artillery and infantry in the grapple of battle, it is easy to accept the assertion of the producer, D. W. Griffith, that 18,000 men and 3000 horses were employed in the staging of this vast drama. Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Lincoln with his Cabinet, the murder of the President in Ford's Theatre, the mother pleading with "the great heart" to spare her son—all are pictured with convincing realism.

Throughout the film runs the story, adapted from Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," of a Southern officer's love for the daughter of an unscrupulous Northern Senator. This romantic element is interesting; but it is of secondary import in comparison with the great conflict which serves as its background.

Of special interest is the revelation of conditions in the home of old Doctor Cameron, a Southerner, two of whose sons are killed in battle. The anguish of a sorrowing mother and sisters is depicted with an insistence that would arouse the emotions of the most calloused. And when beholding these scenes one is made to realize that the "glory" of war produced duplicates in thousands of American homes half a century ago, and is at this time actually causing them to be reenacted in millions of other households in almost every civilized land save our own.

After the war scenes which dominate the first act of the play comes a revelation of the humiliating period of reconstruction, when the South, robbed of the kindly power of Lincoln, lay prostrate in a state bordering on anarchy. The detestable work of the carpet baggers, who urged colored freedmen to seize the reins of local government, only to abuse their new privileges, is shown in a series of powerful situations. This is followed by the efforts of the men of the South to emerge from such an era of crime and chaos, the organization of the Ku-Klux Klan, and the final readjustment leading the stricken land again into the ways of prosperity and peace.

If it were nothing else, "The Birth of a Nation" would be a grimly effective sermon against war. But it is also an ingeniously wrought melodrama of compelling interest, built on a scale hitherto unattempted.

Inquirer Sep 5

...sts (in Film) Forrest

March to the Sea - (Motion Pictures) Forrest

Press Sep 5

Remembered Lincoln's Generosity

The authenticity of one appealing and heart-warming scene in "The Birth of a Nation," which last night began an engagement at the Forrest, has recently been vouched for by a Southerner, who saw the film spectacle in New York. He called upon the producers of the film, and offered the information that the scene showing Lin-...'s magnanimity to a Confederate youth is substantially true of an experience of his own during the Civil War.

Date .....

CLIPPING FROM Ledger

Date .....

...has settled in the Danse de Folies, on the New Amsterdam Theatre Roof for a long run.

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," continues to be the principal attraction of the summer season in the local theatres. The current week is its 27th consecutive one in the Liberty Theatre, and it is booked to remain there indefinitely. The run in Greater New York reached the 488th performance at the end of the week.

PHILADELPHIA, ...) PRES...

Date .....

SEP 5 - 1915

AT THE FORREST

Last night at the Forrest D. W. Griffith's great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" had its local premiere. In another section of the paper this subject is handled. The piece is booked here for a limited engagement and will be seen twice daily, the first matinee being the holiday matinee to-morrow.

The production has registered a sensational success everywhere. It is now heading into the eight month of its run in New York and bids fair to break all records for continued performances upon the metropolitan stage. It also has 200 performances to its credit in Boston and Chicago where it is still running. In the light of these facts, a similar success during its limited stay in Philadelphia seems already assured.

In selecting the Forrest for this engagement the management secured an ideal house for the proper presentation of this new form of art. Griffith is known as the foremost directors of motion picture dramas in the world. He has been coming forward steadily with personal achievements which attracted attention. This is hailed as his master piece. It is the first utilization of the camera as a means of dramatic expression which has ever been brought forward upon a par with the spoken drama.

The big production plays in the regular theaters and at the same scale of prices which prevails for all the great stars of the legitimate stage. Being a new creation it has to make its own standard of comparison. In numbers and in breadth of the territory covered it is epoch-making. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses were used to get the desired dramatic effects. It is done upon a spectacular scale which astonishing.

In all the bigness, however, the producer has not lost sight of fundamentals or necessary details. He has built his big scheme around a story of human efforts and gives his narrative the touch of personal interest. He also uses a score of operatic sweep which is synchronized to the fraction of a second of his action. He has realized a soul stirring drama of history and romance with striking effectiveness and when it is seen one can readily understand why it has created the stir it has all over the country.

Date .....

lusionized. The play will run 50 minutes. | game in New York for a dramatic Highest Point Reached By "Birth of a Natio...

D. W. Griffith's Photo Spectacle in the Nixon T... Achieves Record Runs in New York, Chica... Boston and Other Largest Cities.

D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins the second week of its engagement at the Nixon Theater tomorrow night. It is shown twice daily at 8:15 and 2:15 p. m.

Nothing like this attraction has ever been seen in local theaters. It is given here exactly as it is presented in New York, where it has broken every record. In addition the production has piled up record engagements in Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

It covers a wide range of American history and touches only highest points of interest in the great events that led up to and terminated the Civil war. The force that slavery played in producing this crisis is traced from its inception to its abolition.

Where directors of vast spectacle have dealt with hundreds in the past, Griffith employs thousands; 18,000 people are in the scenes; 3,000 horses pass before your view in wild dashes over miles of country roadway. The decisive battles of the Civil war are reproduced. Cities were built up only to be destroyed to lend force and verity to the dramatic narrative. One enormous battlefield is shown stretching over an area of 10 square miles and upon these Plains and trenches 10,000 soldiers of love's fruition are rent the demons of war; home ties the call to arms. Suffering i the history made when men reason to passion.

You see the war start after being the causes which precipitated it. the great generals of the contend tions playing their resperate gamec man pawns moved into the slaughter.

Then comes the agreement f and Lincoln in his task of he wounds by the application of t love which made him the tower of his age.

A fanatic's bullet stills his h South is thrown back into a v than war. Their lands are over horde of political grafters. The cajoled into a false understand erty and in his ignorance is lec cesses by these scalawags.

Out of it comes the ghostly g saders of a terrible era to once things aright and return lands erties to their rightful owners the land's miserere sounds the brotherly love in an allegori which visions the reunion of sections and the welding of t spirit which has made this after its baptism of blood.

A musical

Number 466 468
470 472 Det
Mod
Mod
New F

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Pub.

Date .....

TO THE SEA

SBE— acles That is Been Motion Picture.

...enes pictured in "The ...tion" at the Forrest is ... Sherman's march to the ... burning of the city of At-... is a view of a long, fer-... extending for miles, appar-... the hills. Moving through ...ef, in straggling formation, or ...formation, is the army of Gen-...rman. The view is so exten-...t the soldiers appear but little ...han ants, yet the photograph is ...ch that the form of each man is ...ly outlined. Now and then a puff ...smoke indicates return fire upon ...snipers" in farm buildings. Now and ...n a barn is fired in evident retalia-...on for a deadly bullet, and the army ...f human ants is ever moving forward. ...Atlanta is reached. Whether the ...ning of the city was a military ne-...ssity, or whether the conflagration ...accidental origin, chroniclers of ...time fail to agree, but Atlanta was ...ndered to the flames and the con-...gration is realistically pictured in ...The Birth of a Nation." Few make ...any attempt to save household effects, ...or great is their haste to escape the ...flames and the Yankees. Up the hills ...they rush, men, women and little chil-...dren, an endless parade of misery ...and hopelessness. Sherman's army has ...cut its fearful swath through the heart ...of the South. Another link has been ...forged in the chain that shall bind the ...Confederacy to the stake. Another ...move has been made in the big war ...game that is to end at Appomattox ...Court House with the surrender of ...Lee. It is a picture the like of which ...has never appeared on the screen.

Inquirer Clips

New Season Offers Tempting Novelties

...FORREST—"The Birth of a Na-...tion" is booked for a limited sea-...gement at this house.

...W. Griffith was eight months mak-...ing this wonderful production. He has ...added into it a multiplicity of detail ...that is astonishing. Thousands of men ...and horses are used in great battle ...scenes which faithfully reproduce some ...of the most stirring days of the great ...Civil War in America. History leading ...up to and during those momentous days ...of half a century ago is made to live as ...realistically as if one were looking at ...it from a safe distance under present ...conditions. There is a stir and thrill in ...these moments. Griffith, with the ...dramatic instinct, has never subor-...dinated his main story to effect. He at-...tains interest by the use of conflict-...ing characters in the style of romance, ...comedy and the more effective drama ...which borders upon tragedy. While it ...depicts history in the making and intro-...duces as dramatic characters such nota-...bles as Grant, Lee, Lincoln, Sherman, ...John Hay, Seward and all the other ...giants of that strenuous era, the great ...human appeal attaches to the less prob-...ment figures in a story of love and sim-...ple aims which holds the attention at ...times to the ultimate developments ...of the plot. Further than this Griffith ...has utilized an operatic score which gives ...it touch of unusual power. It is quite ...the biggest thing ever attempted on our ...stage. There will be two performances ...daily—2.15 and 8.15, the first matinee ...being the holiday matinee tomorrow.

Press Clips

...T THE FORREST

Last night at the Forrest D. W. Grif-...fith's great spectacle "The Birth of a ...Nation" had its local premiere. In an-...other section of the paper this subject ...is handled. The piece is booked here ...for a limited engagement and will be ...given twice daily, the first matinee be-...ing the holiday matinee to-morrow.

...The production has registered a sen-...sational success everywhere. It is now ...coming into the eight month of its ...run in New York and bids fair to break ...records for continued performances ...at the metropolitan stage. It also has ...performances to its credit in Boston ...and Chicago where it is still running. ...In the light of these facts, a similar ...success during its limited stay in Phila-...delphia seems already assured.

...In selecting the Forrest for this en-...gagement the management secured an ...house for the proper presentation ...of this new form of art. Griffith is ...one of the foremost directors of mo-...tion dramas in the world. He ...has been moving forward steadily with ...achievements which attracted ...attention. This is hailed as his master ...piece, the first utilization of the ...motion means of dramatic expres-...sion which has ever been brought for-...ward upon a par with the spoken ...drama.

...Big production plays in the regu-...lar theaters and at the same scale of ...prices which prevails for all the great ...productions of the legitimate stage. Being a ...production it has to make its own ...scale of comparison. In numbers ...and breadth of the territory covered ...and sketch-making. Eighteen thousand ...men and 3,000 horses were used to get ...the required dramatic effects. It is done ...on a spectacular scale which is ...in keeping.

...The bigness, however, the pro-...duction has not lost sight of fundamen-...tal necessary details. He has built ...his theme around a story of hu-...man hearts and gives his narrative the ...human personal interest. He also uses ...the medium of operatic sweep which is syn-...chronized to the fraction of a second of ...time. He has realized a soul stir-...ring drama of history and romance ...of striking effectiveness and when it ...ends the theater can readily understand why ...it has created such a disagreeable ...stir it has all over ...the country as a drama ...of the South.

GRIFFITH SPECTACLE ACHIEVES SUCCESS

"The Birth of a Nation" Surpasses Anticipation of Merits of Motion Picture Creation.

MARVEL OF MIMETIC ART

Wonderful Detail in Staging Production — Presentation Given in Spite of Protests.

The anticipation of violent protest that Director of Public Safety Porter had over the showing in this city of the motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," seemed to have little justification—at least in so far as the demeanor of the crowd of spectators assembled last evening in the Forrest Theatre was concerned. Granting of a temporary injunction yesterday, restraining the Director from interfering during five days with the showing of the picture here, made possible the presentation of last evening. No disorder arose and had there been the slightest disturbance prompt interference on the part of the numerous "plain clothes" men seated in various parts of the house would have put a quietus upon the disturbers.

But those who assembled last evening in the Forrest were present because of a genuine interest in a motion picture declared to be the greatest and most dramatic achievement in photography yet brought forward. David W. Griffith, to whose splendid executive and artistic abilities tribute has already been paid by thousands of Americans, is the creator of the spectacular work known as "The Birth of a Nation," and with the Rev. Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" as the basis of the production, Griffith has built up a marvelous creation. In conception, as well as in execution, the spectacle is on the most elaborate scale and yet there is as splendid and as effective treatment of incidents of intimate sort as there is of great happenings on the field of battle, of momentous events in the growth of the nation and of those historic details that only the most careful student could have devised.

There is so much of incident in the story as it is told with absorbing interest on the screen that an outline of the plot would be futile. The spectator follows the story without difficulty, although there is no wasting of time and only the essentials are limned in the action. Griffith, with individualistic art, has unerring grasp of the dramatic elements of any scene, and there is a succession of contrasts in the shifting of scenes from the tumultuous to the most pacific, and from grave to gay. Great numbers of men are seen in the representations of battles of the civil war, and the conflicts wage with desperate energy, with men almost turned back to savagery and to hate in the fight for a "cause."

One is stirred deeply in the wonderful scenes depicting the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre at Washington. The throng at the play and the martyred President himself seem to be actually living the tragic scene. Days of reconstruction when the blacks were seriously threatening the liberties of the whites in South Carolina are reproduced with awakening thrill and there is the utmost realism in the pursuit of a beautiful white girl by a renegade negro, in her leap from a cliff and in her death from her awful injuries.

Yet there is again the shift of scenes so that the harrowing may not be too lasting, and toward the conclusion of the story there is a modern touch in the showing of pictures of Hampton Institute, with the young colored people of the country finding their place through industrial education. The Ku Klux Klan, that dashing body of Southerners intent upon saving themselves from aggression, is seen in picturesque attire and the riding of the groups of men and their vigorous and determined action cannot but be impressive.

The excellence of the musical accompaniment to the picture and the rumble of battle, the clatter of hoofs and the shouts of victorious men as they are simulated have a great deal to do with the effectiveness of the picture. The music is especially agreeable and fitting, and as a gay party dances to "Comin' Thro' the Rye" or the Ku Klux Kian rides to the Valkyrics music appropriateness of the melodies is particularly striking. Splendid acting has a full share in the success of the film in a dramatic way. Henry Walthall is an important figure, Mae Marsh and Lillian Gish are delightful, and Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, George Seigman, Joseph Hanabery, who is seen as President Lincoln, and others aid materially in the effectiveness of the presentation. The pictures are clear and distinct, with many unusual effects in photographic art, and the whole spectacle is really a triumph such as quite transcends expectations.

Throughout the course of the performance a group of colored men who claimed they were representatives of fraternal and social organizations remained near the theatre at the curbline, but did nothing to provoke even a warning from any of the half-score of policemen stationed near by. Among the organizations said to have been represented are the Emancipation and Civic League, the Professional Club, the Knights of Pythias, the Elks and Odd Fellows. It was said that tomorrow night a parade of protest will be held against the action of Judge Ferguson granting the temporary injunction.

Press Clips

"BIRTH OF NATION" EXCITES APPLAUSE

No Disorderly Scenes Attend Presentation of Much-Heralded Movie Play.

Grim tragedy and romance combine to make "The Birth of a Nation," which had its initial opening here last night, at the Forrest, before a packed house, one of the most remarkable photoplays ever produced. The production attracted the largest crowd here with which it has been favored on the entire circuit.

When D. W. Griffith staged this stupendous production, he combined in it all of the realities, horrible though they may have seemed, of the days of the carpet-bagger in the South after the assassination of President Lincoln. But into these is blended a beautiful romance that makes the picture one that reaches the heart of the most skeptical critic.

The great spectacle is founded upon Thomas Dixon's now famous novel, "The Clansman," but the much talked-of racial prejudice was conspicuous by its absence. There is nothing in "The Birth of a Nation" that could even tend to excite any racial prejudice and it was received by the audience with outbursts of patriotic applause rather than jeers and cheers combined as had been predicted by those opposed to the photoplay.

Scenes Are Wonderful.

Many of the scenes that are thrown upon the screen are little less than wonderful. Some of them are historically accurate, including the signing of the Proclamation of Emancipation, Lee's surrender at Appomattox Court House, the assassination of the martyred President and the formation of the Ku Klux Klan.

A cast of 18,000 persons and 3000 horses was required in the production of the play. It is said to have cost $500,000 and taken eight months to produce.

The scene begins with events leading up to the Civil War and into this come prominently the lives of four persons, two of Northern birth and two of Southern. A Southern gentleman falls in love with the picture of the sister of his Northern college chum, who is the son of the leading radical politician of Congress. On the other hand, the Northern boy is attracted by the charms of his Southern friend's sister.

War Divides Sweethearts.

But between these hearts steps a war that divides them into two factions. As the war ends the Northern Congressman, upon the death of President Lincoln, holds the power with which he sends the carpet-bagger into the South for political reasons. It is not the colored man who is held accountable for his acts during that reign of terror, but the white scalawags who take advantage of the colored man's ignorance to incite him to riots and violence. The final expulsion of the carpet-bagger by the Ku-Klux Klan, into which is woven numerous exciting incidents, and the establishment of the colored race as an asset to the South, brings the production to a close. True love triumphs over prejudice and the lovers are left standing upon the mountains, watching the birth of a strong and united nation.

Director Porter's fears that "The Birth of a Nation" might result in race riots proved to be unfounded. There was plenty of applause, for the picture merited that, but only once was a hiss heard. That was when John Wilkes Booth was seen sneaking behind President Lincoln's box in Ford's Theater, Washington.

Colored Folk Applaud.

There was a sprinkling of colored folk through last night's audience and their actions spoke their feelings in the matter. Not once is there a scene to which anyone could take exception and in several instances where the Ku Klux Klan figured, the colored spectators joined the whites in their applause.

A detail of police was sent to the Forrest in case of eventualities, but were not needed. "The Birth of a Nation" is a masterpiece and begins a new era in photoplays in Philadelphia. It is probably the first of a number of high-class, well-acted moving pictures that will find ready favor in this city.

BIRTH OF A NATION OPENS AT FORREST

Film Depicting Civil War and Reconstruction Days Stirring and Spectacular

Melodramatic Tinge to Story Filled With Incidents of Historical and Dramatic Interest

David W. Griffith's much-discussed film production of "The Birth of a Nation," which stands as one of the biggest achievements in the field of motion picture drama, had its initial showing in the city last night before a large audience at the Forrest Theatre, and incidentally ushered in the season of 1915 and 1916 at this playhouse.

A successful application for an injunction was made earlier in the day to prevent Director of Public Safety Porter from stopping the exhibition. The injunction is operative for five days. The film drama which is in two parts depicts certain incidents of the Civil War and the reconstruction period which followed the conclusion of the great conflict. The romance of the gallant Colonel Ben Cameron, of the Confederate army, and Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the leader of the House of Representatives as he is programmed and his eldest son, Phil Stoneman, and Colonel Cameron's eldest sister furnish much of the motif of the story. Interwoven with it are the doings of some of the historic personages of the time, President Lincoln, Generals Grant and Lee and many pathetic and stirring scenes such as the battles before Petersburg, the surrender of General Lee, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, the plots and counter-plots of the carpet baggers and their enemies the KuKlux Klan and many other scenes of dramatic and historical interest.

This, as will be recognized, forms material for an interesting and dramatic story, and a series of scenes that allow of big ensemble effects and moving characterization. A resume of the picture as a whole cannot help but class it as the largest achievement thus far in the field of moving picture drama, both from the standpoint of size, photographic art and ensemble and stage effects. The individual characterization is by no means the smallest part of the production and the work as a whole is well up to the best standards of motion picture acting. Of particular merit was the work of Henry Walthall as Colonel Cameron, Miriam Cooper and Mae Marsh, as the elder and younger sister respectively. Josephine Crowell and Spottiswood Aiken as the father and mother, Ralph Lewis and William Gish as Representatives Stoneman and daughter and George Seigmann as Silas Lynch, the leader of the carpet baggers. Faithful pictorial depictions of Generals Grant and Lee were shown by Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye respectively.

Throughout the film story Mr. Griffith's attention to small details to make his story effective is noticeable, while the larger scenes are distinguished more by their expert handling of large bodies of people and properties and centring of attention on the salient features than by mere mass. The photography is crystal clear and artistic in its finish. The careful attention paid to securing historical accuracy both as to furnishings, costuming and locale is another commendable feature.

Praise, however, must be extended chiefly to the spectacular side of the film as the story, while containing many moments that are touching, dramatic and stirring is necessarily episodical in its nature. The scenes of the reconstruction period adapted largely from Rev. Thomas Dixon's story of "The Clansman," are like the incidents of that book in a large degree melodramatic and overdone and fall below the dignity and effectiveness of the first half of the drama, despite the fact that there is a large basis of historical fact. The orchestral accompaniment was an element which lent much atmosphere to the production.

Public Ledger Clips

FORREST—A review of "The Birth of a Nation," the much-discussed film drama of the Civil War, which opened at this theatre last night, will be found in the news section of this morning's Public Ledger. It is announced that this spectacle will remain here for a limited engagement. Performances will be given twice daily. The work is produced by D. W. Griffith. In obtaining the great spectacular effects for the films 18,000 men and 3000 horses are said to have been employed.

Record Clips

Forrest—"Birth of a Nation."

At the Forrest Theatre D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is booked for a limited engagement, and will be seen twice daily, the first matinee being tomorrow. The production is now heading into the eighth month of its run in New York. It also has 300 performances to its credit in Boston and Chicago, where it is still showing. Griffith is known as a foremost director of motion picture dramas, and this is his masterpiece. It is done upon a spectacular scale, but in all the bigness the producer has not lost sight of fundamentals or necessary details. He has built his big theme around a story of human hearts and gives his narrative the human personal touch.

Worth Amer. Clips

"BIRTH OF A NATION" SHOWN AT FORREST

Film Spectacle of Civil War Period Favorably Impresses Audience

The widely heralded panoramic melodrama in motion pictures of vital events in the Civil War and the period of reconstruction, "The Birth of a Nation," was revealed at the Forrest Theatre last night to an audience which filled the house to overflowing. Vivid, spectacular and exciting, this stupendous visualization of history riveted the attention of its beholders throughout the performance. They came there to be thrilled, and they were not disappointed.

It is no exaggeration to say that the film recalls the period of civil strife, with its mingling of horror and heroism, as no amount of reading ever could. The waste and devastation, the maddening terror, the futile agony caused by the red plague of war is depicted with grim fidelity.

In convincing detail, such campaigns as Sherman's march through Georgia to the sea, and Grant's "hammering" before Petersburg, are portrayed. And after viewing the masses of cavalry, artillery and infantry in the grapple of battle, it is easy to accept the assertion of the producer, D. W. Griffith, that 18,000 men and 3000 horses were employed in the staging of this vast drama. Grant and Lee at Appomattox, Lincoln with his Cabinet, the murder of the President in Ford's Theatre, the mother pleading with "the great heart" to spare her son—all are pictured with convincing realism.

Throughout the film runs the story, adapted from Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," of a Southern officer's love for the daughter of an unscrupulous Northern Senator. This romantic element is interesting; but it is of secondary import in comparison with the great conflict which serves as its background.

Of special interest is the revelation of conditions in the home of old Doctor Cameron, a Southerner, two of whose sons are killed in battle. The anguish of a sorrowing mother and sisters is depicted with an insistence that would arouse the emotions of the most calloused. And when beholding these scenes one is made to realize that the "glory" of war produced duplicates in thousands of American homes half a century ago, and is at this time actually causing them to be reenacted in millions of other households in almost every civilized land save our own.

After the war scenes which dominate the first act of the play comes a revelation of the humiliating period of reconstruction, when the South, robbed of the kindly power of Lincoln, lay prostrate in a state bordering on anarchy. The detestable work of the carpet baggers, who urged colored freedmen to seize the reins of local government, only to abuse their new privileges, is shown in a series of powerful situations. This is followed by the efforts of the men of the South to emerge from such an era of crime and chaos, the organization of the Ku-Klux Klan, and the final readjustment leading the stricken land again into the ways of prosperity and peace.

If it were nothing else, "The Birth of a Nation" would be a grimly effective sermon against war. But it is also an ingeniously wrought melodrama of compelling interest, built on a scale hitherto unattempted.

Inquirer Sep 5

Lillian Gish (In Film) Forrest

March to the Sea - (Motion Pictures) Forrest

Press Sep 5

Remembered Lincoln's Generosity

The authenticity of one appealing and heart-warming scene in "The Birth of a Nation," which last night began an engagement at the Forrest, has recently been vouched for by a Southerner, who saw the film spectacle in New York. He called upon the producers of the film, and offered the information that the scene showing Lincoln's magnanimity to a Confederate youth is substantially true of an experience of his own during the Civil War.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.) PRESS

Date .....

SEP 5 - 1915

AT THE FORREST

Last night at the Forrest D. W. Griffith's great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" had its local premiere. In another section of the paper this subject is handled. The piece is booked here for a limited engagement and will be given twice daily, the first matinee being the holiday matinee to-morrow.

The production has registered a sensational success everywhere. It is now heading into the eight month of its run in New York and bids fair to break all records for continued performances upon the metropolitan stage. It also has 300 performances to its credit in Boston and Chicago where it is still running. In the light of these facts, a similar success during its limited stay in Philadelphia seems already assured.

In selecting the Forrest for this engagement the management secured an ideal house for the proper presentation of this new form of art. Griffith is known as the foremost directors of motion picture dramas in the world. He has been coming forward steadily with personal achievements which attracted attention. This is hailed as his master piece. It is the first utilization of the camera as a means of dramatic expression which has ever been brought forward upon a par with the spoken drama.

The big production plays in the regular theaters and at the same scale of prices which prevails for all the great stars of the legitimate stage. Being a new creation it has to make its own standard of comparison. In numbers and in breadth of the territory covered it is epoch-making. Eighteen thousand people and 3,000 horses were used to get the desired dramatic effects. It is done upon a spectacular scale which astonishing.

In all the bigness, however, the producer has not lost sight of fundamentals or necessary details. He has built his big scheme around a story of human efforts and gives his narrative the touch of personal interest. He also uses a score of operatic sweep which is synchronized to the fraction of a second of his action. He has realized a soul stirring drama of history and romance with striking effectiveness and when it is seen one can readily understand why it has created the stir it has all over the country.

Date .....

CLIPPING FROM Eagle

Date .....

9-5-1

[illegible] settled in the Danse de Folies on the New Amsterdam Theatre Roof for a long run.

D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," continues to be the principal attraction of the summer season in the local theatres. The current week is its 27th consecutive one in the Liberty Theatre, and it is booked to remain there indefinitely. The run in Greater New York reached the 483th performance at the end of the week.

lusionized. The play will run 50 minutes.

Highest Point Reached By "Birth of a Nation"

D. W. Griffith's Photo Spectacle in the Nixon T. Achieves Record Runs in New York, Chica Boston and Other Largest Cities.

D. W. Griffith's photo spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins the second week of its engagement at the Nixon Theater tomorrow night. It is shown twice daily at 8:15 and 2:15 p. m.

Nothing like this attraction has ever been seen in local theaters. It is given here exactly as it is presented in New York, where it has broken every record. In addition the production has piled up record engagements in Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

It covers a wide range of American history and touches only highest points of interest in the great events that led up to and terminated the Civil war. The force that slavery played in producing this crisis is traced from its inception to its abolition.

Where directors of vast spectacle have dealt with hundreds in the past, Griffith employs thousands; 18,000 people are in the scenes; 3,000 horses pass before your view in wild dashes over miles of country roadway. The decisive battles of the Civil war are reproduced. Cities were built up only to be destroyed to lend force and verity to the dramatic narrative. One enormous battlefield is shown stretching over an area of 10 square miles and upon these plains and trenches 18,000 soldiers game in New York for a dramatic of lovers fruitition are rent the demons of war; home ties the call to arms. Suffering i the history made when men reason to passion.

You see the war start after being the causes which precipitated it. the great generals of the contend tions playing their resperate game man pawns moved into the slaughter.

Then comes the agreement f and Lincoln in his task of he wounds by the application of t love which made him the tower of his age.

A fanatic's bullet stills his h South is thrown back into a v than war. Their lands are over horde of political grafters. Th cajoled into a false understand erty and in his ignorance is lec cesses by these scalawags.

Out of it comes the ghostly ga saders of a terrible era to once things aright and return lands erties to their rightful owners the land's miserere sounds the brotherly love in an allegori which visions the reunion of sections and the welding of t spirit which has made this after its baptism of blood

Philadelphia (Pa.) Sep 6

Date ..

...a of a Nation"

...United States as a ...m a collection of petty ...able of individual ac... ...ighty travail which ac... ...birth is the ambitious ...hich D. W. Griffith built his ...are production, "The Birth of ... which was presented at the ...eatre Saturday evening.

...heretofore accomplished in the ...motion photography approaches ...nificent spectacle in scope, power ...ng. From the first scenes, mere ...showing the beginning of the ...trade with America, up the happy ...mination of the romance which runs ...a thread through the whole pa... ...ayal the audience was carried along in ...most breathless fashion through such ...historic events as Sherman's march to ...the sea, Grant's campaign before Gettys... ...burg, the surrender at Appomatox and the ...assassination of Lincoln.

Then are shown the shameful and dis... ...graceful events of the "carpet-bag" re... ...gime in the South, when the freed negroes ...sought, under the spur of Northern politi... ...cians, to seize the reins of local govern... ...ment, resulting in the terrors of the Ku ...Klux Klan, when the men of the South ...sought to resist this invasion and reign ...of near-anarchy. The battle scenes, espe... ...cially that before Petersburg, are staged ...upon a scale approaching actuality and ...far surpassing anything ever attempted ...in the way of spectacular amusement. ...Not only are the battlefields shown in ...panorama, but close and intimate details ...are depicted of the soldiers in the trenches ...or "earthworks," as they were known in ...that day.

Then the other side of the picture is ...shown—the loss of life, the destruction ...of property, the agony of mind and body, ...the prostrate grief of survivors, the shat... ...tering of homes and loves, the changing ...of affection to hate and rancor. "The ...Birth of a Nation" is not alone an enter... ...tainment. It is as well a preachment of ...more than ordinary power on the rending ...horror of war.

Despite reported plans of negro pro... ...testants to vent their displeasure at the ...show by making a demonstration against ...it, the production passed off without in... ...cident, other than the enthusiastic ap... ...plause of a big audience.

An orchestra of unusual size for a ...theatre gave a program based upon old ...war melodies, but orchestrated to almost ...symphonic proportions.

Record Sep 6

"Birth of a Nation"—Forrest.

The great success that the D. W. Grif... ...ith motion picture spectacle, "The Birth ...of a Nation," had at the opening presen... ...tion in this city last Saturday evening ...is emphasized yesterday when at the ...afternoon and evening showings alike ...there were enthusiastic throngs, stirred ...not only by the graphic portrayal and ...the enthralling conflicts, but stimulated as ...well by the emphasizing orchestral music. The story is founded upon Rev. Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," but Griffith has been careful to show no prejudice in his depicting of the troublous times when the nation was evolving and when the negro question threatened to disrupt a carefully builded republic. So masterfully have the battle scenes been presented and so realistic is the march of Sherman and his men to the sea that one feels himself to be an actual onlooker upon an historic enactment. But perhaps the most impressive series of scenes is that dealing with the assassination of President Lincoln. Onlookers in the Forrest actually gasped with horror and there were involuntary exclamations as the deed of the murderer was shown. "The Birth of a Nation" is veritably the greatest triumph yet achieved in motion-picture art.

Telegraph Sep 6

BIRTH OF A NATION" HAS LOCAL SHOWING

D. W. Griffith's Massive Photo-Spectacle Arouses Enthusiasm at Forrest.

Peaceful enough was the first local showing of D. W. Griffith's much-heralded photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Forrest, on Saturday evening, and seldom has an audience viewed any theatrical production with more absorbed attention than was accorded the picture by the throng that, despite a warm evening and the counter-attraction of Labor Day holidays, filled the Broad street playhouse.

Rumors of widespread protest against the picture as a possible incentive to race prejudice had led to a feeling of uneasiness, and the presentation was made under the protection of an order of court restraining threatened police interference. The upshot proved that despite its large mixed population Philadelphia is able to appreciate "The Birth of a Nation" at its true artistic value as a dramatic representation of certain phases of the country's history, shown, it is true, with startling vividness and clarity, yet not unfairly to any race or section.

The spectacle depicts the underlying causes of the conflict between the North and South and with vivid realism shows on the screen dramatic scenes of the "Reconstruction Period" a chapter of the nation's history by no means highly creditable to any of those involved. The pernicious activities of the "Carpet Baggers," the excesses of the freed slaves and the chivalrous if not always justified activities of the Klu Kluk Klan are parts of history and must be interpreted according to individual bias. What Mr. Griffith has done is only what any dramatist has the right to do: he has selected from history a series of the most dramatic episodes, to point and illuminate the story he has to tell. He has told it well, better than it has ever been told before or could have been told without the aid of the manifold resources of motion picture photography directed by a master hand.

All that has been said of the pictorial excellence and mechanical perfection of the representation (and it has been a-plenty) is fully justified. Even the claim that Mr. Griffith has created a new art form is not unjustified when the completeness and perfection of the representation are considered. The scenes of the story are unfolded with a breadth of view and care for effects great and small that produce an illusion of reality almost perfect.

The story about which Mr. Griffith has built his fabric of illusion is of the Cameron[illegible], of South Carolina, and the Stoneman[illegible], of Pennsylvania, prominent families of North and South, friends before the war, arrayed against each other during the stress of conflict and united after its close by a pretty double romance. It is a more than usually interesting story logically and well told, but it is, of course, in displaying the great men and happenings of an epoch-making period that Mr. Griffith has triumphed most. Battles pass on the screen as if they were actually fought. Troops move by regiments and divisions, not by squads and companies; the Klu Kluks Klansmen marshal their brotherhood by thousands, not by scores, and ride as swiftly and fearlessly as white spectres might.

Everything is on so great a scale that it is not possible to illustrate it for want of standards of comparison. It may only be said that "The Birth of a Nation" marks the present ultimate of that lusty young giant, the motion picture, and that until it shall be surpassed it is difficult to imagine a better or more effective work.

...PPING FROM Sun

Date ... 9-5-15

...was the ... equally young, receives a well-earned reward.

NIXON — D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," begins the second week of its limited engagement at the Nixon theater tomorrow night. There are two performances daily at 2:15 and 8:15 P. M.

Nothing like this wonderful attraction has ever been seen upon the local boards. It is given here exactly as it is being presented in New York city, where the big drama has broken every record in the stage history of the first city in the country. In addition the piece has piled up record engagements in Chicago, Boston, San Francisco and Los Angeles.

It covers a wide range of American history and touches only the highest points of interest in the great events that lead up to and terminated in the Civil war. The force that slavery played in ...ing this crisis is traced from its inception to its abolition. While the basic theme is historical in its foundation, its intent is the fundamental one of true drama. The forces which make for those results have been marshaled upon a larger scale than was ever dreamed of before. Where directors of past spectacles have dealt with hundreds in the past, Griffiths employs thousands. Eighteen thousand people fill the stage, which has a vast territory for its background. Three thousand horses pass before the view, in wild dashes over miles of country roadway. The decisive battles of the Civil war are reproduced in faithful detail and you see these conflicts fought again just as they were waged 50 years ago. Cities were built up only to be destroyed to lend force and verity to the dramatic narrative. One enormous battlefield is shown stretching over an area of 10 square miles and upon these planes and trenches 10,000 soldiers clash in a mimic warfare that is as real as if you were an eyewitness of the actual occurrence. Holding the great effects in tether is a story as tender and true as love and romance can be pictured. There are tears and smiles, noble sacrifices and heroic deeds of personal valor. Youthful dreams of love's fruition are rent asunder by the demons of war; home ties snap before the call to arms and suffering such as cannot be imagined is depicted in the crude manner that history is made when men surrender reason to passion, and engage in a deadlock of armed resistance.

A wonderful score of operatic reaches accompanies the narrative. It is all done upon a most stupendous scale. No detail has been overlooked. The drama is outlined and told in the most graphic form that has yet been devised by the brain of man for such purpose.

...PPING FROM Bulletin

Date ... 9-6-15

BIG SPECTACLE CLOSES TODAY

"Birth of a Nation" Ends Season's Engagement At Nixon

The closing performance of "The Birth of a Nation" will be given this evening at the Nixon, thus concluding an engagement that enjoyed an all Summer's run in that playhouse. This is the great production which is still making a record run of over 600 performances in New York City where it created the sensation of the season.

Mr. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful story. He employed 18,000 people and 2000 horses and the total cost of the work reached the enormous figure of half a million dollars. The story is one of romance and adventure linked to the most vital periods of American history. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama.

Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the picture. An orchestra of forty is necessary to handle the musical features of the presentation.

HAVERHILL (Mass.) GAZETTE
SEPT. 9, 1915

3

PRESS AGENT OUTDONE.

Words Fail to Describe "Birth of a Nation" at Colonial

For once the press agent has been undone. For years it has been his duty to employ such exaggeration in the verbal presentation of his subject as to infuse in the mind of the reader a desire to see or hear that which he tells about. But now comes "The Birth of a Nation", the gorgeous spectacle of the 20th century and the press agent finds himself at a loss for words to describe the production even in a minor way. D. W. Griffith has stripped him of his power; exaggeration is out of the question and the writer must now work his brain overtime in order to do even meagre justice to his subject.

"The Birth of a Nation" now at the Colonial, cannot be exaggerated. There are countless scenes in it that tongue or pen cannot describe. Only the eye alone can realize the wonderful progress the motion picture has made in this phenomenal masterpiece. Two years' time was consumed in its making and the approximate cost has been $500,000.

Imagine a pictorial production of love, romance and history, including tremendous battle scenes the equal of which have never yet been shown upon a screen; imagine such scenes as the burning of Atlanta, Sherman's march to the sea, Grant and Lee at Appomattox, the thrilling rides of the Klux Klan, entire cities built up and destroyed by fire, the assassination of Lincoln at Ford's theatre, Washington; wonderful artillery duels in which real shells costing $50 apiece were used, miles and miles of trenches with thousands of fighters, cavalry charges, infantry charges, deeds of heroism on the field of battle, imagine hundreds of such mighty scenes as these and there you have "The Birth of a Nation" the pinnacle of filmed spectacles.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS

Date .....

SEP 5 - 1915

Remembered Lincoln's Generosity

The authenticity of one appealing and heart-warming scene in "The Birth of a Nation," which last night began an engagement at the Forrest, has recently been vouched for by a Southerner, who saw the film spectacle in New York. He called upon the producers of the film, and offered the information that the scene showing Lincoln's magnanimity to a Confederate youth is substantially true of an experience of his own during the Civil War.

PHILADELPHIA, (PA.) PRESS

SEP 5 - 1915

STORY OF LINCOLN LIES IN "BIRTH OF A NATION"

The incident of the young Confederate's release by President Lincoln's order, which gets a round of enthusiastic handclapping when presented in "The Birth of a Nation," was verified as an actual historical event by one of the spectators. G. L. Mordecai, of 174 West Eighty-sixth Street, New York city, is the man to whom it happened. During the New York run of the play he visited D. W. Griffith's offices and told this remarkable story:—

"My father, a wealthy trader of Charleston, S. C., was engaged in extensive blockade running operations between the Confederacy and the Bahama Islands. I had served in the Confederate army, but had been honorably discharged on account of sickness. My father then wanted me to go as his agent to Nassau. The only channel of intercourse was closed, however, when the Federals captured Fort Fisher, so father suggested that I should try to slip through the Northern lines and thence take steamer from New York.

"In civilian dress I managed to elude the Union pickets in Virginia, crossed the Potomac, took stage for Washington, but in the latter place I was arrested and thrown into prison as a Confederate enemy. It was feared that I would be court-martialed and executed, or at best held prisoner until the close of the war. My fiancee's father, Alderman Samuel Lewis, of New York, later acting Mayor, came to Washington and worked in my behalf. Notwithstanding Stanton's opposition, he succeeded in convincing President Lincoln that I was not a spy. 'I will release the young man,' said Mr. Lincoln, 'on one condition; that he takes oath not to return to the Southern States during the war.'

"I gladly took the oath and was released. Before leaving for the North for my marriage and residence in Alderman Lewis' family, I desired to thank President Lincoln. On being presented to Mr. Lincoln I remembered he shook me by the hand and said: 'I am happy to know that I have been able to serve an enemy.' I have never forgotten the great President's generosity and kindheartedness to a foe, and when I saw the picture that early experience was recalled.

SEPT 7, 1915

PITTSBURG (Pa.) PRESS

Development Is Great.

A development no one would have believed possible a few years ago is seen in D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," now presented at the Nixon. It is indeed more than a film, for over 150 persons are employed in the mechanical effects and the music during the unreeling of its 12,000 feet of celluloid; yet not a word is spoken from the stage during the two hours and three-quarters' performance. Griffith's photo-entertainment combines a pictorial survey of Civil war history, one of the Klan days with a love story based on Thomas ...

TTAWA (Ont.) JOURNAL
SEPT 4, 1915

STROKE OF PEN THAT SET MILLIONS FREE.

This is a scene from "The Birth of a Nation," Dr. Griffith's half million dollar motion picture, which will be presented at the six night shows of the Ottawa Exhibition.

The picture shows Abraham Lincoln surrounded by members of his Cabinet. He is in the act of signing the proclamation giving freedom to the slaves. It is the most important development in the famous screen drama. The negro problem precipitated the civil war, on which Griffith's photo play is based. The 5,000 photographs comprising the spectacle, cost half a million dollars, and required eight months to produce. There are many similar thrilling scenes.

...TIONS THAT STAY

...ge for Sept 7

...Birth of a Nation" at Forrest

...the remarkable Griffith mo...ure, "The Birth of a Nation," ...n in the enthusiasm displayed ...udiences which viewed this mas... at the Forrest Theatre yester... an example of the degree of ...to which this style of erter... has reached, it would seem ...has about all the satisfying ...s. There is romance, thrilling ...and comedy all interestingly in...n. The war scenes are highly re... while the Ku Klux Klan exploits ...ally exciting.

Telegraph Sept 7

Telegraph Sept 7

"The Birth of a Nation."

D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," the first film to lift motion pictures into the "Two Dollar" class, was shown at the Forrest yesterday before two capacity audiences which reaffirmed the verdict of those who attended the local premiere on Saturday, that the picture marks the highest point yet reached in motion picture photography. In vastness of scope, in fidelity to historical fact, and in the interest of the double love story around which the story is built, the film is sufficiently remarkable to justify all that has been claimed for it.

Fullerton the hero Sept 7 the st

PHOTOPLAYS

FORREST—"The Birth of a Nation," with Henry B. Walthal, Mae Marsh and Spottiswoode Aitken. D. W. Griffith's mammoth presentation of the Civil War and Reconstruction, founded in part on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." A marvelous entertainment.
PRINCESS—"Esmeralda," with Mary Pickford.

SEPT 7 1915
BURGH (Pa.) DISPATCH

...the gowns of the principal ...

"The Birth of a Nation"

"The remarkable film, "The Birth ...tion," opened its second week a ...yesterday with increased patr... It is pretty well known by this time ...this motion picture spectacle is ...other ever made. It is wonder... wonderful that one cannot tell abo... The auditor is perfectly dazed, and ...ked about it just says: "go an... it." The photography, the posing ...nery, the accumulated historical ep... the acting, the staging—everything ...nected with the production down ...smallest detail bears the imprint ...first picture mastery.

BIRTH OF A NATION

...ttsburg, Pa., Sept. 3.—Jo... Reid in Chambers here has gra... injunction in favor of the Ni... pany in its bill of equity a... Mayor Joseph G. Armstrong ...of Police W. Noble Matthew ...with the display of the ... Birth of a Nation. Judge ...the hearing on the perma... theater will be permitte... pending the decision of ...

The theater company ... display the film for six wee... tember 1.

...ITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT 7, 1915

...are the leading theatrical men of the country.

A development no one would have believed possible a few years ago is seen in D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" now playing at the Nixon. It is indeed more than a film, for nearly 100 persons are employed in the mechanical effects and the music during the unreeling of its 12,000 feet of celluloid; yet not a word is spoken from the stage during the two and three quarters' hours performance. Mr. Griffith's photo-entertainment combines a pictorial survey of Civil War history and of Ku Klux Klan days with a love story based on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman."

CLIPPING FROM NEW YORK TELEGR...

...f a Nation" Stays.

...'s "The Birth of a Na... its twenty-eighth week ... Theatre Saturday night. ...night the 100th perform... York was given. This is ...greatest results of recent ... enters the present week ...record run of the Liberty ... The record for the Liberty ...was held by the "Spring ...which ran for twenty-eight ... "The Birth of a Nation" con... at the Liberty indefinitely.

St Louis Sun. Sept 6

"The Birth of a Nation," the success of which grows with every performance, is holding forth at the Olympic and is now in its second week, with every promise of increasing its daily receipts over those of its first week. The D. W. Griffith masterpiece justifies the most stirring eulogies ever ...

AMUSEMENTS

TO STAY ANOTHER WEEK.

All Fall River to Have Chance to See "The Birth of a Nation."

"The Birth of a Nation" is to stay at the Savoy ~~the coming~~ another week. The management made the announcement yesterday when, after a week of the largest business ever recorded by a theatrical production in this city, it became apparent that not half of those who wished to see the great spectacle had as yet found the opportunity. It is ...emarkable tribute from the City of ...l River to Griffith's great produc...n, but it is no less a boon to the ...blic of this city to have such a mas...piece here for another week.

There is no doubt that the coming ...ek is going to witness an even ...eater demand for seats for "The ...th of a Nation," for from the many ...usands who have seen the picture ...ce it came here the opinion re...rding its merit is unanimous. It is ...btful if any production ever pre...nted here has received such univer... praise. It is doubtful if any pro...ction has been so generally discuss..., in the home, in hotel lobbies, in ...bs and social gatherings, wherever ...o or three people congregate. And ...y not? What single experience ...uld possibly provide any greater sub...t for thought and discussion.

There will naturally be a great de...and for seats for the holiday per...rmances, since it will provide many ...th their first opportunity to see the ...cture. Manager David Dow there...re wishes to urge that seats will be reserved as early as possible, and that having been reserved they will be called for as early as possible in the day. Seats for the matinees are reserved until 1, and for the evening performances until 7. Mr. Dow has found it positively necessary to live strictly up to that arrangement on account of the great demand for seats, and he asks the public to co-operate with him that any possible unpleasantness may be avoided.

It might not be amiss to add, to Mr. Dow's request, a word about Mr. Dow himself. Those who have witnessed "The Birth of a Nation," at the Savoy cannot but have been impressed with the perfect arrangements and courteous treatment accorded them there. Mr. Dow, of course, has the regular house staff of the Savoy to assist him, but there is, nevertheless, great credit coming to him for adapting himself to local conditions so readily and displaying a real concern for the comfort and satisfaction of his patrons. There is an "inside" and an "outside" to every road show and those who are familiar with them know that the "inside" does not always compare favorably with the "outside."

Regarding Mr. Dow, however, it is to be regretted that every one who witnesses the great spectacle of which he is manager cannot meet him personally. It would certainly add to the already great admiration for the product. Apparently, the owners of "The Birth of a Nation" figure that only "big" men should be associated with such a big production and so chose Mr. Dow as one qualified to adequately represent the spirit which prompted the vast undertaking. Those who have met Mr. Dow are ready to congratulate "The Birth of a Nation" upon being capably and intelligently managed.

SEPT 7, 1915
PITTSBURG (Pa.) SUN

THE NIXON.

D. W. Griffith's thrillingly spectacular photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," generally considered one of the most remarkable pieces ever shown in moving pictures, continues to draw large audiences to the Nixon, where it began its second week yesterday. Love and hatred; comedy and tragedy; war in all its horror, and the terrorism which marked the early days of the reconstruction period in the South are so cleverly woven together to make up a real, living story that the spectator cannot help but imagine it is life and not the make-believe of the stage that he is looking at.

In the first part the sundering of the ties between the North and South, followed by wonderfully realistic battle scenes, in which the tragedy of Sherman's march to the sea, leaving a trail of destroyed cities and ruined homes, has a prominent part, forms a striking background for the story—the love of a Southern girl for a Northerner and of a Southerner for a girl of the North—around which the play is constructed. The South before and during the war is made to live again in these pictures with a realism that is wonderfully picturesque, wonderfully tragic.

In the second part the brutality that marked the reconstruction period is shown, the chief incidents based on those in Dixon's "Clansman." It is to this part that strenuous objection has been made in many cities, because it shows the negro drunk with the new power that freedom has given him, seeking to avenge himself on the unhappy, ruined whites for the wrongs he has suffered during the slave days.

The attack of a renegade on the governor's daughter, the attempt of a mulatto lieutenant governor to force her into marrying him and of her rescue by the Ku-Klux Klan, are brought out with a realism that has been criticised as giving too great prominence to the brutality that marked those days. But the object of the author has been to show the horrors not only of war, but of the aftermath, and by many "The Birth of a Nation," when considered as a whole, is looked upon as one of the most powerful arguments against war that has ever ...

Number	Without Patch
466	Demy Folio
468	Demy Folio
470	Medium Folio
★ 472	Medium Folio

New Flat Ba...

Philadelphia Ledger

Date ..

...duced "The ...rth of a Nation"

...D. W. GRIFFITH.

...ndless work to produce a big ...ture. There is also endless de... ...me illustrate by the concrete ... of "The Birth of a Nation." ...omes the scenario or written out... the plot. In this case there was ...vious stage play. If we are wise, ... forget that as much as we can, for ... motion picture is a novelising or ...ory-telling form, not strictly a stage form; it is epic rather than dramatic; much of the work is of the great in-doors. We have a period of history to cover, the scenes of a wide territory to revivify. Therefore, we must prepare the locale as well as the actors—the tasks of the landscape artist and, in some sense, of the civil engineer are before us. For a month the actors rehearse without the camera.

And now South Carolina in Reconstruction days is measurably before our eyes. Elsewhere the battle backgrounds of the Civil War are springing into being, helped by expert advice of old "vets" and modern West Pointers. The costumes, settings and documents are laboriously prepared for the facsimile historical scenes like those of the Emancipation Proclamation, the Appomattox surrender and the Lincoln assassination. By the way, 24 "Lincoln actors" were rehearsed before the right Lincoln was found! This was because I demand "soul" of the photoplay star, and for this scene Lincoln was the star part. The Blue and the Grey, the Southern white gentry and the colored contingent all have been drilled under their respective leaders. And then film making begins.

At an early stage of the work—after the rough outlines have been filled in—the scenario is thrown away. The building and the rebuilding of the story, the piecing of intimate bits and the discarding of the useless go right on while we are living the history, so to speak, from day to day. Nearly 28 miles of pictures—...0,000 feet of film—are taken. And how much of these are used? At the finale ... discover that we have thrown away ...ht-tenths of our product—we have re-...ining 25,000 feet, or, say, five miles of ...tive story. But that is twice too ...We condense, condense, condense. ...end of two months more of hard ...have edited "The Birth of a ...to 12,000 or 13,000 feet—two and a ...—or, in theatre wise, two hours ...minutes' stage entertainment.—Photoplay Vogue.

The story is ... Dixon's "The ... been care... depicting ... nation ... question ... builded ... battle ... istic is ...

...so many things to admire ... David Griffith's production of ...th of a Nation" that one view-...e picture is quite insufficient to ... One thing, for example, whose ...ight be appreciated by a cas-...tator without in the least ... the cause, is his almost ... gift of composition.

...iffith," said a prominent artist, ...ps his figures like an artist in ... water color rather than like a ...rector. I don't know whether ... studied perspective, composition ...armony or not, but anyhow his ...ictures to my mind have the ...uality as those of the great art-...

...s remark was occasioned particu-... from watching Mr. Griffith as-...ble the multitude in the scenes of ...r and peace in "The Birth of a Na-...n." In the scene representing the fu-...re brotherhood of love and peace the ...ffect of distance is obtained by con-...structing two stages with rising steps, one near the camera and the other removed about 100 feet. Between the two stages there is a hollow. The principals are stationed on the near stage, then comes the intervening hollow, and finally the more distant features of the background show on the second or more remote platform.

In striking contrast is Mr. Griffith's treatment of the contrasting theme of misery of war. Wan, skeleton-like figures are selected. Men and women are strewn about the stage, the piled-up victims of a battle. Bodies, legs and arms and (as it were) shreds of human beings are inextricably mixed. Woe stamps itself upon the picture as joy radiates from the other.

Griffith's method of making the scene caused one artist to nickname it a "human salad." But that is not how it impresses the spectators, who sense the emotional appeal beneath the bizarre effect.

...the ... the ... tion. ...rested ...

Confe... theatrical entertainment in recent ... has caused more widespread interest, ... than "The Birth of a Nation," the close ...sterwork of one of the foremost motion ... later ...ure producers, David W. Griffith, now ...ton at the Forrest. The playhouse has been ...standed at each of the two daily presentations during the past week and at the first ...ceed... that ...ing of the film in this city on Satur... ...young of last week there was a record at-...condit...nce. No detail has been slighted to ... for perfect projection of the story ...returns gives visually so complete and accu-...war. ...an idea of the stress and upheavals ... were essential to the cementing of ...lease States of the Union into an indissolu-...for a nation. And with it all there is a ro-...mance, with love triumphant, after many ...Preal ...burnings. The story is founded upon ...to M...e Clansman" by Rev. Thomas Dixon, ...me b... in the telling of the tale one sees as ...to kn...gh actually happening historic events ...an ...e greatest moment. Each incident is ...great...asized with music, original or care-...fully ...heart...selected and played by a special or-...ch...a. Further worth of the picture is ...acting of a notable cast headed by ...B. Walthall.

SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Ev. Ledger Sep 11

~~St. Louis Daily Globe Dem~~

Sep 12 Pittsburg Dispatch

NIXON—"The Birth of a Nation," greatest film spectacle ever created, with 18,000 people, 3,000 horses and 200,000 scenes. A picture of 12,000 feet of film, reduced from 18,000 feet. Most wonderful motion picture show in the world.

FITCHBURG (Mass.) SENTINEL
SEPT. 9, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION

Special Car for Ayer After Saturday Evening Performance at the Cummings

On account of the great number of people from Ayer, North Leominster, Shirley and other places wishing to attend an evening performance of "The birth of a nation" at the Cummings theater, arrangements have been made with President W. W. Sargent to run a special "Birth of a nation" car to those places after the exhibition on Saturday night. It requires about three hours to properly present this wonderful production and people from the surrounding towns have had difficulty in getting home at night. Leominster bound and other cars are held for the performance each night and now the special car for Ayer and Shirley will accommodate the others. The seat sale from the towns is remarkable and shows that "The birth of a nation" has a drawing power superior to any other attraction ever shown here. That isn't surprising as "The birth of a nation" is a wonderful attraction in every way. It tells certain events of history in a broad, realistic and authentic manner. It gives its authority for the picturization of certain scenes and incidents, it traces the life of the South before, during and after the war, and pictures in a striking manner the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan against the carpet-baggers and others who abused the sudden power given to them. There is great historical, educational and instructive value to be gained from this exhibition, while the two love stories and the stirring battle scenes add greatly to the pleasure of witnessing the production. It will be seen for the last times tomorrow and Saturday.

Telegraph Sep 11

Woman Wear Sep 11

Liberty.

On Tuesday night, D. W. Griffith great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" passes the 500th presentation in New York City. The run continues the one outstanding success of the old year which has kept right on through the summer without a break. The attendance last week was the fourth largest of the 27 weeks that it has been on Broadway.

...As he is now staging "The Birth of a Nation" in earnest—that, we are certain, Photoplays may gain nothing by adopting the vaudeville theatre's scale of prices; doubtless, properly organized, as the Triangle Company seems to be organizing, they could be presented at a half to a third that scale. Yet the price is a small matter, quickly to be readjusted, compared with the art their thorough exploitation opens up.

The appeal of "The Birth of a Nation" is undeniable. It fascinates for three solid hours. The heights of emotion are tremendous. There are only moments—principally those in which Miss Gish figures at the hospital and in her room—which are relatively less interesting.

The reason is, I think, obvious. The photoplays can have little or no characterization, small wit and less philosophy. Without spoken words it will never compete with the genuine, fine and inherent nature of the drama. But the photoplay can have a large element of poetry, a great sweep of beauty which the stage can hardly touch, and an emotion literally tremendous. Gigantic catastrophies—whether of Civil War or of nature's upheavals—and that terrible, individual fact of death take on a final power which the theatre never touches. Movieland is such a real land of real rocks and real sky, movie actors have such a fortunate habit of never answering curtain calls, that somehow the gray-backed screen of the photoplay has a finality of realism which the stage, for all its three dimensions, cannot approach.

"The Birth of a Nation" is full of examples of what intelligence can do in the production of the photoplay. Praising Mr. Griffith as the supreme artist so far developed is an old game now; but it is possible to come down to cases. It is possible, for example, to point out how much a genuine director of the whole art can do to heighten his action by the clever use of music. The score of "The Birth of a Nation" is mostly a simple putting together of simple and familiar melodies. Yet how wonderfully—to take a single instance—that nervous, throbbing war-song of the South heightens the scenes at the ball when the scarred flag of that first quick victory, Bull Run, is flung to the eager crowd.

The "leaders," or printed titles, can do a great deal to aid the photoplay, in spite of the very obvious fact that the fewer they are the better. Those the producer uses must be admirably worded and add to the point of the whole piece. George Ade gives his "Fables in Slang" excellent "leaders" that shine by comparison with the usual sad legends of comedies. Griffith uses his asides to the audience even more skilfully. He builds through them a mood that will make the audience sympathetic to the argument of the film. He quotes history, he employs President Wilson's writings. Perhaps he goes a bit too far sometimes; when he emphasizes the "sovereignty of the 13 States," "the fact that Cornwallis surrendered to 13 independent little nations and not to a single country," he hardly suggests that his later words about the birth of a nation are sincere. Often the "leaders" are filled with some terrible, 2-by-4 rhetoric about "opal gates of death" and such. But in general, Griffith is on the right track in using every means for a contrast.

There is no part of the photo... —not even beauty of scene and mass—that Griffith uses more fully than the individual actor. He has put a blending of naturalis... clear art into the movies that eve... long-trained stage doesn't always ... The fine flower of his method is H... B. Walthall, an actor who brings ... tinction to a far from imposing face... figure, spirit to an art where players ... too apt to rely on vapid "dignity," and a quick co-ordination of the details of life in a naturalism that seems to take no account of an audience.

The confirmed playgoer may forswear all the virtues of "The Birth of a Nation" and of photoplays in general, yet he must leave them one supreme usefulness, one ultimate fitness. They can seize the silent moments. They can take those tenpest, those happiest, those sweetest seconds in life, those seconds that come between speech and link them into a whole that speaks as truly in spirit as it is physically silent.

N.Y. World Sep 14

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Republic Theatre last night began another week of its long run, as usual before a crowded house of spectators.

"The Battle Cry of Peace," the ambitious moving picture agitation in favor of military preparedness, began its first full week yesterday at the Vitagraph Theatre. Large crowds have witnessed this exciting picture play since its production last Thursday night.

~~Times~~ Sep 14 Sun

Among the successes that continue to be shown on the screens are "The Battle Cry of Peace" at the Vitagraph Theatre and "The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre.

St. Louis Daily Globe Dem Sep 6

BIRTH OF NATION DRAWING WELL AT OLYMPIC THEATER

House of Thousand Candles in Movies Is Shown at New Grand Central.

D. W. Griffith's photo dramatic spectacle, the Birth of a Nation, began its second week at the Olympic yesterday afternoon with every indication of increasing drawing power. This would mean that the experience in other cities is, in a way, being followed in St. Louis. The visiting management announces positive adherence to the plan, according to which the Birth of a Nation is not to be exhibited in the smaller cities near St. Louis, and never anywhere save in first-class theaters.

A marked feature of yesterday's showings was the improvement in the accompanimental music. This synchronized almost perfectly with the reel and moved considerably to the enjoyment. The big orchestra was in concert pitch and the patriotic tunes, when the big cities were shown, rang out most ...ntly. The projection of the ... where Lee surrenders to ... a slower tempo, giv... tter opportunity ... study of a solemn ...

Yesterd... within three ho... inter-mission. ...tinee promises ...

Bulletin Sep 11

The interest shown by attendances during the first week's engagement of "The Birth of the Nation" at the Forrest testifies to the fact that it is one of the most remarkable films, not only in the subject matter, but in artistic production as well, that has ever been put before the local public. The wonders that David W. Griffith, the producer, has wrought with the camera irrespective of the thrilling, gripping story and the imposing spectacle that it conveys, make it seem like a great advance upon the technique of the "movie" studio. Then, too, the accessories employed, including a large symphony orchestra, give it a character and distinction that are all its own. It is apparently destined for a run duplicating those in other cities.

Telegraph Sep 11

Heard in Filmdom.

J. J. McCarthy, who is well known in the motion picture circles of this city, during his present short visit has proved to the amazement of several prominent personages what can be accomplished in this unlimited field. Mr. McCarthy is the general manager of the Epoch Producing Corporation with which D. W. Griffith is intimately associated, and their interests are also closely interwoven with the Triangle Film Company. Some "big doings," which will shortly occur in the motion picture field, were forecasted more than once by Mr. McCarthy.

SEPT. 5, 1915
PHILADELPHIA (Pa.) INQUIRER

'BIRTH OF A NATION' OPENS AT FORREST

Film Depicting Civil War and Reconstruction Days Stirring and Spectacular

Melodramatic Tinge to Story Filled With Incidents of Historical and Dramatic Interest

David W. Griffith's much-discussed film production of "The Birth of a Nation," which stands as one of the biggest achievements in the field of motion picture drama, had its initial showing in the city last night before a large audience at the Forrest Theatre, and incidentally ushered in the season of 1915 and 1916 at this playhouse.

A successful application for an injunction was made earlier in the day to prevent Director of Public Safety Porter from stopping the exhibition. The injunction is operative for five days. The film drama which is in two parts depicts certain incidents of the Civil War and the reconstruction period which followed the conclusion of the great conflict. The romance of the gallant Colonel Ben Cameron, of the Confederate army, and Elsie Stoneman, daughter of the leader of the House of Representatives as he is programmed and his eldest son, Phil Stoneman, and Colonel Cameron's eldest sister furnish much of the motif of the story. Interwoven with it are the doings of some of the historic personages of the time, President Lincoln, Generals Grant and Lee and many pathetic and stirring scenes such as the battles before Petersburg, the surrender of General Lee, the assassination of President Lincoln in Ford's Theatre, the plots and counterplots of the carpet baggers and their enemies the KuKlux Klan and many other scenes of dramatic and historical interest.

This, as will be recognized, forms material for an interesting and dramatic story, and a series of scenes that allow of big ensemble effects and moving characterization. A resume of the picture as a whole cannot help but place it as the largest achievement thus far in the field of moving picture drama, both from the standpoint of size, photographic art and ensemble and stage effects. The individual characterization is by no means the smallest part of the production and the work as a whole is well up to the best standards of motion picture acting. Of particular merit was the work of Henry Walthall as Colonel Cameron, Miriam Cooper and Mae Marsh, as the elder and younger sister respectively, Josephine Crowell and Spottiswood Aitken as the father and mother. Ralph Lewis and William Gish as Representatives Stoneman and daughter and George Seigmann as Silas Lynch, the leader of the carpet baggers. Faithful pictorial depictions of Generals Grant and Lee were shown by Donald Crisp and Howard Gaye respectively.

Throughout the film story Mr. Griffith's attention to small details to make his story effective is noticeable, while the larger scenes are distinguished more by their expert handling of large bodies of people and properties and centring of attention on the salient features than by mere mass. The photography is crystal clear and artistic in its finish. The careful attention paid to securing historical accuracy both as to furnishings, costuming and locale is another commendable feature.

Praise, however, must be extended chiefly to the spectacular side of the film as the story, while containing many moments that are touching, dramatic and stirring is necessarily episodical in its nature. The scenes of the reconstruction period adapted largely from Rev. Thomas Dixon's story of "The Clansman," are like the incidents of that book in a large degree melodramatic and overdone and fall below the dignity and effectiveness of the first half of the drama, despite the fact that there is a large basis of historical fact. The orchestral accompaniment was an element which lent much atmosphere to the production.

Times

Sun Sep 12/15

LIBERTY THEATRE—When D. W. Griffith brought "The Birth of a Nation" to the Liberty Theatre the record run there had been made by "The Spring Maid," which ran for twenty-eight weeks. The wonderful picture has passed that period and is still going strong with every prospect that twice as much time will still be covered.

St. Louis Republic Sep 6

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION," the most [illegible] produced, began its second week at the [illegible] to large crowds, both afternoon and night. The Griffith masterpiece, the principal [illegible] South during the Civil War and reconstruction [illegible] visitors to the city. It is billed extensively within a radius of 100 miles of St. Louis. Daily matinees are given at 2:15 p. m. [illegible]

National
New Flat Back Prescription Books
Patented June 7, 1910
FULL DUCK
Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

Number	Heavy Manilla Paper
466	Demy Folio	90 leaves
468	Demy Folio	150 leaves
470	Medium Folio	90 leaves
★ 472	Medium Folio	[illegible]

Philadelphia Ledger

Date ..

...duced "The ...rth of a Nation"

...D. W. GRIFFITH.

...ndless work to produce a big ...ure. There is also endless de... me illustrate by the concrete ...e of "The Birth of a Nation." ...mes the scenario or written out... the plot. In this case there was ...vious stage play. If we are wise, ...orget that as much as we can, for ...motion picture is a novelizing or ...ory-telling form, not strictly a stage form; it is epic rather than dramatic; much of the work is of the great indoors. We have a period of history to cover, the scenes of a wide territory to revivify. Therefore, we must prepare the locale as well as the actors—the tasks of the landscape artist and, in some sense, of the civil engineer are before us. For a month the actors rehearse without the camera.

And now South Carolina in Reconstruction days is measurably before our eyes. Elsewhere the battle backgrounds of the Civil War are springing into being, helped by expert advice of old "vets" and modern West Pointers. The costumes, settings and documents are laboriously prepared for the facsimile historical scenes like those of the Emancipation Proclamation, the Appomattox surrender and the Lincoln assassination. By the way, ...4 "Lincoln actors" were rehearsed before the right Lincoln was found! This was because I demand "soul" of the photoplay star, and for this scene Lincoln was the star part. The Blue and the Grey, the Southern white gentry and the colored contingent all have been drilled under their respective leaders. And then film making begins.

At an early stage of the work—after the rough outlines have been filled in—the scenario is thrown away. The building and the rebuilding of the story, the piecing of intimate bits and the discarding of the useless go right on while we are living the history, so to speak, from day to day. Nearly 23 miles of pictures—...0,000 feet of film—are taken. And how ...uch of these are used? At the finale ... discover that we have thrown away ...ht-tenths of our product—we have re-The ...ining 26,000 feet, or, say, five miles of ...h ...ecutive story. But that is twice too ...a Na... We condense, condense, condense. ...tion in... end of two months more of hard ...s emp... we have edited "The Birth of a ...ternoon ... to 12,000 or 13,000 feet—two and a ...ere we... ...lles—or, in theatre wise, two hours ...ot only ... minutes' stage entertainment.—...he enthr... ...ll by the photoplay Vogue,

The story ...
Dixon's "Th... been care... depicting ...
nation ...
question ...
builded ... battle ... istic is ...
...o the ...
an actu... actment. Bu...
ive series of ...
the assassi...
Onlookers ... with horro...
exclamatio...
was shown ...
veritably ... achieved ...

...so many things to admire ...David Griffith's production of ...th of a Nation" that one view-...e picture is quite insufficient to ...One thing, for example, whose ...ight be appreciated by a cas-...tator without in the least ...the cause, is his almost un-...gift of composition.

...iffith," said a prominent artist, ...ps his figures like an artist in ...water color rather than like a ...rector. I don't know whether ...studied perspective, composition ...harmony or not, but anyhow his ...ictures to my mind have the ...quality as those of the great art-

...s remark was occasioned particu-...from watching Mr. Griffith as-...ble the multitude in the scenes of ...r and peace in "The Birth of a Na-...n." In the scene representing the fu-...re brotherhood of love and peace the ...ffect of distance is obtained by con-...structing two stages with rising steps, ...one near the camera and the other re-...moved about 100 feet. Between the two ...stages there is a hollow. The principals ...are stationed on the near stage, then ...comes the intervening hollow, and ...finally the more distant features of the ...background show on the second or ...more remote platform.

In striking contrast is Mr. Griffith's ...treatment of the contrasting theme of ...misery of war. Wan, skeleton-like ...figures are selected. Men and women ...are strewn about the stage ... the ...piled-up victims of a battle ... Bodies, ...legs and arms and (as it were) shreds ...of human beings are inextricably ...mixed. Woe stamps itself upon ... picture as joy radiates from the other.

Griffith's method of making the scene caused one artist to nickname it a "human salad." But that is not how it impresses the spectators, who sense the emotional appeal beneath the bizarre effect.

Philadelphia Inquirer Sep ...

...the ...
...ton, ...
...rester...
Contin... theatrical entertainment in recent ...I wer... has caused more widespread inter-...ed, ... than "The Birth of a Nation," the ...close ...sterwork of one of the foremost motion ...Alde... later ure producers, David W. Griffith, now ...ton ...he Forrest. The playhouse has been ...stand...ded at each of the two daily presenta-...ceede... during the past week and at the first ...that ...ing of the film in this city on Satur-...young... of last week there was a record at-...condi...nce. No detail has been slighted to ...for perfect projection of the story ...return... gives visually so complete and accu-...war. ...n idea of the stress and upheavals ...least ... were essential to the cementing of ...States of the Union into an indissolu-...for ...nation. And with it all there is a ro-...man...ce, with love triumphant, after many ...Fres... ...tburnings. The story is founded upon ...to ...e Clansman" by Rev. Thomas Dixon, ...me ... in the telling of the tale one sees as ...to ...gh actually happening historic events ...the greatest moment. Each incident is ...agreeabl... ...ashed with music, original or care-...dra... ...great... selected and played by a special or-...folk... ...a. Further worth of the picture is ...acting of a notable cast headed by ...B. Waithall.

SCENE FROM "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Ev. Ledger Sep ..

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" FOREST.

~~St. Louis Daily Globe Dem.~~

Sep 12 Pittsburg Dispatch

FITCHBURG (Mass.) SENTINEL
SEPT. 9, 1915

BIRTH OF A NATION

Special Car for Ayer After Saturday Evening Performance at the Cumings

On account of the great number of people from Ayer, North Leominster, Shirley and other places wishing to attend an evening performance of "The birth of a nation" at the Cumings theater, arrangements have been made with President W. W. Sargent to run a special "Birth of a nation" car to those places after the exhibition on Saturday night. It requires about three hours to properly present this wonderful production and people from the surrounding towns have had difficulty in getting home at night. Leominster bound and other cars are held for the performance each night and now the special car for Ayer and Shirley will accommodate the others. The seat sale from the towns is remarkable and shows that "The birth of a nation" has a drawing power superior to any other attraction ever shown here. That isn't surprising as "The birth of a nation" is a wonderful attraction in every way. It tells certain events of history in a broad, realistic and authentic manner. It gives its authority for the picturization of certain scenes and incidents, it traces the life of the South before, during and after the war, and pictures in a striking manner the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan against the carpet-baggers and others who abused the sudden power given to them. There is great historical, educational and instructive value to be gained from this exhibition, while the two love stories and the stirring battle scenes add greatly to the pleasure of witnessing the production. It will be seen for the last times tomorrow and Saturday.

Cleveland Sep ..

Woman Wear Sep ..

Liberty.

On Tuesday night, D. W. Griffith's great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" passes the 500th presentation in New York City. The run continues the one outstanding success of the old year which has kept right on through the summer without a break. The attendance last week was the fourth largest of the 27 weeks that it has been on Broadway.

NIXON—"The Birth of a Nation," ... film spectacle ... 3,000 horses and ... 12,000 feet of film, ... Most wonderful motion picture show in the world.

N.Y. World Sep 14

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Republic Theatre last night began another week of its long run, as usual before a crowded house of spectators. "The Battle Cry of Peace," the anti-war picture agitation in favor of national preparedness, began its first full week ... at the Vitagraph Theatre. Large crowds have ... this exciting picture play since its ... Thursday night.

Sun Sep 14 Sun

Among the successes that continue to be shown on the screens are "The Battle Cry of Peace" at the Vitagraph Theatre and "The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre.

St. Louis Daily Globe Dem Sep 6

BIRTH OF NATION DRAWING WELL AT OLYMPIC THEATER

House of Thousand Candles in Movies Is Shown at New Grand Central.

D. W. Griffith's photo dramatic ... cle, the Birth of a Nation, ... ond week at the Olympic ... noon with every ... This would ... the experience in other cities ... being followed in St. Louis. ... management announces ... ence to the plan, according to ... Birth of a Nation is not to ... in the smaller cities near ... never anywhere save in first-... ters.

A marked feature of yesterday's ... ings was the improvement in ... panimental music. This synch... most perfectly with the ... considerably to the enjoyment. ... orchestra was in concert ... patriotic tunes, when the ... shown, rang out most ... projection of the ... surrenuers to ... tempo, giv... portunity ... a solemn ...

Yesterday ... three ho... mission, ... promises ...

Sun Sep 9

POLICE FILM DEMURRER FAILS

Injunction Against Interference With "Birth of Nation" Continued.

The demurrer filed by the Police Department against the temporary injunction preventing them interfering with the production of "The Birth of the Nation" at the Olympic Theater, was overruled by Judge Hennings in the Circuit Court yesterday.

The court announced that the injunction would be continued until next Wednesday when the case would be heard on its merits. The motion picture drama is opposed by negroes who declare it tends to provoke prejudice against them.

Sun Sep 9

...d W. Griffith's stu... speec... "The Birth of a Na... not ... in this city in an ... eater ... he Nixon, nor will it ... any ... theater within 300 ... Pitts-... With an orchest... with ... ads of effects ... ith nearly ... ricians, effect men... ers re-... e produce this wo... ful ... American history ... ance. ... be impossible to a... it in any ... largest and highest ... theaters. ... opening perform... in the ... September "The B... of a Na... been seen by eve... people

Pittsburg Dispatch Sep 10

It is estimated that before "The Birth of a Nation" has exhausted its earning capacity it will be seen by 10,000,000 people in America. Later on it will exceed these figures in the other countries of the world. It is conservatively estimated that it will ultimately earn ... $5,000,000.

National
New Flat Back Prescription Books

Patented June 7, 1910

FULL DUCK

Without Index, Ruling, Paging or Title

Number	Heavy Manilla Paper			Size
466	Demy	Folio	90 leaves	½ X 16
468	Demy	Folio	150 leaves	11½ X 16
470	Medium	Folio	90 leaves	13 X 18
★ 472	Medium	Folio	[illegible] leaves	13 X 18

BIRTH OF A NATION
SCRAPBOOK #1
COPY #2

Please include the Xerox copies in the microfilm

New York

A Matter for the Trade.

It has take[illegible] ...ng time f[illegible] ...otion picture trade, in its entirety, [illegible] realize the dangers which threaten it on every hand as [illegible] advocates of localized censorship gain in force and in[illegible]ence. Now, however, there seems to be a genuine awakening in many quarters, [illegible]s evidenced by the meeting of representatives of the leading manufacturing [illegible]ers in New York last week, when the film producers actually united for the [illegible] time in the history of the industry; the amalgamation of the three New Yo[illegible] exhibitors' organizations into one body on Thursday of this week; the mass m[illegible]ting of the Pennsylvania film men to protest against the local censorship co[illegible]itions, and other activities which are reported from various quarters.

The alarm which has spread through the trade is well founded. After favorable reporting of the Smith-Hughes Censorship bill by the House Committee on Education, there comes from Washington the news that the Supreme Court has confirmed the legality of State Censorship in Kansas and Ohio. There are at least eight censorship bills pending in different States. The decision of the Supreme Court means that the sponsors of the bill will be able to have them put in force without delay if they can engineer the passage of the statutes. And the passage of the bills will no doubt be urged with more effect since Federal sanction has been given these already in force.

One fact, above all else, must be urged upon film men in contemplating the possibilities of the losses to be sustained by them if these various censor laws are passed. In the first place, a Federal Censor Board will in no way eliminate the activities of State boards; in the second place, the creation of State boards will not put an end to the local censor. If the Smith-Hughes bill becomes law, the exhibitors and exchange men doing business in communities where State boards are created will find themselves subject to the whim of Federal, State and local authorities!

It does not require a very hectic imagination to picture the result, but one recent event, which occurred without the added complexity of Federal interference, will serve to show the possibilities:

After receiving the indorsement of the Los Angeles Board of Censorship, "The Birth of a Nation" was ordered off the screen by the City Council, against the wishes of the Mayor himself. A series of injunctions and threatened police raids followed, which finally ended in the showing of the picture.

Nothing in the proposed statutes will tend to diminish this evil, but will rather increase it.

If, then, the industry is to save itself from great monetary losses occasioned by the conflicting orders of censoring bodies, and is to preserve its integrity as an industry free from the dictates of Tom, Dick and Harry, everything in the power of manufacturer, exchange man and exhibitor must be done to fight the national and local bills now pending.

Individual manufacturers and individual exhibitors and the members of the league have fought valiantly against much inimical legislation. This is not a matter for individuals or specific organizations. The present censorial hysteria can only be successfully coped with by the united front of the Motion Picture industry.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" CENSORSHIP CASE
MARCH 28
LIBRARY OF CONGRESS

The Morning Telegraph Feb. 28-1915

Several of the Current Attractions Have Now Passed the Second Century Mark.

By RENWOLD WOLF.

On Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theatre, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York a photoplay entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel and play, "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith has been known for years as the foremost producer of motion picture successes in history. As to this is one of entertainment. His present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a medium of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his power in this can be judged. The production, he employed the time to its making, the employment of 18,000 people and many hundreds of thousands of dollars. A complete and time needed effects. A complete score has been written for the production by Joseph Carl Breil. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its tragic progress is followed to sudden climax in the Civil War. Its bearing upon the history of the United States, in the days of the abolition movement, cannot [illegible]

Peggy Shannon will be seen at the Liberty Theatre next week when the Griffith film, "The Birth of a Nation," is released.

BILLBOARD

From

Cincinnati Ohio

Address

PETERS WIT[illegible]

New York featured v[illegible] debut in [illegible]

D. W. GRIFFITH

movie, as well as f of Mr. Herrick in s at the ou
e that mo
the " long to th ildre

MAE MARSH.
In "The Birth of a Nation," Lib
Theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" Shown Before Statesmen

D. W. Griffith, whose spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, has today returned from Washington, D. C., where, on Friday night before the National Press Club, he gave a private exhibition of this wonderful picture. Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court was the guest of honor. Other distinguished personages present were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight members of the United States Senate and about fifty Representatives. The statesmen were accompanied by the ladies of their respective parties. After the presentation of the picture Mr. Griffith was showered with congratulations by the newspaper men and their distinguished guests.

Next Thursday night Mr. Griffith, in recognition of his remarkable achievements with this picture, will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club at their "Inside Dope" [illegible] and will deliver a talk along the lines inspired by the event upon the development of the art of motion pictures in this country.

Date_____

YORK GOSSIP

The Birth of a Nation, First of $2 Movies, to Be Shown Monday.

Special Dispatch to The Star.

New York, February 20. New York is to see the most $2 moving-picture show Monday, and Broadway is nighthere, where theaters have been satiated with pretty girls and fascinating toes for a hoon or two are wondering if the promoters can get away with it.

By an arrangement with Klaw Erlanger, D. W. Griffith will take over the Forty-second Street Theater for the production, which is The Birth of a Nation. It is a complete working out of the contributing themes in American history on which Thomas Dixon founded his novel and play, The Clansman. Over 18,000 were employed in making the production.

The promoters say it is "the most stupendous undertaking of the kind the world has ever known."

Evening Star Feb 20 1915

PICKING LINCOLN ACTOR HARD JOB

Joseph Henabery Chosen for "Birth of a Nation."

In preparing for the spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," which will be given next Wednesday at the Liberty Theatre, D. W. Griffith, the director of this production, experienced great difficulty in finding a character to portray Abraham Lincoln.

Over twenty applicants were thoroughly studied before Joseph Henabery was finally selected. In the research prior to the making of the picture it was found that there were fifty photographs of Lincoln extant and that all varied according to the expression of the President at the time they were taken.

As authorities differed materially upon many questions of his characteristic poses it will be seen how difficult it was to get a player who would embody the different features of Lincoln in a manner that would be acceptable to all.

Several applicants looked ideal at

From TIM
Address: Washi

Birth of Nation Has Premiere Here

Members of Supreme Court, Congress, and Diplomatic Corps Guests of Press Club

Members of the Supreme Court, the Senate, the House, and the Diplomatic Corps were present last night at the presentation, under the auspices of the National Press Club, of the spectacular motion drama, "The Birth of the Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." Owing to the limitations of the Press Club quarters, the "picture" was given its first public showing in the big ball room of the Raleigh Hotel.

Chief Justice White, of the Supreme Court, and Mrs. White, in whose honor the premiere was given, occupied reserved seats. There were five hundred in the audience, including members of the press and of Washington official life, and they cheered and applauded throughout the three hours required to show the drama.

David W. Griffith, the producer, asked that no review of the drama be given until it has its New York premiere March 3, when it will be shown to the general public for the first time. Thursday night the picture was shown at the White House.

It took Mr. Griffith eight months to produce this drama, at a cost said to be $500,000. Eighteen thousand people were used in staging the spectacular features and battle scenes and more than 2,000 horses were used in the charges of the Ku Klux Klan.

From HERALD
Address: Washington, D. C.
Date FEB 20 1915
Establis

CHIEF JUSTICE AND SENATORS AT "MOVIE"

Distinguished Gathering Attends First Production of "The Birth of a Nation."

David W. Griffith, who has been called the greatest producer of motion pictures, last night sat in the big ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel and saw thrown on the screen for the first time in public his epic production, "The Birth of a Nation." Beside Mr. Griffith sat Thomas Dixon, the author, upon whose book, "The Clansman," Mr. Griffith based his story of the film play.

In reserved seats nearer the screen sat Chief Justice White, of the Supreme Court of the United States, and Mrs. White, in whose honor the premiere of "The Birth of a Nation" was staged. Behind the Chief Justice sat a large part of the membership of the Senate and House, a sprinkling of members of the Diplomatic Corps, scores of high officials.

Because "The Birth of a Nation" saw its public birth under auspices of the National Press Club, there were scores of newspaper men present, but of other guests would include names of the National Capital society folk. The large room was filled to capacity and the gathering was doubtless the most distinguished that ever saw motion pictures unreeled.

It took Griffith eight months to produce the play. Its cost was $500,000. This figure may be better understood when it is known 2,000 horses were employed in making the picture.

Nev

OPLE
York City

FEB 17 1915

K. & E. GIVE LIBERTY OVER TO PICTURES

n arrangement completed with Klaw and Erlanger, D. W. Griffith over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second Street at the end onth for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle, "The a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately fol- e run of Otis Skinner in this house.

Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of the contribu- nes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his novel and play, "The Clansman." Where the play proper touched n phases of the reconstruction period in the South, the Griffith t by means of the marvelously enlarged new art of motion pic- braces the entire historical relationship of the slavery question to lopment of American history. After arrangements had been made omas Dixon to utilize his well-known story, the author suggested the n name so that the scope and tremendous appeal of the enlarged uld be more comprehensively covered in the title.

taking of the Liberty by Mr. Griffith and his associates realizes advance in the art of motion pictures and brings theatregoers up 2 moving picture. This is the first time, it is claimed, that plans tually been laid to bring this about.

e Birth of a Nation" will be given in New York upon a scale which he dawn of greater accomplishments in the theatre than would en deemed possible a year ago. Over 18,000 people were employed making of the great spectacle and a specially written score that es the various themes of the story will be played as an accompani- the production by a symphony orchestra of forty pieces.

Griffith.

By an arre[illegible] Erlanger late Satur[illegible] Griffith, will [illegible] the Liberty theater in [illegible] Forty-second stre[illegible] York, at the end of this month for the purpose [illegible] senting there his great spectacle "The Birt[illegible] Nation."

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete w[illegible] out of all the contributory themes in Americ[illegible] tory upon which Thomas Dixon founded his [illegible] novel and play "The Clansman." Where the pla[illegible] proper touched only upon phases of the reconstruction period in the South, the Griffith treatment by means of the marvelously enlarged new art of motion picture embraces the entire historical relationship of the slavery question to the development of American history. After arrangements had been made with Thomas Dixon to utilize his well known story, the author suggested the change in name so that the scope and tremendous appeal of the enlarged story could be more comprehensively covered in the title.

Scene from the Griffith feature "The Battle of a Nation," in which the Ku Klux Klan is seen arriving to quell a riot in the negro section.

The taking of the Liberty by Mr. Griffith and his associates realizes another advance in the art of motion pictures and brings theatergoers up to the $2 moving picture.

Over 18,000 people were employed in the making of the great spectacle and a specially written score that elaborates the various themes of the story will be played as an accompaniment to the production by a symphony orchestra of 40 pieces.

Eve. Tribune Feb. 13-1915

ws of the Theatres

Mr. Barker Talks About Scenery of Midsummer Night's Dream."
D. W. Griffith's Film Production, th of a Nation," to Be Shown at te House To-night.

D. W. Griffith's great film production, "The Birth of a Nation," is to be shown in Washington at the White House to-night to President Wilson and his Cabinet. The story is founded upon Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" and starts a run on March 3 at the Liberty Theatre at regular theatre prices.

Evening Star Feb. 18-1915

[illegible] Petition Signed by 28,000 in [illegible] Parts of Country--Wilson [illegible] to See Moving Pictures.

President to See Movies.

[illegible]

Eve. The Morning Telegraph Feb. 17-1915

PRESIDENT SEES PHOTO-PLAY

Picture Based on Dixon Novel Is Shown at White House.

(Special Dispatch to The Morning Telegraph.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—President Wilson's daughters gave for the benefit of their father and several members of the Cabinet a private moving picture exhibition in the East Room of the White House to-night. The picture shown was "The Birth of a Nation," and is based on a book by Thomas Nixon, the novelist. It showed the progress of the negro race from days of slavery down to the present.

Because the President is still in mourning, no invitations were issued. His daughters had the picture presented as a means of diverting the President from the cares of office. The picture was thrown on the white wood panels of the room.

Washington Post Feb. 18-1915

MOVIES AT THE WHITE HO[illegible]

Pictures Based on Dixon's Cla[illegible] Shown in East Room.

President Wilson and several me[illegible] bers of the cabinet and their families last night attended a motion pic[illegible] exhibition in the east room of [illegible] White House. The picture shown [illegible] entitled "The Birth of a Nation," [illegible] is based on the book, "The Cla[illegible] man," by Thomas Dixon, the no[illegible]

Owing to the fact that the Pr[illegible] dent is in mourning no in[illegible] were issued. Mr. Wilson's daugh[illegible] arranged the exhibition [illegible] of diverting his attention from [illegible] care of office for an evening.

Evening Globe Feb. 17-1915

... will be played as an accompani-
... production by a symphony orchestra of forty pieces.

The Washington Times

News of the Theatres

Mr. Barker Talks About Scenery of "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

D. W. Griffith's Film Production, "Birth of a Nation," to Be Shown at White House To-night.

D. W. Griffith's great film production, "The Birth of a Nation," is to be shown in Washington at the White House to-night to President Wilson and his Cabinet. The story is founded upon Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman" and starts a run on March 3 at the Liberty Theatre at regular theatre prices.

... of the marvelous ... ture embraces the ... slavery question ... tory. After arrang... Thomas Dixon to ... author suggested the ... scope and tremendous ... could be more compre...

The taking of the ... associates realizes an ... motion pictures and br... moving picture.

Over 18,000 peo... making of the great sp... score that elaborates th... will be played as an acc... by a symphony orchestra

The Evening Star
Feb. 18-1915
Washington, D.C.

...sent Petition Signed by 28,000 in All Parts of Country—Wilson to See Moving Pictures.

President to See Movies.

President Wilson and his family, with probably a few members of the cabinet, tonight will witness, in the east room of the White House, what has several times been described as the greatest piece of moving picture drama in the world. It is "The Birth of a Nation," by D. W. Griffith. The exhibition will be the first ever made this side of the Pacific coast, the play having had its initial performance at Los Angeles.

The White House performance is to be strictly informal, no invitations having been issued, and only members of the family and a few intimate friends will witness it. Preparations ... formance have been made ...

... interest in the play, ... contain 18,000 feet of ... through three hours ... the great lesson of ... The story is based ... Clansman." Dixon ... President Wilson ...

The Morning Telegraph
Feb. 19 1915

PRESIDENT SEES PHOTO-PLAY

Picture Based on Dixon Novel Is Shown at White House.

(Special Dispatch to The Morning Telegraph.)

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—President Wilson's daughters gave for the benefit of their father and several members of the Cabinet a private moving picture exhibition in the East Room of the White House to-night. The picture shown was "The Birth of a Nation," and is based on a book by Thomas Nixon, the novelist. It showed the progress of the negro race from days of slavery down to the present.

Because the President is still in mourning, no invitations were issued. His daughters had the picture presented as a pleasant diversion for the President from the cares of office. The picture was thrown on the white wood panels of the room.

Washington ...

MOVIES ...

Pictures B... Sh...

President ... bers of the ... last night ... exhibition i... White Hous... entitled "Th... is based on ... man," by T...

Owing to ... dent is in ... were issued. ... arranged the ... of diverting ... care of office ...

Evening Globe-Feb. 19-1915

PRESIDENT ACTS IN WHITE HOUSE MOVIES

GLOBE BUREAU, 7
WASHINGTON, Feb. 19.

President Wilson, members of the White House family, some of the cabinet officials and their families, last night attended a moving picture exhibition in the East Room. It was not a social event because the President is still in mourning.

The exhibition was that of "The Birth of a Nation." The initial performance was in Los Angeles. The basis of the production is Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." Mr. Dixon was a schoolmate of Mr. Wilson, and is a close friend. He was present at the exhibition, which was pronounced to be of exceptional merit.

N-Feb. 19-15

From EVENING SUN
Address: Baltimore, Md.
Date FEB 19 1915

PRESIDENT SEES "MOVIES"

Only Guest At Daughters' Show In The White House.

Washington, Feb. 19.—President Wilson was the only guest at the "movie" show given by his daughters ... at the White House last night. ... Nation," ... based on ... Clansman" by Thomas Dixon. ...

Establ...

Moving Picture News and Views

By FREDERICK JAMES SMITH.

G. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a tion" will be the talk of Broadway r Wednesday's premiere at the ty. That's the opinion of those he know."

Eve Telegram-Mar. 2-1915

day night, in the Liberty D. W. Griffith will present for me in New York a photographic titled "The Birth of a Nation."

N. Y. Star Mar. 3-15

REAL SUR
AS 18,000
"BIRTH OF A

Miles of Trenches,
Real Shells Costing Fired From Real

The realism of war w such an extent in the David W. Griffith's "The Nation" that a regular hospital corps of a chi four assistant surgeons a orderlies accompanied th
This was no mere decora
but the grim necessity of campaign.
Eighteen thousand men aged in a march over fift rough country representing of the Battle of Petersburg pomattox campaign, and struction days) the North a Carolina raids of the clansme had to be pitched nightly, ariat supplied and we
Trenches extended for miles.
Cannon were loaded not w

H. C. DANFORTH

LOS ANGELES ACTIVITIES

Los Angeles, Feb. 20.—Al. H. Woods joined his wife, who is wintering here, recently, and brought with him from New York a number of plays which Oliver Morosco will try out in stock for later New York production. They are "Montmartre," a French play by Pierre Frondal; "The Guilty Man," a dramatization of a Coppee novel by Charles K[illegible]; "The New Shylock," a drama, and "I Want Money," a comedy.

As startling as the production of "The Clansman" is, more startling still is the phenomenal success this latest masterpiece of D. W. Griffith is achieving at Clune's Auditorium where it is being shown in Los Angeles. The seat sale, as far as a motion picture is concerned, was unprecedented, the house being sold out days ahead at prices ranging from twenty-five to seventy-five cents with box seats at a dollar. There was a line-up at the box office from early morn to late at night that would make a Sarah Bernhardt premiere line-up at the box-office look like thirty cents. W. H. Clune is to be congratulated on the wonderful advertising he gave the film, his advertising bill running easily into the thousands. Considerable free advertising was handed the film by the City Council, which sought to stop the showing after the local Board of Censors had passed favorably on the film, on account of several local colored people had protested the showing of it on the grounds that it would stir up race prejudice. The City Council ordered Chief Sebastian to stop the showing, and the latter, notifying the police commissioners and the Mayor, sought to have it stopped without any summary instructions from that source. The city elections, which are coming on, may have something to do with this, both the Council and the chief having shown a marked desire to please the colored element, the Council having even threatened to get the scalps of the censors for having refused to censor the film contrary to the Council's order. The question is: how are the moving picture people going to view the situation? They have the power to say something at the coming city election and the Council and Chief Sebastian, who is to run for Mayor, may find much to their sorrow that it pays better not to antagonize the film industry too much, just for the sake of getting the colored vote.

Widows company early in the season.

Globe, March

Moving Picture News and Views

By FREDERICK JAMES SMITH.

"The Birth of a Nation" to-n[illegible]

Eve. Sun-Mar. 2, 1915

A special performance yesterday of "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacular Griffith film that is to be presented publicly in the Liberty Theatre on Wednesday, served to introduce the big photo play to a throng of theatrical and professional folk. It evoked enthusiasm in tears to an unexpected quantity and stirred the supposedly blase crowd into calling Mr. Griffith out for a speech.

Henry Wal[illegible]

Citizen-Mar. 4-15

BIRTH OF A NATION"

AS 18,000

of these thrilling battle whole villages were coat- to give them the appear- ability.

nd episodes pictured the on of President Lincoln at ere. Not only was the ual details of the crime shown, t also the whole interior of the atre, with its audience assembled d the performance of "Our Ameri- n Cousin" taking place on the stage. This vivid representation of a great national calamity had a curious effect upon the night's audience. As the pictures were unreeled they sat in subdued silence, but, when the tension ended, broke forth in prolonged applause in recognition of the pictures' uncanny realism.

Mr. Griffith drew abundantly upon his own imagination in supplying the pictorial episodes of Mr. Dixon's story, which followed a novel too well known to require description now. Such scenes included the fall of Petersburg, Lee's surrender at Appomattox, the rituals of the Ku-Klux Klan and incidents in the South during the reconstruction period after the Civil War. If anything can justify Mr. Dixon's story of racial hatreds, that thing is Mr. Griffith's pictorial representation of it, which makes "Intolerance," the most remarkable picture play shown in this country up to this time, seem almost insignificant by comparison.

An excellent musical accompaniment added to the thrill of the war scenes and intensified the romance of the love episodes. The entire production is on a scale that will give moving picture enthusiasts a new chance to marvel.

the spectacular military events of the war, including views of Sherman's march to the sea, that are not only remarkable for their effect of verity, but also are wonderful as pictorial compositions.

Petersburg Fight.

The trench fighting before Petersburg is also represented by a series of pictures that are simply astounding in their reproduction of warfare as we know it in books and war pictures, photographs that have come from Europe of the present war. [illegible] for thrilling horror [illegible] effect as those Mr. Griffith composed and which were "fought" under his direction with the aid of the military officers who helped him with their technical knowledge.

The assassination of President Lincoln, which brings the first part to close, also shows some extraordinary pictures of the interior of Ford's Theatre with "Our American Cousin" being acted, the movements of the actors on the stage, of the throng comprising the audience suggesting nothing but a great tragedy itself, with never a trace of artificiality anywhere in the pictures.

The second part, with Reconstruction scenes and the machinations of Austin Stoneman and his mulatto satellite Silas Lynch; the riding of the Ku Klux Klan and the saving of both the Cameron and Elsie Stoneman by this organization, is equally remarkable for effectiveness as pictures, and dramatic representations of the complete story. The assembling of masked riders and their riding through the country and into the town of Piedmont had the spectators of the [illegible] on their tiptoes with excitement; the melodramatic trooper riding in for reprieve at the last moment received heartier applause than those pictured riders as they rescued Cameron and Elsie Stoneman in the nick of time.

Excellent Acting.

Of the actors who posed and love and fought and suffered before the camera [illegible] most distinguished by their [illegible] dence representations [illegible] the Colonel Ben Cameron; Mae Marsh as Flora Cameron; Josephine Crowell as the Mrs. Cameron; Ralph Lewis, as Stoneman; Lillian Gish, the Elsie, and George Seigmann, the Silas Lynch.

To put the spectators in the proper historical mood the head usher was attired in a Northern Army officer's uniform, private soldiers of the civil war period stood on guard and the girl ushers were dressed in 1860 costumes that were charming indeed.

The theatre was jammed with an assemblage that applauded the pictures and the patriotic sentiments on the screen with tireless enthusiasm and vigor. There could be no question, from the manner in which the piece was received, that it made a profoundly moving effect on those who saw it.

From DRAMATIC MIRROR

Address: New York City

Date

WATERS' NEW JOB

Will Head New Exchange Concern Organized by Klaw and Erlanger

Percy Waters, now general manager of the General Film Company, is to be the executive head of a new exchange circuit being organized by Klaw and Erlanger to handle feature films. For the present Mr. Waters will continue his connection with the General Film Company, though he told a representative of THE MIRROR yesterday, "eventually the new organization will require all of my attention."

Though little has been learned concerning the new Klaw and Erlanger organization, it is stated authoritatively that it has no connection with the Equitable programme, which it was at first thought was organized to represent Klaw and Erlanger's picture interests. The company of which Mr. Waters will be the head has been organized to handle extra large feature productions which will be booked in the largest Klaw and Erlanger theaters throughout the country before going to smaller theaters.

Rumor has it that David W. Griffith's production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be booked to the large Klaw and Erlanger theaters after its run at the Liberty Theater, New York, is on. It could not be learned yesterday whether this means that the Griffith production would be handled by the organization headed by Mr. Waters.

BIG MEETING RAPS SCREEN CENSORS

D. W. Griffith and Others Protest Against the Bill Creating State Board.

UNNECESSARY, HE DECLARES

Telegrams protesting against the proposed bill creating a State board of censors were sent to the Legislature at Albany yesterday by many members of the League for Political Education, as the result of a meeting held at the Cort Theatre.

Norman Hapgood, editor of Harper's Weekly; the Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; John Collier, former chairman of the National Board of Censorship; Mrs. Frederic L. Ackerman, a member of the National Board, and D. W. Griffith, director of Mutual-Reliance films and the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacle which opened at the Liberty Theatre on Wednesday night, spoke in opposition to the proposed bill and declared themselves opposed to legal censorship in any form, whether federal or state.

Mr. Griffith, the last speaker on the programme, was more radical than his predecessors, condemning censorship of mind.

"Art has its origin in a vision," said Mr. Griffith. "Whether the finished product of the idea shall take the form of literature, painting, music or the written word, it was first a vision. Therefore, the motion picture, which is an expression of that vision, should properly take rank among the arts.

"I firmly believe, as many great men have told me, that the motion picture is the greatest force for the betterment of public thought that we have. If that is so, the motion picture should be hampered by censorial restrictions.

Sentiment Is Pure.

"Sentiment would not permit the films which are intrinsically more than it will countenance the showing of plays which transgress the limits of decency too far. Should photo-plays be subject to the whims of those who are empowered to act according to their own dictates, and from whose decision the manufacturer has absolutely no appeal?

"If, however, we must have some form of supervision, I cannot conceive of a better form than that which we already have in the National Board of Censorship," continued Mr. Griffith, in paying tribute to the conscientious and discriminating work which the members of the board perform.

Mr. Griffith then went on to advocate the division of photo-plays into two groups, one to be shown to adults only, the other to be exhibited to children. For the latter classification he could readily see the advantages of careful supervision. In closing Mr. Griffith declared that local censorship was the greatest evil with which the motion picture producer has to contend.

"The manufacturer will not invest money in great films when he knows that they will be torn apart by the ignorant people whom political factions have placed in power. He knows that Ohio will object to one thing, Pennsylvania to another, Cincinnati to something else, and that by the time his film has been shown in a few States he will have nothing left."

Norman Hapgood pointed out that public morals are elastic and cannot be determined by law. He declared that the co-operation between the film manufacturers and the National Board of Censorship was an ideal example of democracy. The creation of a State board would, in his mind, be the furthering of autocracy. Mr. Hapgood declared that censorship of the sort proposed in the State Legislature was simply inadequate interference. He pointed out the ridiculous outcome of the censor movement in England as a fair example of what we can expect here.

Dr. MacFarland deplored the tendency on the part of the people to resort to legal measures in regulating moral questions and then to forget entirely the moral question at issue. He stated that the present rate of installation of motion picture outfits in churches and parish houses is only a forerunner of what will take place when the cost of the apparatus is lowered.

A Huge Undertaking.

The fact that 155 members of the present censor board found it almost impossible to cope with the work which they have to do was urged by Mrs. Ackerman as a reason for doubting that a board of three could greatly improve upon the efficiency of the present organization, which would lose its power if the smaller board were to be instituted.

A more detailed account of the facts and figures of the case, given by Mr.

(CONTINUED ON PAGE 2)

BIG MEE

H 5-5

FOR MOVIES.

League Op-

State Board.

Education at Theatre yesterday the propo rd of censorship

posed by John
S. MacFarland,
Federal Council
ist in America, produced "The

did not believe in ng picture plays or children. He should be cen-Griffith, new-e con-trol by possible" said

d that what in and Film. The ve could satisfy all

Clipper, Mar. 6-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" OPENS AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE.

On Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theatre, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York, a photographic spectacle, entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel play, "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as the foremost producer of motion picture successes in houses devoted to this style of entertainment. His present production is said to be a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a work of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his newest production can be guaged. The producer devoted eight months to its making. He employed the services of eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century, with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War, with its terrific battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the downfall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of Abraham Lincoln; the ... rail at times his ... censorship of ... of his art origin in a vision." ... Griffith. "Whether the film ... on of the ... will take the form ... ure, painting, music or the writ ... it will ... vision. Therefore, ... on picture, which is an expres ... that vision, should properly take ... among the arts.

firmly believe, as many area ... have told me, that the motion ... the greatest force for the ... public thought that we have ... that is so, the motion picture ... be hampered by censorial re ...

timent Is Pure.

timent would not permit ... films which are intrinsi ... more than it will counte ... g of plays which trans ... of decency too far. ... d photo-plays be sub ...

The creation of a State board would, in his mind, be the for being of autocracy. Mr. Hapgood declared that censorship of the sort proposed in the State Legislature was simply inadequate interference. He pointed out the ridiculous outcome of the censor movement in England as a fair example of what we can expect here.

Dr. MacFarland deplored the tendency on the part of the people to resort to legal measures in regulating moral questions and then to forget entirely the moral question at issue. He stated that the present rate of installation of motion picture outfits in churches and parish houses is only a forerunner of what will take place when the cost of the apparatus is lowered.

A Huge Undertaking.

The fact that 155 members of the present censor board found it almost impossible to cope with the work which they have to do was urged by Mrs. Ackerman as a reason for doubting that a board of three could greatly improve upon the efficiency of the present organization, which would lose its power if the smaller board were to be instituted. A more detailed account of the facts and figures of the case, given by Mr.

... lengly ... today ... Committ ... proposes ... Motion ... Bell, Con ... York, spo ... of the cri ... He declared ... posed Board ... already bein ... ful and rap ... sioner of L ... license of ... thing immor ... bers, he as ... anyway.

La

Stephen Bu ... a motion-pic ... that the law p ... necessary and ... amply sufficie ... evils as may ... films. He cri ... the bill which ... entirely for educ ... poses. "Who ... to determine tha ...

Clipper, Mar. 6-15

#5-5

5 FOR MOVIES.

on League Op- State Board.

ical Education at ... heatre yesterday ... st the proposed ... rd of censorship ressed by Jo ... S. MacFarland, ... Federal Council ... rist in America, ... produced "The ...

ld not believe in ... g picture plays ... or children. He ... should be cen- ... gazines, news- ... e censored--by ...

orship," said ... d that what ... be thrown out ... may not be ... o films. The ... ve never could ... d satisfy all."

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" OPENS AT THE LIBERTY THEATRE.

On Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theatre, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York, a photographic spectacle, entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel play, "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as the foremost producer of motion picture successes in houses devoted to this style of entertainment. His present production is said to be a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a work of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his newest production can be guaged. The producer devoted eight months to its making. He employed the services of eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century, with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War, with its terrific battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the downfall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of Abraham Lincoln; the ordeal of the Reconstruction period; the Ku Klux Klan's solution of the problem; the establishment of an everlasting peace in the end. These historic scenes are given in accurate detail. A drama of human conflicts as shown in well drawn characters, links history to romance. A review will appear in the next issue of this paper.

RIDAY, MARCH 5, 1915.

PHOTO PLAY INCIDENT AN ACTUAL HAPPENING

Spectator Tells Experience Shown in "Birth of Nation."

The incident of the young Confederate's release by President Lincoln's order in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre was verified as an actual historical event by one of the spectators last night. G. L. Mordecai of 174 West Eighty-sixth street is the man to whom it happened. After seeing the photo-play he visited D. W. Griffith's offices and told this story:

"My father, a wealthy trader of Charleston, S. C., was en ... tensive blockade running ... to the Bahama Islands. ... in the Confederate army ... honorably discharged o ... sickness. My father the ... to go as his agent to ... only channel of inte ... closed, however, when ... captured Fort Fisher, s ... gested I should slip thro ... ern lines and thence tu ... from New York.

"In civilian dress I clu ... pickets in Virginia, cro ... tomac and took stage fo ... but in the latter place I ... and thrown into prison ... erate enemy. It was ... would be court martialed ... or at best held prisoner u ... of the war. My fiancee, ... dermen Samuel Lewis of ... later acting Mayor, cam ... ington and worked in my ... with standing Secretary S ... position he caused fa ...

for one perfo with great en
The President
which is said to film, and will run or more, is due to peace it teaches.
upon Dixon's "The
was a schoolmate of
and is an intimate frien

N.Y. HERALD.

Wilson Is Daughters' Guest at Movie Show

Washington, Feb. 18.—President Wilson was the only guest at the movie show arranged by his daughters at the White House to-night. The pictures shown were based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Birth of a Nation." They showed the progress of the colored race in this country. The pictures were thrown on the white wood panels of the room.

Reproducing
shes on the hills a D. W. Griffith shows nearly miles long in federate soldiers leap shes in a long gord ge the Union breastw
ing the first, sunshin
the second and bla
d, only to recoil before ape, cannon and bayo y photographer of mag to judge, this wo
that

MISC. PIECES
BIRTH OF A NATION

MISC. PIECES
BIRTH OF A NATION

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

When General Robert E. Lee, at Appomattox, wished to make some marginal notes on the papers of the final surrender, he asked bystanders for a pencil. Strange to say, not one of the numerous officers and aids-de-camp was able to offer him one. At last an officer of Lee's staff extracted a pocket inkstand and a feather quill from his kit, and with the aid of these the historic document was written and the names of Grant and Lee affixed at the bottom.

The above bit of history was dug up by David W. Griffith during his staging of "Lee's Surrender to Grant at Appomattox," one of his striking historical facsimile scenes in Griffith's motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," now playing in the Nixon Theater.

"BIRTH OF

DAVID W. GRIFFITH.

Since the moment he flashed "Birth of a Nation" to an audien Los Angeles last February, Davi Griffith has been the most tall figure in the amusement wor America. Before that time, he known as a rare artist in the oratively restricted world ving picture. Sin been univers th and he

BURR. MAR. 21

Mutuil

Employed in cle at the heatre.

Tomorrow night, in the Liberty Theatre, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York a photographic spectacle entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel and play "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as a foremost producer of motion picture successes. His present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous scope and artistic value of the camera play as a work of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his newest production can be [illegible]. The producer devoted eight [illegible] to its making. He employed [illegible] of 18,000 people and 3,000 [illegible] he needed effects. A route tors, no peared in wonderful exquisite ch hand, some o

most admir abroad suffe acting. Of with only ica

PHOTOPLAY MAKES FANS

"The Birth of a Nation" Develops New Brand.

"The Birth of a Nation," David W. Griffith's mammoth photoplay, now at the Liberty Theatre, has developed a new brand of motion picture fans. Some of them have already seen the play three or four times, visiting the theatre to delve deep into the history which the picture represents. Others go to study the technical processes employed in its production.

The spectacle, seemingly, does not tire by repetition, but rather presents so much material and detail that each time brings out something that has [illegible] noticed before.

Although it takes a quick eye to [illegible] many of the apparent trifles in [illegible] upon their importance was never [illegible] illustrated, and it is said that [illegible] all of them historically [illegible] in it. These include in[illegible] in the [illegible] President [illegible] and General Lee [illegible] are [illegible] upon the screen [illegible] in the [illegible] [illegible] Petersburg.

"THE I

"The Birt
ith's specta
Thomas Dix continues in t most prosperou sons participate play, it is said, a of [illegible] each performance.

From EVENING J
Address: New Yor
Date

President On at This

Washington,
[illegible]
Eata

...er whether she wanted to act. ...y laughed, for Mae Marsh ...ward, freckle-faced and un-...sing.

...was in earnest, however. ...under the freckles a visage ...comedy and tragedy, the high ...d deep shadows of feeling. ...d also a temperament of ...cruelty. Under his tutoring ...some of the awkwardness ...the rest for "slavey" parts. ...ess made a wonderful diff... ...the other actors found ...ch, with equal facility, e...

Stage THEATRES Screen

Conducted by D. F. STEVENSON, Dramatic Editor

LILLIAN STONEMAN AND THE ...

...scenes which ...the new ...Birth of a Nation," ...the Trent the ...

REFINED COMEDY IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

A great deal of film comedy is horse-play, but David W. Griffith in "The Birth of a Nation," which comes to the Trent theatre next week, proves that quiet, refined comedy is a big laugh-maker and pleases people better than the old style crude methods.

One of the best laughs in "The Birth of a Nation" is the lovesick sentry in the hospital scene gazing at Elsie Stoneman. This particular bit is of the "sure fire" order, for never does an audience miss the rapt devotion of the sentinel and the haughty expression of the young lady rebuking him with a million-miles-away look.

Paul LeBlanc is the name of the young actor who has made the unexpected hit in the part. He is a New Orleans creole by birth and played comedy roles with Mme. Bernhardt before going out to Los Angeles, where Mr. Griffith discovered him. The costuming of the young soldier is wonderfully accurate to the period of 1864. Some of the recent Civil war portraits in the magazines and newspapers are almost doublets of this sentry figure, showing what care Griffith has used in reproducing the Civil war type.

Miss Lillian Gish wears her costumes of Civil war and Reconstruction times that are heirlooms in her family. Through Griffith's skill all the actors in the production are made to appear as if to the manner-born and not awkwardly moving about in habiliments to which they are unaccustomed.

"The Birth of a Nation" will open at the Trent theatre Monday evening at 8:15 o'clock. There will be daily matinees the balance of the week.

...a ...entry. ...ries ...ing moments ...week.

Conducted by D. F. STEVENSON, Dramatic Editor

MAE MARSH

Who Plays Flora Cameron in "The Birth of a Nation" at the Trent Next Week.)

MAE MARSH TO ACT IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

Miss Mae Marsh, who will be seen as the captivating little Flora in D. W. Griffith's spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent Theatre for a whole week, beginning next Monday, is a prodigy of Filmdom.

The young girl, who lives near Los Angeles, met so many rebuffs at first that she almost gave up hope of a career. A small job at spearing with the "merry, merry," has at last promised her. While waiting for, she decided one day to stand behind "big sister" to the queen it in a palace or play in a kitchen.

This chameleon quality led the director to entrust her with important characterss. Lately he has been using her in emotional roles. Everybody in New York, when "The Birth of a Nation" was produced there, felt that the biggest individual hit—with the possible exception of Henry Walthall, playing the hero—had been achieved by Mae Marsh

LILLIAN GISH,

("n "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent theatre, next week.)

The second chapter of "The [illegible] of a Nation," which [illegible] theatre next week, is [illegible] than [illegible]. It [illegible] a period in the history of the [illegible] pictures a time that "tried men and is not to be approached with the view that there is every [illegible]." It is not a [illegible] not a comedy. It is simply picture of the times, [illegible] there was little of a comedy [illegible] these days and [illegible] comedy [illegible] W. Griffith [illegible] life. Comedy [illegible] but comedy [illegible].

There is the [illegible] where [illegible] is poor [illegible]. We have not yet observed in [illegible] northerner [illegible] this story. Youth and the [illegible] joyful [illegible] and [illegible] about the old [illegible] have pure comedy and [illegible] feeling. No matter [illegible] months they are to die [illegible] battle, enemies, [illegible] arms.

Then there is the [illegible] the southern [illegible] playful as a kitten, up [illegible] tricks with her strangers, [illegible] guests. Again later we [illegible] end, when [illegible] worse than death, she [illegible] high cliff. Comedy that [illegible] comedy just the [illegible] again, there is the [illegible] where the [illegible] for the benefit [illegible] are is the [illegible] "[illegible] sawyer [illegible]" and other [illegible] darkeys [illegible] they have their [illegible]. And so [illegible] the lighter [illegible] be [illegible] dagger [illegible] is what makes [illegible] "[illegible] ation" such a [illegible] [illegible] whose life it [illegible] follows comedy ever. Such

There will be a matinee [illegible] excepting Monday. [illegible] will open at the box of ELPHIA, (PA.) RECORD.

SEP 1 [illegible]

[illegible] will be [illegible] in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm."

Forrest—"Birth of a Nation."

Following a week of triumph at the Forrest Theatre, the magnificent motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," produced by D. W. Griffith, at a cost of $500,000, [illegible] to be shown at that fine playhouse. Important in the showing of this art creation of history and romance is the incidental music, embracing melodies appropriate to each incident and always of the best sort. Indications are that the theatre will be crowded, just as during the first eight days of the stay at the Forrest, at the afternoon and evening presentations. Rarely may one go to the Forrest now without finding a line of ticket purchasers in the lobby, and this fact is of importance in making known to what extent the spectacle has taken hold upon the fancy of the public. The opening presentation on the Saturday night preceding Labor Day was the largest in point of receipts that "The Birth of a Nation" has had at a premiere anywhere, and on Labor Day the demand for seats could not be filled at the two showings.

It is a wonderful story, wonderfully told, that is revealed on the screen. Slavery, the prime cause of the war of the Rebellion, is shown as negro servitude was known in the South. Then there is Lincoln's call for troops, a ball on the eve of the battle of Bull Run, the first triumph of the Confederates. Sherman's devastating march to the sea, with the burning of Atlanta and the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant, the assassination of President Lincoln, reconstruction days, and then is seen the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan. A deep and abiding love interest is based on the friendships of members of a Northern and a Southern family, just as in the novel, "The Clansman," to which Griffith had recourse in building up his creation.

The splendid acting by the notable cast assembled by Griffith for "The Birth of a Nation" should not go unnoticed. Henry B. Walthall, recognized as one of the foremost players now appearing before the camera, is at the head of the cast, but there are also Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, seen as Lincoln; George Seigmann, Walter Alden, Raoul Walsh, as Wilkes Booth; Spottiswoode Aiken and others to lend distinction to the ensemble.

PITTSBURGH (PA.) DISPATCH
SEPT. 12, 1915

How Movie Master Made "The Birth of a Nation"

D. W. Griffith Took Dixon's Stories Because They Were Copyrighted and Would Give Him Protection

D. W. GRIFFITH is the advanced thinker of motion picture art, and the inventor of about every improvement in motion picture play that has been developed in his time in this country.

Griffith accepted the stories of "The Clansman" and one or two kindred works of Thomas Dixon as a basis for his action. This was his choice because he was in search of a copyrighted tale that gave him protection for developing an epic creation which would astound the world.

The forces leading up to the main story and following its thread to its impelling lesson range through the vital pages of American history. It shows the arrival of the first slaves in this land; the first rumblings of the abolition movement; the secession of the several sovereign States in their claims to the right to maintain the institution of slavery; Lincoln's call to arms; the call to arms [illegible] the great battles of the conflict; Sherman's march to the sea and the defeat of Lee, culminating at Petersburg and the surrender of the cause at Appomattox; the assassination of President Lincoln; the horrors following the war; the era of carpetbagging in the so-called reconstruction in the South; the secret organization of the people to protect their rights; the reason for the Ku Klux Klan and the [illegible] of defense exercised by this organization and then the coming of a saner understanding and peace at last, which made possible the birth of the greatest nation on earth.

The scenario for this history-embracing work was outlined by Griffith, and the entire production was made under his personal direction. It took him eight months to complete the picture. Its exterior scenes were taken in five States and parts of Mexico. The total cost of the production was between $500,000 and $600,000. As near as can be estimated there were between 16,000 and 18,000 people utilized. In the making of the entire picture, it is estimated that no less than 2,000,000 feet of film was taken. In condensing this to the direct narrative, Griffith has assembled 13,000 feet of story as the audience now sees it. For his cavalry effects and artillery dashes, together with the scenes of the Ku Klux Klan, nearly 3000 horses were used.

GRIFFITH FILM TO DRAW BIG CROWDS

The unusual number of inquiries received at the box office of the Trent theatre concerning the week's engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," beginning next Monday evening, indicates as a result of record receipts for the big Griffith spectacle. Seldom has been heard and heard of the [illegible] in advance by New York [illegible] and Atlantic City and other [illegible]

"A WOMAN'S HOF THE KU KLUX"
[illegible] "Birth of a Nation" at the Trent theatre [illegible] week.

Mae Marsh
In Film Forrest

"LINCOLN" IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" FORREST

MIRIAM
COOPER-
FORREST

... A deep and abiding love inter-
... on the friendships of young
... a Northern and a Southern
... the novel, "The
... to which Griffith had re... building up his creation.
... and acting by the notable
... cast by Griffith for "The ... Nation" should not go un-
... Henry B. Walthall, recog-
... of the foremost players now
... before the camera, is at the
... the east, but there are also
... Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Coop-
... Lewis, Joseph Henabery, seen
... George Seigmann, Walter
... Walsh, as Wilkes Booth;
... Allen and others to lend
... to the ensemble.

...RIFFITH FILM TO DRAW BIG CROWDS

... number of inquiries re-
... the box office of the Trent
... concerning the week's engage-
... "The Birth of a Nation," begin-
... Monday evening, is taken as a
... of record business for the big ... spectacle. So much has been ... heard of the offering in connec-
... with its New York, Philadelphia and ... City engagements that its com-
... to the Trent is awaited with feverish
... eagerness. The spectacle will be pre-
... at the local playhouse precisely
... is being shown in the larger cities,
... including the realistic battle and other
... requiring a carload of special
... and a corps of fifty mechanics
... supernumeraries. There will be ... musicians in the orchestra, most
... them solo artists carried by the com-
...
The seat sale will open Tuesday morn-
... and reservations will be accepted by
... and telephone. There will be a
... every day except Monday, and
... prices will fit all purses.
"The Birth of a Nation" is one of the ... widely discussed topics in the coun-
It established an absolutely new art
... the realm of the theatre—the art of
... made screen spectacle with music.
... also created a tremendous sensation
... of its vaster and more forceful
... of the same theme as Thomas
... "The Clansman." The conse-
... of the Civil war in southern re-
... are fully dealt with, and the ... reborn is apotheosized. Mr. Grif-
... pioneer among directors, managed
... stupendous achievement without the ... dialogue or speech, for motion pic-
... accompanying music and effects tell
... coherent, logical and moving story.

"A WILD DASH OF THE KU KLUX."
(One of the thrilling scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," at the Trent theatre next week).

18,000 ACTORS IN "BIRTH OF NATION"

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's massive spectacle, coming to the Trent theatre next week, is the largest and most important production of a decade, yet not a word is spoken throughout the performance of nearly three hours. Music supplies the absence of speech, mechanical effects and realism, whilst the wizard of the screen, David W. Griffith, unfolds in 12,000 feet of film the thrilling romance of the war between the states and the reconstruction of the southland. Some idea of its magnitude may be had from the fact that 18,000 actors and 3,000 horses took part and that the staging of this great "outdoor" drama cost half a million dollars.

Several of the actors are of so... lineage. Henry Walthall, who p... heroic role of the little Co... colonel, is a member of the ... Walthall family of Alaba... Cooper, who appears ... Cameron, is a direct ... Charles Carroll, the Ma... the Declaration of ... Griffith is the son ... of the Confederate ...

For every character ... Mr. Griffith has ...ality needed. ...

D. W. GRIFFITH,
Producer of "T... a Nation" ... at the Trent th... week.

The Birth of a Nation.

...ing its third consecutive week at ... Temple Sunday afternoon, D. W. ...'s stupendous spectacle of the ... and romance of war, The Birth ... Nation, drew a larger house, mati... night, than on either of the ... Sundays, and this in face of ... hottest day on the photo-drama's ... season. Last night the tumult and ... cheering when the Ku Klux Klan ... its wild rides was not confined to ... gallery, whence these demonstrations ... proceed. The balcony and the ... rs took a hand, so to ... vociferant uproar was not ... e part of the enter... truly adequate or... ering the flavor of ... mance, for it ... thing big in ... is the big ...

...ING HIS BROW. ?

Old Stager made his first ...earance for the new ...son. After greeting, ... cordially he moved his ...our to a direct line with an el... . Then he withdrew one of ...es, filled and lighted it, and be... puffs regaled me with tales of his ...vacation. All of which was mild...esting to me, but of none what... my readers. Therefore ... moment I asked him ... ...ed "The Birth of a Nation." ...," he replied, "I was just coming ...t and you seem to have guessed it. ...pictures all right, as you deciage... ...e of your weekly letters from At... ...e City. But I found one flaw—on... probably only a very few who ha... ...sed the marvelous product... ...l ever notice."

...hat was that?" I asked.

...by the interior of Ford's Theatre ...was on the night of the assassina... President Lincoln. Not a bit ... This view shows a modern the... ...th the present style of private ... begins as you youngsters call ... Now private boxes in the sixties ... it on the stage, within the foot... ...and never outside of them, like ... boxes shown in the picture where ... audience is looking at the actors per... ...ing in 'Our American Cousin.'"

...his, to an old fellow like me, shows ...per. I don't know if anybody else ...d it, but I did. I had been in ... several times before that awful ... and I know all about the house, ...t looked and how the boxes were ...l, too. The box that is built on ...age and shows the President in it ...e like it. That has been built on ...age, but the other view is nothing like it at all. Ford's Theatre was converted from an old church in 1860. The very first company that ever performed in it was George Christy's Minstrels. Then came Ford's dramatic company as the regular season's opening. I was pretty familiar with the whole building, the back of the stage and the alley through which Booth escaped on his horse.

"When I saw 'The Birth of a Nation' and the scene of the audience gazing at the stage I saw right away that the picture had been taken in a very modern theatre and not at all like Ford's. The private boxes were quite a height from the stage, as you will remember Booth jumped down from the President's box. I agree with you and with almost everybody who has seen the pictures that they are remarkably fine, but that one scene gets me to pick a flaw. And I know I'm right, too," he added, as he resumed smoking.

"Merely a detail," I remarked, "which ...es not mar the realism of the film for ... average person. And believe me the ...ct has been well patronized, not...standing the sizzling heat of the ...ter portion of the week, which is ...ive proof of the merits of the ...ture.

...TIC

...n Are

SCENE FROM "BIRTH OF A NATION" FORREST

...ugh exploitation opens up.

The song of "The Birth of a Nation" ...ble. It fascinates for three ...s. The heights of emotion are ...s. There are only moments—those in which Miss Gish figures in hospital and in her room—relatively less interesting.

...son is, I think, obvious. The ...can have little or no character, small wit and less philosophy. ...polemic work it will never contain the genuine, fine and inherent ...the drama. But the photoplay ...a large element of poetry, a ... beauty which the stage ...ch, and an emotion literature ...ous. Cyclonic catastrophies ...of Civil War or of nature's upheaval—and that terrible, individual fact ...th take on a final power which ...atre never touches. Movieland is ...a real land of real rocks and real ...movie actors have such a fortunate ...of never answering curtain calls, ...somehow the gray-flecked screen of ...hotoplay has a finality of realism is using every means for a ...

There is no part of the photoplay art—not even beauty of scene and vigor of mass—that Griffith uses more successfully than the individual actor himself. He has put a blending of naturalism and clear art into the movies that even the long-trained stage doesn't always enjoy. The fine flower of his method is Henry B. Walthall, an actor who brings distinction to a far from imposing face or figure, spirit to an art where players are too apt to rely on vapid "dignity," and a quick co-ordination of the details of life in a naturalism that seems to take no account of an audience.

The confirmed playgoer may foreswear all the virtues of "The Birth of a Nation" and of photoplays in general, yet he must leave them one supreme usefulness, one ultimate fitness. They can seize the silent moments. They can take those tensest, those happiest, those sweetest seconds in life, those seconds that come between speech and link them into a whole that speaks as truly in spirit as it is physically silent upon charge against ... Aoraham Lincoln, Gen. Grant, Gen. Lee, Gen. Sumner and other great figures of the time are shown. The assassination of Lincoln is shown under exact historical conditions of the time. Wildly exciting are the exploits of the Ku Klux Klan, who in their peculiar garb come to the rescue of the daughter of House Leader Stoneman. Altogether it is an impressive spectacle with never a semblance of artificiality. It takes more than two hours and a half to show and is easily seen from all seats. Mr. Courtney, who is in charge of the picture, is a Canadian artillery officer, and afterwards threw a recruiting appeal for Capt. Thoburn on the screen.

'BIRTH OF A NATION' BEGINS NEW WEEK AT THE FORREST

Fine Acting in Stirring Scenes in Film Grips Attention

On the opening of its second week Forrest last night "The Birth of a N D. W. Griffith's widely heralded m picture drama, again was viewed by dreds of persons.

For all its "two dimensions" this undeniably has the power to hold its au ences. The rapid succession of stirri scenes, the piling of spectacle upon spectacle, seldom fail to grip the most blase spectator and hold his attention to the end.

For competent acting it is unsurpassed in filmdom. Henry B. Walthall has unique power in the principal male role, a Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Lillian and Ralph Lewis do well in the parts.

...y I Produced "The Birth of a Nation"

...y D. W. GRIFFITH.

...s endless work to produce a big ...ficture. There is also endless de... me illustrate by the concrete ... of "The Birth of a Nation." ...comes the scenario or written outline of the plot. In this case there was ...revious stage play. If we are wise, ...forget that as much as we can, for ...e motion picture is a novelizing or ...ory-telling form, not strictly a stage ...orm; it is epic rather than dramatic; ...much of the work is of the great ...pous. We have a period of history to ... the scenes of a wide territory to ...ify. Therefore, we must prepare the ... as well as the actor; ... some ...e landscape artist ... of the civil engineer are before us. ...month the actors rehearse without ...mera.

...now South Carolina in Reconstruction ...Va is measurably before our eyes. ...are the battle backgrounds of the ...t are springing into being, helped ...t advice of old "vets" and model ...Pointers. The costumes, set... documents are laboriously pre... the facsimile historical scenes ... of the Emancipation Proclamation ...he Appomattox surrender and ...n assassination. By the way, ... actors" were rehearsed before ...Lincoln was found! This was ...demand "... of the photo... scene Lincoln was ...lue and the Grey, ...try and the colored contingent all have been drilled under their respective leaders. And then film making begins.

At an early stage of the work—after the rough outlines have been filled in—the scenario is thrown away. The building and the rebuilding of the story, the piecing of intimate bits and the discarding of the useless go right on while we are living the history, so to speak, from day to day. Nearly 28 miles of pictures—140,000 feet of film—are taken. And how much of these are used? At the finale we discover that we have thrown away eight-tenths of our product—we have remaining 26,000 feet, or, say, five miles of consecutive story. But that is twice too long. We condense, condense, condense. At the end of two months more of hard labor we have edited "The Birth of a Nation" to 12,000 or 13,000 feet—two and a half miles—or, in theatre wise, two hours and 45 minutes' stage entertainment.—From Photoplay Vogue.

RYAN SAYS PORTER ERRED ABOUT PLAY

Action taken by Director Porter to stop the production of the film "Birth of a Nation" was not in accordance with the provisions of the law, according to an opinion sent to the Mayor yesterday by City Solicitor Ryan. The law provides the question of production shall be brought before the Mayor and both sides shall present their case, and if the Mayor thinks it should not be produced, the Department of Public Safety shall take means to stop its production it is argued.

In announcing he would not permit the production of the play, it is alleged, Director Porter did not comply with the provisions of the law, and did not consult the Law Department.

"The Birth of a Nation"—Forrest

There is no withstanding the appeal of "The Birth of a Nation," the D. W. Griffith motion picture spectacle, presented with appropriate musical accompaniment by a large orchestra at the Forrest Theatre. At both presentations yesterday the were enthusiastic onlookers, who filled theatre, and the kaleidoscopic picture tion brought frequent and sincere plause. One marvels at the ingenuity the photography and at the skill of producer, but there also admiration the dramatic ... of the cinematic and the beauty of ... panoramic ...

"Birth of a Nation" at Forrest

D. W. Griffith's much-talked-about film reproduction of the stirring days at the close of the Civil War continues to attract widespread attention at the Forrest, where it began the second week of the limited engagement yesterday. The praises of press and public which have been bestowed upon this picture, extravagant though they might seem, have been fully realized, and there is a great demand for a view of it.

Forrest—"Birth of a Nation."

David W. Griffith's great historical photo-spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," entered on its second full week at the Forrest, where it has been drawing audiences that quite ... playhouse both day and ... The ... sensational ... by the ...

BANGOR (Me.) NEWS
SEPT. 13, 1915

The much talked of and very wonderful photo play, The Birth of a Nation which is to be shown in Bangor the latter part of October is interesting people at present. The book from which the play is taken is the Clansman by Thomas Dixon Jr., and this book has recently been added to the books at the public library. Many who have a desire to read the book before seeing the picture will have an opportunity. Several other books of the best fiction, popular and up-to-date, have been added also. Among them are The Lovable Meddler by Leona Dalrymple, The Yellow Pearl, by Adeline M. Teskey; Empty Pockets by Rupert Hughes; The Double Traitor by E. Phillips Oppenheim; Jaffery by William ... and ...

—ıo Ledger

SEP 1 1916

ATRES NEXT WEEK.

-DOLLAR MOVIES AND 75 STARS OPEN THE PHILADELPHIA SEASON

The Birth of a Nation" and the Walnut's "Star-stock" as Theatrical Portents—Some Elements of the Silent Drama

By the Dramatic Editor

w season has opened with two features—movies in the ...atre at $2, and legitimate ... priced house. Beside usual excellent music of Victor ...ltched to the usual dull book comedy in "The Princess Pat," summary withdraw of "Brother for repairs, are minor incidents. eversal of form doesn't spell the collapse of the American the it does portend a considerable ent.

se of the Walnut, first of all ger Leahy does as well with his stars and productions as he has them so far, both here and in he will demonstrate that plays given intelligently at a scale of alf what the Broadway gamblers l, and that there is a good-sized or standard plays. His plays, o n and announced, are no more us than those of the $2 theatres, e whole venture suggests that the y local repertory theatres may be ...wning in America, as the touring system, harassed by movies without and gamblers within, finds its existence growing riskier and more difficult.

As for $2 movies—and "The Birth of a Nation" in particular—they, too, are a portent. Photoplays may gain nothing by adopting the foolish theatre's scale of prices; doubtless, properly organized, as the Triangle Company seems to be organizing, they could be presented at a half to a third that scale. Yet the price is a small matter, quickly to be readjusted, compared with the art their thorough exploitation opens up.

The appeal of "The Birth of a Nation" ...ble. It fascinates for three ... The heights of emotion are ...s. There are only moments—those in which Miss Gish figures, which the stage, for all its three dimensions, cannot approach.

"The Birth of a Nation" is full of examples of what intelligence can do in the production of the photoplay. Praising Mr. Griffith as the supreme artist so far developed is an old game now; but it is possible, for example, to point out how much a genuine director of the whole art can do to heighten his action by the clever use of music. The score of "The Birth of a Nation" is mostly a simple putting together of simple and familiar melodies. Yet how wonderfully—to take a single instance—that nervous, throbbing war-song of the South heightens the scenes at the ball when the scarred flag of that first quick victory, Bull Run, is flung to the eager crowd.

The "leaders," or printed titles, can do a great deal to aid the photoplay, in spite of the very obvious fact that the fewer they are the better. Those the producer uses must be admirably worded and add to the point of the whole piece. George Ade gives his "Fables in Slang" excellent "leaders" that shine by comparison with the usual sad legends of comedies. Griffiths uses his asides to the audience even more skilfully. He builds through them a mood that will make the audience sympathetic to the argument of the film. He quotes history, he employs President Wilson's writings. Perhaps he goes a bit too far sometimes; when he emphasizes the "sovereignty of the 13 States," "the fact that Cornwallis surrendered to 13 independent little nations and not to a single country," he hardly suggests that his later words about the birth of a nation are sincere. Often the "leaders" are filled with some terrible, 2-by-4 rhetoric about "opal gates of death" and such. But in general, Griffith is on the right track. He is using every means for a common effect.

There is no part of the photoplay art—not even beauty of scene and vigor of mass—that Griffith uses more successfully than the individual actor himself. He has put a blending of naturalism and

THE NIGHT PROGRAM.

There was a very good attendance last night. On the grandstand the receipts were not particularly heavy owing to the cold air, but those who saw the magnificent picture, "The Birth of a Nation," must have felt fully repaid. It is quite certain that a picture on such a scale was never before attempted. It is a brilliant conception brilliantly carried out. Numberless photoplays have been produced, but they are all dwarfed compared with this gigantic spectacle. The story concerns the national reconstruction of the United States which followed the Civil War and the abolition of slavery. The war was fought to decide whether the States or the Union should have supreme control and to abolish slavery. But to abolish slavery did not mean that the blacks of the South should have the social equality of the white men, and it was through the abuse of this new found freedom that tragedies arose and the theme of this picture was seized upon.

The three leading characters in the play are Henry Walthall as Ben Cameron, Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman and Ralph Lewis as Austin Stoneman. They play their parts with extraordinary cleverness. Civil war battles are seen, with armies covering miles of landscape and hand-to-hand fighting and charge upon charge against entrenchments. Abraham Lincoln, Gen. Grant, Gen. Lee, Gen. Sumner and other great figures of the time are shown. The of the principal scenes. This [illegible] cent instrumental music is played [illegible] large orchestra of experts.

Pittsburgh Dispatch

PRESIDENT LINCOLN
—NIXON—

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) LEADER
SEPT 4, 1915

PABST.

"The Birth of a Nation," the motion picture spectacle which created such a sensation during the summer, will return to the Pabst, Sunday, Sept. 12, for a week's engagement, with matinee and night performances each day.

This pictorial story is conceded to be the most marvelous exhibition of the moving picture producer's art yet created.

Those who did not avail themselves of the opportunity to witness this spectacle during the summer run, as well as state fair visitors who were not able to come to Milwaukee earlier, will have this last chance to see it here.

derful photo-drama ever lympic Theater yesterday of which are laid in the iods, is drawing many

[illegible] with the one that [illegible] is an old con- [illegible] Yester- [illegible] Gertrude [illegible] Dorothy [illegible] the best vau- [illegible] features [illegible] to the proper [illegible] the bailetta, [illegible] and Gertrude [illegible] are fea- [illegible] half [illegible] here. [illegible] to Atlan- [illegible] Johnson [illegible] the diver [illegible] on the [illegible] chandeliers. [illegible] on the 12th [illegible] Girls, with Mul [illegible]

Acrobatic Dances at the Gayety.

Fred Irwin's Majestics at the Gayety this week have a strong card in the Nela Sisters, six in number, who do some surprising stunts in acro the dancing. Few [illegible] of [illegible] manage to throw each other about with so little regard for consequences. The leading concerted number is Apaches in Paris, which contains a bit of everything permissible in burlesque of this kind. In the cast worthy of special mention are Paul Cunningham, Ed Marsey, Joe Hollander, Stan Anderson, Venetia Dressler, Florence Bennett, Marie Hartman and Edith Holland [illegible]. The Gayety announces a special La[illegible] for Day matinee, to start at 2:15 p. m. Bob Manchester's Burlesquers come next Sunday afternoon.

Mestayer and Darmond Please.

The efforts of Harry Mestayer and Grace Darmond, two popular screen performers, were appreciated by three large crowds at New Grand Central yesterday, where they appeared in the leading roles of Meredith Nicholson's The House of a Thousand Candles.

The play which deals with the efforts of an aged millionaire to lure his grandson away from the bright lights of the cabaret halls, is worked into one of the most interesting dramas that has been screened this season. It is beautifully staged, and there is not a tiring moment during the unfolding of a rather complicated plot.

A reel of comedy and another of the beautiful world travel scenes complete the bill.

Mary Pickford as Esmerelda.

At the West End Lyric today the program calls for Mary Pickford in Esmerelda and the first episode of Neal of the Navy. The Lyric, Sixth and Pine, will have Nat C. Goodwin in his Favorite play, Business is Business.

Today's Attractions.

Tonight at the Park the first appearance of the new The Players Company will be made in Bayard Veiller's underworld study: Within the Law.

At the Shenandoah the musical show [illegible]uson is to begin with The Follies of [illegible] Louis, Old and New.

The Girl from Milwaukee returns to [illegible]e Columbia this afternoon after an ab[illegible]ce that was growing irksome to those [illegible]o know this remarkable singer's voice. [illegible]chard Havemann's animal act is not a [illegible]ligible quantity, either.

Olympia des Vall, the beauteous horseman, shows in The Fox Hunt at the [illegible] and today together with eight or ten [illegible]er acts of merit.

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible] Oct[illegible]

SAN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & P
SEPT. 6, 1915

[illegible]bart's story, "The [illegible] will be shown in pictures [illegible] time.

TO FIGHT OLD [illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] an issue in the election of [illegible] stoners in Spokane, Wash., [illegible] Colored Business Men's [illegible] Colored Men's Civic League [illegible] together [illegible] of the negro [illegible] the city have launched the [illegible] declaring war upon the [illegible] missioners and other officials [illegible] dorse the present action of [illegible] ship in Spokane.

The first step will be to [illegible] colored voter in the city and [illegible] voter who is in sympathy w[illegible] patron. The City Council [illegible] asked to pass an ordinance [illegible] exhibition of films tendi[illegible] race hatred.

Leaders of the colored [illegible] nounced that they would [illegible] united effort to elect to of[illegible] will be in sympathy with t[illegible]

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES
SEPT 7, 1915

young country girl who is drawn into the whirl of city vice. The moral of the play hardly compensates for its attempted revelations of vice.

The character delineation of Ernest Murray, Robert Jones, Martin Drus[illegible] Arthur Weston, Eleanor Rella and C[illegible]cilia Jacques are especially noteworthy.

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

This remarkable photo spectacle has settled down at the Nixon, after all the commotion over its production, to what looks like a long run. Yesterday large audiences at both the matinee and night performances witnessed the unfolding of the screen on which is pictured a series of remarkable and stirring historical events. The massiveness of the photo drama has already been commented on at length. The acting of the cast is hardly less wonderful. Each member of the big company that posed for the scenes seems fitted exactly in his or her place, and when [illegible] considers that, with one or tw[illegible] tions, these players were unk[illegible] the theatrical world the [illegible] startling. Mae Marsh, who play[illegible] of the younger Cameron sist[illegible] actress of great mobility of f[illegible] displays a fine sense of comed[illegible] Young Walthall, who plays Ben [illegible]eron, is an ideal hero, handsome [illegible] with admirable power of expres[illegible] But the entire cast, including tho[illegible] able negro "mammy" and her fait[illegible] husband, as well as the comic "[illegible] "from the North," are roles played [illegible] peculiar power and fitness for [illegible] purposes. The picture is in ever[illegible] most remarkable one, and w[illegible] tirs the beholders with opposite [illegible] in it recites history, bet[illegible] [illegible]sent with clearness.

P.A.C.

Bin Bel No.
$30.00 real b heat allowe
Blue Bir
$1
New weave Bo

RC (Mass.) NEWS
SEPT. 7, 1916

Presentation of Great Production "Birth Of A Nation"

So much has been said; so much has been written about the masterpiece of the film world, the Ben Hur of the photodrama, David W. Griffith's historical speciacle, "The Birth of a Nation" that there seems to be but little more that can be said of it. Everyone, that is, of the readable age, knows that "The Birth of a Nation" is an adaptation of Thomas Dixon's vivid and historical novel, "The Clansman"; everyone knows that it has caused comment all over the country, issues of newspaper articles have referred to it; everyone knows that the Negro race has protested it as a libel on their people and that for this reason it has been barred, (to be) prohibited in many states and [illegible] seeing "The Birth of a Nation" words can express its [illegible] power. "The Birth of a [illegible] is, without any doubt, beyond question, the greatest achievement of photoplay or the moving art of history. One must say David W. Griffith is the director, for to those familiar with the art of photoplay production the master hand is evident in every inch of the superb film.

Birth of a Nation" opened at the Tremont yesterday after its long and phenomenally successful run at Boston theatre in Boston. It is [illegible] and accompanied by [illegible] features that marked the [illegible] with wildly enthusiastic audiences, [illegible] cheering there Saturday night.

[illegible] theatrical sensation [illegible] storm [illegible] though [illegible] when [illegible] that this [illegible] all that [illegible] overcome [illegible] that will [illegible]

[illegible] Negro race [illegible] and her race in a powerful [illegible]

Sherman knew what he was talking about.

As peace propaganda, "The Birth of a Nation" is superb. One loses all war thoughts by seeing it. One forgets that its piles of dead are "actors" for in this picture Griffith spared nothing to secure realism and its realism is such that people cried openly and unashamed.

Flashing back from a battle scene, to scenes in the north and the south, bringing to the mind the words of "Tenting Tonight" that line which says, "Many are the hearts that are weary tonight, waiting for the war to end," Griffith has secured the pathos and prevented any glamor of war.

It is a "neutral" picture, if such a thing is possible. The north and the south with its aching hearts; the south with its wonderful spirit that even the north must concede; the north with its great leader, Abraham Lincoln, sore at heart, yet with the knowledge that the Union must be held together; brave deeds by heroes of both sides; yet the hatred of battle shown in faces that in death lost it in the spiritual happiness of brotherly love; all are shown.

The war is over, though it is said to be fought over and over again in both north and south; but at last night's audience showed--north is south, south is north, and it is today "The United States of America, one nation united--north, south, east and west, from the Rio Grande to the Canadian line, the Atlantic to the Pacific."

The first part of the picture deals with the days preceding the war and takes in the story of the two families, the Camerons of the south and the Stonemans of the north. The sons of both families are friends. It is but a typical case of many such friendships before the war.

Then comes the war with its horrors and devastation. The Cameron family, three sons respond. But one, the oldest comes back. The home is raided by Negro guerillas and the once proud family is crushed beneath the odium of the war. The part that women play in war is graphically depicted by this.

One sees southmen cheering northmen and northmen cheering southmen on the field of battle, only to be at each other's breast with bayonets a moment later; one sees cannon mowing down regiments and one sees towns burned to the ground and a once beautiful city reduced to a pile of smoking ruins. It is too horrible, too awe inspiring and yet too wonderful to attempt to describe in printed word.

During this first part, one sees facsimiles of Lincoln and the famous war cabinet, of which "Stoneman" was the radical senate leader, the historic picture, "The Call for Volunteers," is reproduced in living pictures, with an accuracy that is astounding. Here one sees Lincoln wiping away the tears as he signs the proclamation that made a four years living Hell for both north and south; one sees the wonderful ten-mile battle field of Petersburg, the vast stretches of Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Richmond and then the reproduction of "Lee's Surrender to Grant."

During all these, the story runs along as it is in "The Clansman."

The second part deals with the reconstruction: "Stoneman's" mistake in forming a miscalliance with a colored mistress, which was the real reason, some historians claim, for the murder of Lincoln, the woman being ambitious to have "Stoneman" the ruling power and thus to place herself and her race in a powerful [illegible]

ate

Birth of a Nation.

"The Birth of a Nation" that wonderful spectacle by D. W. Griffith has only three more days to remain at the Cumings theatre so that those who wish to see the magnificent and mighty production should make it a point to secure their seats at once. The management of the theatre had to guarantee the largest sum ever offered for such a production in this city and the people of Fitchburg and vicinity are showing their approval of their judgment by flocking to the theatre in large numbers. They are well repaid as never before has such a production been witnessed. "The Birth of a Nation" is history made interesting but at the same time it has a double love story, many dramatic situations, thrilling scenes and elaborate settings that only the master mind of Griffith could evolve. The playing of the 16 piece orchestra, the work of the various people on the stage who lend a touch of realism that would have been considered impossible a few years ago all combine to make the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" the theatrical event of the year. The whole play revolves about the work of a fanatic in the South who tries to put the negro above the white man in the days of the reconstruction period. It shows how the proud Southerners resisted such efforts. The Ku Klux Klan proved to be a big factor in this resistance and is called the saving grace of the South. It should be seen not only on account of its being an interesting play but also for what one can learn in a historical sense. There are two productions each day commencing at 2.10 and 8.10 p. m. and the engagement will positively close on Saturday.

ate

Birth of a Nation.

"The Birth of a Nation" that wonderful spectacle by D. W. Griffith has only three more days to remain at the Cumings theatre so that those who wish to see the magnificent and mighty production should make it a point to secure their seats at once. The management of the theatre had to guarantee the largest sum ever offered for such a production in this city and the people of Fitchburg and vicinity are showing their approval of their judgment by flocking to the theatre in large numbers. They are well repaid as never before has such a production been witnessed. "The Birth of a Nation" is history made interesting but at the same time it has a double love story, many dramatic situations, thrilling scenes and elaborate settings that only the master mind of Griffith could evolve. The playing of the 16 piece orchestra, the work of the various people on the stage who lend a touch of realism that would have been considered impossible a few years ago all combine to make the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation" the theatrical event of the year. The whole play revolves about the work of a fanatic in the South who tries to put the negro above the white man in the

Epoch Sept 5

"The Birth of a Nation"

"THE Birth of a Nation," bringing forward David W Griffith's wonderful new art of pictorialized spectacle with music, will begin its third week's engagement at the Nixon tomorrow night. This is the great offering that opened a new era in the theatres of New York, Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Los Angeles, where it ran simultaneously in as many productions for many, many months. Despite great opposition the play has never been suppressed, but has met the approval of censor boards, judges, municipal authorities, publicists, editors and clergymen everywhere. It is pleasing to be able to note the fact that a metropolitan production of the finest quality and elaboration is being shown here.

The first half of the spectacle, which was suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," exhibits the salient events of the war between the States. The formation of the Confederacy, Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant, and the awful tragedy of Lincoln's assassination at Ford's Theater, April 14, 1865, live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half of the South's "second uprising"—this time against the carpetbagger regime—is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of the "Little Confederate Colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northener, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist Captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

But the great out-of-doors is Mr Griffith's special field. Tremendous battle scenes and wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. Eighteen thousand human actors, and 3,000 horses were employed in the making of the picture, which cost $500,000, and took eight months to reproduce. Some idea of its immensity is gained from the fact that there are no less than 5,000 distinct and individual scenes.

On the musical side Mr Griffith attempted what was previously unheard of in connection with motion pictures. This was the synchronizing of a complete symphonic score with the appearances of the important characters, and the enactment of the principal scenes. This magnificent instrumental music is played by a large orchestra of experts.

Pittsburgh Dispatch Sept 5

PITTSBURGH DISPATCH
—NIXON—

MILWAUKEE (Wis.) LEADER
SEPT 4, 1915

PAGE

SEPT. 5, 191..
ST. LOUIS (Mo.) GLOBE-DEMOCRAT

BIRTH OF NATION DRAWING WELL AT OLYMPIC THEATER

House of Thousand Candles in Movies Is Shown at New Grand Central.

D. W. Griffith's photo dramatic spectacle, the Birth of a Nation, began its second week at the Olympic yesterday afternoon with every indication of increasing drawing power. This would mean that the experience in other cities is, in a way, being followed in St. Louis. The visiting management announces positive adherence to the plan, according to which the Birth of a Nation is not to be exhibited in the smaller cities near St. Louis, and never anywhere save in first-class theaters.

A marked feature of yesterday's showings was the improvement in the accompanimental music. This synchronized almost perfectly with the reel and added considerably to the enjoyment. The big orchestra was in concert pitch and the patriotic tunes, when the big battles were shown, rang out most eloquently. The projection of the great scene where Lee surrenders to Grant was at a slower tempo, giving the audiences a better opportunity to make a less hurried study of a solemn moment.

Yesterday's showings were well within three hours, including one restful intermission. Today's Labor Day matinee promises to be specially well attended.

Richy W. Craig Funny as Ever.

At the Standard the veteran burlesque chieftain, Richy W. Craig, is introducing several novelties this week in association with his Merry Burlesquers program. His dialogue on current events, in which his voice competes with the one that issues from a phonograph, is an odd conceit that "took very well twice yesterday," to use one of Craig's Germanisms. He also evokes something like music from the saxophone. Dorothy Blodgett has new songs of the best vaudeville kind. Other musical features bring this part of the bill to the proper level of entertainment. In the burletta, Coming Right Out, principals and chorus join in the merry finishing. There are foolish oddities sufficient to trick out half a dozen ordinary burlesque ventures here. In the finale, From Broadway to Atlantic City, Bill Jennings and Billy Johnson supply the diversion. Moonlight on the Mississippi is a well-staged number.

Coming to the Standard on the 12th inst., The Yankee Doodle Girls, with Mul Clark.

Acrobatic Dances at the Gayety.

Fred Irwin's Majestics at the Gayety this week have a strong card in the Nela Sisters, six in number, who do some surprising stunts in acrobatic dancing. Few teams of young women manage to throw each other about with so little regard for consequences. The leading concerted number is Americans in Paris, which contains a little of everything permissible in episodes of this kind. In the cast worthy of special mention are: Paul Cunningham, Ed Markey, Joe Hollander, Sten Anderson, Vennetta Pressler, Florence Bennett, Marie Hartman and Edith Holland. The Gayety announces a special Labor Day matinee, to start at 2:15 p. m. Bob Manchester's Burlesquers come next Sunday afternoon.

Mestayer and Darmond Please.

The efforts of Harry Mestayer and Grace Darmond, two popular screen favorites, were appreciated by the [illegible] crowds at New Grand Central yesterday, where they appeared in the [illegible] of Meredith [illegible] The House of a Thousand Candles.

The play which deals with the efforts of an aged [illegible] to keep his grandson away from [illegible] habits of the colored [illegible] one of the most [illegible] has been [illegible] is beautifully [illegible] a rather complicated [illegible] Mary Pickford as Esmeralda.

ENTERED O WEEK AT

Spectacle Draws Large Crowd and Audience Enthusiastic.

"The Birth of a Nation," the photo-drama spectacle at the Ol Theater, is drawing larger crowd each matinee and night performa and today had overflow Labor audiences.

Each person who views the gre film becomes immediately a "boo for it, as it contains many wonde never before equaled on stage or motion pictures. The unsisted ac of its principals; the wonderful sta ing of battle scenes in which hun dreds of men fight with such reali that the spectators shudder with the horror of war; and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are each in themselves a memorable picture.

In the "Birth of a Nation" there are so many daring acts, so many clever feints, falls and dashing ri that one forgets to marvel at the Here a man falls headlong from porch roof, apparently shot through the heart by a raider; in the battle scenes soldiers are shown falling under fire, diving from trenches, reeling from horseback. Many spectacular falls are made by the clansmen in the Klan rides. One scene shows the mighty fight of a young blacksmith in a negro dive, in which he fells a dozen men with his naked hands, but himself falls under a bullet fired into his back.

The plan runs three hours, with an intermission of three minutes. A symphony orchestra of about twenty pieces, plays throughout the performance, and through combination of popular airs suitable to the scene depicted, have worked out a symphony which might itself well be called "The Birth of a Nation."

The drama has entered on its second week, and will continue until October.

AN FRANCISCO (Cal.) CALL & P
SEPT. 5, 1915

ham's story, "The Circular" [illegible] will be shown in pictures within a [illegible]

TO FIGHT OFFICIALS

"The Birth of a Nation" will be [illegible] in the election of city commissioners in Spokane, Wash., this fall. [illegible] Business Men's League and [illegible] Men's Civic League, which [illegible] most of the new [illegible] have launched the campaign of war upon the present [illegible] and other officials [illegible] the present system of [illegible] in Spokane.

The first step will be to [illegible] voters in the city and [illegible] who is in sympathy with [illegible] The City Council [illegible] to pass an ordinance [illegible] of films tendi[illegible] [illegible]

Leaders of the colored [illegible] believed that they would [illegible] effort to elect to of[illegible] will be in sympathy with [illegible]

PITTSBURG (Pa.) GAZETTE-TIMES

The Morning Telegraph 2-28-1915

Several of the Current Attractions Have Now Passed the Second Century Mark.

By REGINALD WOLF.

ON Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theater, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York, a photoplay spectacle entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the film is based is Thomas Dixon's novel of the same name.

Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as the foremost producer of motion picture successes in houses devoted to this style of entertainment. His present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a work of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his newest production can be gauged. The producer devoted eight months to its making. He employed the services of 18,000 people and 3,000 horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is related to varied phases of the slavery question, and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with its terrific battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the downfall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of Abraham Lincoln; the tides of the Reconstruction period; the Ku Klux Klan's solution of the problem; the establishment of an everlasting peace in the end. These historic scenes are given in accurate detail. A menagerie of human conflicts as well as well drawn characters links the romance.

Wal-hall has returned to the bill after a brief absence. After a "The Birth of a Nation," Walsh has a vacation and then joined the Company, playing in one feature.

waiting anxiously for "Birth of a Nation."

Griffith's masterpiece will be seen at the Liberty Theater next week when the Griffith production "The Birth of a Nation," is released.

From BILLBOARD

Address Cincinnati Ohio

PETERS WITS

New York, featured v debut in ... Id.

D. W. GRIFFITH

Griffith's masterpiece, The Birth of a Nation, is soon to be presented at the Liberty Theater, New York.

[illegible] "Not a Nelly" founded on "The Chaperon" in which the refugees are seen fleeing.

Eve. Post Feb 27-15

Motion Picture Shows

"The Birth of a Nation," a photographic play taken from the Rev. Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," will be produced on Wednesday night at the Liberty Theatre by D. W. Griffith. Eight months were devoted to its making, and 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were employed to get the needed effects. A complete musical score has been written by Joseph Carl Brill, and will be played by the orchestra of forty.

Eve. World-Feb. 27-15

Before "The Birth of a Nation" opens at the Liberty that theatre will be rearranged inside. An optical expert is to lay out the work with the idea in view of minimizing the strain on the eyes.

Globe Feb. 26-1915

"The Birth of a Nation," the Griffith photoplay extraordinary, opens at the Liberty Theatre next Wednesday night. First nighters will then observe that the interior has been decidedly altered. As Theodore Mitchell expresses it, the alterations are to be made "under the supervision of Mr. Griffith and an optical expert who has been studying the focal centres of the house with a view of remodelling it along the latest scientific lines to establish the correct focus and minimize the strain upon the eye." And Mr. Mitchell clinches it with this remark: "This will be the first time on record that a theatre has been scientifically reconstructed to meet the requirements of a motion picture engagement."

Am. Feb. 28-15

hard sometimes to keep on your favorites and they are playing at the oment? Henry Walthall, le dramatic film star I imagine that line is gone into an argument, but I believe it—has joined his former boss, a man who answers to the name of Griffith, a man who has made the biggest things ever made in American films. Mr. Walthall has been with Mr. Griffith for many years and recently left, after the completion of "The Birth of a Nation," to work opposite Eleanor Woodruff in a Pathe feature, and then to join the Balboa Company, with much heralding and blowing of trumpets by the aforesaid Balboa Company. With Balboa, Henry did "Buclah," and now he has gone back to the Griffith forces, which all means that Henry did a little work after Mr. Griffith was through with him in "The Birth of a Nation" and now comes back because Mr. Griffith is about ready to do more big things.

Sat. Evening Post Feb.

From Address
Date

Wi

tabl Presid

EXE FROM

12-Feb. 25-15

aster producer," days this week, ut engagements I should say productions, "The ch the Liberty, for the first graphic spectacle of of a Nation." The the work is based is el and play "The Clansmen dem[illegible] nesday, some[illegible] it's a big legitimany ways the open- of a Nation" for its rks a new order of of film.

Time-Feb. 27-15

Journal of Commerce Feb. 27-15

Great Picture at Liberty.

"The Birth of a Nation," a photographic spectacle founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," will be presented at the Liberty Theatre Wednesday night by D. W. Griffith. Mr. Griffith has been known as the foremost producer of motion pictures and his present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous scope and artistic values of the camera-play. He devoted eight months to its making and employed the services of 18,000 people and 3,000 horses to get his effects. A complete musical score has been written for the production by Joseph Carl Briel, and will be played by an orchestra of forty pieces.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to America. Its progress is closely related to phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wa[illegible] of the abolition movement comes the [illegible] War, with its terrible battles; Sh[illegible] s march to the sea; the burning of [illegible] the fall of Petersburg; [illegible] Grant; the assassination [illegible] revival of the power [illegible] Ku Klux Klan's

Globe Feb. 27-15

IMPRESSIONS OF THE PLAY

By CORA MOORE.

Mr. D. W. Griffith and "The Birth of a Nation."

Motion pictures may never supplant the acted drama, but they are really certain to become a vital factor in the amusement world, and actually to assume by virtue of a "vital fitness a place on the plane with the 'legitimate.'"

"Which is to say," continued Mr. D. W. Griffith, "that while undoubtedly there will always be poor picture plays and indifferent ones, just as there will always be poor and indifferent spoken dramas, there will also come into the reckoning picture plays of such superlative worth that they will appeal to the highest class of theatre patron just as pertinently as the higher articulate dramas. The motion picture industry will become standardized."

Mr. D. W. Griffith is the man of the hour in the motion picture world. He started as a casual observer, but so assiduously did he exercise his creative faculties, initiative, and determination, with which "whatever side there is" had blessed him at birth that he was soon actively interested, rising from higher to higher capacities at an unbelievable rate until he now becomes producer. Even that is not all. His latest achievement is a holiday spectacular production, "The Birth of a Nation," which opens at the Liberty Theatre on March 3, a very large order, indeed, for a man who is not yet, well—who is still very young.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the last word in moving picture art to date. Altogether different, more pretentious, more interesting and more worth while than anything that has yet been attempted in film production. In fact, it will discount the opinion of some of the leading authorities if it does not only revolutionize the moving picture world but have an influence upon the economic and social future of the world as well.

"When you stop to think of it," [illegible] Mr. Griffith, "pictures are [illegible] natural, the primitive, medium [illegible] expressing man and episodes and [illegible] events. Without the aid [illegible] to describe it, the baby understands what its eyes behold, and [illegible] visualize thoughts [illegible] them into words, and [illegible]

D. W. Griffith.

"But compare them with, for instance, 'The Birth of a Nation,' in which in making the film 8,000 persons took part, 3,000 horses, and in which the action is scattered over the whole territory from New York to Mexico, and every detail is as carefully developed in action as it would be were it the main incident of a play on the stage.

"'The Birth of a Nation' is based on Thomas Dixon's 'The Clansman,' which serves as a thread to connect interesting events in the making of American history. Take one of his features for illustration—say the as-

Eve. Sun Sat-Feb 27-1915

New Photo Plays.

LIBERTY THEATRE.—On Wednesday night, March 3, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York a photographic spectacle entitled "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as the foremost producer of motion picture spectacles and he believes he has outdone in this feature all previous achievements. The producer devoted eight months to making the picture, and employed 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians. The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Columbia, the downfall of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox, the assassination of Abraham Lincoln and then the reconstruction period; the Ku Klux Klan's solution of the problem, the establishment of everlasting peace in the end.

From [illegible]

Address SEATTLE, WASH.

Date

"Birth of a Nation."

Director D. W. Griffith of Reliance has obtained the Liberty Theatre in New York for the presentation of his motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation."

"The Birth of a Nation" is described as a working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his novel and play, "The Clansman." Where the

From

Address: New York City

Date Samuel Goldfish

Est. 84

Returns to New York

Sam Goldfish, who returned last Monday from an extended transcontinental tour and visit to the studios of the Lasky Feature Play Company in Hollywood, California, declares that he has been greatly impressed by the manner in which the moving picture industry is evidently approaching legitimate theatrical conditions.

"Elaborate feature productions, based either on successful plays or established works of fiction, are the order of the day from New York to the Pacific," says Goldfish. "The old-time authorities who predicted that the feature business would turn out to be only a fad must feel strangely now if they are correctly informed.

"Throughout my trip I was impressed by the rapidity with which the moving picture business is apparently becoming more and more similar to the conditions of 'legitimate' theatrical management. After seeing Griffith's 'The Birth of a Nation,' which is founded on 'The Clansman,' I was forever convinced of one thing—that it is no longer the length but the value of the picture which counts. The time has forever gone when people will want to see a picture just because it moves and because it is a certain number of thousand feet in length. The wise producer is the man who makes the picture precisely the length that the nature and force of the subject demand, just as the wise playwright does not gauge himself by the number of words in his comedy or drama. This means that the picture industry is getting down to the elements of 'show business' and that the ultimate aim must be to provide for audiences those things which are truly of most absorbing interest.

"During my trip I tried to analyze local exhibiting conditions in many cities and found them amazingly uniform. It is evident that the time has come, or is fast coming, when the motion picture 'manufacturer,' who turns out so many reels, yet 'reels' of so many brands, must be taken from the map and only the few [illegible]

... return to the primitive. That ... way to account for the ... interest in moving pictures ... is another: The stage is ... perfect human life and ... ditions, and the public is ... critical ... any play that falls ... pose. But, as a matter of ... fact, however it may meas... what we have cause to ex... must fall short of being ... on of human character ... sense it is a physical ... corporate in the ... s ... of to the present-... word ... as all the details ... be put into it to make ... al and fully satisfying re... of human events. At best it ... deal with important points ... ch business, as is absolutely ... to the development of the ... which necessarily leaves much ... imagination. Not," catching ... remark, "that something ... be left to the imagination. ... aspects of this particular ... comparison between moving ... and the dramatic stage, ... be no question that ... mes to giving to the world ... robbing, human interest ... screen is much better ... fulfil requirements than ... ions, plots, stories that ... dial incidents, scenes that ... widely separated sections ... , situations that are on ... is scale or that require ... participants, as mob ... scenes and so on, for ... matter stage is entirely ... although splendid and ... productions of this sort ... r, "Infe... the Hi... stories ... made

... the whole series of ... events enacted as ... graphically as if he had been present. ... the audience assembling in ... the Ford Theatre, in the costumes of ... the period; he sees the craning of ... necks and confusion which indicate ... that the president has entered his box.

"Then Booth enters. Spectators of ... the picture watch his stealthy movements, see the shooting, the assassin's dash from the box to the stage, catching his foot in the flag as he leaps, then limping on his injured leg it sees him mount his horse and ride away in the darkness. Then the spectator is taken back to the scenes in the theatre, and so on. Do pardon my having gone into all this. I am not trying to help the press agent along. I do assure you, but I want to make my point of contention—that the scope of the moving picture embraces not only entertainment, but a permanent source of education. Shown at any future time, a picture of today will teach the facts of our contemporary history better and more vividly than any other method. Our reels of film will be to our descendants, to students of the past which is our present, what parchment records, Babylonian bricks, inscribed monuments, and stones are to us, as we seek for knowledge of ancient peoples.

"In depicting events thus accurately and placing every episode in its proper locale, surrounded with its proper atmosphere, so far as possible, there is necessarily interwoven in 'The Birth of a Nation' what we have of folk-lore and legend. It is a play of realism, but it also has tradition and fantasy mingled with its history-making events — as, indeed, ... could it be otherwise!"

... play. The ... play picture touched only upon ... of the reconstruction period. In the South, the Griffith treatment, by ... of the larger possible scope of motion picture, embraces the entire historical relationship of the slavery question to the development of American history. After arrangements had been made with Thomas Dixon to utilize his story, the author suggested the change in name. The appeal of the enlarged story is thus more comprehensively covered in the title.

The taking of The Liberty by Griffith and his associates brings theatregoers up to the $2 motion picture. This is the first definite laying of plans toward such an end.

the map, and only the few genuine moving picture producers will remain

From Raleigh, N. C.

Address

Date

Dixon Novel in Movies.

"The Birth of a Nation," a moving picture based on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," is being shown at the White House tonight in a special exhibition for the President. The picture is of special interest to North Carolina as it is reported that the scene of the novel and the picture is laid there. The scene of "The Leopard's Spots" was also laid in North Carolina. Mr. Dixon is here. Judge J. Crawford Biggs, of Raleigh, is here.

Miss Mary Clewes Daniels, of Wilson, who has been visiting the Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Daniels left today for North Carolina. She will visit at the home of Representative and Mrs. Claude Kitchin before returning to her home in Wilson.

188

From Telegram

Address BRADFORD, PA

Date

President Wilson and Cabinet viewed David Griffith's latest success, "The Birth of a Nation," in the east room of the White House last week. This gripping five-reel feature is based on Thomas Dixon story, called "The Clansman."

4

From BEACO

Address

Date

Evening

San Francisco, Cal.

...son's Daughters Give 'Movie' Show

...ent Only Guest at Entert...in... Given in the White Ho...

84

WASHINGTON, ... President Wilson was the only guest ... movie show arranged by his ... at the White House to... e pictures shown were ... Thomas Dixon's book, "The ... ation." They showed the ... negro ... ce in this ... ary to ...

Eve. Mail

D. W. Griffith, ... was in Washing... on two ... father ... ... father ... she ... institut... which ... ...ch of a N...

"The "movie" ... Dixon's Clansm... of the Presiden... derstood that ... desire to see ... heard it praise... diately made ... she ... in the ...

Birth of a Nation," Shows Civil War Scenes

THE SLAVE MART IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Audience at the Liberty Applauds Great Motion Picture Based on "The Clansman," and Lobby Report Is That the Censor Will Cut It.

That much discussed motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," that has had Broadway talking for several weeks at the pioneer "two dollar 'movie,'" had its first public performance last night in the Liberty Theatre. With so much said in advance the photo drama had a task cut out for itself. Judging from the enthusiasm it aroused and the close attention that a large audience gave to it, "The Birth of a Nation" more than fulfilled its promises.

It is really a film version of Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman," which stirred the hysterical to praise and condemnation when presented in dramatic form some years ago. It is a story well known, being a tale of the South in the days of reconstruction and an exposé of the Ku Klux Klan.

Other pretentious and elaborate motion picture dramas have been shown in Broadway in the legitimate theatres for runs of considerable length. "Quo Vadis?" "Cabiria" and "Last Days of Pompeii" are a few that came from foreign producers. "Neptune's Daughters," that had a run in the Globe Theatre, was an example of American workmanship. "The Birth of a Nation" is American in story, in scenes and in production.

Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," spoke before the first audience last night and gave full credit for the extraordinary production to the director, D. W. Griffith who stepped before the curtain too should one say "speech"?) also and made a few remarks about finding motion pictures from the curb of conservatism.

It was reported that "The Birth of a Nation" will bring the censors' scissors to portions of the film. Lobby gossip had it that such action was contemplated. The portions said to be objectionable are in the second of the two parts in which negroes are shown about to attack white girls. Maybe when "The Birth of a Nation" finds its way to the five and ten cent picture houses such censorship will be necessary. Experienced theatrical men in last night's audience said that a new epoch in motion pictures is reached in "The Birth of a Nation."

The picture is divided into two parts of six reels each. The first sketches the beginning of the civil war, shows a great battle scene in which hundreds of men acted before the camera and hundreds of horses took part in the cavalry charge. President Lincoln, pictures ably portrayed by Joseph Henabery, was applauded. His Cabinet was pictured, while one of the most dramatic scenes was the assassination of the war time President in Ford's Theatre, a programme note announcing that every detail of the historic playhouse has been observed in the building of a new theatre for picture purposes.

Mr. Griffith has been a prodigy in the first in his invention of unique effects. In the second part we have excellent cinema photography, showing in the supposed town of Piedmont a vividly portrayed. One may make statement that eighteen thousand took part in the making of the film, but the looks of riders, the battle field and the hundred of Klan members, who dashed through woods, across streams and up hills would lead one to think so.

The playing of the different parts, the playing of the different parts, place no less subjugated to the effect although Lillian Gish, as the heroine, Henry Walthall, as the romantic young Southerner, and the inimitable Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper and Mae Marsh, are good.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a big forward for the "movies."

From DRAMATIC MIRROR

Address: New York City

Date

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Griffith's Spectacular Picture Opens at N Price Scale in Liberty Theater

D. vid W. Griffiths latest spectacular production, "The Birth of a Nation," found upon "The Clansman," opens its New Yo engagement to-night at the Liberty Theater. The run will be at a price scale si bar to that charged at the legitimate the ters.

"The Birth of a Nation" has proven a sensation in Los Angeles, where it is playing at Clune's Auditorium. Though the Coast house seats 3,000, speculators have reaped a harvest on the sale of seats. Prices at the Auditorium have run from $1.50 down, a record fee for the Angel City. Coast newspapers tell of speculators securing five dollars and over for single admissions.

Griffith devoted eight months to the production of the feature that has proven so sensational. Eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses are said to have been used to secure the desired effects. For the New York engagement a complete score has been written by Joseph Carl Briel, and the accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with its terrific battles, Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the downfall of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox, the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, the ordeal of the reconstruction period, the Ku Klux Klan solution of the problem, and the establishment of a permanent peace in the end.

Dramatic Mirror Mar 3 1884

NOW PLAYING
LIBERTY THEATRE
House Remodelled According to Scientific Adjustment of Focal

Dramatic Mirror Mar 3 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

ter. The run will be at a price scale similar to that charged at the legitimate theaters.

"The Birth of a Nation" has proven a sensation in Los Angeles, where it is playing at Clune's Auditorium. Though the Coast house seats 3,000, speculators have reaped a harvest on the sale of seats. Prices at the Auditorium have run from $1.50 down, a record fee for the Angel City. Coast newspapers tell of speculators securing five dollars and over for single admissions.

Griffith devoted eight months to the production of the feature that has proven so sensational. Eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses are said to have been used to secure the desired effects. For the New York engagement a complete score has been written by Joseph Carl Briel, and the accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with its terrific battles, Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the downfall of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox, the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, the ordeal of the reconstruction period, the Ku Klux Klan solution of the problem, and the establishment of a permanent peace in the end.

That such [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] Theatre. With [illegible] that a [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] premiere.

It is really a film version of Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman," and [illegible] the hysterical to [illegible] admiration when [illegible] form some [illegible] known, being a tale of [illegible] days of reconstruction [illegible] the Ku Klux Klan.

Other pictures and [illegible] picture dramas have [illegible] Broadway in the [illegible] for runs of considerable length. "[illegible] Vadis?" "[illegible]" and "Last Days of [illegible]" are a few that come from [illegible] Hoodoo," and "Neptune's Daughter," that had a run in the Globe Theatre, was an example of American workmanship. "The Birth of a Nation" is American in story, in scenes and in production.

Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," spoke before the first audience last night and gave full credit for the extraordinary production to the director, D. W. Griffith who stepped before the curtain (or should one say "screen"?) also and made a few remarks about freeing motion pictures from the curb of censorship.

It was reported that "The Birth of a Nation" will bring the censors' scissors to portions of the film. Lobby gossip had it that such action was contemplated. The [illegible] of [illegible] "Birth of a Nation" [illegible] most dramatic [illegible] the [illegible] of the war time [illegible] Theatre, a programme [illegible] every detail of the history [illegible] been observed in the lobby [illegible] theatre for picture patrons.

Mr. Griffith has been [illegible] the first in his [illegible] effects. In the second [illegible] cellent cinema photography [illegible] in the supposed town of [illegible] vividly portrayed. One [illegible] statement that eighteen [illegible] took part in the making of [illegible] but the mobs of rioters, [illegible] the field and the hundreds [illegible] Klan members, who dashed [illegible] woods, across streams and up [illegible] would lead one to think so.

The playing of the different [illegible] more or less subjugated to the [illegible] although Lillian Gish, as the [illegible] Henry Walthall, as the hero; [illegible] Seigmann, as the mulatto villain, Misses Miriam Cooper and Mae [illegible] were good.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a [illegible] forward for the "movies."

DRAMATIC MIRROR MAR. 3-1915

NOW PLAYING

LIBERTY THEATRE

NEW YORK CITY

At Prices Ranging from 25c. to $2.00

House Remodelled According to Scientific Adjustment of Focal Requirements

The Mightiest Spectacle Ever Produced!

D. W. GRIFFITH'S

Colossal Production Which Will Startle the World!

A Red Blooded Tale of True American Spirit

Love and Romance Midst Historic Scenes

Comedy which relieves the thrill of Adventure

Gripping Heart interest and Soul Stirring Emotions

THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Too Great for Comparisons

Conceived, Inspired and Created in America

The Expression of Genius in a New Realm of Art

A Composition of National Figures with the Universe as its Background

See this Masterpiece, Rich in Historical Value

The Most Realistic and Stupendous [illegible] of Stirring [illegible] in the De-

Founded on Thomas Dixon's Famous Novel and Play

The Clansman

Symphony Orchestra of 40

SEATS NOW

18,000 PEOPLE
3,000 HORSES
8 MONTHS
IN THE MAKING COST $500,000

DRAMATIC MIRROR MAR. 3-15

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

Griffith's Spectacular Picture Opens at New Price Scale in Liberty Theater

David W. Griffiths latest spectacular production, "The Birth of a Nation," founded upon "The Clansman," opens its New York engagement to-night at the Liberty Theater. The run will be at a price scale similar to that charged at the legitimate theaters.

"The Birth of a Nation" has proven a sensation in Los Angeles, where it is playing at Clune's Auditorium. Though the Coast house seats 3,000, speculators have reaped a harvest on the sale of seats. Prices at the Auditorium have run from $1.50 down, a record fee for the Angel City. Coast newspapers tell of speculators securing five dollars and over for single admissions.

Griffith devoted eight months to the production of the feature that has proven so sensational. Eighteen thousand people and three thousand horses are said to have been used to secure the desired effects. For the New York engagement a complete score has been written by Joseph Carl Briel, and the accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with its terrific battles, Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the downfall of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox, the assassination of Abraham Lincoln, the ordeal of the reconstruction period, the Ku Klux Klan's solution of the problem, and the establishment of a permanent peace in the end.

EBIRTH OF NATION' GFILM HIT

Historical Drama Developed "The Clansman," Most erful, Gripping, Patriotic ire Play Yet Produced

'Cabiria' and 'Quo Vadis' m Tame—Romance Cost 0,000 — Crowd Leaving atre Exclaims 'Wonderful.'

ERTY THEATRE — "The of a Nation," a historical in two acts founded on as Dixon's story, "The Clans- presented by D. W. Griffith.

THE CAST:

Ben Cameron.....Henry Walthall
Janet Cameron, the elder sister, Miriam Cooper
, the pet sister.....Mae March
Cameron.....Josephine Crowell
Cameron.....Spottiswoode Aiken
Cameron, the second son, J. A. Beringer Cameron .....John French
zy, their servant.....Jennie Lee Austin Stoneman, Leader of the se .....Ralph Lewis
, his daughter.....Lillian Gish his older son .....Elmer Clifton the younger son.....Robert Harron the Blacksmith.....Wallace Reed
t Brown .....Mary Alden
Lynch, mulatto Lieutenant-Gov- nor .....George Seigmann
.....Walter Long
ham Lincoln.....Joseph Henabery
n Wilkes Booth .....Raoul Walsh
. U. S. Grant.....Donald Crisp
. Robert E. Lee.....Howard Gaye

THE time has come when it is possible for the descendants of those who fought for rival s in this free land to forget old arrels and remember only the at fact that they are now all others.

Not long ago it might have ap- ared perilous to produce "The ansman." That play was, none e less, produced with wide success. fore that we had seen and read ton's Dixon's novel.

And now Mr. D. W. Griffith, to hose enterprise we have been in- bted for so many picture plays, as had the courage to invest a beral fortune in the production of hat, on the programmes of the Liberty last night, was called an istorical drama in two acts, en- tled, "The Birth of a Nation."

This latest and most wondrous of ll "movies" is a development of Mr. Dixon's story. Beside it, even picture plays like "Cabiria" and "Quo Vadis" will seem tame. To the United States, at all events, "movie" ever seen has had a quarter of the deep and passionate interest of the new Griffith show.

For, as we know, in "The Clans- man" we were told of the welding of the North and South into one nation. We were also told of the struggle which came after, between Whites and Blacks, which raged so fiercely in days of the far-famed Ku-Klux Klan. No theme, with the exception of the rebellion against England and King George, could make the appeal of Mr. Dixon's to this country. The appeal is grip- ping, it is tragic, it is vital.

Add to the new form of a moving picture spectacle, no doubt it made to countless thousands who attended the per- formances at the Liberty last night seemed to their utmost depths, this great drama like it was never before would be to misrepre- sent the case. The truth might be stated far more fitness if the manufactured story ever there was quite so like lated in our histories.

"Birth of a Nation" one thrills and thrills enough ral plays. But they are creation, by "the little Colonel," who is the hero of the tale, of the Ku-Klux Klan.

Perhaps the most fascinating of the many wonderful scenes in the new "drama" are those which show the pursuit of a negro criminal by the avenging clans, and the rescue, first of a town and then of Colonel Cameron, by the white-sheeted Ku-Klux men.

Bound up, too, with the greater and darker tragedy of the recon- struction period, we see the ironi- cally treated episode of Silas Lynch, the mulatto Lieutenant Governor and favorite of "Stoneman"; the vain efforts of that rascal to win the affection and the hand of Elsie Stoneman, and the resulting shock to the Radical leader's theories as to the right relationship between the freed slaves and those who had once owned them.

As an epilogue, in "The Birth of a Nation," we have an appeal for peace.

Mr. Griffith has achieved the seemingly impossible in this latest and most brilliant of his successes. And to succeed, he has spared neither pains nor money.

The war scenes have been repro- duced from the real battlefields. The episodes of Lincoln's murder and the surrender of brave Lee are taken from authentic pictures.

Eight months or more were spent in preparing "The Birth of a Na- tion." As for the cost—it is said to have been close on $150,000. They were well invested.

Music, good music of its own kind, adds to our enjoyment of the new "drama."

The tale of love and war is told to the accompaniment, now of music, now of "America" and

The Sun Mar 4, 1915

PICTURE DRAMA OF SLAVERY PRESENTED

Griffith Production of "The Birth of a Nation" Put On at the Liberty.

18,000 PEOPLE IN SCENES

Something here the never attempted on so great a scale in motion pictures is the production last night at the Liberty Theatre of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation." The story is based on Thomas Dixon's novel and play "The Clansman."

According to all reports this film spectacle is the greatest and largest ever produced. At any rate it took eight months to prepare, and the services in capacity or another of some 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were re-

[illegible] principle we have been indebted for so many picture plays, has had the courage to invest a liberal fortune in the production of what, on the programme at the Liberty last night, was called an historical drama in two acts, entitled, "The Birth of a Nation."

This latest and most wonderful of all "movies" is a development of Mr. Dixon's story. Beside it even crime plays like "Cabiria" and "Madame Sans Gêne" will seem tame. To the United States, at all events, the "movie" ever seen has had a quality of the deep and passionate interest of the new Griffith show.

For, as we know, in "The Clansman," we were told of the welding of the North and South into one nation. We were also told of the struggle which came after, between Whites and Blacks, which raged so fiercely in days of the far-famed Ku-Klux Klan. No theme, with the exception of the rebellion against England and King George, could have the appeal of Mr. Dixon's to this country. The appeal is gripping. It is tragic. It is vital.

And, in the new form of a moving picture spectacle, no doubt it will be made to countless thousands.

Those who attended the performance at the Liberty last night were stirred to their inmost depths. To say that nothing like it was ever seen before would be to misrepresent the case. The truth might be expressed [illegible] far more fitness if [illegible] no pictured story ever [illegible] there was quite so like [illegible] [illegible]ated in our histories.

[illegible] Birth of a Nation" one [illegible] thrills and throbs enough [illegible] several plays. But they are made of historic facts, not fancies. The romance of our big war can charm us now without causing bitterness and inspiring hate. It is part and parcel of a past heroic age.

For the time being, too, the big racial question dealt with in "The Clansman" and in the new picture show no longer burns. So, with a little luck, it should be possible to coin fortunes out of "The Birth of a Nation" without causing riots.

Though in the strict sense it is not a "drama," the screen adaptation of Mr. Dixon's novel comes nearer to being a real play than most such things. It sweeps one on and on, after the earlier and more idyllic episodes, with the force of a whirlwind. And at the end it leaves the spectators breathless.

It contains the substance of two stirring love stories which are contrasted with a series of dark tragedies. The first half of the "drama" (or pictured narrative) shows the soft, happy Southern life, "befo' de war," in the town of Piedmont.

To the home of Dr. Cameron, a typical Southerner, Phil Stoneman comes visiting from Washington. He promptly falls in love with Margaret Cameron. Be[illegible] the eldest of his host's three so[illegible] is later as "the Little [illegible]" grows e[illegible] of Stoneman, thou[illegible] only by a mini[illegible] [illegible] Klan.

Perhaps the [illegible] the most wonderful [illegible] new "stunts" are [illegible] the pursuit of [illegible] the evening [illegible] guest of a town [illegible] Cameron by the [illegible] Klux men.

Boiled up, too, [illegible] and darker [illegible] situation [illegible] vally treated [illegible] the realistic [illegible] and "carpet-bag" [illegible] vain efforts of that [illegible] to win the affection and the [illegible] of Elsie Stoneman, and the [illegible] back to the Radical leaders [illegible] as to the right relation [illegible] between the freed slaves and those who had once owned them.

As an epilogue, in "The Birth of a Nation," we have an appeal for peace.

Mr. Griffith has achieved the seemingly impossible in this latest and most brilliant of his successes. And to succeed, he has spared neither pains nor money.

The war scenes have been reproduced from the real battlefields. The episodes of Lincoln's murder and the surrender of brave Lee are taken from authentic pictures.

Eight months or more were spent in preparing "The Birth of a Nation." As for the cost—it is said to have been close on $150,000. They were well invested.

Music, good music of its own kind, adds to one's enjoyment of the new "drama."

The tale of love and war is told to the accompaniment, now of "Dixie," now of "America" and now of quaint and languorous negro airs.

Rarely, if ever, has a movie "drama" been so well interpreted as this one. The actors in the real though shadowy cast put life and truth into their parts. Especially eloquent was the miming of Mr. Walthall as "the little Colonel," Mr. Lewis as Stoneman, Mr. Henabery as Lincoln, Miss Cooper as Margaret, Miss Gish as Elsie and Miss Marsh as Flora.

The ushers in the house last night wore flounced dresses in the 1860 mode, while two sentinels, attired as Federal soldiers, stood on guard in the theatre lobby.

With its throbs and thrills, its blending of history and romance, its heroic spirit and its emotional power, "The Birth of a Nation" will prove irresistible.

Last night it scored a triumph at the Liberty. It will run long and far and wide and win the world.

The Sun New York, [illegible]

PICTURE DRAMA OF SLAVERY PRESENTED

Griffith Production of "The Birth of a Nation" Put On at the Liberty.

18,000 PEOPLE IN SCENES

Something heretofore never attempted [illegible] so great a scale in motion pictures was the production last night at the [illegible]ty Theatre of D. W. Griffith's "The [illegible]th of a Nation." The story is based [illegible] Thomas Dixon's novel and play "The [illegible]man."

According to all reports this film [illegible]tacle is the greatest and largest ever [illegible]duced. At any rate it took eight [illegible]ths to prepare, and the services in [illegible] capacity of another of some 18,[illegible] persons and 3,000 horses were re[illegible]d to obtain the needed effect.

[illegible]ge audience which saw this that [illegible] showing last night went away [illegible] belief that the production is a [illegible]ward in the demonstration of the [illegible] and artistic values of the camera. The dramatic appeal was praised [illegible]larly.

[illegible] story begins in the seventeenth [illegible] with the bringing of African [illegible] to North America. Its further [illegible] is closely related to varied [illegible] of slavery and its bearing upon [illegible]ry of the United States.

[illegible] wake of the abolition move[illegible] the civil war, with its bat[illegible] the toll of death and broken [illegible] Sherman's march to the sea, [illegible]ng of Atlanta, the downfall [illegible]ng, Lee's surrender to Grant [illegible]attox, the assassination of Lincoln, the ordeal of the re[illegible]construction period, the Ku-Klux Klan, [illegible] establishment of overlasting peace [illegible] the end.

[illegible] of these historic scenes were given [illegible] in detail. A drama of human conflicts [illegible] shown with well drawn characters [illegible] linked history to romance, for there is [illegible] plenty of romance and excitement in [illegible] the p[illegible] which is participated in and [illegible] woven about the adventures of a family [illegible] of boys, one from the North and the [illegible] from the South, both [illegible] association [illegible] up by the old wate[illegible]

A musical score was built up for the presentation by Joseph Carl Breil and [illegible] and indi[illegible]

From AMERICAN

Address: New York City

Date FEB 23 1915

Griffith Honored in the Capital

D. W. GRIFFITH, whose spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington where, on Friday night, before the National Press Club, he gave a private exhibition of this wonderful picture. Chief Justice White, of the United States Supreme Court, was the guest of honor.

On Thursday evening Mr. Griffith will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club at their "Inside Dope Night," and will deliver a talk along the lines indicated by this event upon the development of the art of motion pictures in this country.

N.Y. Herald Feb. 23-1915

Mr. D. W. Griffith gave a private demonstration of his spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which will come to the Liberty Theatre next week, before the National Press Club in Washington, D. C., on last Friday night. Chief Justice White, of the United States Supreme Court; Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight members of the Senate and about fifty members of the House were present. Mr. Griffith, who has returned to New York, will deliver an address on the art of motion pictures in this country before the National Press Club next Thursday night.

Los Angeles Sunday Times. Feb. 14-1915

EVERYBODY KNOWS HER; NOBODY LIKES HER.

Yet We Couldn't Imagine Life Without Her and Probably Would not Want to—She is the Lady in "The Song of Songs" and Many Other Pictures—"The Lie" Poorly Written and so is "A Mix-up"—Clever Work by Actors.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

[illegible] you have guessed that I [illegible] about birds, but about [illegible] Clubman" and that I learned [illegible] that the birds told me that [illegible] I would make out of blonde [illegible] not hold any sweeter possibilities than the Lord has made out of black and white. If a clear [illegible] from a brown throat, I [illegible] will take it as the praise of [illegible] asking Providence to do [illegible] all over again, and without [illegible] that I could do it any [illegible]

• •

[illegible] picture actors and actresses [illegible] much credit individually [illegible] the work, and, in spite of [illegible] have been written about "The [illegible]," I want to use just one [illegible] paragraph to say a good word [illegible] Miss March. Miss [illegible]

You may think this, that [illegible] other about "The Clubman," [illegible] V. Griffith's turbulent [illegible] people cannot differ about [illegible] by Intolerance—[illegible] acting of the lady [illegible] the sister of the Little [illegible]

Miss March [illegible] great beauty, but [illegible] ty of natural [illegible] work for [illegible]

Movie stars [illegible] to leave Hollywood [illegible] It is likely that [illegible] receive the three million [illegible] notable women [illegible] of the [illegible]

The photo[illegible] of Miss March [illegible] Adams, but [illegible]

[illegible] Movie Pictures

CLUNES AUDITORIUM

New Yo 1915

2-21-1915

evenscender.

[illegible]

EVENING GLOBE
New York City
FEB 22 1915

ane Wilbur has joined the Lubin p y to play opposite Mary son.

* * *

W. Griffith, whose spectacle,
"The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington where on Friday night, before the Na-ior ress Club, he gave a private h on of this wonderful picture.
Justice White of the United States Supreme Court was the guest of honor. Other distinguished personages present were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight members of the United States Senate, and about fifty representatives from the House.

Next Thursday night Mr. Griffiin recognition of his remarkabl achievements with this picture, wil be the guest of honor of the National Press Club at their "Inside Dope
," and will tell about the develnt of the art of motion pictures e country.

From AMERICAN
Address: New York City
Date

Griffith Honored in the Capital

D. W. GRIFFITH, whose spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington where, on Friday night, before the National Press Club, he gave a private exhibition of this wonderful picture. Chief Justice White, of the United States Supreme Court, was the guest of honor.

On Thursday evening Mr. Griffith will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club at their "Inside Dope Night," and will deliver a talk along the lines indicated by this event upon the development of the art of motion pictures in this country.

N.Y. Herald Feb 23-1915

Mr. D. W. Griffith gave a private demonstration of his spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," which will come to the Liberty Theatre next week, before the National Press Club in Washington, D. C., on last Friday night. Chief Justice White, of the United States Supreme Court; Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight members of the Senate and about fifty members of the House were present. Mr. Griffith, who has returned to New York, will deliver an address on the art of motion pictures in this country before the National Press Club next Thursday night.

m AMERICAN dress: New York City
FEB 22 1915
e

1,500 Persons in Great Film Play

ONE week from to-morrow evening the Liberty Theatre New ablish. s will be given their initial e of "The Birth of a Nation," eatest photo-drama that has far scared a metropolitan ." Coincident with the pre-of this remarkable photo-play will come the elevation of the motion pictures to a $2 stand-entire credit for this remark-achievement belongs to D. W.

. In the staging of this film even outdone himself. 1,500 take part in the production.
Birth of a Nation" is based e famous novel and play by Dixon, entitled "The Clans-

In the opinion of those who opportunity to witness private view of the film that "The th of a Nation" is bound to crea furore along Broadway. Hence coming weeks its appearance
[illegible]

Los Angeles Sunday Times.
Feb. 14-1915

EVERYBODY KNOWS HER; NOBODY LIKES HER.

Yet We Couldn't Imagine Life Without Her and Probably Would not Want to—She is the Lady in "The Song of Songs" and Many Other Plays—"The Lie" Poorly Written and so is "A Mix-up"—Clansman's Acting.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

Perhaps you have guessed that I am not talking about birds, but about "The Clansman," and that I learned from what the birds told me that a world I would make out of blonde girls would not hold any sweeter possibilities than the Lord has made out of plain black and white. If a clear song comes from a brown throat, I guess I will take it as the praise of life, without asking Providence to do its work all over again, and without being too sure that I could do it any better.

* *

Motion picture actors and actresses do not get much credit individually for their fine work, and, in spite of all that has been written about "The Clansman," I want to see just one more paragraph to say a good word for Miss Lillian Gish, Henry Grover and

You may th other about "T
W. Griffith's tu
[illegible]
[illegible]
Miss Marsh l great beauty, l ity of mental l work far exce Movie plays to insure rapid kin to genius it is likely tha receive the ha notable women
The photo-of Billie Burk
Adams, has so
[illegible]
Miss Margaret
by no means
Miss Marsh
high by [illegible]
It was [illegible]
Mr. Griffith
dated it [illegible]
[illegible]
[illegible]
[

...ress Club at their "Inside Dope ..." and will tell about the devel... ...nt of the art of motion pictures ...e country.

m AMERICAN ress: New York City
FEB 22 1915
e

1,500 Persons in Great Film Play

ONE week from to-morrow evening ...t the Liberty Theatre New ...s will be given their initial ...se of "The Birth of a Nation," ...reatest photo-drama that has ...far graced a metropolitan ...n." Coincident with the pre... ...of this remarkable photo-play ...will come the elevation of the ...motion pictures to a $2 stand-

...entire credit for this remark... ...hievement belongs to D. W. ... In the staging of this film ...even outdone himself. 1,800 ...ake part in the production. ...Birth of a Nation" is based ...e famous novel and play by ...Dixon, entitled "The Clans-

...is the opinion of those who ...ve had an opportunity to witness ...private view of the film that "The ...rth of a Nation" is bound to cre... ...a furore along Broadway. Hence ...adway awaits its appearance ...h eagerness.

...t. Sun Feb. 22-915

D. W. Griffith, whose spectacle, "The ...rth of a Nation," comes to the Lib... ...ty Theatre next week, returned yes... ...day from Washington, D. C., where ...Friday night before the National ...ss Club he gave a private exhibi... ...of the picture. Chief Justice ...of the United States Supreme ...was the guest of honor. Other ...distinguished personages present were ...retary of the Navy Daniels, thirty... ...members of the United States ...and about fifty Representatives ...the House. Next Thursday night ...Griffith will be the guest of honor ...the National Press Club at their ...Dope Night."

ENING STAR
Washington, D. C.

EVERYBODY KNOWS HER; NOBODY LIKES HER.

Yet We Couldn't Imagine Life Without Her and Probably Would not Want to—She is the Lady in "The Song of Songs" and Many Other Plays—"The Lie" Poorly Written and so is "A Mix-up"—Clansman's Acting.

BY HENRY CHRISTEEN WARNACK.

Perhaps you have guessed that I am not talking about birds, but about "The Clan-man," and that I learned from what the birds told me that a world I would make out of blonde girls would not hold any sweeter possibilities than the Lord has made out of plain black and white. If a clear song comes from a brown throat, I guess I will take it as the praise of the, without asking Providence to do its work all over again, and without being too sure that I could do it any better.

* * *

Motion-picture actors and actresses do not get much credit individually for their fine work, and, in spite of all that has been written about "The Clansman," I want to use just one more paragraph to say a good word for Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper and Mary Alden for their excellent acting. Miriam Cooper has only to appear on the stage to create a poem. As the elder of the Cameron sisters she has not much to do, but her beauty and sublimity are profoundly impressive. Mae Marsh has a touch of gladness and of girlhood in her scene with the squirrel at the spring that is the ecstacy of art, and in the repellent part of Gus, Walter Long is masterly. Mary Alden's role is not pleasant as Lydia Brown, the mulatto woman, but it is taken consummately and compels my admiration. A bigger piece of work I have not seen in a long time.

What the Screens Next Offer Their Patrons.

Follo... ...ne end of Otis Skinner's ...engagement at the Liberty, D. W. Griffith w... ...present there his spectacle, "The ...rth of a Nation." It will ...open in W... ...Monday night, March 3.

From POST
Address: Washington, D. C.
Date FEB 24 1915

D. W. Griffith, the Belasco of the films, spent three days in Washington last week superintending the first showing in the ...of the masterpiece of the master, "The Birth of a Nation," at the White House and before the members of the National Press Club.

Est...

THE GREAT BATTLE SCENE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION," FILM DRAMA AT THE LIBERTY NEXT WEEK.

From EVENING STAR
Address: Washington, D. C.
Date
Est

"The Birth of a Nation" Shown.

"The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture film which took eight months to produce, and which is based on Thomas Dixon's book "The Clansman," was shown before a private assemblage by David W. Griffith, the producer, at the Raleigh Hotel last night, under the auspices of the National Press Club.

In the reserved seats sat Chief Justice White of the Supreme Court of the United States, who was guest of honor, and Mrs. White, together with many members of Congress and members of the diplomatic corps.

From POST DISPATCH
Address: St. Louis, Mo.
Date
Establ

PRESIDENT WITNESSES MOVING PICTURES IN THE WHITE HOUSE

Performance of "A Birth of a Nation," Based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," Given in East Room.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18. The east room of the White House last night looked like a miniature moving picture theater when President Wilson, Miss Wilson and a few members of the cabinet with their families saw a performance of "A Birth of a Nation."

The famous movie is based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman." Dixon is one of the President's classmates. It is understood that the President evinced a desire to see the great spectacular show after he had heard it highly praised. Miss Wilson immediately made the arrangements to satisfy the President's wishes in the privacy of the White House.

Because the White House is in mourning [illegible]

From DEUTSCHES JOURNAL
Address: New York City
Date
Esta 1884

Im Liberty Theater kommt am 3. März ein neues historisches Drama „The Birth of a Nation" zu seiner Erstaufführung. [illegible] nach der Novelle „The Clansmen" von Thomas Dixon bearbeitet und schildert Begebnisse, wie sie in den Südstaaten nach Beendigung des [illegible] vielfach vorgekommen

TELEPHONE 929 CHELSEA

Intended for

"O wad some power the giftie gi'e us
To see oursel's as ithers see us."

HENRY ROMEIKE, Inc.
106-110 Seventh Ave., N. Y. City
NEW YORK

CABLE ADDRESS: MEIKE" NEW YORK

The First Established and Most Complete Newspaper Cutting Bureau in the World

From TRAVELER & EVE. HERALD
Address: Boston, Mass.
Date
Tab

BROADWAY TAKES TRY AT $2 MOVIES

84 Nation" Pro-

'ork for 100.

RIALTO.

NEWS
From Address GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.
Date
Establ

Dramatic Chatter

BY BEAU RIALTO.
(Written for the United Press.)

NEW YORK, Feb. 20.—New York is to see its first $2 moving picture show this week, and Broadway first nighters, whose tastes have been satisfied with pretty girls and twinkling toes for a moon or two, are wondering if the promoters can get away with it.

By an arrangement with Klaw and Erlanger, D. W. Griffith will take over the Forty-Second Street theater for the production, which is "The Birth of a Nation." It is a complete working out of the contributory themes in American history on which Thomas Dixon founded his novel and play, "The Clansman." Over 18,000 people were employed in making the production.

The promoters say it is "the most stupendous undertaking of the kind the world has ever known."

ETHEL GREEN AT THE EMPRESS

Polar Wave Uses New Scheme for

From Address Cincinnati, Ohio
Date
Esta

GRIFFITH'S

Great Spectacle

The Birth of a Nation, Founded on The Clansman, First $2 Admission Picture

New York, Feb. 12.—By an arrangement completed with Klaw & Erlanger, D. W. Griffith will take over the Liberty Theater at the end of this month for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle, The Birth of a Nation. The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this house.

The Birth of a Nation is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history, upon which Thomas Dixon foundded his famous novel and play, The Clansman. Where the play proper touched upon phases of the reconstruction period in the South, the Griffith treatment, by means of the marvelously enlarged art of motion pictures, embraces the entire historical relationship of the slavery question to the development of American history. After arrangements had been made with Thomas Dixon to utilize his well-known story the author suggested the change in name so that the scope and tremendous appeal of the enlarged story could be more comprehensively covered in the title.

The taking of the Liberty by Mr. Griffith and his associates realizes another advance and brings theatergoers up to the $2 moving picture. This is the first time that plans have actually been laid to bring this about.

The Birth of a Nation will be given in New York upon a scale which means the dawn of greater accomplishments in the theater than would have been deemed possible a year ago. It is the most stupendous undertaking of the kind the world has been shown. Over 18,000 people were employed in the making of the great spectacle and a specially written [illegible] that elaborates the various [illegible] will be played as an [illegible] phony orchestra [illegible] W. Griffith

Phila - Feb. 28

OTION PICTURES HERE, "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

TH OF PRESIDENT LINCOLN BY BOOTH AT FORDS THEATRE IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" LIBERTY THEATRE.

From EVENIN

Address: Ne

Date

New Fil

LIBERTY Wednesday night, Griffith will pres time New Yor Spectacle entitled Nation." The st the work is based on's novel and pl town." Mr. Griffith heretofore as the ducer of motion p in homes devoted cultural work. Th voted eight months He employed the 600 people and 3,000 the needed effects. score has been w presentation by Jos The accompaniment by an orchestra of f The story begins teenth century with African slaves to N Its further progress lated to vari-d phase ery question and its the history of the In the wake of the ment comes the Ci Sherman's march to burning of Columbia of Petersburg, Lee's Grant at Appomattox nation of Abraham then the reorganiz the Ku Klux Klan the problem, the eve everlasting peace in drama of human sou in well drawn cha history to memory. that it is all pictures largest play ever com executed by any art world.

German Feb.

Hope enthusiasts will find in the events of the week some features. Chief of these at showing in New York of a spectacle, "The Birth of a Liberty Theatre, and Sh's series of Antarctic pict be shown in Weber's The-entation of "The Birth olution will come in the re in New York. "The is here" is the rather the announcement first but last night, when Otis characters in the Libe "The Silent Voice," and "Be Birth of a Nation" scenes of the play- [illegible] the most [illegible] half- [illegible] the way back [illegible] of the empir- [illegible] Grant in [illegible] Appomattox [illegible] Washington [illegible] Lincoln, of [illegible] and Booth [illegible] Ford's Theatre [illegible] Thousands [illegible]

N.Y. Times Feb. 28-1915

WRITTEN on the SCREEN

LIBERTY THEATRE. "The Birth of a Nation," a [illegible] Griffith [illegible] Liberty [illegible]

STRAND THEATRE. "A Gentleman of Leisure."

VITAGRAPH THEATRE. "The Diamond Queen."

WINTER GARDEN. [illegible] Nature's Avenger."

BROADWAY THEATRE. [illegible] Lost."

PRINCESS THEATRE. [illegible] Co[illegible]

D

[illegible] pictured in some of its most [illegible] details, Sherman's march to [illegible] the burning of Atlanta, the fall [illegible] Petersburg, the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, and the assassination of [illegible] are some of the episodes shown. [illegible] months were taken in making [illegible] which is said to be one of [illegible] most elaborate ever produced. [illegible] 18,000 people and 2,000 horses [illegible] many scenes.

Jack S[illegible] Ch[illegible]

N.Y. Times Feb 28 1915

WRITTEN on the SCREEN

LIBERTY THEATRE—"The Birth of a Nation," a photoplay based on the history of African slavery.

STRAND THEATRE—"A Golden Age of Leisure."

VITAGRAPH THEATRE—"The Barbary Thieves."

WEBER'S THEATRE—Sir Douglas Mawson's Antarctic pictures.

BROADWAY THEATRE—"The Lion's Route."

PRINCESS THEATRE—"Through Central Africa."

D. W. GRIFFITH'S spectacular film production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be given its first public exhibition Wednesday night in the Liberty Theatre. The scenario is based on Thomas Dixon's novel and play, "The Clansman," while the film is exhibited to the accompaniment of special music written by Joseph Carl Briel, composer of the music of "The Climax," and played by a symphony orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of the first African slaves to North America. The civil war is pictured in some of its most striking details, Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the fall of Petersburgh, the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, and the assassination of Lincoln are some of the episodes shown.

Eight months were taken in making the picture, which is said to be one of the most elaborate ever produced. There are 18000 people and 3500 horses in its many scenes.

Times Feb. 28. 1915

D. W. GRIFFITH'S spectacular film production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be given its first public exhibition Wednesday night in the Liberty Theatre. The scenario is based on Thomas Dixon's novel and play, "The Clansman," while the film is exhibited to the accompaniment of special music written by Joseph Carl Briel, composer of the music of "The Climax," and played by a symphony orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of the first African slaves to North America. The civil war is pictured in some of its most striking details, Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the fall of Petersburgh, the surrender of Lee at Appomattox, and the assassination of Lincoln are some of the episodes shown.

Eight months were taken in making the picture, which is said to be one of the most elaborate ever produced. There are 18000 people and 3500 horses in its many scenes.

BKLYN. EAGLE FEB 28 15

"The Birth of a Nation," Liberty.

On Wednesday evening, in the Liberty Theater, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York a photographic spectacle entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel and play "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith is one of the foremost producers of motion pictures. His present production is said to be a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a work of dramatic appeal. The producer devoted eight months to its making. He employed the services of 18000 people and 3500 horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the Seventeenth Century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with its battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the fall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender at Appomattox; the assassination of Abraham Lincoln; the Ku Klux Klan; the negro problem; the rebuilding of the South in the end.

New York City

The Birth of a Nation.

D. W. Griffith wird am Mittwoch, 3. März, im Liberty Theater erstmalig das riesige Photodrama „The Birth of a Nation" zur Vorführung bringen. Das Schauspiel ist auf Thomas Dixons Roman „The Clansman" aufgebaut, behandelt jedoch die ganze Geschichte Amerika's vom Standpunkte der Neger aus, von der Ankunft des Negersklaven an bis zur Ermordung Lincolns.

From.....

Address: New York City

Date.....

The Clarion's Observer passed the Liberty Theatre, where energetic Mr. Griffith's Movie classic, "The Birth of a Nation," is scheduled to appear. "Humph," he grunted, reading from a three-sheet:—"18,000 people in the mightiest 'spectacle ever produced.' They'll never make a success of that. With houses runnin' bum this season, who could ever stand a payroll like THAT every week. Small casts is th' thing, take it frum me."

N. Y. TRIBUNE. FEB. 28-25

[illegible] GISH, AT THE LIBERTY.

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Spectacular Photo Play To Be Given at the Liberty.

D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York, a photographic spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," on Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theatre. The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel and play, "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as the foremost producer of motion picture drama, in fact he has devoted to this style of entertainment his present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvelous people and artistic values of the drama play as a work of photodramatic appeal. There are [illegible] standards by which his production can be gauged. The [illegible] devoted eight months to its [illegible]. He employed the services of 18,000 people and 3,000 horses to get the proper effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Breil. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. By further [illegible] it closely follows the varied [illegible] of the slavery question and its [illegible] part of the United States [illegible]

Eve. Post Feb. 27

Gen. Lee's Surrender
"The Birth of a Nation"
Liberty Theatre, Wed. Night, March 3

"Birth of a Nation" to Be Used as an Argument Against War

When D. W. Griffith took Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," and made it into "The Birth of a Nation," the mammoth moving picture spectacle which is to open at the Liberty Theatre on March 3, he had no idea this play was to be used as an argument against war.

Mr. Griffith's rise to success has been a battle. Hard knocks have not shaken his optimism. But knowledge of what business competition means to men and women, unfitted for the fight, has given the producer a horror of strife in any form.

Unconsciously this feeling governed him in fashioning his play, which is a civil war drama. To what extent the anti-bellum trend runs through it may be judged from the remark of a United States senator, who said, after seeing "The Birth of a Nation":

"It is the greatest indictment against war that any man could devise."

Discussing this phase of the play today, Mr. Griffith said:

Peace after war is not real peace. Hatred, malice and bitterness, direct results of the long four years' struggle, were apparent in the relations of North and South for twenty years after the actual cessation of hostilities.

Our play has attempted to deal with some of these problems now of such vital interest here because of the slaughter abroad. The idea of an unnatural peace is forcibly shown in one of the pictures. This represents thousands of dead men and women strewn over the ground. There is peace at last, but it is the peace of exhaustion.

I believe we have achieved results that cannot be equalled on the stage. For instance, one scene shows an actual battle which stretches over five miles of country. Everything is complete from the lines of trenches to the cannonading of the big guns. Of course this would be impossible on even the largest stage.

The story of "The Birth of a Nation" begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of slaves to America. Various phases of the slavery question follow.

The most graphic are the portrayal of the burning of Atlanta and the downfall of Petersburg. Accurate details of the assassination of Lincoln and Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox Court House are shown.

The production is a result of eight months' work by photographers and actors; 18,000 people and 3,000 horses take part in the action of the play. It is said the entire spectacle represents an outlay of nearly half a million dollars.

Eve. Journal Feb. 27-1915

[illegible] GISH, AT THE LIBERTY

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Spectacular Photo Play To Be Given at the Liberty.

D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York a photographic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," on Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theatre. The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel and play, "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as the foremost producer of motion picture successes in houses devoted to this style of entertainment. His present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvellous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a work of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his newest production can be gauged. The producer devoted eight months to its making. He employed the services of 18,000 people and 3,000 horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War, with its terrific battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the downfall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of Abraham Lincoln; the ordeal of the reconstruction period; the Ku-Klux Klan's solution of the problem; the establishment of an everlasting peace in the end. These historic scenes are, it is said, given in accurate detail.

[illegible] this feeling governed him in fashioning his play, which is a civil war drama. To what extent the anti-Indian trend runs through it may be judged from the remark of a United States senator, who said, after seeing "The Birth of a Nation":

"It is the greatest indictment against war that any man could devise."

Discussing this phase of the play to-day, Mr. Griffith said:

Peace after war is not real peace. Hatred, malice and bitterness, direct results of the long four years' struggle, were apparent in the relations of North and South for twenty years after the actual cessation of hostilities.

[illegible] the number a hard [illegible] in all form.

[illegible]

The story of "The Birth of a Nation" begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of slaves to America. Various phases of the slavery question follow.

The most graphic are the pictures of the burning of Atlanta and the downfall of Petersburg. Accurate details of the assassination of Lincoln and Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox Court House are shown.

The production is a result of eight months' work by photographers and actors; 18,000 people and 3,000 horses take part in the action of the play. It is said the entire spectacle represents an outlay of nearly half a million dollars.

Eve. Journal Feb. 27-1915

2493 "The Birth of a Nation" at Liberty Thea., Mar. 3

David W. Griffith, author [illegible] of the [illegible] drama, "The Birth of a Nation," to be disclosed for the [illegible] time publicly at the Liberty Theatre next Wednesday night, was on Broadway the [illegible] hurrying to Washington. Mr. Griffith arrived here a couple of hours before from Los Angeles, [illegible] shortly after he had [illegible] his [illegible] offices in Longacre Building, the Mutual [illegible] presented a world of [illegible] was in and out of them like a [illegible] Hardee brothers.

After he had been to Washington and successfully completed the round of showing the great photo play to the President, the Supreme Court Justices, members of Congress and members of the National [illegible] Mr. Griffith got back to the [illegible] Wed and [illegible] for a short breathing [illegible] the future of pictures.

"Speaking points to a [illegible] evolution which the most critical [illegible] of us can [illegible] concerning as yet. [illegible] effect, 'The Birth of a Nation,' a human attempt is made to [illegible] the west with happen when the pictorial record replaces the written word as the fable of history.

"I think such a change will ultimately come to pass. Constantly the motion picture is being used to some better purpose, to some higher [illegible] than heretofore. It is a case of broad steps where [illegible] the foreground that [illegible] grow in importance as feet for [illegible] the end of the world; whatever the demands of [illegible] on our [illegible] Nature [illegible] background, provided the eternal beauty and poetry of the great [illegible] events, we can deal with emotions, masses of humanity, of men, of action and [illegible] of progress of our screen story. I am glad to be the first to bring this wonderful development of the screen before the American people, for I am convinced that, however [illegible] of [illegible] the actual workingout, the [illegible] of something new and hopeful [illegible] its there. The severest critics of the theatre [illegible] must admit that its possibilities—yes, [illegible] actual achievements—are [illegible] those of the [illegible] stage."

...ntitled, "The Locks." The owl and the who have ...

SEPT 7, 1915
...BURG (Pa.) POST

...of current happenings aside from war pictures.

NIXON—"Birth of a Nation" Photo Spectacle.

A series of lightning changes in persons, scenes and events in the "Birth of a Nation," beginning its second week at the Nixon, continues to stir tempests of enthusiasm. The photo spectacle opens with a view of the slave market, with all its sordidness. This is followed by a scene in a Southern ballroom, a picture of gayety, during which occurs the call to arms. Tearful farewels, regiments departing in military splendor to the accompaniment of martial music by a special orchestra, which adds its touch of realism; battle scenes, limning effectively the disastrous results of war, and the scenes which mark it the climax of achievement in the motion picture art, the bombardment of Atlanta, and the difficult feats of the Ku-Klux clan, all hold the spectotors under a spell, frequently broken by outbursts of applause.

The film has an appeal from many points of view for the student of history, of psychology, or devotee of fiction. Little freedom is taken with history except ... character of every type

PROVIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE
SEPT. 6, 1915

...ness, the show's best feature is The Country Fair.

A VALUABLE POINTER.

You can realize how a man of moderate means can maintain an automobile when you understand that a wife who spends all her time in the car doesn't need any new clothes.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

Here are a few facts that may interest our sensitive Board of Police Commissioners and likewise interest local theatre managers:

A legal permit for the Chicago production of "The Birth of a Nation" was granted early last spring by the then Mayor Carter Harrison or the Censor Board under his direction. Through political influences or otherwise, this permit was susequently "revoked" by the new Mayor, William Hale Thompson, and Chief of Police Healey, immediately following the new Mayor's election. Joseph J. McCarthy, general manager of the production, then took the matter to the courts. His prayer for an injunction to restrain Mayor Thompson and his Chief of Police from interfering came up before Judge William Fennimore Cooper of the Superior Court. Much testimony was given and much argument adduced by both sides. The result of the court proceedings was a complete victory for "The Birth of a Nation." Judge Cooper, in his decision, said:

"This ground that it will engender race animosity is based purely on assumption. To find that this is a good objection to the allowing of the injunction this court will have to assume that our white citizens will not know or appreciate the fact that the days as presented in the play were early in the first years of the last half century. This court will have to assume that they who will witness the play will be so stupid that they will be unable to comprehend that the people represented on the films were of two or three generations ago. And that they do not, and will not appreciate the fact that in the succeeding time the negro race his advanced almost immeasurably. This court is satisfied from the evidence that in this photoplay the good black man and the bad black man are equally prominent figures. No one race nor nationality has greater rights under the law than any other has. Any race or nationality so offended can best give the lie to the bad characters as presented by continuing to conduct themselves as law-abiding citizens. I am oblized to find under the law and the evidence in this case that the complainant is entitled to the relief prayed for, and I will enter an injunction restraining the Mayor, Chief of Police and the city of Chicago from ... of the losses; and interwoven with the thread of two love idylls, and their satisfactory end, after innumerable barriers have been surmounted.

During the picturing of battle scenes a sense of vastness is transmitted to the spectators.

If there is what seems undue stress laid upon racial qualities at that time, the impression is dispelled at the close by pictures of Hampton Institute, where the negro has made great prog...

Date ..... SEP 11

J. A. McCarthy, who is well known in the motion picture circles of this city, during his present short visit has proved to the amazement of several prominent personages what can be accomplished in this unlimited field. Mr. McCarthy is the general manager of the Epoch Producing Corporation with which D. W. Griffith is intimately associated, and their interests are also closely interwoven with the Triangle Film Company. Some "big doings," which will shortly occur in the motion picture field, were forecasted more than once by Mr. McCarthy.

...but the 50th performance in this ...s "The Birth of a Nation" will be ...at the Liberty Theatre, where the ...rama remains with unabated popu-

THE NIXON.

...owded houses yesterday "The ...at a Nation," D. W. Griffith's ...piece of the Civil war and the ...ction period, opened on the ...ek of its run in the Nixon Thea... ...he appreciation of the Griffith ...s varies from individual admira... ...commend applause. ...t, crowds, Southern streets be... ...ing to the call for volunteers, the ...ds of the South, the historic ...s on the sea, and the calamity that ...in the wake of the gun are the ...swept by in a series of amazing ...s. The story that comes with ... ...horn of its fellow tragedies ... ...are means to the combatant ... ...t home is shown without ... Scenes in the White House ... Washington prison hospital ... pieces of historic reproduction ... second part of the picture ... ...ropolis habited with the ... ...Government that was set ... ...after the war. The ... ...ing, the rise of the ... ...formation of the K... ...pured in a dramatic ... ...Northern and ... ...are caught in the ...

...CHESTER (N. H.) MIRROR 5...
SEPT. 10, 1915

...ually effective and appealing ... ...he central character of this unique dramatic romance she attains a greater success than any of her previous screen triumphs.

Majestic Theatre.

Boston and New England simply would not allow to leave Boston D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," which was seen for 22 years at the Tremont theatre by nearly half the population of Boston, and the past week at the Majestic, making its 23d big week in Boston. The 24th week begins next Monday, Sept. 13. So insatiable has been the desire of the theatre-going population of New England to see more of this marvelous $500,000 production, and so forcible and overwhelming the demand for a longer stay of it in this city, that arrangements had to be made for another theatre as its Boston home. And so the Majestic theatre becomes the fortunate possessor of "The Birth of a Nation" as an attraction for a limited additional stay in Boston.

There have been very few instances in the history of the Boston stage of engagements of a theatrical attraction for such a prolonged stay. It is nearly half a year now that this "eighth wonder of the world" has been presented continuously ... afternoon and evening ... week, every afternoon and evening ... days of each week, as, still crowded ... characterize every presentation ... awe-inspiring and realistic scenes which ... recently associated with the development ... progress of the United States ... as a nation ... the civil ... it and ... after ... employment ...

Date .....

BREEZES FROM ST. LOUIS.

St. Louis, Mo., Sept. 6, 1915.

The popular dramatic company which established itself in public favor during a long season of 44 weeks, closing seven weeks ago for the summer, will open its season Monday, Sept. 6th, at the Park in "Within the Law." The Players Company has been reorganized and strengthened many ways for the season of 1915-'16. Mr. Charles Sinclair will direct the productions as of old. Mr. Bob McClung will do characters and have charge of the stage. Mitchel Harris will handle leads, dividing honors with Miss Evelyn Varden. Others in the cast are Miss Elsie Hitz, characters; Vessie Farrell, Henry Hull, Louis Calhern will assume their old roles with the company.

The bookings for "The Birth of a Nation" now playing at the Olympic theatre, have been so arranged as to keep the big spectacle in the big amusement cents of the country indefinitely. St. Louis will be the only city in which it will be seen in this neighborhood for a score of miles around this season. The spectacle has been billed and advertised in every small city and town within a radius of 75 miles, and many of the visitors at the Olympic even at this early date have been our country cousins.

HAM (Mass.) FREE PRESS
SEPT. 10, 1915

24th WEEK OF BIG FILM PLAY

"The Birth of a Nation" Stays on at the Majestic.

TON ADVERTISER
SEPT. 11, 1915

as ever.

Majestic Theatre

Beginning next Monday af
D. W. Griffith's mighty sp
"The Birth of a Nation," wi into the film [illegible] its pla ally long run in this city at t jestic Theatre, where it is now shown to capacity attendances afternoon and evening. No theatrical attraction in the hist the Boston stage has equalle number of consecutive perform played in this city attained b wonderful film play.

THE NIXON.

[illegible] Griffith's [illegible] at the Nixon [illegible] Monday. This is the great production which is still making a record in New York city. It is estimated that [illegible] people have seen the production since it was officially opened out in [illegible]. It is a [illegible] Theatre [illegible] Mr. Griffith was eight months making this wonderful story. He employed [illegible] people, a [illegible] horses and the total cost of the work reached half a million dollars. The story is one of romance and adventure linked to the most vital period of American history. It records its facts with the rapidity of lightning and yet never departs from the fundamentals of true drama. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every vital scene and character in the epic. An orchestra of 15 invites with the attraction.

NIXON.

David W. Griffith, foremost of directors, is conceded to have established a new art by his celebrated production, "The Birth of a Nation," now in the midst of its triumphant run at the Nixon. This realization of Civil war and Reconstruction days by means of motion picture, music and mechanical efforts overshadowed in its greatness all of the dramas of the old stage art, and won the most extraordinary encomiums from the critics. Great historic scenes in the play include skillful facsimiles of Lincoln's call for troops; Generals Lee and Grant at Appomattox; Sherman's march to the sea and the burning of Atlanta and President Lincoln's assassination in the crowded Ford's theater, Washington, April 14, 1865. Intertwined with the mighty epical progress of the story are two beautiful romances of the Blue and the Gray: Ben Cameron, the clansman, and his Northern sweetheart, Elsie; Capt. Wall Stoneman, U. S. A. and sweet Margaret Cameron the South Carolina belle. Among the principals of the largest cast ever assembled for a dramatic entertainment are Henry B. Walthall, Mae Marsh, Lillian Gish, Miriam Cooper, Josephine Crowell, Spottiswoode Aiken, Ralph Lewis, Elmer Clifton, Robert Harron, Wallace Reed, Mary Alden, George Seigmann, Walter Long, Joseph Henabery, Raoul Walsh, Donnie Crisp, Howard Gaye, William De Vaull, William Freeman and J. A. Beringer.

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

"The Birth of a Nation," bringing forward David W. Griffith's new art of photodrama spectacle with music, will be in the third week's engagement at the Nixon beginning on M[illegible]. This is the offering that [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation."

COUNSELOR SAYS FILM RIDICULES THE NEGRO RACE

The return of the city [illegible] to the injunction of the Epoch Producing Company, which asked for an injunction to prevent city officials from interfering with the motion picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," was filed yesterday in the Circuit Court.

The return claims that part of the pictures ridicule the negro race, and that certain scenes are conducive to inciting race prejudice.

The film is based on "The Clansman," a novel dealing with the negro question in the South immediately after the close of the civil war. A temporary injunction was granted the plaintiff, and the case will be heard this week before Judge Hemings.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's wonderful photoplay, [illegible] upon its third week's engagement at the Olympic Theater yesterday [illegible] theater drew a large audience at matinee, and the crowds [illegible] continued to maintain the attendance of previous nights. The tremendous film production is proving the greatest play thrown on the s[illegible]

"The Birth of a Nation

The wonderful D. W. Griffith [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," entered upon its [illegible] week at the Nixon yesterday, with increased patronage.

Based on the book, "The Clansman," the photoplay breathes the spirit of the well known work. The two [illegible] features of it are its [illegible] and the splendor and magnificence of production.

From the technical viewpoint it must be placed on a pedestal by itself. The [illegible] is for reading, and those who have read a picture offered [illegible] can guide that one appreciate the [illegible] of its powerful "pull" on the [illegible] almost uncanny reproductions of historical scenes.

The greatness of the film is in its [illegible] facilitge points and the historical [illegible] tions, yet so clearly defined is the [illegible] and so carefully presented that it [illegible] the audience hard.

While too much cannot be said [illegible] the directing, the choice of scenes and the story itself, the acting is such [illegible] be expected with a director of the [illegible] and power of Griffith.

Mr. Walthall's performance is [illegible] larly fine. The parts of Stoneman [illegible] Silas Lynch are [illegible] Lillian Gish as Elsie Stoneman and [illegible] Marsh as Flora Cameron.

... to leave Boston D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle "The Birth of a Nation," which was seen for 22 weeks at the Tremont Theatre by nearly half the population of Boston, and the past week at the Majestic, making its 23rd big week in Boston. The 24th week begins next Monday, September 13. So insatiable has been the desire of the theatre-going population of New England to see more of this marvelous $500,000 production, and so forcible and overwhelming the demand for a longer stay of it in this city that arangements had to be made for another theatre as its Boston home. And so the Majestic Theatre becomes the fortunate possessor of "The Birth of a Nation" as an attraction for a limited additional stay in Boston.

There have been very few instances in the history of the Boston stage of engagements of a theatrical attraction for such a prolonged stay. It is nearly half a year now that this "8th wonder of the world" has been presented continuously in Boston, every afternoon and evening for six days of each week and still crowded houses characterizes every presentation of the thrilling and realistic scenes.

The 24th week of the continuation of the Boston run at the Majestic Theatre will begin next Monday afternoon, with performances given twice daily, every afternoon at 2.10 and every evening at 8. Seats are now selling for next ate .....

---

NDIT NOTICES

EPOCH CO. THE VICTOR

New York, Sept. 4.—The injunction obtained George H. Davis, of California, against the Producing Company, which owns, in partnership with Thomas Dixon, the film rights of Birth of a Nation, has been dissolved. who held conversations last June with D. ffith, had intended to sign contracts, he r the right to the picture in seventeen n the West. However, while he was to New York to close the contracts the company sold the Portland, Ore., $8,000, thereby squashing Davis' plans. itten contract between Davis and the ny had been made the court held porary injunction against the States should be dissolved.

... the same augmente ... chestra and the same comfortabl ... vironment which prevailed durin ... engagement at the Tremont Th ... and judging by the attendance ... past week "The Birth of a Nat ... is in for another long run.

Nixon—"The Birth of a Nation."

The third week of the engagement of "The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's mighty spectacle now playing at the Nixon Theater begins next Monday. The story is one of romance and adventure linked to the most vital periods of American history. Linked with the drama is an operatic score which carries recurrent themes with every scene and character in the epic. An orchestra of 20 travels with the attraction to handle the musical features of the presentation. That part of history dealing with the rise and fall of the slavery problem is the vital spark upon which Griffith has built his story. The conflict which this question caused is reproduced in great battles and in all the thrilling things which are a part of war.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" CONTINUES ITS RUNS.

The magnitude of D. W. G ... feat in staging "The Birth of ... tion," which enters upon its ... week at the Olympic Theater ... row, is bewildering to the cas ... looker and almost appalling ... thoughtful students of stage-cra ... of history. Beside "The Birth ... Nation," with its tremendous ... involving 18,000 men, such goo ... war plays as "Shenandoah," "H ... the Enemy" and "Barbara Friet ... with their little groups of "super ... tors and their pinchbeck scenery ... tame. Instead of scenery fo ... background, Griffith has used na ... For subject, he has covered 150 ... of American history. Armies as ... as those actually engaged in ... ternest warfare fight over a terri ... of some thirty or forty square m ... Three thousand riders, mounted ... the fleetest horses the Western pla ... afford, sweep over the dusty roads ... producing the thrilling rides of ... Ku Klux Klans.

St. Louis people who have se ... "The Birth of a Nation," no long ... wonder that this magnificent histo ... cal spectacle is the talk of all Amer ... ica.

The gre ... deeds of the Civil War and the b ... of Reconstruction are made to ... lin, and the nation reborn is ... xed. Everything is ... aage ... ple aid of dialogue, ... ed as well as the ... and sound effects.

... fur ... will

S

S

E

... ature it ran simultaneously in as many productions for many months. Despite great opposition the play has never been suppressed, but has met the approval of censor boards, judges, municipal authorities, publicists, editors and clergymen everywhere.

The first half of the spectacle, which was suggested by Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," exhibits the salient events of the war between the states. The formation of the Confederacy, Lincoln's call for troops, Sherman's march to the sea, the Battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to Grant, and the awful tragedy of Lincoln's assassination at Ford's Theater, April 14, 1865, live before the spectator of the Griffith drama. In the second half the South's "second uprising"—this time against the carpetbagger regime—is shown in a thrilling story of reconstruction days. The romance of the "little Confederate Colonel," Ben Cameron, with the Northerner, Elsie Stoneman, and that of the Unionist Captain, Phil Stoneman, with Margaret Cameron, the South Carolina lassie, maintain two threads of continuous love-interest throughout the story.

But the great out-of-doors is Mr. Griffith's special field. Tremendous battle scenes and the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan are staged with thousands of participants. Eighteen thousand human actors and 3,000 horses were employed in the making of the picture, which cost $500,000 and took eight months to produce. Some idea of its immensity is gained from the fact that there are no less than 5,000 distinct and individual scenes.

▲ ▲ ▲

Olympic Theater.

In the great battle scenes in the earlier portions of "The Birth of a Nation," which will enter upon the third week of its St. Louis career at the Olympic Theater this afternoon, D. W. Griffith employed many novel appliances to get his effects. For the first time in the history of motion-picture art, he utilized the telephone extensively. Griffith, in person, handled thousands upon thousands of players in a single scene, directing them by wire.

The great battle scenes were also the first ever taken by a motion-picture camera at night. The scenes showing the escape of the refugees from Atlanta, the bonfire effects in Piedmont and the great red battle effects were all realized by night photography. Laborate preparations for these were carefully laid, and several inventions were made on the ground to account ... the desired end. Potential ... were ...

... especially composed, while a corps of assistants on the stage furnish the no necessary to add to the realism of scenes.

Briefly summed up, the picture whole is tremendous, the story is ...ping, the photography superb, th ...port of the star, Mr Walthall, e ... the detail perfect and scenery s...

Nixon—"Birth of a Nation."

This unusual photoplay and spectacle continues to draw large audiences to the Nixon Theater, where it began its second week yesterday. The extremely hot weather of last week was discouraging to theater going, but despite this handicap the Griffith picture was a popular center of interest. Critical reference to "The Birth of a Nation" has been so numerous, and generally so praiseful, that repetition is almost inevitable. But the observant visitor to this massive spectacle, whether he be a "movie" fan or not, will find even in the subordinate excellencies of the production certain things that he will fail to find in any of the other big film exhibits. For instance, the detail of the acting is so far superior to what one sees even in the spoken drama as to lift the artistic merit of the performance to a high level. The male members of the cast, with one or two exceptions, are particularly effective in dumb "show." The set expression that one sees ... faces of the ordinary film is absent in many of these Griffith ...ers. The photography, too, is so c... as to aid this effect. Besides all this, the big scenes multiply rapidly toward the climax and the auditor is carried forward, often under bitter and resentful protest at some of the scenes, to conclusion that leaves you amazed a the resources of this modern invention and art.

NIXON.

"The Birth of a Nation," that wonderful D. W. Griffith film, opened its third week in the Nixon theater with increased patronage. The story is taken from the book, "The Clansman" and brings out the spirit of that novel splendidly. An orchestra of 25 musicians play music especially composed for the film, while a corps of assistants behind the screen furnish noises necessary to add to the realism of the scenes.

rival week of ent motion ch of a Naidespread at-that the ser

Realistic scene in of

No scene in the motion picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Forrest Theater, is more realistic than that of Ford's Theater, Washington, on the night of April, 14, 1865, when President Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth. It is the largest interior set ever built for a motion picture story. Numerous authentic works, several witnesses of the event, old prints, prompt books of the play and surviving actors of the cast supplied the facts regarding the appearance of the stage, orchestra, audience and of Lincoln which have been carried out to the minutest detail.

PERFECT PICTURE OF GREAT TRAGEDY

Wonderful Scene of Lincoln's Assassination Shown in "The Birth of a Nation."

Forrest—"Birth of a Nation."

Following a week of triumph at the Forrest Theatre, the magnificent motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," produced by David W. Griffith, at a cost of $500,000, will continue to be shown at that fine playhouse. Important in the showing of this art creation of history and romance is the incidental music, embracing melodies appropriate to each incident and always of the best sort. Indications are that has ever been revealed upon so pretentious a plan as is shown in the motion picture drama "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Forrest Theater. The scene is the reproduction in historic dramatic detail of Ford's Theater, Washington, on the night of April 14, 1865, when President Lincoln was assassinated by John Wilkes Booth before the eyes of a gala audience assembled to celebrate the close of the Civil War.

It is the largest interior set ever built for a motion picture story. Numerous authentic works upon the subject were studied to get the exact measurements and dimensions of the old theater. The fundamentals were furnished by Nicolay's and Hay's "Abraham Lincoln, a History." The writers, it will be recalled, served as secretaries under Lincoln and were in close touch with the stirring events of that period.

The producers were fortunate in being able to secure the aid of several witnesses of the actual events and they were present when the picture was taken. Chief among these was Dr. Chapman, the noted prohibitionist and lecturer, who lent material assistance in supplying important facts.

In the audience were famous generals and statesmen who had just written their names into history. The play was "Our American Cousin," with Laura Keene playing her farewell engagement in Washington. Old prints, prompt books of the play and surviving actors of the cast supplied the facts regarding the appearance of the stage settings and the players on that night. Other witnesses told how the orchestra was arranged and the general appearance of the audience was further described in addition to the written data on the subject.

Those present when the picture was taken remarked upon the wonderfully realistic effect and said the actress simulating Mrs. Lincoln's dress and appearance so wonderfully that the wife of the President seemed to be living over again. The entire scene was laid out upon a carefully arranged ground plan down to a copy of the decorations of the house.

John Henabery, who portrays President Lincoln, was selected from twenty players, who were coached and prepared for the part before the selection was made. Mr. Lincoln's appearance and mannerisms were carefully counterfeited even to the small but interesting detail of the President reaching back for his cloak just a few minutes before Booth attacked him.

ing presentation. Many [illegible] to the Forrest now without finding a line of ticket purchasers in the lobby, and this fact is of importance in making known to what extent the spectacle has taken hold upon the fancy of the public. The opening presentation Saturday night preceding Labor Day was the largest in point of receipts that "The Birth of a Nation" has had at a premiere anywhere, and on Labor Day the demand for seats could not be filled at the two showings.

It is a wonderful story, wonderfully told, that is revealed on the screen. Slavery, the prime cause of the war of the Rebellion, is shown as negro servitude was known in the South. Then there is Lincoln's call for troops, a ball on the eve of the battle of Bull Run, the first triumph of the Confederates, Sherman's devastating march to the sea, with the burning of Atlanta and the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant, the assassination of President Lincoln, reconstruction days, and then is seen the uprising of the Ku Klux Klan. A deep and abiding love interest is based on the friendships of members of a Northern and a Southern family, just as in the novel, "The Clansman," to which Griffith had recourse in building up his creation.

The splendid acting by the notable cast assembled by Griffith for "The Birth of a Nation" should not go unnoticed. Henry B. Walthall, recognized as one of the foremost players now appearing before the camera, is at the head of the cast, but there are also Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, seen as Lincoln; George Seigmann, Walter Alden, Raoul Walsh, as Wilkes Booth; Spottiswoode Aiken and others to lend distinction to the ensemble.

AT THE PHOTOPLAY

FORREST—The much-discussed motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," produced by David W. Griffith, continues at this playhouse. It is a remarkable story that is revealed on the screen. Slavery, the prime cause of the War of the Rebellion, is shown; then there is Lincoln's call for troops; a ball on the eve of the battle of Bull Run, the first triumph of the Confederates; Sherman's devastating march to the sea, with the burning of Atlanta and the siege of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant, the assassination of Lincoln; reconstruction days, and the formation of the Ku Klux Klan. A deep love interest is found in the friendships of members of a Northern and a Southern family, just as in the novel, "The Clansman," to which Griffith had recourse in building up his creation. Henry B. Walthall, recognized as one of the foremost players now appearing before the camera, is at the head of the cast, and there are also Lillian Gish, Mae Marsh, Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, Joseph Henabery, seen as Lincoln; George Seigmann, Walter Alden, Raoul Walsh as John Wilkes Booth; Spottiswoode Aiken and others to lend distinction to the ensemble.

Forrest, the home of a Nation, spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," produced by David W. Griffith, at a cost of $500,000, will continue to be shown at that commodious playhouse. Important in the showing of this art creation of history and romance is the incidental music, embracing melodies appropriate to each incident and always of the best sort. Indications are that the theater will be crowded, just as during the first eight days of the stay at the Forrest, at the afternon and evening presentations.

Rarely may one go to the Forrest now without finding a line of ticket purchasers in the lobby. This fact is of importance in making known to what extent the spectacle has taken hold upon the fancy of the public. The opening presentation on the Saturday night preceding Labor Day was the largest in point of receipts that "The Birth of a Nation" has had at a premiere anywhere and on Labor Day the demand for seats could not be filled at the two showings.

It is an impressive story, wonderfully [illegible], that is revealed on the screen. [illegible]very, the prime cause of the Civil [illegible]r, is shown as colored servitude [illegible] known in the South. Then there [illegible] Lincoln's call for troops, a ball on [illegible] eve of the battle of Bull Run, the [illegible]st triumph of the Confederates, Sher[illegible]an's devastating march to the sea, [illegible]th the burning of Atlanta and the [illegible]ege of Petersburg, Lee's surrender to [illegible]rant, the assassination of President [illegible]incoln, reconstruction days, and then [illegible] seen the uprising of the Ku Klux [illegible]lan.

A deep and abiding love interest [illegible]ased on the friendships of membe[illegible] of a Northern and a Southern family, just as in the novel "The Clansman," to which Mr. Griffith had recourse in building up his creation. The splendid acting by the notable cast assembled by Mr. Griffith for "The Birth of a Nation" should not go unnoticed. Henry [illegible]on" Walthall, recognized as one of the most players now appearing before [illegible] camera, is at the head of the cast, [illegible] here are also Lillian Gish, Mae [illegible] Miriam Cooper, Ralph Lewis, [illegible] Henabery, seen as Lincoln; [illegible] Seigmann, Walter Alden, Raoul [illegible], as John Wilkes Booth; Spottis[illegible] Aiken and others to lend dis[illegible]on to the ensemble.

'BIRTH OF A NATION' AT SALEM THEATRE

THE SLAVE MARKET SCENE.

If you have not seen "The Birth of a Nation," you have missed the most astonishing achievement in dramatic portraiture introduced to the American stage. Imagine 18,000 people visualizing the story of intense human interest and dramatic purposes and then add 3000 horses ridden by some of the most reckless and daring riders in the world, dashing in great cavalcades over picturesque roads and through war-strewn valleys and plains, and you can begin to form a vague idea of the scale upon which this narrative is unfolded.

The plot of the drama deals with the relationship of the slavery question to the development of America and its final solution reveals how out of the quarrel of disputing states there arose the mightiest nation in the world.

With history as its background reared a plot of fundamental dramatic appeal and evolved a story of such prodigal details that its bigness alone astounds you. It is the work of a master dramatist who has a story to tell and sets about creating an epoch with its results. He dramatizes the moving force of vast numbers of people and as his means of expression is the camera of the highly developed motion picture art he is not confined by any of the narrow limitations which have heretofore hindered stage spectacles.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date SEP 11 1915

decided to make their own production, and "Safety First" is the result.

Nevertheless and notwithstanding, Mr. B. and Mr. A. will not sing "Home Sweet Home," at least in public.

THERE are so many things to admire in David Griffith's production of "The Birth of a Nation" that one viewing of the picture is quite insufficient to grasp it. One thing, for example, whose effect might be appreciated by a casual spectator without in the least guessing the cause, is his almost uncanny gift of composition.

"Griffith," said a prominent artist, "groups his figures like an artist in oils or water color rather than like a stage director. I don't know whether he ever studied perspective, composition and harmony or not, but anyhow his mass pictures to my mind have the same quality as those of the great artists."

This remark was occasioned particularly from watching Mr. Griffith assemble the multitude in the scenes of war and peace in "The Birth of a Nation." In the scene representing the future brotherhood of love and peace the effect of distance is obtained by constructing two stages with rising steps, one near the camera and the other removed about 100 feet. Between the two stages there is a hollow. The principals are stationed on the near stage, then comes the intervening hollow, and finally the more distant features of the background show on the second or more remote platform.

In striking contrast is Mr. Griffith's treatment of the contrasting theme of the misery of war. Wan, skeleton-like figures are selected. Men and women are strewn about the stage like the piled-up victims of a battlefield. Bodies, legs and arms and (as it were) shreds of human beings are inextricably mixed. Woe stamps itself upon that picture as joy radiates from the other.

Griffith's method of making the scene caused one artist to nickname it a "human salad." But that is not how it impresses the spectators, who sense the emotional appeal beneath the bizarre effect.

Philadelphia, (Pa.) Public Ledger

Date SEP 11 1915

SWIFT-MOVING IN FAMOUS

Griffith Puts "Punch" ture and Strives to Changed Conditions.

CHARMING PRIMA

New Herbert Opera Has ic Attractiveness—"B Mas Be Repai

cumu... scene be... showing. ... to gay, alw... in hand, a... a swiftness of simulated ... by the rapid ... the film. ... one can deny that the galloping of the Ku ... on an errand of mercy gives to ... centuating music, and through ... piece the music has a lot to do w ... effectiveness of the presentation. ... dancing of gay Southerners on t ... of Bull Run to the music of "O ... Thro' the Rye" is almost as thea ... fore one's eyes, and the wonderfu ... veloped dramatic sense of the produ ... gives each situation the maximum ... value. There is plenty of "punch" ... the piece, and its swiftness of mov ... ment carries one along entranced; ... he forgets that there is only a pictu ... being shown, and he believes that h ... is seeing an actual conflict, or the trial ... and tribulations of a domestic circle.

Griffith does not hesitate to put ...

TON TRANSCRIPT
SEP 1 1915

Burlesque

The Burlesquers that call t
Girl Trust Company will be Casino next week in the new a ther have made ready for a Chorus and a
Burt follow the company's famil ards.

PICTURES AND MUSIC

Majestic—The Birth of a Nation

A FILMED spectacle of unusual magnitude and scope, that for twenty-three weeks has held one or another Boston stage. The earlier reels unroll scenes and incidents from the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the battle of Petersburg, Lee's surrender and the assassination of Lincoln—on a scale of numbers, diversity and vividness new to motion-pictures in America. Then follows a pictorial chronicle of conditions in the South during the days of Reconstruction, the carpet-baggers and the Ku-Klux Clan, ranging from intimate domestic life to turbulent episode. Finally comes an apotheosis of the United States. Into all this is woven sentimental adventure between a soldier of the North and a woman of the South. Music accompanies the whole spectacle.

IILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

ate .....

SEP 1 1915

Non-satirical entertainment in recent years has caused more widespread interest than "The Birth of a Nation," the masterwork of one of the foremost motion picture producers, David W. Griffith at the Forrest. The playhouse [illegible] crowded at each of the two daily performances during the past week and at the matinees showing of the film in this city on Saturday of last week there was a record attendance. No detail has been slighted to insure for perfect projection of the story gives visually so complete and accurate an idea of the events and upheavals that were essential to the consolidating of the states of the Union into an indissoluble nation. And with it all there is a romance, with love triumphant, after many [illegible] The story is founded on "Clansman" by Rev. Thomas Dixon, the telling of the tale one sees [illegible] actually happening historic events [illegible] with [illegible]

Given his story and the people, Griffith has secured startling results. His mammoth canvas often reveals battlefields covering an area of a dozen square miles and by following historical details he reproduces the stern battle effects as they actually took place half a century ago. In all the expanse of scene and action he never loses sight of his basic story, and the smallest detail becomes as astonishing a part of the narrative as the largest incident in it. The completeness and the wonder of the work make it unusual.

The premier production of "The Birth of a Nation," at the Salem theatre will take place next Monday, September 13, and will continue for one week. Matinees daily. You should see it even at the expense of other pleasures. Seats for the entire engagement are on sale at the box-office and may be engaged for any performance by calling telephone 8121. Arrangements have been made for special cars to all suburban cities and towns after evening performances.

CLIPPING FROM
NEW YORK PRESS
Date .....
SEP 11 1915

secure plays for both Mr. [illegible] and Miss Kaelred and invites authors to send their manuscripts to 1416 Broadway.

28TH WEEK OF "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

D. W. Griffith's gigantic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," passed its twenty-eighth week in the Liberty Theatre Saturday night. On Tuesday night the five hundredth performance in New York was given. This is one of the biggest records of recent years. It enters the present week upon the record run of the Liberty Theatre, which has been the home of many notable attractions in the fifteen odd years that that playhouse has been open. The record for the Liberty heretofore was held by "The Spring Maid," which ran for twenty-eight weeks. "The Birth of a Nation" continues at the Liberty indefinitely and is on its full stride now that the regular season has opened in good shape. The production stands [illegible]

METROPOLITAN TO SHOW FILMS A LA HIPPODROME

Shuberts to Open Big House Sept. 25, With Feature Films, Aquatics and Music

By the Photoplay Editor

Philadelphia is to have plenty of photoplay entertainment this winter on a decidedly novel scale. "The Birth of a Nation" will continue some time at the Forrest. The Triangle film plays will soon be inviting two-dollar bills into the Chestnut Street Opera House. And now comes an announcement from the Shuberts of a feature film policy with trimmings for the Metropolitan.

The Metropolitan Opera House will be opened Saturday evening, September 25, under the new management of the Messrs. Shubert, and an entertainment entirely new to Philadelphians will be offered. It will be modeled on the movie season at the New York Hippodrome last spring. The first thing that will greet the eye of those who enter the Metropolitan under the new regime will be a huge lake covering the entire area formerly taken up by the orchestra pit. On this lake will be presented some aquatic wonders which are expected to prove a complete and pleasing surprise, but which will be only a "side issue" to the main show. This will consist of photoplays of distinction, with operatic vocalism and symphony orchestra music interspersed. A large company of grand and comic opera artists will be assembled to present portions of famous operas, assisted by an extensive and comely chorus.

Edward P. Temple, who is responsible for the several remarkable spectacles staged at the New York Hippodrome while under the control of the Messrs. Shubert, will have charge of the staging of the productions at the Metropolitan, and no expense will be spared to carry out his ideas. The prices for seats will run from only 50 cents to 15 cents. Under the present management the show will be given twice every evening, with daily matinees, except on Tuesday, when the house will be turned over to opera as of old.

From a reliable source it is learned, says a New York paper, that another gigantic motion picture combination, with a capitalization of $5,000,000, has been formed. Marshall W. Taggart, president of the Gotham Program, Inc., is said to be president of the new organization, in which Klaw and Erlanger and Patrick Casey, stockholders of the Biograph Company, are interested.

Mr. Taggart would make no definite statement beyond the fact that the Gotham has over $1,000,000 worth of films on hand now ready for release. These, it is inferred, will be used as the opening shots in the new company's campaign. It is expected a definite announcement will be made shortly.

flict of whites and blacks, have been held to arouse racial animosities. Mr. Griffith confined himself as closely he could to historic happenings, and coloring of scenes, perhaps somewhat trifle emphasized for dramatic [illegible] was faithful to his understanding study. That he intended no insult the colored man is discoverable showing at the concluding part story of the negroes of Hampton Tuskegee institutes as they are ing themselves to take important in the professions and in the [illegible] and agricultural works. Then [illegible] an allegorical representation of [illegible] of peace and good will, and one the theatre impressed with the that such things as had been witnessed belonged to a distant and dead and that the picture had its subject merit upon the skill of Griffith in handling a melodramatic tale crowded with incident. "The Birth of a Nation" an achievement in photography a presentation such as sets a new mark for every producer.

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Forrest, the first photoplay for which admission of $2 has been charged, provoked the usual amount of comment which has attended its presentation in every city in which it has seen. Nothing seems to have come all the pother, however, save something of a sop has been introduced at the conclusion of the showing, trating what is being accomplished the negro at Tuskegee Institute. such a proceeding forms somewhat an anticlimax, it is to be commended if it creates a kindlier feeling. It certainly a diplomatic inspiration.

There is no doubting the marvel a film nor the genius of its producer David W. Griffith, for his management handling of such vast crowds scattered over such extensive Another impressive point pictures is that in nearly stance they look more like pictures than the direct product camera.

Evening Star - Feb. 20 - 15

Liberty Theatre Visited. 'Birth of a Nation'

Following Otis Skinner's engagement at the Liberty Theatre, which closes Saturday night, February 27, D. W. Griffith takes active hold of that playhouse to present his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." This engagement will commence Wednesday night, March 3. The story is founded upon Thomas Dixon's well-known novel and play, "The Clansman."

It depicts some of the most vital periods in this country's history.

In bringing these details within the range of motion picture possibilities, Mr. Griffith utilized 18,000 people in the making of the 5,000 scenes of the story. He also used 3,000 horses and was eight months making the production. Its total cost was approximately $500,000.

Evening Herald - Feb. 20

"BIRTH OF A NATION" A COMING SPECTACLE.

Following Otis Skinner's engagement at the Liberty Theatre which closes on Saturday night, Feb. 27, D. W. Griffith takes active hold of that playhouse to present his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." This engagement will commence Wednesday night, March 3. The story is founded upon Thomas Dixon's well-known novel and play, "The Clansman." It depicts some of the most sensational and vital periods in the history of this country. In bringing these details within the range of motion picture possibilities, Mr. Griffith utilized 18,000 people in the making of the 5,000 scenes which visualize the story. He also used 3,000 horses and was eight months making the production. Its total cost was approximately $500,000. The story concerns the vital point in the relationship of the slavery question, to

Washington Times - Feb. 18 - 1915

ES
Washington, D. C.
FEB 18 1915

House Will e 'Movie' Show

l Entertainment for Pres- Is Arranged for East n This Evening.

Wilson's daughters have n the benefit of their several members of the private movie picture ex the East House of the this evening.

To be shown will be ex th of a Nation," and is of written by Thomas ella. It will show the to colored men in this the days of slavery and that the President ation to matters n. His daughters pal to have the pos

Evening Journal - Feb. 20 - 15

Big Griffith Film To Open at Liberty Theatre on March 3

Following Otis Skinner's engagement at the Liberty Theatre, which closes on Saturday night, February 27, D. W. Griffith takes active hold of that playhouse to present his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." This engagement will commence Wednesday night, March 3.

The story is founded upon Thomas Dixon's well known novel and play, "The Clansman." It depicts some of the most sensational and vital periods in the history of this country. In bringing these details within the range of motion picture possibilities, Mr. Griffith utilized 18,000 people in the making of the 5,000 scenes which visualize the story. He also used 3,000 horses and was eight months making the production. Its total cost was approximately $500,000.

The story concerns the vital point in the relationship of the slavery question to

The Globe - Feb. 20 - 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Something That Is New in Moving Pictures

D. W. Grif

Following Otis Sk ment of the Liberty lose next Saturday Griffith takes active house to present ticle "The Birth o ment will c day night, March for his upon Thom known novel and P ment." It depicts so sensational and vita history of this count these details within th tion picture possibili

Public Ledger - Feb. 20 - 15

PUBLIC LEDGER
ss Philadelphia
FEB 20 1915

Whistling Dixie - Feb. 20 - 15

MOVIES AT PRESS CLUB.

Pictures Based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman" Shown to Large Gathering.

With Chief Justice White, of the Supreme Court of the United States, as the guest of honor, D. W. Griffith, the producer, and Thomas Dixon, Jr., author of the book, entertained the members of the local Press Club at a special showing

THE FILM SHOWN

[illegible] mental picture of "[illegible]" [illegible] is that of a man of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

...ffith, Producer of ...ld's Biggest Picture

D. W. GRIFFITH PRODUCER OF
"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"
at the LIBERTY.

...tion picture not only as a means of amusement but as a moral and educational force. We can trace that there has been [illegible] in the past due to [illegible] because of narrow [illegible] absolutely [illegible] trace. No [illegible] has [illegible] a moving [illegible] It is so [illegible]

"The Birth of ... Biggest of New ...

Estal

The most interesting event among all recent motion picture productions promises to be "The Birth of a Nation," a photographic version of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," which has been made by D. W. Griffith and will be exhibited for the first time in the Liberty Theatre next Wednesday evening. The claim is made, in fact, that 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were employed to get the needed effects before the cameras. A musical accompaniment to the feature has been composed by Joseph Carl Breil. The story, which follows the novel, begins with the first coming of slaves to North America and traces the slavery question in its bearing upon the history of the United States. Great episodes of the Civil War—Sherman's march to the sea, the burning of Atlanta, the fall of Petersburg, Lee's surrender at Appomattox, and the assassination of President Lincoln—will be shown. Then will follow the depredations of the Ku-Klux-Klan and, lastly, the establishment of national peace. The run of these pictures at the Liberty will be indefinite.

Sun-Feb. 28-15

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Spectacular Photo Play To Be Given at the Liberty.

D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York a photographic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," on Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theatre. The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon novel and play, "The Clansman."

Mr. Griffith has been known heretofore as the foremost producer of motion picture successes in houses devoted to this style of entertainment. His present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvellous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a work of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his newest production can be gauged. The producer devoted eight months to its making. He employed the services of 18,000 people and 3,000 horses, to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Breil. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War, with its terrific battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the downfall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of Abraham Lincoln; the ordeal of the reconstruction period; the Ku-Klux Klan's solution of the problem; the establishment of an everlasting peace in the end. These historic scenes are, it is said, given in accurate detail.

...ation

...OF A N...

...Griffith has been known heretofore, as the foremost producer of motion picture successes in houses devoted to this style of entertainment. His present production is a step forward which will demonstrate the marvellous scope and artistic values of the camera play as a work of incomparable dramatic appeal. There are no established standards by which his newest production can be gauged. The producer devoted eight months to its making. He employed the services of 18,000 people and 3,000 horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation by Joseph Carl Breil. The accompaniment will be played by an orchestra of forty musicians.

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War, with its terrific battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the downfall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender to Grant at Appomattox; the assassination of Abraham Lincoln; the ordeal of the reconstruction period; the Ku-Klux Klan's solution of the problem; the establishment of an everlasting peace in the end. These historic scenes are, it is said, given in accurate detail.

...drawn characters [illegible] romance. It is all portrayed in the largest plan [illegible] executed by any artist [illegible]

[illegible] of the world, [illegible] a stupendous [illegible] throngs of [illegible] scenes, battle [illegible] these the [illegible] sonate.

MAE MARSH IN "THE BIRTH OF A NATION" at the LIBERTY THEATRE

From HERALD

Address: New York City

Date FEB 23 [illegible]

Establishe

CONSIDERABLE curiosity has been aroused by advance announcements as to the photographic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which D. W. Griffith, one of the leaders among moving picture producers, will offer at the Liberty Theatre on Wednesday night. It is based upon the famous novel and play, "The Clansman," by Thomas Dixon, and its performance before the camera is said to have employed eighteen thousand persons and three thousand horses, and to have taken eight months in the making.

The claim is made that its appeal is for the average theatre goer, and not merely for those who frequent motion picture houses in search of a few minutes' diversion. New York film devotees have seen such photo plays as "Quo Vadis" and "Cabiria," but [illegible] picture. "The Birth of a Nation" will prove whether the [illegible] of photo plays can equal or surpass the work of the Euro[illegible] from the interest in the [illegible] spectacle itself, and it is [illegible] for before [illegible] motion [illegible] to be [illegible]

From NORTH AMERICAN

Address: Philadelphia, Pa.

Date

[illegible] Griffith's photographic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," is expected at the Liberty [illegible] next Wednesday night. It will [illegible] the theater [illegible] will [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] such [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

NATION"
LIBERTY THEATRE

MOTION PICTURE NOTES.

By arrangement with Klaw & Erlanger D. W. Griffith will take the Liberty Theatre at the end of this month to present his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." The film shows the complete working out of all the contributory theories in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel, "The Clansman." The Griffith treatment of the subject shows the entire historical relationship of the slavery question to the development of American history, going into the subject much more extensively than did Mr. Dixon. It is claimed that this will be the greatest film ever shown. More than 18,000 people were employed in the films, and there will be a special musical score, played by an orchestra of forty pieces.

Sun. Feb. 3—

BIG MOVIES FOR THE LIBERTY.

Forty-second Street House Taken for $2 Picture Show.

By an arrangement just completed with Klaw & Erlanger, D. W. Griffith will take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street March 1, to present a moving picture spectacle called "The Birth of a Nation."

The lease of the Liberty represents another advance in the motion picture world, which brings theatregoers up to the $2 moving picture. "The Birth of a Nation," the making of which is said to have employed 18,000 persons, will be shown to an accompaniment of an orchestra of forty pieces. It will be produced immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in "The Silver Fox" at the Liberty.

Eve. Sun Feb. 5

By an arrangement completed with Klaw & Erlanger late Saturday D. W. Griffith will take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street at the end of this month for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in "The Silver Fox."

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of all the contributory theories in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel and play, "The Clansman." The Griffith treatment will be on a $2

Globe Feb. 8

THEATRICAL NOTES.

D. W. GRIFFITH, who will produce "The Birth of a Nation," a remarkable film drama at the Liberty Theatre.

BIG FILM TO BE SHOWN IN LIBERTY

Production of "Birth of a Nation" in Klaw and Erlanger House by D. W. Griffith Marks the First Attempt at Two-Dollar Movies

By an arrangement completed late Saturday, D. W. Griffith will with Klaw and Erlanger take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street at the end of the month to present his great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this house.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of all the contributory theories in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel and play "The Clansman."

The taking of the Liberty Theatre by Mr. Griffith and his associates represents another advance in the art of motion pictures, and brings theatregoers up to the $2 moving picture. This is the first moving picture to have actually been taken [illegible] $2 Moving Picture To Be Given at Lib[illegible]

Evening Tele[illegible]
February 8, 1915

NOTES OF THE [illegible]

Forty-Second Street House Taken for 52 Picture Show.

By an arrangement [illegible] with Klaw & Erlanger [illegible] will take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street at the end of this month for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel and play, "The Clansman." The prices will be on a $2 scale.

Eve. Sun Feb. 8

By an arrangement completed with Klaw & Erlanger late Saturday D. W. Griffiths will take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street at the end of this month for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel and play, "The Clansman." The prices will be on a $2 scale.

Globe Feb. 8

THEATRICAL NOTES.

By arrangement with Klaw & Erlanger D. W. Griffith will take over the Liberty Theatre, Liberty Theatre, Liberty Theatre,

THE MOVIES FOR THE THEATRE

Forty-second Street House Taken for a Picture Show

Eve. Sun Feb. 8

By an arrangement completed with Klaw & Erlanger late Saturday D. W. Griffith will take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street at the end of this month for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel and play, "The Clansman." The prices will be on a $2 scale.

Globe Feb. 8

THEATRICAL NOTES.

By arrangement with Klaw & Erlanger D. W. Griffith will take over the Liberty Theatre, in West Forty-second street, at the end of this month for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this house.

Evening Sun
Feb. 8, 1915.

By an arrangement completed with Klaw & Erlanger late Saturday D. W. Griffith will take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street at the end of this month for the purpose of presenting there his great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel and play "The Clansman." The prices will be on a $2 scale.

BIG FILM TO BE SHOWN IN LIBERTY

Production of "Birth of a Nation" in Klaw and Erlanger House by D. W. Griffith Marks the First Attempt at Two-Dollar 'Movies'

By an arrangement completed late Saturday, D. W. Griffith will with Klaw and Erlanger take over the Liberty Theatre in West Forty-second street at the end of the month to present his great spectacle "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement will commence immediately following the run of Otis Skinner in this house.

"The Birth of a Nation" is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded his famous novel and play, "The Clansman."

The taking of the Liberty Theatre by Mr. Griffith and his associates realizes another advance in the art of motion pictures and brings theatre-goers up to the two dollar moving picture. This is the first time plans have actually been laid to bring this about.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be given in New York upon a scale which means the dawn of greater accomplishments in the theatre than would have been deemed possible a year ago. It is the most stupendous undertaking of its kind the world has been shown. More than 15,000 persons employed in making the great spectacle and a specially written score that elaborates the various themes of the story will be played by symphony orchestra of forty pieces.

Mr. Griffith has so long been recognized as the master mind in the production of great pictures that it is most fitting he should be the man to bring out in America the first two dollar motion picture.

"Birth of a Nation" to Be a $2 Motion Picture

When "The Birth of a Nation," a new motion-picture spectacle, is presented in the Liberty Theatre at the end of the month by D. W. Griffith, by arrangement with Klaw & Erlanger, the $2 motion picture will be a reality.

More than 18,000 persons are said to have been employed in the making of the picture, and a specially written score will be played by an orchestra of forty pieces. It will be shown at the conclusion of Otis Skinner's run in "The Silent Voice," which is the present attraction in the Liberty.

February 11, 1915.

Globe. Feb. 11-15

$2 scale of prices "The Birth ion," the latest D. W. Grifure film, will open shortly Liberty Theatre. The play-been secured by Mr. Grif gh special arrangement wit Erlanger.
th of a Nation" is describ toplay on a tremendous ing the historical relation-e slavery question to the nt of the American nation.
Griffith is undoubtedly cone master movie producer, and most ambitious effort atched with unusual in-

2, 1915

G MAIL
York City

ith "The Clansman" erty on March 3 as ation" at prices ran rice" running at "Eternal City" o day at $1, it ork, 1884
be made to look the film

Eve. Mail-Feb. 11-15

D. W. GRIFFITH,
Producer "The Birth of a Nation," Liberty Theatre.

Otis Skinner is to end his engagement in "The Silent Voice" at the Liberty Theatre February 27. On March 3 the first production of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," which is expected to prove the most massive of all moving picture exhibits so far staged in America, will be made.

Eve. Sun.
Feb. 11 15

"Birth of a Nation" Opening Is Set for March 3, at Liber

Griffith's Production Founded on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman" to Be Seen Here.

The date for the opening of D. W. Griffith's great production, "The Birth of a Nation," which is founded upon Thomas Dixon's famous story and play, "The Clansman," has been definitely set. The massive screen spectacle, revealing 18,000 people and 3,000 horses, a stirring drama of all the conflicting emotions of our composite national existence, will be introduced to the New York public on Wednesday night, March 3, at the Liberty Theatre, and will continue there indefinitely with daily matinees, including Sunday presentations. A symphony orchestra of forty pieces will be utilized to render the accompanying score which Mr. Griffith has outlined in relative themes which suit the varied action of the drama.

Mr. Otis Skinner's engagement at the Liberty terminates on Saturday night, February 27. The intervening time following this date will be devoted to putting everything in ship shape at the theatre for the new venture. Mr. Griffith is due back from California this week and will pay personal attention of the preliminary arrangements.

February 13 1915.

N. Y. Mail, Feb. 13 15.

Sun & Commercial Feb. 13 15

N. Y. Commercial Feb. 13 15.

D. W. Griffith's great production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen at the Liberty Theatre March 3 and will continue there indefinitely, it was stated yesterday by Otis Skinner, who will be in that film [illegible] were made. There will be a symphony orchestra of forty

The date for the opening of "The Birth of a Nation" which is founded upon Thomas Dixon's story and play, "The Clansman" has been definitely set. The massive screen spectacle revealing 18,000 persons and 3,000

"The Birth of a Nation" is to be as a photoplay on a [illegible] scale, tracing the historical relationship of the slavery question to the development of the American nation. Since Mr. Griffith is universally considered the master movie producer, his latest and most ambitious offering will be watched with unusual interest.

12, 1915

EVENING MAIL

Address: New York City

Date FEB 12 1915

[illegible] connection.

With D. W. Griffith's "The Clansman" opening at the Liberty on March 3 as "The Birth of a Nation" at prices ranging to $2, "Hypocrites" running at [illegible] and "The Eternal City" opening at the new Broadway at $1, it [illegible] that any one should be able to [illegible] over the past year in the film [illegible]

[illegible] realize that big [illegible] "arrived." The word "[illegible]" [illegible] spoken any more as a star. [illegible] with a feeling of [illegible] intelligent fo[illegible]

D. W. GRIFFITH,
Producer "The Birth of a Nation," Liberty Theatre.

Otis Skinner is to end his engagement in "The Silent Voice" at the Liberty Theatre February 27. On March 3 the first production of D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," which is expected to prove the best [illegible] of all moving picture exhibits so far staged in America, will be made.

February 13 1915.

Morning Telegraph Feb. 13 1915.

[illegible]s at the Liberty.

[illegible]r's engagement in "Th[illegible] at the Liberty Theatre will [illegible]d on February 27. On the [illegible]nesday night D. W. Grif[illegible] picture, "The Birth of a [illegible] to be one of the most re[illegible] productions made in [illegible] occupy the house.

[illegible]erveding between the two [illegible] to be devoted to prepar[illegible] for the temporary change [illegible] Griffith is coming from [illegible]e charge of the work. [illegible] of a Nation" is founded [illegible]ixon's story, "The Clans[illegible]so did profitable service [illegible] The film spectacle is [illegible]8,000 persons and 3,000 [illegible] scenes.

[illegible]rchestra of forty piece[illegible] accompaniment.

Sun. Mail of Commerce Feb. 3-5

D. W. Griffith's great production, "The Birth of a Nation," will be seen at the Liberty Theatre on March 5 and will continue there indefinitely. In this film 18,000 people and 3,000 horses were used. There will be a symphony orchestra of forty pieces.

N. Y. Commercial - Feb 13 - 15.

The date for the opening of "The Birth of a Nation" which is founded upon Thomas Dixon's story and play, "The Clansman" has been definitely set. The massive screen spectacle revealing 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses in a stirring drama of the conflicting emotions of our complex national existence will be introduced to the New York public March 3 at the Liberty and will continue there indefinitely with daily matinees including Sunday presentations. A symphony orchestra of 40 pieces will be utilized to render the accompanying score which Mr. Griffith has outlined in relative themes which suit the varied action of the drama. Otis Skinner's engagement at the Liberty terminates on Feb. 27.

February 11, 1915.

From NORTH AMERICAN

Address: Philadelphia, Pa.

Date FEB 11 1915

BY AN arrangement just completed with Klaw & Erlanger, D. W. Griffith will take over [illegible] 1915 [illegible] York February [illegible] spectacle [illegible] Nation" [illegible] Es[illegible]

Telegram - Richmond, Va.

From [illegible]

Address [illegible]

Date [illegible]

D. W. Griffith [illegible] Liberty theatre, in [illegible] will [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," which he moving [illegible]

Esiah [illegible]

From PRESS

Address: New York City

Date FEB 9 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Opens Next Week

OLLOWING Otis Skinner's engagement, 84 which closes in the Liberty Theatre this eek, D. W. Griffith will present there spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," Wednesday evening, March 3. There rformances twice a day, including ereafter.

"The Birth of a Nation" is founded upon omas Dixon's story and play "The Clansn," and is said to be the largest achieve-nt in motion pictures that has ever been ght out.

h was eight months making the picduring that time he is reported to employed the services of 18,000 people no less than 3,000 horses. The total cost of the production was $500,000.

The action covers a vast territory and the activities of the producers ranged from New York to Mexico in their quest of suitable locales for the background to the stirring story which moves through the entire presentation.

D. W. Griffith Producer of "The Birth of a Nation"

Liberty Theatre Next Week

Eve. Mail Feb. 12th-1915

From EVENING WORLD

Address: New York City

Date FEB 22 1915

Est 84

ABOUT PLAYS AND PLAYERS

BIDE DUDLEY

Just then the boss stepped into the room. "Bobbie," he said, "remind me to go and see that new film, 'The Life of Carrie Nation,' when it hits town. I saw her smash a saloon once."

When the boss had disappeared in his private office Bobbie grinned. "He means 'The Birth of a Nation,'" said the boy. "I don't believe Carrie Nation had a thing to do with it."

From DAILY PEOPLE SUN

Address: New York City

Date FEB 22 1915

Es 1884

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Noted Men See Private Exhibition of Great Picture.

D. W. Griffith, whose spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington, where he went on Friday to take active charge of the private exhibition of this great picture before the National Press Club.

Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court was the guest of honor at the exhibition. Other guests were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight United States Senators and about fifty members of the House of Representatives. Many of the guests were accompanied by their wives.

At the finish of the picture Mr. Griffith was showered with congratulations by the newspaper men and many of the distinguished guests. He will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club next Thursday night, when he will respond to a special invitation for "Inside Dope Night" his topic being the inside facts relative to the development of the art of motion pictures in America.

From MORNING TELEGRAPH

Address: New York City

Date

Es 1884

"MOVIE" MAN IS HONORED.

Statesmen Witness Exhibition by D. W. Griffith in National Capital.

D. W. Griffith, whose spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington, D. C., where, on Friday [illegible] the National Press Club [illegible] exhibition of this world [illegible] Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court [illegible]

From EVENING MAIL

Address: New York City

Date

The opening of "The Birth of a Nation" in Los Angeles [illegible]

D.W. Griffith, Producer of "The Birth of a Nation"

Liberty Theatre Next Week

Eve. Mail Feb. 22-1915

From EVENING MAIL

Address: New York City

Date

The opening of "The Birth of a Nation" in Los Angeles about ten days ago brought out the first ticket speculators in the motion picture field. The demand for seats was so large that twenty seats were bought up and resold for $2.50.

Est 1884

Eve. Telegram - Feb. 22 1915

From MORNING TELEGRAPH

Address: New York City

Date

"MOVIE" MAN IS HONORED.

Statesmen Witness Exhibition by D. W. Griffith In National Capital.

D. W. Griffith, whose spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington, D. C., where, on Friday night, before the National Press Club, he gave a private exhibition of this wonderful picture. Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court was the guest of honor. Other distinguished personages present were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight members of the United States Senate and fifty Representatives from the House. The statesmen were accompanied by the ladies of their respective parties.

After the presentation of the picture Mr. Griffith was showered with congratulations by the newspaper men and their distinguished guests.

Next Thursday night, Mr. Griffith, in recognition of his remarkable achievements with this picture, will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club at their "Inside Dope Night," and will deliver a talk along the lines indicated by this event upon the development of the art of motion pictures in this country.

Es 1884

From TRIBUNE

Address: New York City

Date FEB 21 1915

Established:

D. W. Griffith, Producer of "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington, D. C., where on Fri night before the National Press Cl gave a private exhibition of this pi Among the guests were Chief ... White, of the United States ... Court; Secretary of the Navy ... thirty-eight members of the United ... Senate and about ... Representat... from the H...

Estat ...ork, 1884

From ...

Address: ...

Date ...

...he end of Otis Skinner's ... the Liberty Theatre ... W. Griffith will present ... "The Birth of a ... ment begins on ... ch 8. There will ... ... days, include ... Greater, while Birth ... ...nded on the ...

D.W. Griffith Producer of "The Birth of a Nation" Liberty Theatre Next Week

Eve. Mail Feb. 22-1915

From EVENING MAIL

Address: New York City

Date

The opening of "The Birth of a Nation" in Los Angeles about ten days ago brought out the first ticket speculators in the motion picture field. The demand for seats was so large that 75-cent seats were bought up and resold for $2.50.

Est. 1884

Eve. Telegram - Feb. 22-1915

From MORNING TELEGRAPH

Address: New York City

Date

"MOVIE" MAN IS HONORED.

Statesmen Witness Exhibition by D. W. Griffith in National Capital.

D. W. Griffith, whose spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington, D. C., where, on Friday night, before the National Press Club, he gave a private exhibition of this wonderful picture. Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court was the guest of honor. Other distinguished personages present were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight members of the United States Senate and fifty Representatives from the House. The statesmen were accompanied by the ladies of their respective parties.

After the presentation of the picture Mr. Griffith was showered with congratulations by the newspaper men and their distinguished guests.

Next Thursday night, Mr. Griffith, in recognition of his remarkable achievements with this picture, will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club at their "Inside Dope Night," and will deliver a talk along the lines indicated by his event upon the development of the of motion pictures in this country.

Est. 1884

From TRIBUNE

Address: New York City

Date FEB 21 1915

Hold[illegible] the end of Otis Skinner's engage[illegible] at the Liberty Theatre this week, D. W. Griffith will present there his spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation." The engagement being ex[illegible] Wednesday night, March [illegible] there will be performances twice a day including [illegible] "The Birth [illegible]

Established: 1[illegible]

From EVENING TELEGRAM

Address: New York City.

Date

D. W. Griffith, whose spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, returned yesterday from Washington, D. C., where on Fr[illegible] night before the National Press Cl[illegible] gave a private exhibition of this pi[illegible] Among the guests were Chief [illegible] White, of the United States [illegible] Court; Secretary of the Navy [illegible] thirty-eight members of the United [illegible] Senate and about fifty Representat[illegible] from the H[illegible]

Estab[illegible] ork, 1884

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Noted Men See Private Exhibition of Great Picture.

D. W. Gr[illegible] Birth of a N[illegible] "The [illegible] Liberty Th[illegible] the Libe[illegible] tendo from W[illegible] on Friday [illegible] private exhibi[illegible] before the Nation[illegible] Chief Justice [illegible] States Supreme C[illegible] Color at the c[illegible] were Secretary [illegible] thirty-eight [illegible] Senate and fifty [illegible] Representatives. [illegible] were accompanied by their wives.

At the finish of the picture Mr. Griffith was showered with congratulations by the newspaper men and many of the distinguished guests. He will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club next Thursday night, when he will respond to a special invitation for "Inside Dope Night," his topic being the inside facts relative to the development of the art of motion pictures in America.

Est. 1884

e colored race in this the days of slavery sent time.
act that the President
ation, by invitation
ed. His daughters, ed to have the pic-
as a possible means of cuse for one evening es of his office. The drawn on the white he east wall of the

D. W. Gri

Ev. Bull. Feb. 19-15

PUBLIC LEDGER
ss Philadelphia

FEB 19 1915

'URE FILM SHOWN AT THE WHITE HOUSE

e View Given for President of mas Dixon's "Birth of a Nation." cheon for Mrs. Bryan.

HINGTON, Feb. 19.—A private view of Dixon's motion picture films "The f a Nation" was iven this evening in st Room of the White House with the nt present.

tures were shown under the direction author of the book and Miss Margaret who arranged for the exhibition. No ions were issued, and only the members executive household with that of the ary of the Treasury and Mrs. McAdoo present.

Washington Post Feb. 20-15

MOVIES AT PRESS CLUB.

Pictures Based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman" Shown to Large Gathering.

With Chief Justice White, of the Supreme Court of the United States, as the guest of honor, D. W. Griffith, the producer, and Thomas Dixon, jr., author of the book, entertained the members of the National Press Club in the banquet hall of the Raleigh last ni with an invitation presentation of gargantuan motion picture drama, " Birth of a Nation," based on Mr on's "The Clansman."

There were 500 specta cheered and applauded th three hours required to gantic picture, with a ute intermission. J 18,000 people were t of the spectacul more than 2,0 "Kuklux Kl

Among th addition to Secretary of t ...bers of the Senate.

As the pictu e has not yet been shown publicly in the East, the producer requested that no review of his master film be published prior to its New York premiere on March 3.

Eve. Star

Liberty The 'Birt

Following Otis a the Liberty Saturday night, D Griffith takes acto house to present ha "The Birth of a Nati ment will commence March 3. The stor Thomas Dixon's well play, "The Clansman

It depicts some of ...ents in the ...

In ... of ... Griffith ... ...

Pa. Feb 20-15

present his great of a Nation," on Thea re. The play Dixon's novel, "The people were util- 3,000 horses being

From PRESS

Address GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

Date FEB 1

Establish

J. Frank Gibbons, who is in advan of the submarine motion picture sho which comes to Powers' next week, w soon go out with the new motion pi ture drama, "Birth of a Nation," spectacular photoplay made from Thomas ... novel, "The Clansman." It is al ...don, ...ving a great attraction in Los ... ... it was shown ... ill open March ...ew York.

MAE MARSH,
In "The Birth of a Nation," Lib[illegible] Theatre.

"The Birth of a Nation" Shown Before Statesmen

D. W. Griffith's [illegible] spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," comes to the Liberty Theatre next week, has [illegible] from Washington, [illegible] Friday night, before the National Press Club, he gave a private exhibition of this wonderful picture. Chief Justice White of the United States Supreme Court was the guest of honor. Other distinguished personages present were Secretary of the Navy Daniels, thirty-eight members of the United States Senate and fifty Representatives. The statesmen were accompanied by the wives of their respective parties. After the presentation of the picture Mr. Griffith was showered with congratulations by the newspaper men and their distinguished guests.

Next Thursday night Mr. Griffith, in recognition of his remarkable achievements with this picture, will be the guest of honor of the National Press Club at their "Inside Dope Night," and will deliver a talk along the lines indicated by this event upon the development of the art of motion pictures in this country.

PICKING LINCOLN ACTOR HARD JOB

Joseph Henabery Chosen for "Birth of a Nation."

In preparing for the stage "The Birth of a Nation," which will be given next Wednesday at the Liberty Theatre, D. W. Griffith, the director of this production, experienced great difficulty in finding a character to portray Abraham Lincoln.

Over twenty applicants were thoroughly studied before Joseph Henabery was finally selected. In the research prior to the making of the picture it was found that there were fifty photographs of Lincoln extant and that all varied according to the expression of the President at the time they were taken.

As authorities differed materially upon many questions of his characteristic poses it will be seen how difficult it was to get a player who would embody the different features of Lincoln in a manner that would be acceptable to all.

Several applicants looked ideal at first but failed in the photo tests. Mr. Henabery had made a study of Lincoln and in both [illegible] and personality came up to Mr. [illegible] ideas. [illegible] the details of the [illegible]

"LINCOLN" ON THE SCREEN.

From HERALD
Address: Washington, D. C.
Date FEB 3 0 1915

CHIEF JUSTICE AND SENATORS AT "MOVIE"

Distinguished Gathering Attends First Production of "The Birth of a Nation."

David W. Griffith, who has been called the greatest producer of motion pictures, last night sat in the big ballroom of the Raleigh Hotel and saw thrown on the screen for the first time in public his epic production, "The Birth of a Nation." Beside Mr. Griffith sat Thomas Dixon, the author, upon whose book, "The Clansman," Mr. Griffith based his story of the film play.

In reserved seats nearer the screen sat Chief Justice White, of the Supreme Court of the United States, on Mrs. White's [illegible] in whose honor the premiere of "The Birth of a Nation" was presented. Behind the Chief Justice and his party a large part of the membership of the Senate and House, a sprinkling of members of the Diplomatic Corps, scores of high officials.

Because "The Birth of a Nation" saw its public birth under auspices of the National Press Club, there were scores of newspaper men present. A list of other guests would include names of the National Capital's smartest society folk. The large ballroom was filled to capacity and the gathering was doubtless the most distinguished that ever saw motion picture reels unraveled.

It took Griffith eight months to produce the play. His cost was $500,000. This figure may be better understood when it is [illegible] 18,000 persons were employed in producing the picture.

Established: New

From DISPATCH
Address: Pittsburgh, Pa.
Date [illegible] 1915

HEADLINE

Established: Londo[illegible]

[illegible]rth of the Nation," a complete [illegible] out of the contributory themes [illegible]can history, on which "The Clansman" is founded, will be shown at the [illegible] Theater, New York City, March [illegible] next. Over 18,000 persons were [illegible]d in the making of this big spectacle and a specially written score that [illegible]tes the various themes of the story [illegible] played as an accompaniment to the [illegible]tion by a symphony orchestra of [illegible]es.

ERCIAL

y are next film

ew Yo 884

ING TELEGRAPH
York City

the Liberty.

film spectacle, "The
" is presented at the ext Wednesday night ll be found to hav suit the requirem
The alterations, wh ter the end of O
ent to-morrow nig er the supervision ho produced the s

ork, 1884

AN York City

FEB 26 1915

Calls al Expert

Griffith's photo-cle, "The Birth of nted at the L Wednesday nig at the theatre
anged to suit production.
under the th and an been study-to estab-
and to min-eye. This heatre has rected to a motion

1884

"The Birth of a Nation."

The [illegible] D. W. [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," which will be exhibited at the Liberty Theatre next week, is unusual. After the film was completed Griffith decided to present it for a single week in Los Angeles, in order that he might adjust to it automatically the orchestral accompaniment.

So great has been the popularity of the picture in Los Angeles that the engagement is now in its third week, with probably a month yet to come. The regular prices in Los Angeles range from twenty-five cents to one dollar. Before the picture had been on exhibition a week speculators were receiving as much as three dollars a seat.

Rattling the Skeleton.

When Theodore Mitchell was engaged as press representative for D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," he was taken to the film studio to witness a private exhibition of the picture. At its conclusion he turned to the man next to him and said: "Wnothebell's the guy that staged this?" The man he addressed was Mr. Griffith himself.

From TRIBUNE
Address: New York City
Date FEB 26 1915

The Liberty Theatre will be rearranged for D. W. Griffith's photographic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which opens Wednesday evening. Following the end of Otis Skinner's engagement to-morrow night, Mr. Griffith will take possession and install an optical expert to establish the correct foc s and minimize the strain on the eye. The most advantageous seats will be set apart as loges.

Esta 1884

Ever

David W. Griff

Of course you have! Any one has ever seen a moving picture—and of us have—knows him. "The king moving picture directors" they call him

To-morrow we are going to pay a visit and you are invited to come alo To-morrow in the Magazine Section. has promised to tell us something about work—a peep behind the screen, as it we Others who have heard him say you'll enj it quite as much as the wonderful pictu he stages. So be up bright and early a join us.

TO-MORROW

The Sunday Tribun

Order from Your Newsdealer To-

N.Y. Commercial - Feb 22-1

"Birth of a Nation" In the M

On Wednesday night in the Liberty, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York, a photographic spectacle entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel and play "The Clansman." The producer devoted 8 months to its making. He is said to have employed the services of 18,000 persons and 3000 horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation of Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by 40 musicians. The story begins in the Seventeenth Century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing on the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with its terrific battles and [illegible] of death and broken hearts. Shortly after the beginning of Reconstruction, [illegible] the ordeal of the Negro [illegible] the Ku Klux Klan's [illegible] the establishment [illegible] at the end.

From DRAMATIC MIRROR
Address: New York City
Date FEB

MANY CHANGES IN THEATERS

Many changes are scheduled in the local theatrical map this week. Otis Skinner in "The Silent Voice" leaves the Liberty for a road tour, giving way to the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation."

v Yor

join us.

ERICAN
ew York City

FEB 2 0 1915

...e Calls ...tical Expert

... Griffith's photo-... "The Birth of ... at the L... Wednesday night, ... the theatre ... to suit ... production.

... under the ... and an ... been study-... to estab-... and to min-... eye. This ... theatre has ... structed to ... a motion

1884

From TRIBUNE
Address: New York City

Date

The Liberty Theatre will be rearranged for D. W. Griffith's photographic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which opens Wednesday evening. Following the end of Otis Skinner's engagement to-morrow night, Mr. Griffith will take possession and install an optical expert to establish the correct focus and minimize the strain on the eye. The most advantageous seats will be not apart as loges.

Esta 1884

TO-MORROW

The Sunday Tele...

Order from Your Newsdealer T...

N.Y. COMMERCIAL - FEB 22-1

"Birth of a Nation" In the ...

On Wednesday night in the Liberty, D. W. Griffith will present for the first time in New York, a photographic spectacle entitled "The Birth of a Nation." The story upon which the work is based is Thomas Dixon's novel and play "The Clansman." The producer devoted 8 months to its making. He is said to have employed the services of 18,000 persons and 3,000 horses to get the needed effects. A complete score has been written for the presentation of Joseph Carl Briel. The accompaniment will be played by 40 musicians. The story begins in the Seventeenth Century with the coming of Africa slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the slavery question and its bearing upon the history of the United States. In the wake of the abolition movement comes the Civil War with its terrific battles and the toll of death and broken hearts; Sherman's march to the sea; the burning of Atlanta; the downfall of Petersburg; Lee's surrender; the ordeal of the Reconstruction period; the Ku Klux Klan's solution of the problem; the establishment of an everlasting peace in the end.

From DRAMATIC MIRROR
Address: New York City

Date

MANY CHANGES IN THEATERS

Many changes are scheduled in the local theatrical map this week. Otis Skinner in "The Silent Voice" leaves the Liberty for road tour, giving way to the film drama, "The Birth of a Nation."

...w Yor...

Motion Picture News - FEB 27-1915

STIRRING WA...-TIME SCENE FROM GRIFFITH'S PRODUCTION OF ... CLANSM... KNOWN AS "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

From DRAMATIC
Address: New Y...

Date

WI... SEES GRIFFITH ...

David ... Griffith's productio... Birth of a Nation, was last we... to President Wilson at the East... the White Hou... The p...

MUSEMENTS

THE PODIUM

THEATRE BEAUTIFUL

AMERICA TODAY

Performances Daily—Night, 8

ces, 2:30—All Seats Reserved—Prices:

25c, 50c, 75c—Matinee, 25c, 50c.

Griffith's Startling Picture

THE CLANS-MAN

—OR—

BIRTH OF THE NATION

d on the famous novel of Thos. Dixon, Jr.

roduced by D. W. Griffith,

Foremost Motion Picture Producer.

llowing criticisms on it:

, the famous playwright and author—"When I was wrote a play for children. As this play compares st play, so does the world's greatest play compare ANSMAN."

D OF CENSORS paid it this startling tribute— storically, morally, it is a great step forward— gatest that has ever been taken before in Pictures

Newspaper editors in New York says: "Our best aper editorials are vapid when compared to such E CLANSMAN."

t in the South before the War.—The pri- of Thadeus Stevens, the Great Com- assassination of President Lincoln. The the famous Kuklux Klan.

battle scenes in the history of motion usand soldiers in action; artillery duels, rges, bayonet attacks.

at struggle between the North and South.

nstruction period.

educational.

ST $500,000 TO PRODUCE.

ired 7 Months to Complete It.

'BIRTH OF NATION' TO RUN AT LIBERTY

Griffith Film, Based on Dixon's "The Clansman," to Be Shown on Big Scale.

TWO - DOLLAR ADMISSIONS

"The Birth of a Nation," a pictorial spectacle based upon Thomas Dixon's famous novel and play, "The Clansman," will occupy the Liberty Theatre, New York, at the close of Otis Skinner's run, according to arrangements completed by Klaw & Erlanger and D. W. Griffith, the celebrated Mutual-Reliance director, who made the production.

The film is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon based "The Clansman."

The taking of the Liberty Theatre by Griffith and his associates forms a vigorance in the art of motion pictures. Beings theatregoers go to the theatre to see moving pictures. This is the first time plans have actually been laid to bring about.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be shown in New York upon a scale which is a dream of greater accomplishment than the theatre then would have been able to show a year ago. More than [illegible] were employed in making the spectacle and a specially written [illegible] elaborates the various themes of [illegible] will be played by an orchestra of [illegible] pieces.

The date for the first showing of D. W. Griffith's spectacular production, "The Birth of a Nation," is set for Wednesday night, [illegible] the Liberty Theatre. Hundreds of people are the impressive [illegible] as to the number of people [illegible] part in acting the scenes [illegible] camera. Three thousand [illegible] also used. The story is based on Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," [illegible] orchestra of forty [illegible] incidental music.

From SUN

Address: New York City

Date FEB 1 4 1915

THE PLAYS ON THE SCREEN.

The Strand Theatre will [illegible] from "The Wife of [illegible] which [illegible] Theatre, [illegible] will be [illegible] by Gertrude Walker. [illegible]

Est

Sunday Herald 2-14-15

After the engagement of Otis Skinner in "The Silent Voice" in the Liberty Theatre this week, D. W. Griffith will present the film "The Birth of a Nation," founded on the play "The Clansman."

Sunday Herald 2-14-15
N.Y. Telegraph

'BIRTH OF NATION' TO RUN AT LIBERTY

Griffith Film, Based on Dixon's "The Clansman," to Be Shown on Big Scale.

TWO - DOLLAR ADMISSIONS

"The Birth of a Nation," a photo-play spectacle based upon Thomas Dixon's famous novel and play, "The Clansman," is to occupy the Liberty Theatre, New York, at the close of Otis Skinner's run, according to arrangements completed between Klaw & Erlanger and D. W. Griffith, the celebrated Mutual-Reliance director, who made the production.

The film is the complete working out of all the contributory themes in American history upon which Thomas Dixon founded "The Clansman."

The taking of the Liberty Theatre by Mr. Griffith and his associates realizes another advance in the art of motion pictures and brings theatregoers up to the two dollar moving picture. This is the first time plans have actually been laid to bring this about.

"The Birth of a Nation" will be given in New York upon a scale which means the dawn of greater accomplishments in the theatre than would have been deemed possible a year ago. More than 18,000 persons were employed in making the great spectacle and a specially written score that elaborates the various themes of the story will be played by an orchestra of forty pieces.

February 14 1915

From DAILY PEOPLE
Address: New York City
Date FEB 14 1915

„The Birth of a Nation."

Im Liberty Theater in der W. 42. Str. wird gleich nach Beendigung des Otis Skinner'schen Gastspiels D. W. Griffith am 3. März das große Film-Schauspiel „The Birth of a Nation" herausbringen, mit dem er versucht hat, das Filmdrama zu dem Range eines wirklichen Dramas zu erheben. Das neue Kunstwerk, an dessen Zustandekommen mehr als 1800 Personen und einem sorgfältig bis auf das Minutiöseste ausgearbeiteten Szenarium tätig waren, gründet sich inhaltlich auf den berühmten Thomas Dixon'schen Roman „The Clansman", hat aber die Thatsachen und die dahinter liegenden Motive, die durch Verschmelzung des Südens mit dem Norden zu der Geburt einer einheitlichen großen amerikanischen Nation führte, so bis ins Einzelne verfolgt und vertieft, daß der Originaltitel „The Clansman" den Inhalt nicht mehr deckte, und mit Dixons Einverständniß mit dem jetzigen „The Birth of a Nation" vertauscht wurde. Die begleitende Musik wird ein symphonisches Orchester von 40 Musikern ausführen.

The date for the first showing of D. W. Griffith's spectacular moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation," has been set for Wednesday night, March 3, in the Liberty Theatre. Eighteen thousand people are the impressive figures given as to the number of people who took part in acting the scenes before the camera. Three thousand horses were also used. The story is based on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." An orchestra of forty pieces will furnish incidental music.

Sun Feb. 14-1915

From SUN
Address: New York City
Date FEB 14 1915

THE PLAYS ON THE SCREEN.

"The Birth of a Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," will be shown at the Liberty Theatre beginning March 3.

February 14

From WORLD
Address: New York City
Date FEB 14 1915

The date of the opening of D. W. Griffith's production, "The Birth of a Nation," based on "The Clansman" by Thomas Dixon, has been set for Wednesday evening, March 3, at the Poetry, Art

...ys David W. Grif

"How about the cavalry and war effects?"

"We should be helpless without the aid of governmental authorities. An area of ten square miles is marked off, as for the Vanderbilt Cup races. On a certain day all vehicular or other road traffic is prohibited within this area. Signs of warning are tacked up everywhere.

"Our thousands and thousands of cavalrymen—in the present production we used 18,000 people altogether—own the entire countryside. Cameras are everywhere—the most effective ones for pictorial purposes being mounted on autos that travel ahead of the cavalry up to a speed of seventy-five miles an hour. Nor is it a case of straight, consecutive picture taking. Parallel with the onrush of the cavalry run one, two, three other Reconstruction stories. Each onrush is a bit contrasted with another short scene of entirely different character. The timing must be exact, yet the cyclonic rapidity must never seem to be relaxed.

"It will give you an idea of necessary, enormous complexity when I tell you that there are no less than 5,000 separate and individual scenes in the completed work. The battle pictures are as cunning a mosaic of the infinitely little as the cavalry charges or as the scenes of domestic life in the Carolinas. We exhibit the panorama of a battlefield flung over many miles of mountain and valley, show the opposing intrenchments and the artillery fire, display the riflemen forming for advance, the charges over broken ground, the bayonet rush right up to the trenches, the deadly handgrips somewhat rudely asked of t... nature theatre.

David Griffith laughed—not ... fended vanity or condescendi... but the easy, natural mirth of ... expects to encounter many skep... ing Thomases in the day's wor...

"Why," he said, "the make... have already surpassed in many ... of the speaking stage. The ... coming to us, are they not? A... ing such of our devices as the ... the parallel action. And I could ... tress with a tremendous New Y... years to her credit who built up ... mous part from close study o... of our Los Angeles picture act...

"Already it is admitted the ... beauty the motion picture ... far ahead of the stage play... parently a lost art in the reg... it is the very life and essence ... playhouse. We have staged ... ing's stories, many of Tenny... ble Biblical and classical fa... beauty but thought is our go... drama is peculiarly the birt... No one can tell what the mo... become, for we are at presen... fancy of it."

"Pardon me," I persisted, ... lent drama ever put forth im... ucts? Will there ever be a S... Homer of the movies?"

"No," mused David Griffith ... cause the motion picture is ...

...eek of Febru...

...of individual enemies in physical struggle ... fashion of acting intimate dear go y, to to ty-right in—are sed?. At thrown we have finitely little as the cavalry charges or as the scenes of domestic life in the Carolinas. We exhibit the panorama of a battlefield flung over many miles of mountain and valley, show the opposing intrenchments and the artillery fire, display the riflemen forming for advance, the charges over broken ground, the bayonet rush right up to the trenches, the deadly handgrips fancy of it."

"Pardon me," I persisted, lent drama ever put forth in ucts? Will there ever be a Homer of the movies?"

"No," mused David Griffith cause the motion picture is eek of Februa... is a like capaci...

y, five miles of s twice too long.
ndense. At the f hard labor we Nation' to 12,000 alf miles—or in rty-five mil

of individual enemies in physical struggle and the single acts of heroism or chivalry at close range—and all on a screen a few feet wide and a few feet high! This will give some slight idea of the tremendous technical difficulties involved."

"Will the motion picture ever develop into a true work of art?" was the next question, fashion of acting stage work of F

Kemble, for examp
ly reproduced, woul
awkward to us of to day may similarly see ble to the people tw
But the immortal st

Los Angeles, Feb. 20.—Al. H. Woods joined his wife, who is wintering here, recently, and brought with him from New York a number of plays which Oliver Morosco will try out in stock for later New York production. They are "Montmartre," a French play by Pierre Frondal; "The Guilty Man," a dramatization of a Coppee novel by Charles K[illegible]; "The New Shylock," a drama, and "I Want Money," a comedy.

As startling as the production of "The Clansman" is, more startling still is the phenomenal success this latest masterpiece of D. W. Griffith is achieving at Clune's Auditorium, where it is being shown in Los Angeles. The seat sale, as far as a motion picture is concerned, was unprecedented, the house being sold out days ahead at prices ranging from twenty-five to seventy-five cents with box seats at a dollar. There was a line-up at the box office from early morn to late at night that would make a Sarah Bernhardt premiere line-up at the box-office look like thirty cents. W. H. Clune is to be congratulated on the wonderful advertising he gave the film, his advertising bill running easily into the thousands. Considerable free advertising was handed the film by the City Council, which sought to stop the showing after the local Board of Censors had passed favorably on the film, on account of several local colored people had protested the showing of it on the grounds that it would stir up race prejudice. The City Council ordered Chief Sebastian to stop the showing, and the latter, notifying the police commissioners and the Mayor, sought to have it stopped without any summary instructions from that source. The city elections, which are coming on, may have something to do with this, both the Council and the chief having shown a marked desire to please the colored element, the Council having even threatened to [illegible] the scalps of the censors for having refused to censor the film [illegible] the Council's order. The question is: how are the moving picture people going to view the situation? They have the power to say something at the coming city election and the Council and Chief Sebastian, who is to run for Mayor, may find much to their sorrow that it pays better not to antagonize the film industry too much, just for the sake of getting the colored vote.

Globe, March

Moving Picture News and Views

By FREDERICK JAMES SMITH.

"The Birth of a Nation" tonight.

Eve. Sun - MAR. 2, 1915

A special performance yesterday of "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacular Griffith film that is to be presented publicly in the Liberty Theatre on Wednesday, served to introduce the big photo play to a throng of theatrical and professional folk. It evoked enthusiasm in tears to an unexpected quantity and stirred the supposedly blase crowd into calling Mr. Griffith out for a speech.

Henry Wells

Citizen - MAR. 1-15

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

Theatre Rearranged for the Photographic Spectacle.

D. W. Griffith's photographic [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation," is [illegible] at the Lib[illegible] Theatre next [illegible] night for [illegible] beginning [illegible]

Globe - MAR. 1-1915

G. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" will be the talk of Broadway after Wednesday's premiere at the Liberty. That's the opinion of those "in the know."

Brklyn Eagle, MAR. 2-15

Society, finance and the varied arts were represented at a private showing of D. W. Griffith's motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theater yesterday afternoon. The showing was in the nature of a forerunner to the public opening on Wednesday night, when the professional critics will view the presentation.

Wash[illegible]

PHOT[illegible] PHO[illegible]

Possibility of Poem Exempt In Staging Hypocri[illegible]

A MARVELOUS FILM DRAMA SHOWN

"The Birth of a Nation" Presented at the Liberty Theatre.

FOUNDED ON STORY OF "THE CLANSMAN"

Imposing Civil War Scenes, Followed by Exciting Ku Klux Raids.

THE CAST.

Chief Red Cloud.....Henry Walthall
Chief Cornstalk.....Mutsen Cooper
Gen. Stoneman.....Max Davey
Elsie Stoneman.....Josephine Crowell
Charles Stoneman.....Spottiswoode Aitken
Colonel Cameron.....J. A. Beringer
Congressman Austin.....John French
Henry.....Jennie Lee
Austin Stoneman.....Ralph Lewis
Mrs. Cameron.....Lillian Gish
Mammy.....Elmer Clifton
Gen. Ross.....Robert Harron
Lieut. Cameron.....Wallace Reid
Mr. Brown.....Mary Alden
Mr. Lynch.....George F. Ismann
Phil.....Walter Long
Jeremiah Cameron.....Joseph Henabery
Wm. Bond.....Raoul Walsh
Gen. Grant.....Donald Crisp
Robert E. Lee.....Howard Gaye

HECTOR TURNBULL.

the most imposing film presented in this city was the Liberty Theatre for the last night. It is a mammoth based on Thomas Dixon's he South, "The Clansman," by means of a narrative ded with romance the reconstruc- of the South States, dating the time of the secession. he purpose of the spectacle, we from the program stress message for universal claimed, is contained views. The announcem that great care has been glorify battle and to emphasize note of terror and desolation is the real truth of war." Our sion, however (and we may con- ere to a meagre knowledge of ays), was that the spectacle will opularity chiefly because of its ious thrilling war scenes, and llowing exciting raids of the Klu Klansmen. Of course, no one gaze long upon the scenes of or and desolation" that followed ath of war, but neither can a red d human gaze long at scenes of battles and deeds of heroism field without being gloriously land the battle, murder and ate scenes are not few. narrative threaded through the ures is one of romance. ch, girls, soldiers, sweet- ard. ll the trimmings are pre- elder most compelling fashion. ays as well as the views of ies, are obtained in a man- R es the lagoon as little ellous. The cast of prin- pieces to have been ad- ed and their playing was l.

Griffith, the producer, ever stage and assertible so in- ectacle is a long story that ld in the programmes than relate here. Some of the res of his experiences may ing, however.

re production occupied eight ne and a small army of men ma. Over eighteen authorities mobilized in order to get the atmosphere into the scene in President Lincoln was shot. y the way, is only one of the interesting historical incidents re faithfully reproduced and over a period of twelve years. great battle scenes, it is said, first that were taken as the ion film. camera. As to e, full equipment and the amount of preparation in have been tremendous, for best observer would be pu-

---

W... AY for the necessary for producer of n thest. A man directing large groups o a sort of peacetime Napo. with the inventive faculty oped so that he can contr means to overcome but chanical difficulties; a h constitution which enables dure the physical strains must demand of his actors, resource, of patience, of tho a man with that quintessent —"the infinite capacity f pains." Yes, all these thing the equipment of the motio director, and then some must have imagination; he a dreamer's vision, such a appreciation of the beauti nature world as are reflect following interesting address before the members of the Press Club Thursday night W. Griffith, the foremost producer in the motion pict and the man who has rece pleted "The Birth of a Nati erally conceded to be the m tentious film drama ever t verifiable miracle of the movi Griffith's subject was "Inside the Movies."

By D. W. Grif

I DON'T know that we to give the "inside tion pictures becau quite sure that the side dope. If we kn where such a thing coul we should lose no time in the aforesaid shop and a "dope" in a large sufficienc

I suppose what you are ested in is not my opinion that subject, but rather i the root of the details of I am at a loss just how to Say, perhaps, we discover ing Buddha, stirring from dian dream into a thoughtf brain action; or a Confuci and austere Plato, or a disc Master of Christianity, or fu the first man-radical emerg dark cave, maddened by jea prehistoric instinct for sel tion; stirred in some unk way by some equally unk hitherto undreamed of death through the gray twilight meval day * * * someth within him, into what we thought—an idea—a beginni agination.

This man would in his stran language express his tho sounds. His first discoverie carve it upon stone. The Bud fucius, the old forgotten phi of Egypt, a Cæsar, an in Greek, a more refined Rom into English, a Shakespeare ton, Darwin, Huxley, and not one friend for another, into a Goethe or Kant or still mor the father of the power to v and unyielding like a Teuton watching over some twilight claiming, not as we Christia done through so many hundre in the excess of emotional "God," but instead, "superman Nietzsche—Nietzsche, the author long gray mushing as it stan its back against Germany and its face against the world, or to the bleak northern shores of Brand or Bjornson, across to our own land, an Emerson or Edgar Allan Poe—I am only picking names at random and don't expect to qualify as a judge of genius or be service, but I ... should any of these men, excepting our primordial relative, have an idea to express he had the written word—the idea in his mind or brain or whatever we wish to call it, and then ...

Vol. 1 No. 1 Pat. Feb. 28-1915

[illegible] murder and [illegible] are not few. [illegible]rative threaded through the [illegible] is one of romance. [illegible] girls, soldiers, sweet[illegible] all the trimmings are pre[illegible] most compelling fashion. [illegible] as well as [illegible] views of [illegible], are obtained in a man[illegible] as the layman as little [illegible]ious. The cast of prin[illegible] seems to have been ad[illegible] their playing was [illegible].

Griffith, the producer, ever [illegible] stage and assemble so im[illegible]ecule is a long story that [illegible]ld in the pro[illegible] comes than [illegible] relate here. [illegible] of the [illegible]res of his experiences may [illegible]ing, however.

[illegible]e production occupied eight [illegible]me and a small army of men [illegible]ica. Over eighteen authorities [illegible]sulted in order to get the [illegible]tmosphere into the scene in President Lincoln was shot. [illegible]y the way, is only one of the [illegible] interesting historical incidents [illegible]re faithfully reproduced and [illegible]over a period of twelve years. [illegible]reat battle scenes, it is said, [illegible]ost that were taken at night [illegible]ion picture camera. As to [illegible]es, [illegible] equipment and the [illegible]mount of preparation in[illegible] have been tremendous, for [illegible] observer would be put [illegible] note, although the [illegible] find the hero's face [illegible]o years in service at [illegible]

[illegible]air is a decided [illegible]he producer, Mr. [illegible] may strike some [illegible] for universal [illegible] appeal to every [illegible]ity, spectacular [illegible]pon thrills.

[illegible] Francisco, Cal.

MAR [illegible] 1915

CLANSMAN PROVES SENSATION.

It is generally conceded that no such extraordinary motion picture as D. W. Griffith's, "The Clansman," or "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown in twelve reels at the Alcazar theatre, has ever been witnessed in this city.

Originally scheduled for one week, the Alcazar management has cancelled all immediate attractions that "The Clansman" may be continued for a second week, beginning next Monday afternoon. Two performances are given every day, one in the afternoon, beginning at two o'clock and the other in the evening at eight o'clock.

The gorgeous stage setting, depicting an old Southern plantation, the enlarged orchestra and the chorus of Southern jubilee singers are added features.

The [illegible]duction [illegible] seven [illegible] [illegible] and [illegible] includes [illegible] before [illegible] attempted [illegible] [illegible]

[illegible] unknowing [illegible] Hitherto undreamed of death through the gray twilight [illegible] moral day * * * [illegible]ometh within him, into what we thought—an [illegible] beginnin[illegible] agination.

This man would in his stran[illegible] language express his [illegible] the sounds. His first [illegible] would [illegible] carve it upon stone. The Bud[illegible] [illegible]fucius, the old [illegible]gotten phi[illegible] of Egypt, a Cicero, an in[illegible] Greek, a more [illegible] Rom[illegible] into England, [illegible] Shakespeare [illegible]ton, Darwin, [illegible], and not one friend for [illegible], into [illegible] a Goethe or [illegible] [illegible] nor the father of [illegible] power to w[illegible] and unfolding like a [illegible] watching over [illegible] twilight claiming, not as we Christia[illegible] done through so many hundre[illegible] in the excess of emotional "God," but instead, "superman" Nietzche—Nietzche, the author [illegible] long gray machine as it stan[illegible] its back against Germany and its rage against the world, or to the bleak northern shores of Ibsen or Bjornson, across to our own land, an Emerson or Edgar Allan Poe—I am only picking names at random and don't expect to qualify as a judge of genius or brain service, but I say should any of these men, excepting our primordial relative, have an idea to express he had the written word—the idea in his mind or brain or whatever we wish to call it, and then language to express the idea; that great thing which really makes our modern world * * * the written word—that form which you of the press know and realize so well the power it holds.

No Word to Aid Pictures.

But for the "inside dope" the motion picture man has not the spoken word of the stage, and not your weapon of the written word. Say, if as Edwin Arnold draws the story, for example, the young Lord Buddha walks out, down the garlanded street. Buddha has never seen or known suffering; only youth has been around him; all pain and ugliness have been kept away from his eyes. This, you would know well how to express in writing; this the stage would bring upon one scene and explain with spoken words. He comes to a certain street; there is a pause in the procession of youth. In the show of beautiful draped or undraped womanhood, in the glory of the scented flowers; in the moan of sweet music; in the lilt of yonder sunshine, oriental pavements gleaming; perhaps better than all, the pulsing of youth itself * * * but, as I say, there is a lull in the sound of laughter, a pause in the chant of music, and from behind some closed door and draped window my lord Buddha hears a scream of agony. That is the first time in his life he hears that sound. You imagine what it means to him. The lord, protecting him from suffering and sorrow, tries to get him on his way, but fails. This new, unknown thing must be investigated. Again he hears the scream. He has the doors opened. There is a suffering woman screaming at death that gapes in the window. He comes into the dark rooms. He will not be denied the answer to his question of what this means. He sees, from room to room, poverty, suffering, [illegible]th * * * the end of Lord Buddha's [illegible] the beginnig of his wisdom [illegible]

— Director Doc[illegible]

[illegible] you

A NATION'S MOTION PICTURES

graphy at Its Best Version of "The man" at Liberty.

photoplay took a long rd last night when "The ation," which is a version Dixon's novel "The was publicly exhibited
rst time at the Liberty.
By solving so successfully licate problems of producmarkable screen play on a ge which must have hol several countries, D. W.
ly placed himself in the s country, of all nation rsaries.

nce, which closely re-first night gathering at nportant dramatic events on, surrendered completely otional appeal of the pic-as also thrilled by the bat-of the Civil War, which on a scale and with an ative quality that vividly red actual warfare. Nevertheless was the constant emotional of the story, which could be d without the slightest confusion that gave the production its artistic value.

Practically also the picture seemed to overcome many of the difficulties presented in screen plays. The pictures were steady, the lighting was right and the people who imagined the characters had evidently been chosen because of their ability to act.

Two episodes were the outstanding accomplishments in a spectacle lasting nearly three hours first represented, in a views, the historical incident man's march to the sea ing of Atlanta. Thousands must have been required for of these thrilling battle whole villages were comto give them the appearance ity.

and epilogue pictured the on of President Lincoln at ater. Not only was the ails of the crime shown, also the whole interior of the theatre, with its audience assembled and the performance of "Our American Cousin" taking place on the stage. This vivid representation of a great national calamity had a curious effect upon last night's audience. As the pictures were unreeled they sat in subdued silence, but, when the tension ended, broke forth in prolonged applause in recognition of the pictures' uncanny realism.

Mr. Griffith drew abundantly upon his own imagination in supplying the pictorial episodes of Mr. Dixon's story, which followed a novel too well known to require description now.
Such scenes included the fall
Petersburg, Lee's surrender at Appomattox the formation of the Ku-Klux Klan and incidents in the South during the reconstruction period after the Civil War. If anything can justify
Mr. Dixon's story of racial hatred this film in Mr. Griffith's pictorial representation of it, which makes "Civilization" the most remarkable picture ever shown in this country up to date, becomes almost insignificant by comparison.

An excellent musical accompaniment played to the thrill of the war scenes and intensified the romance of the love episodes. The entire production is on a scale that will give moving picture enthusiasts a new chance to

BIRTH OF NATION SEEN AT LIBERTY

lm Edition of Thomas Dixon's Novel Makes Profound Impression.

ACTING IS EXCELLENT

Big Crowd Appl

[illegible] that time the organizati of Dixon's novel with the great three love affair
e same suspensive
n current of event
h quite the same

arrat that D. W. Griffith d com, sed out of "The Clans-eans with a picture of the slave s it began in the New England States in the seventeenth century, and then follows Dixon's story through the events antecedent to the declaration of the civil war, then pictures some of the spectacular military events of the war, including views of Sherman's march to the sea, that are not only remarkable for their effect of verity, but also are wonderful as pictorial compositions.

Petersburg Fight.

The trench fighting before Petersburg is also represented by a series pictures that are simply amazing their reproduction of warfare as know it in books and war pictures.
photographs that have come from rope of the present war can compl for thrilling horror a of test as these Mr. Griffith "composed and which were "fought" under tion with that of the cers who helped him with their ical knowledge.

The assassination of President coln, which brings the first part close, also shows some extraordi pictures of the interior of Ford's tre with "Our American Cousin" b ated, the movements of the actors the stage, of the throng constitu audience suggesting nothing but most tangible life, with never a of artificiality anywhere in the pi tures.

The second part, with Reconstruction and the machinations of Austin
Stoneman and his mulatto satellite Lynch, the rising of the Ku Klu and the saving of both the G and Lois Stoneman by this tion, is equally remarkable the progress as pictures and faithful representations of the in story. The assembling of ked men and their wives and the form of P it had the spectators of the their knees with excitement;

EV. SUN
JA. 4/1915

, Sweeps
eet.

The birth of a new epoch in a new was the greatest outcome of the sentation of "The Birth of a Na-at the Liberty Theatre last night.
ore had such a combination ind story, spectacle and en unrelled before New York definitely established that the lay on a new art field diffearply from that of the spoken and that of the written word.

Th is pictured effect of an era of fratricidal strife sweeps over a pe-of about twelve years, following general the American nation's change, and illustrating, no repetition ing, from 1860 to 1872 many of the great national events, but following in particular the fortunes of two typical families, one Northern, one Southern.
The skill of director and actors keeps the spectators always on tip-toe and at times fairly lifts them out of their seats.

It is in many ways the greatest of photo plays. That it is not the greatest in all ways seems due to the book and subject of the book on which it is based, "The Clansman." The thrill of the thing almost makes one feel it a source that, if it was not intended to, did at least rekindle dying ra hatreds.

A master of arts pictorial, D. W.
Griffith has painted this picture on only fair proaching it in its ever been staged, unless Griffith's own "Birth Another memory picture is night battle, with its flashes gun and shell. It is actual beautifully and the first ever ever done. The burning of A another right scene employs host of performers. The ish raid's March to the river of men flowing down ern valleys, is another imp

"War's Peace," an impress of the battle dead, toge legorical pictures glorify deploring war, together with battle pictures, make the a whole a great argument f sal peace, although "The
of it is so high in the

Etc. Eve Post - Jan 4

IND
FOLK

D.

ve been proud of
'I mean," and I
my friends in to look down
ly with it. Toe proud because
's "Birth of a w some of my friends of the Ve seen it heart good to wds in the lobby room after the e comments, the husiasm and wo ho have "been on possibilities oh for the feel I can man in the ffith a bit
ry. More

MIDNIGHT WO
AMERICAN FIL

STIRRING Scenes i Birth of the Natio

O professional Southerner jumped on his seat and shouted when the played "Dixie" at the staggering real production of "The Birth of the Nation," but everything else was done to intensify the enthusiasm in the Liberty
Theatre when the motion picture version Thomas A. Dixon's novel and play "The Clansman" was unreeled.

Whatever differences of opinion
Southerners may have had about the Ku Klux Klan, there was no doubt in any part that they were great riders. The burning climax of the play, the rescue of the white sheeted the rescue of the white ce went wild.

And D. W. Griffith, of directed the great picture make speeches. The Ku Klux which is said to be the contains in motion the country's history

ary question and its
In the wake of the come the civil war, ties and the toll
heirs: Sherman's burning of Atlanta,
Lee's surrend matics, the Lincoln, the
with the Ku Klux problem and the in the South in the

the spectators [illegible] times fairly lifts them off [illegible]
seats.

It is in many ways the [illegible] photo plays. This it is not, the grou[illegible] est in all ways seems due to the be[illegible] and subject of the book on which [illegible] is based, "The Clansman." The [illegible] of the thing almost makes one fe[illegible] a source that, if it was not intend[illegible] to, did at least rekindle dying re[illegible]
hatreds.

A master of arts pictorial, D. W. Griffith has painted this picture on [illegible]

Eve. Telegram - 7 Aug [illegible]

ND
FOLK

D.

re been proud of 'n man," and I
my friends in to look down ay with it. Toe proud because n's "Birth of a ow some of my friends of the ve seen it.

heart good to wds in the lobby
room after the ie comments, the husiasm and won-ho have "been on ossibilities

oh for the feel I can nan in the iffith a bit
ry. More can be no kind of the ave the play s ways. As g prices it is e open road and the liberor the future

n that with a production de death of oing to say, ids enough to and it." And s going to be t is not going penditure, but as far as you
t. D. W. Gri-

MINNEAPOLIS
MORNING TRIBUNE

STIRRING Scenes i[illegible]
Birth of the Natio[illegible]

O professional Southerner [illegible] jumped on his seat and shouted when they played "Dixie" at the staggering real production of "The Birth of the Nation," but everything else was done to intensify the enthusiasm in the Liberty matinee when the motion picture version of Thomas A. Dixon's novel and play "The Clansman" was revealed.

[illegible] matter what differences of opinion [illegible] audience may have had about the Ku Klux Klan, there was no doubt in any [illegible] that they were great riders. When, [illegible] thunning climax of the play, [illegible] vision of the white sheeted riders [illegible] the rescue of the white women [illegible] went wild.

[illegible] and D. W. Griffith, who managed the great picture, were [illegible] make speeches. The first film [illegible] which is said to be the biggest [illegible] contains in motion pictures the country's history reader, [illegible] the civil war, around [illegible] are wonderful on of [illegible] of scene. But the new [illegible] the first act was the [illegible] theatre showing the assassination [illegible] President Lincoln and the cast [illegible] The scene [illegible] perfect [illegible] be imagined and provoke [illegible] ment from the real audience [illegible] ing came the film presentation [illegible] instruction horrors and the bitter [illegible] rushes between the races, culminating [illegible] the attempt of the mulatto Lieutenant-Governor to marry the daughter of the politician. The arrival of the Ku Klux [illegible] charging upon a village packed with [illegible] soldiers, and the various scenes [illegible] as a photographic play of power, and fired up into prejudice to a virulent [illegible]

The story begins in the seventeenth century with the coming of African slaves to North America. Its further progress is closely related to varied phases of the man-

[illegible] ery question and its [illegible] the United S[illegible]

In the wake of the [illegible] come the civil war, [illegible] tles and the toll [illegible] hearts; the man's [illegible] burning of Atlanta, [illegible] hurst, Lee's surrend[illegible] the assass[illegible] Lincoln, the order [illegible] ed, the Ku Klux [illegible] problem and the est[illegible] lasting peace in the [illegible]

These histo[illegible] rate of all [illegible] shown in w[illegible] history to re[illegible] upon the large [illegible] which has re[illegible]

[illegible] of the hall. It took t[illegible] of a day "to set" each [illegible]. The packing of the troops was [illegible] complicated matter that had to [illegible] worked out to suit the coat[illegible] requirements, say, for six or e[illegible] hours previous to the film taking. [illegible] completed picture of 12,000 feet [illegible] Civil War and other historical film[illegible] cost the producers several hundred t[illegible]sand dollars, and those who see "The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre next week will be in nowise surprised at the great expense incurred.

Brlyn Times Mar. 2 15

"The Birth of a Nation."

Society, finance and the varied arts were represented at a private showing of D. W. Griffith's motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre yesterday afternoon. The showing was in the nature of a forerunner to the public opening on Wednesday night, when the professional critics will view the presentation. Frank A. Vanderlip, Felix Roth and Theodore A. Shonts represented the financial world. Society was represented by Mrs. James Burton, Mrs. Stephen Brown, Mrs. Osgood Field, Mrs. Angus Rambau, Mrs. William Hamilton and Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont. The opera contributed Mme. Gadski and her daughter, Miss Gadski-Jedlicka, Miss Sedbrick, Miss Gatti Casazza, Miss Alda, Elinor Gerhardt, Mary Steinway, Frances Spencer, Herr Alfred Hertz and Edward Siedl. A literary box book would cover the writers among whom were Booth Tarkington, Richard Harding Davis, Jean Webster, Mrs. Wilson Woodrow, Owen Johnson, Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Chambers, Robert Hughes, Rex Beach, Miss Gertrude Watson, Mr. and Mrs. Ellis Parker Butler, May Wilson Preston and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Street. The stage guild included Daniel Frohman and Florence Reed, Margaret Illington and E. J. Rowe, Wintarop Ames, Marguerite Clark, Hale Hamilton, Elizabeth Mesbery, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Fairbanks, Mr. and Mrs. Vernon Castle, Granville Barker, Dr. Emanuel Reicher, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Richman, Miss Janette Beecher and Mr. and Mrs. Crosby Gaige. Illustrators were also out in force, including Howard Chandler Christie, Allen Gilbert, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dart, Archie Gunn and Mr. and Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson.

15

[illegible]ae Marsh in "The Birth of a Nation."

Bkln Times Mar. 1-[illegible]

PLAYS AN[illegible] PLAYERS
GARDINER HALL.

[illegible]lm to mily. Therefore, we must

w. well as the actors—the trait artist and, in some se ng engineer are before us. N who's rehearse without the c kept o be ould aitols

CAREFULLY SET MOVIE DRAMA."

d now South Carolina in s measurably before our e the battle backgrounds of the C springing into being, helped by of old 'vets' and modern West P costumes, settings and documents ously prepared for the facs mile scenes like those of the Emancipati mation, the Appomattox surrende Lincoln assassination. By the wa four 'Lincoln actors' were rehear the right Lincoln was found! Th the Gray, the Southern white gent colored contingent all have been d their respective leaders. And the ing begins.

"At an early stage of the wor rough outlines have been filled in rio is thrown away. The build building of the story, the piecing bits and the discarding of the right on while we are living the speak, from day to day. Nearly miles of pictures—140,000 feet taken. And how much of these the finale we discover that we away eight-tenths of our pred

FO

ITH, of any other art of ay.

ION.

ecent changes en the appear-at knew not s seized from y new hands;
mes who dash
tory cities, en-night and creto make an magnitude of ng and concoc-child's play.

new amusement eatre—is David cut Kentuckian,
h has no tricks
His father, Gen-brigade on the
ar. The son had lucation, was an came a scenario-ultimately an in-nt drama." The men in the mass
ance; the poet's ndoubtedly comes gic strain.

produced?" he ail! Let me ample of 'The have just had omes the scena-ot. In this case

ay. If we are as we can, for lizing or story-tage form it is uch of the wor ave a period of wide territory remaining 26,000 fe consecutive story. B

We condense, cond and of two months' have edited 'The Bi or 13,000 feet—two theatre wine, two hou stage entertainment

Pa.

MAR 28 191

RABBI RUDOLPH I. COFFEE.

"The Birth of a Nation" was the theme of an address delivered at the Loendi club last Sunday afternoon by Rabbi Rudolph I. Coffee, of the Tree of Life synagogue, in Craft avenue. Mr. Coffee was introduced in a few very clever remarks by Jared D. Arter, who had charge of the program, which included Victrola numbers and an artistic soprano solo by Miss Sara Beatrice Writt. The speaker for the afternoon brought to his audience such a realistic word picture of the reels from the films of one of the most dazzling as well as the greatest work of the motion picture artists of the day, at a cost of $100,000 for the production in the Liberty theater in West Forty-second street, in New York City.

Mr. Coffee has a most striking personality; it's not so much what he says, as it is the very soul of the man seems to stir every fiber of his being with the intense earnestness of heart that he puts into every statement.

If there was a half-hearted or skeptical listener he or she could not help but see clearly long before he had finished that they were little less than "half a man" or woman to stand idly by and not put their best selves forward in the demand for all that goes to make people, a real nation.

He said in part: "That aside from the theme of the pictures it was a wonderful thing, this 'Birth of a Nation.'" The magnificent scenery with all its artistic production had drawn a house filled from pit to dome with film fans anxious to see the latest success in the film world. The first film shows northern American people starting the darkest bolt in American civilization—slavery, and it seems to emphasize the erroneous fact, northern people. The next film shows a man on the platform speaking on the subject of separation, and could easily be recognized as William Lloyd Garrison, and of course to make it more interesting there is a love story of a family in Pennsylvania who became intimate with a family in South Carolina, and is full of little incidents that have their influence on the general thought to be carried out in the pictures of the war with Gen. Sheridan, Sherman's march to the sea, and Gen. Lee, and then the scenes of the assassination of Lincoln, and ends with an expression in the last film in the first reel with this thought: "Now you are the uncrowned conquer of the world." The second part begins with "Gus, a degenerate," that would only increase race prejudice, and then the speaker said: "Why must things undesirable be shown? What good will they do?" Race prejudice is not what is wanted in America today. It's to emphasize the importance of freedom, and its the environment that effects the individual, and segregation is one of the most dangerous forms of prejudice. It's the American Christian church-going people who are the ones who harbor race prejudice, and are therefore the greatest enemies of the Afro-American people today. But is it true Christianity? But would the movie people have put on a similar picture with the Jews for subjects? No, indeed, but they impose on the weaker race and it will bring its own reward, as all similar nations have done. Why talk about a nation with one bad man as an example? Talk about the individual and his failure. Let the individual stand upon his own credit. There are good and bad in all creeds, races and classes of people. The Jew says, how is your soul conducting yourself here now. Do you believe in deed and not creed?

How a man behaves himself is the test of his life. No country can continue if there is to be petty race jealousies."

He congratulated the members on their group work and spoke of the better results from the assembling of their number to work for betterment of conditions of their own and the taking of Sunday afternoons for this work to the exclusion of following Christian churches teeming with race prejudices. Mr. Arter is to be congratulated in presenting such an orator with such an intensely interesting, heart-throbbing message to the members at the symposium.

At the close of the program Attorney Frank R. Steward, the president, presented a matter for consideration, calling attention to a bill that had been taking the efforts of Attorney William H. Stanton and Mr. Steward to have introduced in the legislature of this state in reference to Afro-Americans, and was based on the following act:

"To protect all persons in their equal rights regardless of race, color or creed in places of public accommodation, entertainment or amusement, and providing penalty for violation of the same:

"Section 1. Be it enacted by the senate and house of representatives of the commonwealth of Pennsylvania in general assembly met and it is hereby enacted by the authority of the same. That all persons within the jurisdiction of this state shall be entitled to the full and equal accommodations, advantages and privileges of any place of public accommodation, entertainment or amusement subject only to the conditions and limitations established by law and applicable alike to all persons. No person being the owner, lessee, proprietor, manager, superintendent, agent or employe of any such place shall directly or indirectly refuse, withhold from or deny to any person any of the accommodations, advantages or privileges thereof or directly or indirectly publish, circulate, issue, display, post or mail any written or printed communication, notice or advertisement to the effect that any of the accommodations, advantages and privileges of any such place shall be refused, withheld from or denied any person on account of race, creed or color, or that the patronage or custom thereat of any person belonging to or purporting to be of any particular race, creed or color is unwelcome, objectionable or not acceptable, desired or solicited.

"Section 2. The production of any written or printed communication, notice or advertisement purporting to relate to any such place and to be made by any person being the owner, lessee, proprietor, superintendent or manager thereof shall be prima facie evidence in any civil or criminal action that the same was authorized by such person. Nothing herein contained shall be construed to prohibit the mailing of a private communication in writing sent in response to specific written inquiry.

Section 3. A place of public accommodation, entertainment or amusement within the meaning of this act shall be deemed to include any inn, tavern or hotel whether conducted for the entertainment of transient guests or for the accommodation of those seeking health, recreation or rest; any restaurant, eating-house, public conveyance on land or water, bath-house, barber shop, theater, theatorium, nickelodeon, motion-picture house and music hall.

"Section 4. Any person who shall violate any of the provisions of the foregoing sections or who shall aid or incite the violation of any of said provisions shall for each and every violation shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor and upon conviction thereof shall be fined not less than hundred dollars nor more than five hundred dollars or shall be imprisoned not less than 30 days nor more than three months or both such fine and imprisonment at the discretion of the court."

All persons interested are urged to see or write their representative at Harrisburg and urge his support of the bill.

...YORK SU...
...1915

...RECTS TO ...LANSMAN FILM

...BORS CALLS PIC... ON A RACE.

...Censorship, How... "Birth of a Na... Picture Play Over ...nal Association for ...of Colored People— ...ority of Board Had ...Changes.

That the ...al Board of Censorship is ...s unanimous in its official ... the "Birth of a Nation," the ...n based on Thomas Dixon's ... Clansman," has been learned ...ic C. Howe, United States ... of Immigration, who is ... Board. Mr. Howe has ... of his name on the official ... by the National ...ship, Frederic C. Howe, ... connection with this film.

The ... relations between the film and the ...al Board of Censorship is ... The picture was first shown ... committee consisting of ten ... Board, and was approved ... on January 20. Later, upon ... from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, ... Howe, as head of the Board, asked that the film be presented to the general ... This committee passed the first part, subject to minor changes, and condemned the second part "because it was an unwarranted at... upon a race, and, specifically, be... incidents which it was ... create race hatred and preju... constituted a reflection on ...

On ... two days later, the general ... decided at a business meeting to reconsider the film, and set March 17 for this purpose. The committee reversed its first decision at this resubmission, and passed the film subject only to changes in two of the subtitles.

Mr. Howe opposed this new move, and it has been learned that a large minority of the Board are with him in his condemnation of the film. It is understood that the following, among others, disapproved of the picture: Dr. J. P. Warbasse, of Brooklyn; Mrs. Joseph M. Price, Mrs. Howard Gass, J. K. Paulding, and Dr. Lewis, head of the Prison Association. Mr. Howe said that his opposition was personal, and was based on the fact that the film was "an unwarranted attack on a race and productive of race hatred and prejudice" unless the objectionable features were removed.

In regard to his connection with the Censorship Board, Mr. Howe said:

"While I have been chairman of the National Board of Censorship for a good number of years, since I took this office as Commissioner of Immigration I have been only nominally connected with the Board, as I have not had the time to devote to it."

Evening Mail
MAR 2... 1915

FEARS RIOTS FROM MOVIES

Chairman ... Censors Board Oppose... to Dixon's "The Birth ... Nation."

Fear of ... has divided opinion ... bers of the National Board ... ship as to the presentation ... Birth of a Nation" ... on the screen at the Liberty ... Frederick C. Howe, ... board, has forbidden ... same as approving the ...

...mittee of ten had ... production, which ... events, protests ... the board. A ... majority of ... in favor of contin...

World.
March 26 1915

Race Prejudice in Motion Pictures.

To the Editor of The World:

There are thousands of honest, serious colored citizens working night and day to build up and preserve the amity and comity between the whites and blacks in the City of New York, and we feel the film play "The Birth of a Nation," especially the second half of it, unjustly imposes upon our city as well as our people a revival of the hatred and race prejudices of the reconstruction period.

The play is not only an affront and an insult to a great minority opinion, but it is malicious, because it falsely depicts more than 10,000,000 people as a race of rapists; and in this particular it tends toward a breach of the peace, which the sound public policy of our city should not condone. JNO. M. ROYALL.

New York, March 20.

m EAGLE

ress: Brooklyn, N. Y.

te MAR 29

The scissors play as important a part in motion picture production as in the making of a newspaper. As Kipling remarked "Elimination is the work of genius." "The Birth of a Nation" spread to 40,000 feet of film, which was cut down to 13,800 feet.

* * *

Sun Pittsburg Mar. 30-15

Censoring a Film.

In New York there is being displayed a motion picture film called "The Birth of a Nation," which is built largely on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman." The film story begins with the events leading up to the Civil War, the war itself and the death of Lincoln. That constitutes the first part of the pictured story and then comes the film of "The Clansman." It is said that the taking of this occupied a year or more, that at times as high as 18,000 people were employed, and that the sum invested runs close to $500,000. By everyone it is conceded to be the biggest thing in motion pictures that has ever been taken in this country, and has been equalled only by an Italian film called "Caberia."

But now comes the censors of motion picture films and their action created a small tempest, with Frederick C. Howe, immigration inspector in New York and chairman of the national board of censors, as the central figure. It appears that a protest is going up, principally from negroes and their sympathizers, against showing this film because the tendency is to incite race prejudice and bring the whites and blacks into conflict, or at least open enmity.

The film was first passed by the board, then this action was reconsidered, and after a second viewing the first part was passed but the second held up. Then came another rehearing and the whole film, after changes were made, was passed. The protestant throughout was the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Mr. Howe's objection is that the film is an "unwarranted attack on a race, and is productive of race hatred and prejudice."

The objectionable element in this film is the fact that it shows the South during the period of reconstruction with Northern carpet baggers and ignorant negroes in control of state and municipal affairs. The stress that is laid upon the dominance of the negro and the accentuation of features of such a condition give the story much of its dramatic value. At the same time it emphasizes a state of affairs that brought into being the Ku-Klux Klan and it is contended that the recounting and picturing of these things arouses the animosity of the white people.

It strikes one familiar with the stage and with dramatic entertainment that these gentlemen are a bit slow in protesting. For many years a dramatization of Mr. Dixon's story has been before the public under the title of "The Clansman." It has been presented in nearly every city, town and hamlet in the country. It is the story of "The Clansman" that is objected to in this film, and while it may not be a pleasant subject, still the same thing has been seen repeatedly in the theaters, ... stronger and more impressive because ... present. This is ...

The First Established and Most Complete Newspaper Clipping Bureau in the World.

NATIONAL PRESS CLIPPING BUREAU

m ... Union

ress BAPTIST. Nashville, Tenn.

e MAR 27 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

The Censors Reverse Themselves--When Shown That The "Birth of the Nation" Was Harmful--Thousands of Dollars Invested—National Association Found Task Quite Difficult.

New York, Mar. 2, 1915.—The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has scored a real triumph in New York in succeeding in getting the National Board of Censorship to reverse its approval of the moving picture film called "The Birth of a Nation" which is based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman."

As soon as advised of the action of the Board of Censorship, at the suggestion of Mr. Paul Kennaday, a member of the Board of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, officers of the Association got in touch with the Police Commissioner through Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, who has been advised by the Commissioner that the entire matter has been placed in the hands of Chief Magistrate McAdoo, and the owners of the film warned not to produce it. It has been extensively advertised for production beginning on the night of March 3 in the Liberty Theatre, Forty-second street, west of Broadway. One hundred thousand dollars has been invested in it. Its owners are Messrs. Aitken and Griffith. The latter is reported to be a Virginian. An advance performance of the production was given in Washington and it is said that Chief Justice White and President Wilson were present.

The reversal of the decision of the Board of Censorship to approve the film willp robably prevent its production in about eighty per cent of the theatres of this country since many cities have ordinances prohibiting the production of moving pictures when not approved by the National Board of Censorship, and even when there are not such prohibitive ordinances many theatres will not produce films unless they have the approval of the Censorship Board.

The National Association had a very difficult task to perform in suppressing this film since it had already been approved by the Censorship heard of it through its Los Angeles branch where a duplicate film had been released and produced in spite of a protest of the branch. The reason given by the Police Department and the City Council for refusing to interfere was that the film had been approved by the National Board of Censorship.

When the National Association first appealed to the Board of Censorship over a week ago, there seemed to be little prospect of getting an unfavorable decision on this film in the limited time left before its advertised public production. The Association communicated with every member of the Board of Censorship and through the latter's courtesy an advance performance was arranged at the Liberty Theatre yesterday afternoon. All the members of the Board of Censorship were present and a small committee from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was in the audience. At the close of the performance the Board of Censorship met and unanimously voted to disapprove the film.

In connection with the difficulties that the National Association met in having this objectionable film censored, it is interesting to note the action taken in Atlant, Ga., in regard to "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which has recently been produced there in moving pictures. To suit the Southern community the name of the production had to be changed to "Old Plantation Folks," and all disagreeable scenes cut out, such as whipping post. Legree is made almost a saint. In justifying this action Mrs. Joseph Morgan, of Atlanta, president of the Pioneers, says, "Nobody has any right to come here and stir up sectional prejudice by entering such a play. The play recalls all the things we have been trying to forget."

—Nashville Globe.

...th.

...anu ... move was made to ... the first performances.

The film as changed, however, did not meet the approval of the association, nor ... the officials of the National Board of ... The Nemodeo ... feature film at the Hippodr... which is ...

Eve. News, Newark, N.J.
MAR 30 1915

HOWARD TO FIGHT FILM FOR NEGROES

Colonel Promises Local Association He Will Prevent Exhibition of Offensive Picture.

BLAMES WILSON FOR SEGREGATION

With a promise that he would stop any exhibition here of "The Birth of a Nation," a film that has aroused negroes as an insult to their race, Colonel James W. Howard won the applause of a good-sized gathering of colored people last night at a meeting of the Newark branch, National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, in St. John's Methodist Episcopal Church.

Just before Colonel Howard spoke, Miss Mary Childs Nerney, national secretary of the association, had given all the details of the fight now on for colored people in New York against the film. She said that as yet no one had been able to learn the full bookings of the film.

After Colonel Howard had begun his talk, he asked Miss Nerney if she knew whether the film was to be shown in Newark. She did not know.

"If you find out, tell me—I'll stop it," the colonel said. "If that picture comes to this city, I'll call a meeting of the Citizens' League and we'll attend to it."

That led the speaker to tell a little about the Citizens' League. It is an organization, he explained, in which the members are pledged to accept no political preferment. Colonel Howard did not divulge any more of his plans for the stepping of "The ...th of a Nation."

Assails Segregation Order.

In national affairs, the colonel said, the colored people are fighting against heavy odds, with the Democratic party in power at Washington. He attacked the segregation order as one "by which President Wilson has insulted the memory of Abraham Lincoln." Mr. Howard explained that Mr. Wilson's part in the order had been in allowing it to stand as it was proposed by Secretary McAdoo of the Treasury Department.

This order, it was explained, separates the working quarters of white and negro government employes. Thus, in the postoffice at Washington, colored men work at one end of a bench, while their white co-workers are in another section.

Colonel Howard said there are three goals for which the colored race should strive—good health, good morals and knowledge.

Rev. Dr. J. R. Waters, pastor of the church and president of the Newark branch of the association, presided. Rev. Dr. E. F. Eggleston, pastor of the Thirteenth Avenue Colored Presbyterian Church, also spoke.

Other officers of the local branch of the association are: Secretary, R. W. Stewart; treasurer, John S. Pinkman; assistant secretary, Miss Alverta Harris; executive committee, Dr. W. R. Granger, Dr. Eggleston, D. D. Woody, George A. Douglass, T. W. Doubley and A. C. Fletcher.

...NNEAPOLIS (Minn.) NEWS
MARCH 31, 1915

NEGROES CONDEMN FILM

"Birth of a Nation" Reflects On Race, They Say.

(Special to The Daily News.)

New York, March 31.—Major Mitch... yesterday received a delegation of negroes and their friends to protest against certain portions of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," a version of Thom... Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." ... they say, reflects upon ... stirs up race hatred ... worse ... in life.

"So films which concern themselves with the ugly truths of existence are ... pugnant to me. But I do not ... them sweepingly. Perhaps the... essary to spread a ...

MOVING PICTURE JUSTLY DENOUNCED BY JANE ADAMS

Calls "Birth of Nation" a Pernicious Caricature of Race. Man Who Directed Picture Son of a Confederate General

New York City, March 25.—"Pernicious caricature of the negro race," is the way in which Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, expressed her opinion today of the motion-picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown in New York, in which is told a story of reconstruction days and Ku Klux Klan violence in the South following the Civil War. After having seen the film, Miss Addams softened no terms in her condemnation of it.

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among colored people, and showing them as representatives of the truth about the entire race," she said in describing her impressions of the play. "It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race. For instance, it would be easy enough to go about the slums of a city and bring together some of the criminals and degenerates, and take pictures of them purporting to show the character of the white race. It would no more be the truth about the white race than this is about the black.

An Anachronism.

"One of the most unfortunate things about this film is that it appeals to race prejudice upon the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider today. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the play is historical; but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events, but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain of its facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest.

"Nobody denies that in the haste and confusion of the period after the Civil War the men in control of politics did very tyrannical and short-sighted things and made a great many mistakes. The 'carpet-baggers' from the North, who went in and influenced the negroes against the interests of the whites unquestionably did a great deal of harm; but to present the tendency they represented as the only one is as unfair to the North as to claim that all Southerners wanted to oppress the negroes would be to the South. Then the film shows a ridiculous scene in a Southern Legislature to which the election of a majority of negroes has been obtained by defrauding whites of their votes. Negro legislators are shown taking off their shoes at their desks, drinking whisky from flasks while making speeches, acting in all sorts of uncouth ways. It is laughably false to the whole truth.

"Then there is the impression that is created of the Ku Klux Klan—perfectly ridiculous. The Klan takes the place of the melodrama hero, always doing the noble thing and rescuing the heroine in distress. There are the revolting scenes of the pursuit of one white girl, which rouse feeling against the negro; and then there follows a second similar scene of attempted forced marriage between a powerful mulatto politician—there may have been such vicious individuals as this man is shown to be, but they were certainly exceptions—and a white girl. Of course, the Klan breaks in just in time to prevent the success of the design. At every turn the Klan is made to appeal to the enthusiasm of the spectator as the heroic defender of a victimized people. None of the outrageous, vicious, misguided outrages, which it certainly committed, are shown. I am not interested in loading blame for those outrages on the men who made up the Klan. It was natural that in the heat of the times they made mistakes, just as did the men of the North. I am simply contending that what this play tells of it is not the whole truth.

The Part of the Klan.

"Of course, the spectators applaud the Klan. It is not shown to them except to stir their sympathy. Of course, they applaud slights and contempt for the negroes; they are shown only as despicable brutes.

"It is certainly to be hoped that such a film can be suppressed. As an appeal to race prejudice, it is full of danger."

"Do you recall any portions of the play that you found particularly objectionable?" Miss Addams was asked.

"No, it was rather the whole tone of the second part," was the reply. "Of course, there are the unpleasant episodes in which white girls figure; but the evil is rather in the dominant attitude of mind toward the negro. As I have said, it seems to me an attempt to make him appear worse than childish and brutal and vicious—actually grotesque, and primitive and contemptible."

"How far did you observe that this attitude of mind influenced the spectators?"

"It is hard to tell, of course. Certainly, I felt that they were made to feel a prejudice against negroes; some showed approval in applause when the hero refuses to shake hands with the mulatto politician, and they were roused to the point of clapping enthusiastically, before the end of the pictures, whenever the Ku Klux Klan appeared. That was the noticeable thing about the play—the success of the glorification of the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, contrasted with the base and elemental character of the negroes, misrepresented in the ludicrously perverted scenes of plantation life. The production is the most subtle of untruth—a half truth."

MAYOR BARS BRUTE AS NEGRO ON FILM

Censures Photoplay of the "Clansman" After Big Protest Meeting.

Mayor Mitchel yesterday gave a hearing to 500 negroes and their friends who objected to certain features in "The Birth of a Nation," the photo play version of Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," now being presented at the Liberty Theatre. The fact that the management had voluntarily deleted the scenes objected to was not permitted to prevent the negroes and their friends expressing their opinion of the scenes and of the author.

The scenes objected to were two—one portraying the flight of a white girl from a negro, whom she escapes by throwing herself over a cliff, and another where a negro lieutenant governor attempts to attack the daughter of his benefactor.

One way or another the press agents of the company producing the film have made much of these scenes and discussion as to their fitness or lack of it has not been discouraged, even in Atlanta, where some of the pictures were taken. The objection to them was that they portrayed the negro as a brute and were calculated to engender race prejudice.

Frederic C. Howe, the first speaker, objected to the play as a whole as crude, vindictive and untrue, with one-half of the play devoted to war and the other half to picturing the negro as depraved. The production, he said, was an outrage upon 10,000,000 Americans who could make no protest because they have no voice in the affairs of the nation.

The Rev. Dr. William H. Bowles objected to the play as untrue. "If," said he, "the scenes were true, I'd hate my own race."

Rabbi Wise denounced the board of censors for allowing such a film to be produced, and the producers as "contemptible cowards." He congratulated the negroes of New York upon having been more patient than the Irish, "who attacked 'The Playboy of the Western World.'" If he did not know Thomas Dixon to be capable of such infamy he said he would have been forced to believe he was hired to write the book to stir up race prejudice.

"Improper, immoral and unjust," was the way Oswald G. Villard described the production. Miss Lillian D. Wald, of the Henry Street Settlement, indorsed what Mr. Villard said.

Fred R. Moore, editor of "The New York Age," appealed to the Mayor for fair play to his race.

Mayor Mitchel made all hands happy by announcing that the objectionable scenes would be presented no more in his city.

he ploy of the play, according to the or; centers around a woman's nude e which is supposed to swmbolize th." Further than to learn this the r did not stay. He saw two scenes he films and then marched out. He he was disgusted and considered the play a profanation of religion. ol cial action will be taken on the permission for as unti

---

Dramatic Mar.

"The Birth of a Nation" is arousing considerable discussion in New York. Editorial writers on the World and Post have both turned their pens to adverse criticism. "Letters from Readers" are frequent. This is to be expected, for the producer has tackled a burning question, and it is a tribute to his art and the power of the motion picture that thoughtful criticism should be evoked. But there is one aspect of the question that must cause us a smile. Take a momentous subject, one that will arouse discussion pro and con, and treat it in a book. Criticism will be met, and other writers will probably write books answering your point of view. But unless your work transgresses the laws of decency, no one will be heard to suggest that the publication of your book be stopped and the copies issued canceled. But place the same subject on the picture screen and, so peculiar is the lay attitude toward the motion picture, the first recourse of all critics is, "Stop the picture, close the theater, don't let them show it." Reason takes flight, and arbitrary, autocratic rule enters where pictures are concerned.

Telegraph Courier

MAR 23 1915

Daily News

Mar 26-15

RACE QUESTION IN FEATURES.

As a result of D. W. Griffith's "Birth of a Nation" achieving such great publicity in New York through its showing at the Liberty theatre afternoon and evening and a follow-up by the Fox Film Corporation of a film version of "The Nigger," a negro sentiment has sprung up against the films.

"The Birth of a Nation" is "The Clansman" filmized. Thomas Dixon wrote it and as generally known the story tells of the brutal raping of a little girl by a renegade negro and the attempt of a mulatto to gain physical hold of a white woman of caste. These two story facts are skillfully presented in Griffith film.

"The Nigger," taken from Shelplay and novel, Fox has followed script closely and there are "close views of a fiendish, mouth-frothing nick about to take liberties with the girl. Other scenes are reported calculated to start racial prejudiainst the negroes.

National Association for the adment of colored people is makery effort to stop the Griffith on the claim that it openly and y arouses race hatred and is a public nuisance. The as- has had Griffith and Harry resident of the Mutual Film on, in court. The matter was er to this week, when a hearred for the West Farms Po-

The association has engaged J. W. Osborn to represent its interests. Griffith and the Mutual will be represented by Martin Littleton.

The National Board of Censors recently passed the picture and in its approval said that "The Birth of a Nation" was both artistic and educational from its viewpoint.

Regarding "The Nigger" a quiet sentiment is on against the picture. The management of the Hippodrome had planned to exhibit it next Monday, following "The Heart of Maryland" presentation but has taken precaution and arranged for another feature in case "The Nigger" is called off before opening.

Whether anything comes of the agitation against the Griffith and Fox pictures, they are going to receive publicity that will mean bigger boxoffice receipts.

"The Birth of a Nation" has played to a trifle under $14,000 each week it has been at the Liberty. That is nearly the entire capacity of the theatre at the scale, for 14 performances. Four hundred and twenty seats sell at $2 each.

One of the men most actively engaged in the movement to eliminate that which is claimed to be directed against the welfare of the blacks is Oswald Garrison Villard, owner of the New York Evening Post. Villard (white) is a relative of Lloyd Garrison and for a long time has been working in behalf of the negro's mental advancement.

Though it is not generally known two big scenes were cut out of the Griffith picture. One was a love scene between Senator Stoneham (white) and his octoroon housekeeper, and the other a fist fight between a white man and a black.

Griffith is not one bit pleased with any sentiment against his picture which he claims is only a photoplay reproduction of what actually occurred and which is down in black and white in the pages of American history.

Evening Post

MAR 24 1915

Colored People Want Film Suppressed

Affairs Take New Turn in "Birth of Nation;" Play Is Termed Public Nuisance.

Affairs have taken a new turn in the career of "The Birth of a Nation," the first motion pictu[redacted]bited at a $2 admission, which began its New York run at the Liberty theatre on March 3. The film is the work of D. W. Griffith of the Mutual forces and is an adaptation of Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman."

The production has called down the ire of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People which is now taking active steps to have the play suppressed. The association issued a summons out of the magistrate's court against Mr. Griffith, producer, and Mr. Aitken, owner of the film, to have them prosecuted for maintaining a public nuisance on the grounds of endangering the safety of the public and offending public decency.

In an exclusive interview with Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, one of the board of directors of the association, gave to the New York Evening Post, she denounced it as a "pernicious caricature of the negro race" and declared that it certainly was to be hoped that such a film could be suppressed as an appeal to race prejudice was full of danger.

When the story was presented in dramatic form on the stage it stirred up bitter feeling and was short lived for its course was attended with troublesome times. The film was first known as "The Clansman" and the censors of Los Angeles refused its preliminary run there until the matter [illegible] court an[illegible] decision [illegible] a film

---

A New York firm of moving picture make[illegible] a film called "The Birth of a Nation," the na[illegible] American negroes. Now the Association for the [illegible] of Colored People, with headquarters in New [illegible] a campaign to have it suppressed. In this they [illegible] ing of Jane Addams, who has seen the picture. [illegible] the crowds appland the Ku-Klux scenes, the ref[illegible] politician to shake hands with the negro politi[illegible] incidents, and forget [illegible] the better [illegible] colored folks in th[illegible]

APR 1 1915

MAYOR SENDS BELL TO CENSOR 'NEGRO MOVIE'

Actors Might Have to Halt Production—Big Delegation Calls on Mitchel.

Martin W. Littleton, backed up by W. Griffith, producer of the motion picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," and Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," on which the film play was founded, to-day appealed to Mayor Mitchel against the attack made by the National Association for Advancement of Colored People.

Mr. Littleton charged that if there was a riot because of certain features in the production it would be a simulated and a stimulated riot.

The upshot was the mayor instructed Commissioner Bell, of the Bureau of Licenses, to sit through a running of the film and indicate to Griffith and Dixon just what ought to be cut out to meet the wishes of the administration and placate negro protestants.

Delegation at City Hall.

A big delegation descended on City Hall to-day on receiving word that objectionable scenes were not deleted the theatre license would be revoked and to-night's performance stopped.

Clergymen, fiction writers, dramatists formed the large crowd that filled into the mayor's reception room. The Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, Court Hughes, May Wilson Preston and Lillian Gish, who plays the part she in the scenes complained of, prominent in the throng.

Littleton told the mayor the action back of the agitation against the production has had the case under a summons in the Jefferson Market Court since January, then only to-day, when the case was finally called, an adjournment was secured by the complainants.

Mr. Littleton insisted the place to try this case was in a court of law and that the matter had been thrashed out before Chief Magistrate McAdoo, who decided he could not interfere with the production, and read Mayor Gaynor's opinion on the Irish Players, producing the "Playboy of the Western World."

Want to Reduce Dispute.

"No claim has been made that the play is immoral or indecent," said Mr. Littleton. "They do say it is provocative and outrageous. The question for us to consider here is how far it is the desire of the government to control or stop this play. We want to reduce the area of dispute."

The attorney charged that the association is the same organization that boasts in its annual report of 1914 over the signature of Oswald Garrison Villard, of having defeated anti-marriage laws in Ohio, New York, Wisconsin and other states. On this he said:

"They have openly come out in defense of Jack Johnson and the Camille girl, and our play is a protest against mongrel mixture of black and white."

Mr. Dixon, who followed, was so vague in his denunciation of the opponents that the mayor urged him to refrain from personalities. He said Oswald Garrison Villard, the Don Quixote of America."

MAYOR'S CENSOR TO SEE PICTURE FILM PLAY

Mr. Mitchel Acts After Hearing Arguments Over "Birth of a Nation."

There was a hearing before Mayor Mitchel to-day on the protests of negroes against alleged objectable features of the film play "Birth of a Nation." The hearing was attended by Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," from which the play was written; D. W. Griffith, producer of the film; Martin Littleton, counsel for the film company; License Commissioner George H. Bell and Deputy License Commissioner Ephraim Kaufman.

After the producers and their counsel had made an attack on the association back of the agitation against the film, Mayor Mitchel instructed License Commissioner Bell to see it and suggest the changes in scenes desired. The Bureau of Licenses had notified the owner of the theatre that unless the scenes complained of were eliminated this afternoon the performance would be stopped to-night.

"This play is a protest against the mongrel mixture of black and white," said Mr. Littleton, who comes from the South. "This association, of which Oswald Garrison Villard is Vice President, in its annual report for 1914 openly and defiantly boasted of having defeated anti-intermarriage laws in New York, Wisconsin, Ohio and other States."

At the negro meeting the other day before the Mayor, Mr. Villard said he would stake his reputation as an historian on the statement that the spectacles objected to in "The Birth of a Nation" were untrue and inaccurate.

Thomas Dixon declared to-day: "I hereby make an offer of $5,000 to Mr. Villard if he can point out a single historical inaccuracy in this production."

Eve. Globe

APR 1 1915

'BIRTH OF A NATION' CASE IS POSTPONED

The hearing on the summons served on Harry Aitken and D. W. Griffith, responsible for the film version of Thomas Dixon's book "The Clansman," in the form of "The Birth of a Nation," was adjourned one week by Magistrate McQuade, when the case came up to-day in Jefferson Market Court.

The adjournment was taken at the request of a representative of James W. Osborne, who appeared in behalf of the complainant, the National Association for the Promotion of Colored People. He said that following the protest to Mayor Mitchel, it was understood the objectionable scenes would be eliminated. If this is done the complaint will be withdrawn, the lawyer said.

While part of the picture play has been eliminated after a conference with the commissioner of licenses, it is understood that it does not yet suit this official, and the theatre received notice to-day that if further eliminations are not made the exhibition will not be allowed to go on.

The commissioner said he and his deputy would go to the theatre this afternoon at the mayor's suggestion, see the pictures, and agree with Mr. Dixon as to what parts shall be eliminated.

The fact that the eliminations made were not satisfactory developed at a hearing by Mayor Mitchel, asked for in order to enable the author, Mr. Dixon, and the producers and their counsel to present their side of the case.

FOUR WOMEN CALLED TO GIVE JUDGMENT ON "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Will Give Their Criticism in Court Hearing of Protest Against "Movie."

Opposition to "The Birth of a Nation," the film version of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," took a new turn when four prominent women were summoned to appear in Jefferson Market Court to-day to express their opinion of the production. They won't appear this morning, however, as the scheduled hearing will be postponed for a week.

James W. Osborne will appear for the protestors and Martin W. Littleton for D. W. Griffith, the producer. The resulting action is expected to overshadow the protest made to Mayor Mitchel.

Mr. Osborne was engaged by the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, of No. 70 Fifth Avenue. It objects to the two big scenes of the pictures, in one of which a negro chases a white girl over a cliff and in the other a mulatto politician tries to force marriage upon the daughter of his benefactor. The association admits these scenes have been modified but holds they have not been changed sufficiently.

Joel E. Spingarn, Chairman of the Board of the association, caused a letter to be sent to Mayor Mitchel calling his attention to that fact, but before that he had summonses served on those who are expected to be the star witnesses in court.

They are Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, Miss Rosalie Jones, Miss Mary White Ovington, authoress, Mrs. Helen Lansdowne and Frederic C. Howe, Chairman of the National Board of Censorship, who requested that his name be taken off the approval stamp of the National Board when a majority approved the film.

San Francisco Bulletin
March 27-1915

POST
Boston, Mass.

BY THEIR FRUITS.

In the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in this city a race is libelled. In the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York that race may be judged by its fruits.

Charles W. Anderson goes out of office to-day after holding for ten years this responsible post under the Treasury. Many millions of dollars have passed through his hands. His dealings have been practically all with white men of the highest intellect and of substantial business standing. Capacity and courtesy have been the qualities most remarked in his conduct of an office maintained always in the highest efficiency. In Collector Anderson's time, three complicated and important new revenue measures, the income tax, the corporation tax and the war revenue tax, have made this office the most difficult, as it is the most important, ever held by a colored man under the Government. He has stood the test.

No race is fairly judged by holding up as types for reprobation its most degraded specimens. Every race has the right to be judged by its patient, toiling, useful average, and by its best.

The Post APR 1 1915

FILM PLAY HEARING ADJOURNED.

Magistrate McQuade Puts Case Over at Complainant's Request.

Hearing of the summons served on Harry Aitken and D. W. Griffith, responsible for the film version of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," under the name of "The Birth of a Nation," was adjourned one week to-day by Magistrate McQuade in Jefferson Market Court.

Adjournment was taken at the request of a representative of James W. Osborne, who appeared in behalf of the complainant, the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He said that, after the protest to Mayor Mitchel, it was understood that the objectionable scenes would be eliminated. When this is done, the complaint will be withdrawn, the lawyer said.

Martin W. Littleton, representing managers of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," and D. W. Griffith appeared before Mayor Mitchel this afternoon and asked for a conference with the Commissioner of Licenses, to find out just exactly what the city Government wants to do in eliminating certain parts of the picture.

The Herald
Mar. 29-1915

"A RACE OUTRAGED."

Mr. Howe is Right in Objecting to "The Birth of a Nation."

To the Editor of The World:

Mr. Howe, the Chairman of the National Board of Censorship, and those who agreed with his views on the issue of "The Birth of a Nation" as presented to the committee, should be highly commended for their keen discretion in a matter so important to the welfare of an undeveloped race.

The picture of a brutal negro chasing a white girl is decidedly undesirable. That such a picture would be conducive to race hatred is obvious. For the committee to agree with Mr. Howe's view would be a consideration of national importance, eliminating the probability of racial riots and social unrest.

New York, March 27. R. E. W.

A Dark Chapter of History Portrayed.

To the Editor of The World:

A cry has been raised against the showing of the film play "The Birth of a Nation," claiming that it tends to race prejudice. Your writer of yesterday claims that it "depicts more than 10,000,000 people as a race of rapists." It does no such thing any more than the "Merchant of Venice" brands all Jews as Shylocks.

The play and the book from which it was written ("The Clansman") are portrayals of that dark chapter in American history which both races do well ever to keep before us so that, remembering, neither shall do those things again which shall lose for either the respect of the other.

The right of historians to minimize or obliterate events, either in serious works or in fiction of this character, has long been denied by the reading public. Both races demand to see the depths of the past from the plains of the present, so that they may intelligently order their ascent to the heights of the future.

Let the play go on; and let a few whites study the degradation to which they allowed the blacks to fall and then condemn them because they do not rise more rapidly.

Washington, March 27. J. S. B.

Mail

APR 1 1915

Film Hearing Pending Scene Change

[illegible] of Harry Aitken and D. [illegible] summoned as responsi[illegible] "Birth of a Nation," [illegible] "The Clansman," was [illegible] one week when the [illegible] to-day in Jefferson M[illegible]

[illegible] out exactly [illegible] wanted to

APR 1 1915

Hearing on the summons served on Harry Aitken and D. W. Griffith, responsible for "The Birth of a Nation," was adjourned one week by Magistrate McQuade when the case came up for a hearing to-day in the Jefferson Market Court.

TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R.I.

The moving picture marvel, "The Birth of a Nation," said to follow the spirit of "The Clansman," from which it was derived, is meeting with a large amount of opposition because of the rank democrats of the manner in which, it is said, it presents the negro problem. One may read book, or see [illegible] dramatical production [illegible] but try [illegible] first performances.

The film as changed, however, did not meet the approval of the association, nor [illegible] of the National Board of [illegible] feature film at the Hippodr[illegible] [illegible] are and the really in life.

"So films [illegible] concerns themselves with the ugly truths of existence are repugnant to me. But I do not [illegible] them sweepingly. Perhaps there [illegible] century to spread a [illegible]

MAR 30 1915

NEGROES MAKE A PROTEST TO MAYOR

THEIR OBJECTION TO FILM PLAY "BIRTH OF A NATION."

Mr. Mitchel Tells Large Delegation from National Association for Advancement of Colored People that Manager of Moving Picture Has Promised to Delete Two Scenes Which Are Believed to Incite Race Antagonism and Hatred.

A delegation from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People was granted a hearing in the Board of Estimate Room at City Hall today to protest against the production of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," based upon Thomas A. Dixon's book, "The Clansman." Dr. J. E. Spingarn, chairman of the board of directors, introduced a number of speakers, some of whom were prominent negroes. The room was crowded by several hundred prominent men and women, white and colored people, the latter comprising all the leaders of the race in this city, Brooklyn, and Jersey City, as well.

In three-minute addresses each speaker emphasized the deplorable effects which would ensue from a continued production of the film in its present shape. Racial antagonisms, historical injustice, and a corrupting moral effect upon the growing generation were some of the reasons urged upon the Mayor as grounds for his action. At the conclusion of the hearing, Mayor Mitchel, with whom sat Commissioner George H. Bell, of the Department of Licenses, announced that owners of the film and the management of the theatre had already consented to excise from the production the two scenes which were particularly offensive to negroes and fair-minded persons, and it was his understanding that this would be done to-day.

The Mayor told the large gathering, which completely filled the chamber, that he had been greatly impressed by the objections made to the production. He had himself viewed it, he said, and concurred in the feeling that it might perhaps incite to breaches of the peace, and he had already moved in the matter through his Commissioner of Licenses. Upon being informed by the Commissioner of the city administration's attitude toward the film, the management had consented to cut out the two scenes objected to.

This, the Mayor was careful to point out, had been done without any attempt on his part to exercise any powers which might be given him by statute. The breadth and force of such powers were in doubt, he said, but if it was found necessary to take the matter up again he would take such steps as were authorized by law.

UNDER BAN IN PHILADELPHIA.

Dr. Spingarn, the first speaker, called to the Mayor's attention the action of the Mayors of Philadelphia and Boston in putting Mr. Dixon's production under the ban, and the subsequent sustaining of the Philadelphia Mayor's action in the courts. Frederic C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration and chairman of the National Board of Censorship, appeared unofficially as a citizen to protest, he said, against the effect of the film production upon ten million citizens who were degraded in the eyes of millions of others. The portrayal of the negro as a lustful, degraded creature, was a cruel, vindictive, and untrue degradation of a part of the country's citizenship which was inarticulate on account of having no voice in the legislatures and newspapers.

A half-dozen other speakers voiced their obj[illegible]tions and appealed to the Mayor to interfere. W. E. B. Du Bois, editor of the Crisis, pointed out that many per[illegible]ons were constantly at work to stir up [illegible]udice against the white and colored [illegible] and that this was the last time and [illegible] last place in which such a propa[illegible] furthered by a new machine, [illegible] to be permitted.

[illegible]ard R. Moore, the colored editor [illegible] New Age, expressed the confidence [illegible] negro citizens of New York that [illegible]ayor would not permit them to be [illegible]orized as beasts. Miss Lilian D. [illegible] asserted that it was impossible to [illegible] the potential dangers of [illegible] at the Liberty Th[illegible]

[illegible] against "The [illegible] of the Western World," which he characterized as a charming bit of poetry.

"If the Board of Censorship had been wise and decent instead of stupid and worse," said Rabbi Wise, "the appeal to the Mayor would never have been necessary."

This fact made him the more unhappy, he said, because he was attached to the Board in a nominal capacity with a great many others who had no part in its action. Oswald Garrison Villard also protested against the continued production of the film.

The World, MAR 30 1915

"A RACE OUTRAGED."

Does Freedom Provoke Crime?

To the Editor of The World:

I want to say that your editorial "A Race Outraged" is the proper name for "The Birth of a Nation."

If the millions of "the race outraged" had to be looked upon and dealt with as rapists after their emancipation, why were they trusted so with the care of "master's family," including women and children, before they were free? Does being free change men's nature? All criminals do not come from the emancipated race.

I fear "The Birth of a Nation" will have to be "reconstructed" or it will fail to be as popular as "Uncle Tom's Cabin." Even the Southerners will not tolerate such injustice to the race. A. GIBSON.

New York, March 27.

A Measure of Negro Progress.

To the Editor of The World:

May a negro make a statement in answer to your well-meant and able editorial entitled "A Race Outraged" in The World bearing date March 27?

I have witnessed the photo-play mentioned, and have advised the people of our race to do likewise—to see and know how we have progressed, to realize that we are past the buffoon stage, that courage and determination of purpose have and are letting us occupy a dignified position in the world, that so-called "race prejudice" does not exist except in the hearts of narrow-minded people of both white and black races.

The news columns of your paper team

CITIZEN

Brooklyn, N. Y.

MAR 30 1915

MAYOR PLACATES NEGROES.

Succeeds in Cutting Out Two Scenes of Play.

Mayor Mitchel this afternoon at a hearing in the Aldermanic Council Chamber told a large delegation of negro men and women that he had succeeded in influencing the producers of "The Birth of a Nation" to cut out two scenes which were considered objectionable by their race.

"I succeeded in doing this not because of any legal power I have, but for the reason of influence I brought to bear upon the management."

George W. Wibecan, president of the Brooklyn Citizens' Union, a negro organization, said:

"If the Mayor, who has the power, does not stop this play or have its objectionable features removed our race will not guarantee the security of the citizenship of New York."

The Mayor raised his eyebrows. Rabbi Stephen Wise made an impassioned speech against the play. Other speakers were Arthur Garrison, Editor Villard, of "The Evening Post"; Dr. E. P. Duboise, editor of the "Crisis," Editor Edward Newall, of "The Age," and Dr. Frederick C. Howe.

Most of these speakers described the photo-play as an outrage upon the negro race.

DEMOCRAT CHRONICLE

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

MAR 31 1915

NEGROES OBJECT TO MOVIES

Tell Mayor Mitchell Civil War Film Will Cause a Race War.

New York, March 30.—A delegation of negroes accompanied by Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Stephen Wise and Frederick C. Howe, commissioner of immigration, to-day called on Mayor Mitchel and told him that unless he puts the ban on a civil war film being displayed at New York motion picture theaters, he will have a race war on his hands.

The negroes claim that the film malig[illegible] degrades their race and told the [illegible] they wouldn't answer for [illegible] unless it is taken off the [illegible] until the matter [illegible] court an[illegible] decision [illegible] film [illegible] pontician to shake hands with the negro politician, [illegible] incidents, and forge[illegible] better things [illegible] colored folks in th[illegible]

NEGROES WARN MAYOR FILMS MAY START RIOT

Prominent Whites Also Demand Southern Photoplay Be Censored as a Slur on Race.

1877

MITCHEL TELLS THEM SCENES HAVE BEEN CUT

Mayor Mitchel to-day received a delegation of indignant negroes, who were accompanied by Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Stephen Wise and Frederick C. Howe, commissioner of immigration, and heard a protest against a motion picture play in which, they claimed, the negro is maligned.

Bitter denunciations of the producers marked the protestants, who uttered vague warnings that unless the play was stopped or altered a race riot would shake the city.

The mayor told the delegation he had viewed the production and his request several scenes had been eliminated. He said the censored film would be run for the first time today.

The delegation was so big that the mayor received them in the board of Estimate chamber.

Rabbi Denounces Film.

Rabbi Wise said:

If it is true that the mayor has no power to stop this indescribably foul and loathsome libed on a race of human beings, then it is true that government has broken down.

The board of censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse. I regret I am a member. The producers are contemptible cowards. The negroes in this city have been patient. They have not yet risen, like the Irish, who attacked the "Playboy of the West." The Irish saw the playboy as a caricature not as a characterization.

Stop this production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great and abiding service to the people of this country.

Calls Play Immoral.

Oswald G. Villard, vice-president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, told the mayor the production was "improper, immoral and unjust."

"I stake whatever reputation I may have as a historical student on my charges against the film play," said Mr. Viard. "The ugging in of the negro into this exhibition is needess and uncalled for, and the play would be improved upon in every aspect if the objectionable scenes were taken out."

The negros found a strong champion in Commissioner Howe, chairman of the National Board of Censors. He said:

I am here as a citizen. The ground of my protest is that the play affects 10,000,000 citizens who are degraded by this production. One-half deals with war. The other half portrays the negro as a lustful and degraded creature.

This portrayal of the negro, as a depraved creature, is cruel, vindictive and untrue.

Miss Lilian D. Wald declared "it is impossibel to measure the potential dangers that threaten us if the production is allowed to go on."

"I do not believe it is historically true," she continued.

The negroes were loud in approval of the speakers' sentiments. Dr. Wise repeatedly begged them to desist from handclapping.

Defends His Race.

For the negroes Fred R. Moore, editor of the New York "Age," hammered home his claims of his race in this city for fair play. He said:

We have never been beggars. We have never asked charity. All we have asked is a fair chance. We don't stoop to anarchy.

We never had a man among us who fired on the president of the United States. We never had a man among us who attempted to assassinate the mayor of this city.

The mayor said that his views of the objectionable features had been [illegible]

PROTESTS ON PHOTO PLAY.

Mayor Tells Negroes and Others That Films Will Be Cut.

A delegation of [illegible] from the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People called on Mayor Mitchel yesterday and protested against certain features of the moving picture play "The Birth of a Nation," which was founded upon Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman." The Mayor granted a hearing in the Board of Estimate Chamber, and after speeches were made by several negroes and others, and by Rabbi Stephen Wise, Frederick C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration, and Oswald Garrison Villard the Mayor said that at his own request the producers of the play had agreed to eliminate the parts that met with the most objection. He said the censored film would be run for the first time last night.

Rabbi Wise said in part:

"If it be true that the Mayor has no power to stop this indescribably foul and loathsome libel on a race of human beings, then it is true that Government has broken down. The Board of Censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse. I regret I am a member."

Mr. Villard, vice-president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said he thought the production was "improper, immoral and unjust."

Commissioner Howe characterized the portrayal of the negro as a depraved creature as "cruel, vindictive and untrue." Miss Lilian D. Wald said: "It is impossible to measure the potential dangers that threaten us if the production is allowed to go on."

The Newark Courier, Mar. 29-15

Plays and Prejudices

The "Rev" Thomas Dixon continues to be fortunate in his critics. To a very large degree the success of the "Clansman" was due to the assaults upon it. Those who were insistent upon its suppression gave it an advertising which otherwise it must have sought in vain. The same thing is holding true of "The Birth of a Nation," the stupendous picture-play into which the "Clansman" has been converted. A great cry has been raised in the North that the new production is, to quote the New York World, "an outrage on the negro race." The longer it runs the louder grows the clamor against it, and the broader, we suspect, become the smiles of the "Rev" Thomas and the others who are interested financially in the venture.

All accounts agree that the play has been produced regardless of expense and the growing resentment against it would seem to be testimony to its success. Of course, if it be true that it is proving a paying proposition it will be impossible for those who are offended by it to stop its exhibition by means of protests. The result of such activities in a matter of this kind is almost invariably disastrous. Southern legislatures discovered that when they prohibited the reading of "Uncle Tom's Cabin." The North naturally seized upon such legislation and made much of it as bolstering up the accusations which Mrs Stowe had made in her book. Even in the South thousands were prompted to read the story who probably would never have done so if it had not been forced upon their attention in this way. Two students of Erskine College, for example, had their curiosity excited as soon as they learned of the South Carolina Legislature's action; and not being able to get the book in Due West they walked to Abbeville and back——a distance of 22 miles—in order to procure a copy.

All of this, of course, is apart from the merits or demerits of the picture-play under discussion. It may be as vicious as those who have been shocked by it say. We have not seen it and we do not know. But why is it that newspapers like The World have never felt called upon to protest against plays like "The Nigger?" That, if our information is correct, included a horrible depiction of a lynching scene and was in effect an attempted justification of miscegeantion between whites and blacks. Yet every effort was made by the Northern newspapers to force it to success. We believe that "Uncle Tom's Cabin" is still running. Certainly, it has been on the stage for much of the time during the past fifty years. Has it ever occurred to The World that only harm could result from this continuing misrepresentation of the people of a whole section?

As a matter of fact, we fear that the masses of Southern white people are utterly indifferent in the matter. They accept these things as no more than what is to be expected. They are pretty thoroughly called[illegible]ed: "subjugated" is the term [illegible] Confederate veteran always use[illegible]ed. [illegible] this connection. Still, the case [illegible] seen. The We[illegible]are. It appe[illegible] and the other critic[illegible] lux scenes, the refusal of [illegible]

WOMEN TO CRITICISE "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Four Summoned as Witnesses of Protest Against Motion Picture.

Opposition to "The Birth of a Nation," the film version of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," took a new turn yesterday when four prominent women were summoned to appear in Jefferson Market Court today to express their opinion of the production. They won't appear this morning, however, as the scheduled hearing will be postponed until a week from to-day.

James W. Osborne will appear for the protestors and Martin W. Littleton for D. W. Griffith, the producer. The resulting action is expected to overshadow the protest made to Mayor Mitchel.

Mr. Osborne was engaged by the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, of No. 70 Fifth Avenue. It objects to the two big scenes of the pictures, in one of which a negro chases a white girl over a cliff and in the other a mulatto politician tries to force marriage upon the daughter of his benefactor. The association admits these scenes have been modified but holds they have not been changed sufficiently.

Joel E. Spingarn, Chairman of the Board of the association, caused a letter to be sent to Mayor Mitchel calling his attention to that fact, but before that he had summonses served on those who are expected to be the star witnesses in court.

They are Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, Miss Rosalie Jonas, Miss Mary White Ovington, authoress, Mrs. Helen Lansdowne and Frederic C. Howe, Chairman of the National Board of Censorship who requested that his name be taken off the approval stamp of the National Board when a majority approved the film.

Miss Ovington went to see the picture yesterday afternoon and said afterward she was ready to voice her protest of them. One of the arguments is expected to be women who criticise the object to its foundation to intermarriage

American

APR 2 1915

Mayor Takes Up Dixon Film Play

MARTIN W. LITTLETON, attorney for Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," and D. W. Griffith, the moving piture director who converted it into the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," visited the Mayor yesterday for the purpose of presenting his clients' side of the controversy begun on Tuesday by the protest of the "National Association for the Advancement of Colored People."

Although the film had been modified since the organization protested, it seems that even in its present form it has not met with the approval of the protestors, and notice was served yesterday at the Liberty Theatre that unless further eliminations must be made.

Mr. Littleton filed with the Mayor a letter from the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, in which he praises the film. Also a letter from the Rev. Talbot Smith, connected with the official paper of the Knights of Columbus.

The Mayor at the conclusion of the hearing said:

"I have seen the play. If it were merely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites it would be a different question. But there are two scenes that go further back to race prejudice, and I think those scenes ought to be

Times April 2, 1915

Comment on Picture.

There was another hearing before Mayor Mitchel yesterday regarding the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," to which several classes of which the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People has objected. The hearing was attended by Thomas Dixon, Jr., D. W. Griffiths, the producer; James S. Hamilton of the National Board of Censors, Martin W. Littleton, counsel for the moving picture company; License Commissioner Bell, and others. The Mayor said he felt that two scenes should be modified. At his suggestion Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Dixon, and others will confer with Commissioner Bell and try to come to some agreement.

Ale 2 1915

[illegible] exactly what wanted to

The World

APR 2 1915

"BY THEIR FRUITS."

Negro Progress Under Freedom.

To the Editor of The World:

Your editorial "By Their Fruits," in to-day's World, is timely, courageous and right to the point.

Our colored brothers and sisters have done very well indeed, all things considered, in the last half-century. An editorial like that in to-day's paper will inspire them to still finer deeds.

CHAS. T. WHITE.

New York, April 1.

Fair Treatment of the Colored Race.

To the Editor of The World:

I can assure you that the colored race appreciate very much the kind and manly words of your editorial of April 1 relative to Mr. Anderson, the retiring Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York.

The fact that your paper is Democratic in principle and that the bulk of the colored vote is Republican has never stood in your way in appealing for justice for the race.

When Judge Terrell's case was before the United States Senate, you editorially indorsed him and appealed to the Senate to confirm his nomination. When the segregation question in the departments in Washington was put up to the President, you showed editorially, in no uncertain tones, the inconsistency and injustice of such a scheme. In the matter of "The Birth of a Nation," you again appealed for fair dealing for the race.

Not only for the colored race but for all oppressed races your great newspaper has always stood for justice.

H. A. WALLACE.

New York, April 1.

EAGLE

s: Brooklyn, N. Y.

GRIFFITH DEFENDS FILM.

Criticism of "The Birth of a Nation" films, and Mayor Mitchel's objection to certain phases of the motion pictures now being shown in Manhattan, caused the producer, D. W. Griffith, to issue a statement today in which he declared that the production is morally inoffensive and that the charge that the films had not passed the National Board of Censors is entirely unfounded.

"Martin W. Littleton," said the producer, speaking of the visit to City Hall yesterday, "was able to get into the record of facts before His Honor the exact attitude of the National Board toward the film story."

Mayor Mitchel, however, contended that two scenes in the film drama were calculated to intensify race prejudice. He suggested that Mr. Griffith and his friends watch the pictures in Liberty Theater with License Commissioner Bell, who was asked by the Mayor to censor the production.

CITIZEN

ress: Brooklyn, N. Y.

NATIONAL BOARD SET RIGHT.

Martin W. Littleton Tells Mayor Mitchel Facts About Film Drama.

A statement was issued late yesterday from the offices of D. W. Griffith, whose motion-picture production, "The Birth of a Nation," has been the subject of considerable newspaper comment the past several days. This statement was in answer to the unfounded charges of the opponents of the picture that the film had not been passed by the National Board of Censors.

Martin W. Littleton, representing Mr. Griffith and his associates in the production of the picture, appeared before Mayor Mitchel at the City Hall yesterday to reply to the statement of these agitators. Mr. Littleton was able to get into the record of facts before his Honor the exact attitude of the National Board toward the film story.

The original committee from the board passed the picture in January. At an invitation presentation on March 1, another committee saw the picture and recommended certain modifications in the presentation. These changes were made and on March 12 the Committee of Twenty-three passed finally upon the production and by a vote of 15 to 8 voted to adopt the report of the original committee and pass the picture as approved.

These figures were furnished Mr. Littleton by the secretary of the National Board of Censors and submitted to the Mayor.

The Sun April 3 1915

FILM SHOW PARED DOWN.

"The Birth of a Nation" Loses Objectionable Features.

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre underwent important alterations yesterday. Several scenes are toned down and some of those alleged to be the most objectionable were eliminated.

This action was taken as a result of protests to Mayor Mitchel by the Society for the Advancement of the Colored People and by other organizations.

Rochester-Union-advertiser April 2-1915

No Time for Race Prejudice.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is fighting attempts to increase the prejudice against negroes that still exists. To this end it sends out a review from the New Republic of a motion picture drama that is now being presented in New York city. The drama is called "The Birth of a Nation," and is founded on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." The description of the play shows, as might be expected from the source, that the drama insults the negro race. Dixon, a clergyman, has done much to develop prejudice against the black. His influence, happily, is not great, so that his efforts have not had far-reaching effects.

This year of our Lord is no time for fostering race prejudice. The results of it are seen in the conflict now raging in Europe. It is probably true that some of the excesses of the blacks in the South after the war were as described in the Dixon books. A race cannot be expected to use its freedom perfectly immediately upon attaining it after two hundred years of slavery. But the negro has advanced much since war time. He has advanced in spite of tremendous obstacles. To inflame against him whites in the North who never had any particular aversion to him is a crime. This play evidently commits that crime.

It is to be hoped that the film will not be shown in Rochester. The negroes of the city are not many in proportion to the whole population. But the majority of them are respectable, law-abiding citizens. They live in peace and comity with their white fellow-citizens. They do not deserve to be insulted, and the white majority of the city should endeavor to prevent their being insulted by this product of the brain of a clergyman who seems to have forgotten the lessons of love for one's neighbor that were taught by the Christ whom he preaches.

St. Paul News-March 31-15

NEGROES PROTEST MOVIE

Delegation Calls Mayor Mitchel That "Birth of a Nation" Reflects on Race.

New York, March 31.—A delegation of negroes have protested to Mayor Mitchel against certain portions of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," a version of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman."

They say it reflects upon the negroes and stirs up race hatred. Frederick Howe, commissioner of immigration and chairman national board of film censors, refused to approve the film. Mayor Mitchel told his visitors the owners of the film had promised to cut out some of the scenes.

Herald Lincoln-Ill. Apr 3-15

The author of "The Clansman," which has recently been revamped into a moving picture play, entitled "The Birth of a Nation," has been try[illegible] no move was [illegible] allow the first performances.

The film as changed, however, did not meet the approval of the association, nor [illegible] the officials of the National Board of [illegible] "The New [illegible] attended the [illegible] feature film at the Hippodr[illegible] did [illegible] to live close [illegible] same desire, worth while [illegible] and the really [illegible] life.

"So films which concern themselves with the ugly truths of existence are pugnant to me. But I do not [illegible] them sweepingly. Perhaps there [illegible] essary to spread a [illegible] ing [illegible]

Standard Express APR 2 1915

A Critic of the Movies.

Perhaps Walter Pritchard Eaton is right in thinking that enough has been said on the topic of the inherent wickedness of the picture play which now occupies the spotlight. The censors have passed it, the public in New York city is paying $2 for its evening performances, and the film presentation of "The Clansman" threatens to have as great a success as the book on which it is based and the stage play which preceded it.

Mr. Eaton is interested as a critic of art. His question is whether the film tells the story that the producer spent $125,000 to tell. He answers that it doesn't. The net result, he says, is a moving drama which sets back the clock for the Negro race and reopens old wounds of sectional feeling while its artistic merits are practically nil. The extended battle scenes, he declares, are for the most part blind and meaningless. "You see great acres of fields, lines of trenches, puffs of smoke, red glare at night, men rushing about, but you get no plan of battle; it is like fireworks gone mad."

Mr. Eaton believes that the simple narrative is about the limit of dramatic appeal for the movies, but he complains that on its pictorial side it is in a stage of amateur kodakery.

The criticism is far too slashing. It is true that even in such celebrated films as "Cabiria" there is incident without coherence; a confusion of episodes and no story. Yet in the same film play photographic effects of stupendous importance and thrilling interest do occur, and the results which the leading producers of spectacular films have already achieved warrant the prediction that the time is coming when art in the picture play will draw up abreast of the mechanical perfection already achieved. The movie has not yet reached its climax of effectiveness in competition with the spoken drama, but it is young and it is going fast.

Pittsburgh Sun-Apr. 1

A Word for Negro

To the Editor of The Sun:

Dear Sir—I have been a regular subscriber to your paper for several years and feel at liberty to take issue with you on your editorial on "Censoring a Film," which appeared in Tuesday's paper. In the first place, if you will read an unbiased history of the reconstruction period, you will find that the vast majority of negroes who held office during that period were intelligent and also that all the laws that were in advance of the period were passed during their regime notably the free school law. At every exhibition of the play, "The Clansman," in every city of the North a strong protest was made by negro citizens, but no attention was given it by those in power. If I remember rightly, when the Irish protested against St. Patrick's day post cards and Irish players, all papers, your included, supported their plea. We feel that were you thoroughly posted on reconstruction history and had seen this film the fact that the promoters spent $500,000 would have no weight with you as your editorial seems to indicate.

JAMES R. WILLIAMS.

Globe Atchison Kas. Apr. 3-15

Speaking of "The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture drama founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," a writer named Francis Hackett says: "Whatever happened during Reconstruction, this film is aggressively vicious and defamatory. It is spiritual assassination. It degrades the censors that passed it, and the white race that endures it." This is the photoplay now running at a New York theatre that charges $2 for the best seats, and packs the house every night.

YONKERS, N. Y.

APR 1 - 1915

VIOLENT OBJECTION MADE TO "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Many speakers, both white and colored, made violent objection to certain features of the moving picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," at a hearing before Mayor Mitchel in New York Tuesday.

The delegation which called upon the mayor represented the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Oswald G. Villard, vice-president of the association, said that the production was "improper, immoral and unjust," and he staked his reputation as a student on the assertion that some of the incidents in which negroes figure are not true to history.

Most vehement was Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who said:

"If it is true that the mayor has no power to stop this indescribably foul and loathsome libel on a race of human beings then it is true that government has broken down. The board of censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse and I regret that my name is even remotely connected with such a board. Stop that production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great and abiding service to the people of the country."

One of the negro speakers, Edward Moore, editor of the New York Age, appealed for fairness to his race.

HERALD DISPATCH
N. Y.

APR 2 - 1915

Because the manager of the Liberty Theater, New York, has been informed by Commissioner Bell of the License Department that he was not satisfied with the elisions that had been made in the moving picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," which deals with the negro race problem, a delegation called on Mayor Mitchel yesterday to protest against any further cuts. It included D. W. Griffith, who made the play in picture form; Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," the original p[illegible] Martin W. Littleton, counsel for the theater managers. "My mind is quite free," said the Mayor at the end of the hearing. "I have seen the play. If it were, as you suggest, purely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites, it might be a different question. But there are some scenes that go further and appeal to race prejudice. I feel that these scenes ought to be modified."

The First Established and N. Y. Newspaper Cutting Bureau REPUBLICAN
Address: Springfield, Mass.

B APR 1 1915

"The Birth of a Nation," widely heralded as a triumph of moving-picture [illegible] tion, was made from Rev [illegible] "The Clansman." If [illegible] the novel, and it is [illegible] it, it [illegible] quite [illegible] th[illegible] [illegible]uded: London, 1881; New York, 1884 [illegible] [illegible]urse [illegible] objection[illegible] or de[illegible] [illegible]ry objectionable in [illegible] able in [illegible] it serve[illegible] [illegible] an otherwise in[illegible] [illegible]olerable [illegible]

Telegram
Holyoke, Mass.
B

APR - 1915

NEGROES AND "BIRTH OF A NATION."

Mayor Mitchell of New York at an audience granted to 500 negroes, who objected to certain scenes in the photo-play "Birth of a Nation," made known to them that the scenes would be removed while playing in that city. The picture has raised quite [illegible] throughout the country [illegible] negroes [illegible] did [illegible]

TIMES
Address Pawtucket, R. I.

APR 3 - 1915

FILM SHOW TONED DOWN.

NEW YORK, April 1.—"The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre underwent important alterations yesterday. Several scenes are toned down and some of these alleged to be the most objectionable were eliminated.

This action was taken as a result of protests to Mayor Mitchel by the Society for the Advancement of the Colored People and by other organizations.

GREENVILLE, S. C. NEWS

APR [illegible] 1915

ASK MAYOR TO STOP "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Negroes and Their Friends Call Picture "Cruel and Untrue."

NEW YORK, April 1.—Violent objection to certain features of the moving picture spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" was made by many speakers, both white and negro, in a hearing before Mayor Mitchell in the Board of Estimate room at City Hall yesterday. The Mayor replied that he had seen the play himself and had spoken to License Commissioner Bell about parts that were deemed objectionable. On a hint from Mr. Bell the producers had agreed to tone down some scenes.

The delegation which called upon the mayor and filled the hearing room represented the Nation Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Oswald G. Villard, vice-president of the association, said that the production was "improper, immoral, and unjust" and he staked his reputation as a student on the assertion that some of the incidents in which negroes figure are not true to history.

Frederick C. Howe, commissioner of Immigration at this port, is chairman of the Nation oBard of Moving Picture Censorship. He said:

"The ground of my protest is that the play affects 10,000,000 citizens who are degraded by it. One-half deals with war and the other half portrays the negro at a lustful and degraded creature This portrayal is cruel, vindictive and untrue."

Most vehement was Rabbi Stphen S. Wise, who said:

"If it is true that the mayor has no power to stop this indescribably foul and loathsome libel on a race of human beings then it is true that government has broken down. The board of censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse and I regret that my name is even remotely connected with such a board. The negroes of this city have been patient. They have not yet risen to protest as did the Irish who attacked "The Playboy of the Western World" which was really a beautiful poem. If I did not know that Thomas Dixon, upon whose novel "The Clansman" this moving picture play is based, was capable of this infamy I would believe that he had been hired to write that book to stir up race prejudice.

"Stop that production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great and abiding service to the people of this country."

Miss Lilliam D. Wald told the mayor that it "was impossible to measure the potential dangers that threaten us if this production is allowed to go on."

One of the negro speakers, Edward R. Moore, editor of the New York Age, appealed for fairness to his race.

Union Advertiser
Address ROCHESTER, N. Y.

APR 2 - 1915

[illegible] Prejudice.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People is fighting attempts to increase the prejudice against negroes that still exists. To this end it sends out a review from the New Republic of a motion picture drama that is now being presented in New York city. The drama is called "The Birth of a Nation," and is founded on Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." The description of the play shows, as might be expected from the source, that the drama insults the negro race. Dixon, a clergyman, has done much to develop prejudice against the black. His influence, happily, is not great, so that his efforts have not had far-reaching effects.

This year of our Lord is no time for fostering race prejudice. The results of it are seen in the conflict now raging in Europe. It is probably true that some of the excesses of the blacks in the South after the war were as described in the Dixon books. A race cannot be expected to use its freedom perfectly immediately upon attaining it after two hundred years of slavery. But the negro has advanced much since war time. He has advanced in spite of tremendous obstacles. To inflame against him whites in the North who never had any particular aversion to him is a crime. This play evidently commits that crime.

It is to be hoped that the film will not be shown in Rochester. The negroes of the city are not many in proportion to the whole population. But the majority of them are respectable, law-abiding citizens. They live in peace and comity with their white fellow-citizens. They do not deserve to be insulted, and the white majority of the city should endeavor to prevent their being insulted by this product of the brain of a clergyman who seems to have forgotten the lessons of love for one's neighbor that were taught by the Christ whom he preaches.

Syracuse Post-Standard
April 2, 1915

A Critic of the Movies.

Perhaps Walter Pritchard Eaton is right in thinking that enough has been said on the topic of the inherent wickedness of the picture play which now occupies the spotlight. The censors have passed it, the public in New York city is paying $2 for its evening performances, and the film presentation of "The Clansman" threatens to have as great a success as the book on which it is based and the stage play which preceded it.

Mr. Eaton is interested as a critic of art. His question is whether the film tells the story that the producer spent $125,000 to tell. He answers that it doesn't. The net result, he says, is a moving drama which sets back the clock for the Negro race and reopens old wounds of sectional feeling while its artistic merits are practically nil. The extended battle scenes, he declares, are for the most part blind and meaningless. "You see great acres of fields, lines of trenches, puffs of smoke, red glare at night, men rushing about, but you get no plan of battle; it is like fireworks gone mad."

Mr. Eaton believes that the simple narrative is about the limit of dramatic appeal for the movies, but he complains that on its pictorial side it is in a stage of amateur kodakery.

The criticism is far too slashing. It is true that even in such celebrated films as "Cabiria" there is incident without coherence; a confusion of episodes and no story. Yet in the same film play photographic effects of stupendous importance and thrilling interest do occur, and the results which the leading producers of spectacular films have already achieved warrant the prediction that the time is coming when art in the picture play will draw up abreast of the mechanical perfection already achieved. The movie has not yet reached its climax of effectiveness in competition with the spoken drama, but it is young and it is going fast.

[illegible] his views of [illegible] and [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] applied [illegible] politician to shake h[illegible] [illegible] incidents, and forge[illegible] [illegible] colored folks in th[illegible]

SPRINGFIELD (Mass.) NEWS
B APRIL 1 1915

Mayor Mitchel of New York on Tuesday gave a hearing to 500 [illegible] and their friends who objected to certain features in "The Birth of a Nation," the photo play version of Thomas Dixon's, "Clansman," now being presented at the Liberty Theater. The fact that the management had voluntarily deleted the scenes objected to was not permitted to prevent the negroes and their friends expressing their opinion of the scenes and of the author. The scenes objected to were two—one portraying the flight of a white girl from a negro, whom she escapes by throwing herself over a cliff, and another where a negro lieutenant governor attempts to attack the daughter of his benefactor. One way or another the press agents of the company producing the film have made much of these scenes and discussion as to their fitness or lack of it has not been discouraged, even in Atlanta, where some of the pictures were taken. The objection to them was that they portrayed the negro as a brute and were calculated to engender race prejudice. Frederic C. Howe, the first speaker, objected to the play as a whole as crude, vindictive and untrue, with one-half of the play devoted to war and the other half to picturing the negro as depraved. The production, he said, was an outrage upon 10,000,000 Americans who could make no protest because they have no voice in the affairs of the nation. Rev. Dr. William H. Bowles objected to the play as untrue. "If," said he, "the scenes were true, I'd hate my own race." Rabbi Wise denounced the board of censors for allowing such a film to be produced, and the producers as "contemptible cowards." He congratulated the negroes of New York upon having been more patient than the Irish, "who attacked 'The Playboy of the Western World.'" If he did not know Thomas Dixon to be capable of such infamy he said he would have been forced to believe he was hired to write the book to stir up race prejudice.

"Improper, immoral and unjust," was the way Oswald G. Villard described the production. Miss Lillian D. Wald, of the Henry Street Settlement, indorsed what Mr. Villard said.

First Established and Most Complete Newspaper Cutting Bureau in the World JOURNAL
Address Ogdensburg, N. Y.

APR 2 - 1915

MAYOR MITCHEL BARS OFFENSIVE FILM SCENES

DEPICTED NEGRO IN DEBASING LIGHT.

New York, April 1.—Mayor Mitchel Tuesday gave a hearing to 500 negroes and their friends who objected to certain features in "The Birth of a Nation," the photo play version of Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," now being presented at the Liberty theatre. The fact that the management had voluntarily deleted the scenes objected to was not permitted to prevent the negroes and their friends expressing their opinion of the scenes and of the author.

The scenes objected to were two—one portraying the flight of a white girl from a negro, whom she escapes by throwing herself over a cliff, and another where a negro lieutenant governor attempts to attack the daughter of his benefactor.

Mayor Mitchel made all hands happy by announcing that the objectionable scenes would be presented no more in this city.

N. Y. News, Apr 2 1915

BY THEIR FRUITS.

In the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in this city a "[illegible]" is belied. In the office of the Collector of Internal Revenue for the Second District of New York that race may be judged by its fruits.

Charles W. Anderson goes out of office to-day after holding for ten years this responsible post under the Treasury. Many millions of dollars have passed through his hands. His dealings have been practically all with white men of the keenest intellect and of substantial business standing. Capacity and courtesy have been the qualities most remarked in his conduct of an office maintained always in the highest efficiency. In Collector Anderson's time, three complicated and important new revenue measures, the income tax, the corporation tax and the [illegible] revenue [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

APR 8 1915

RECORD HERALD
Chicago, Ill.

SUN

PROTEST AGAINST THE MITCHELL BILL

League for Political Education Sends Telegrams to Albany Condemning Proposed Censor Law.

NATIONAL BOARD UPHELD

Norman Hapgood, D. W. Griffith, John Collier and Others See Danger in Legal Censorship.

After listening to hot words of condemnation directed at the proposed bill creating a State board of censorship in New York, the members of the League for Political Education sent telegrams of protest against the passage of the bill to the Legislature at Albany. The meeting was held at the Cort Theatre on Wednesday and the telegrams were timed to reach the State Capitol during the hearing on the bill, which took place during the afternoon.

Norman Hapgood, editor of Harper's Weekly; the Rev. Charles S. MacFarland, general secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America; John Collier, former chairman of the National Board of Censorship; Frederic L. Ackerman, a member of the National Board, and D. W. Griffith, director of Mutual-Reliance films and the producer of "The Birth of a Nation," the spectacle which opened at the Liberty Theatre on Wednesday night, spoke in opposition to the proposed bill and declared themselves opposed to legal censorship in any form, whether National or State.

Griffith, the last speaker on the programme, was more radical than his predecessors, condemning censorship of any kind.

"All art has its origin in a vision," said Mr. Griffith. "Whether the final expression of the idea shall take the form of literature, painting, music or the written word, it was first a vision. Therefore, motion picture, which is an expression of that vision, should properly take rank among the arts.

"I firmly believe, as many great men have told me, that the motion picture is the greatest force for the spread of public thought that we have. If that is so, the motion picture should not be hampered by censorial re-

Sentiment Is Pure.

"Public sentiment would not permit the showing of films which are intrinsically evil, any more than it will countenance the running of plays which transgress the bounds of decency too far. Why, then, should photo-plays be subject to the whims of a few people who are empowered to act according to their own dictates, and from whose decisions the manufacturer has absolutely no appeal?

"If, however, we must have some form of supervision I cannot conceive of a better form than that which we already have in the National Board of Censorship," continued Mr. Griffith, in paying tribute to the conscientious and discriminating work which the members of the board perform.

Mr. Griffith then went on to advocate the division of photo-plays into two groups, one to be shown to adults only, the other to be exhibited to children. For the latter classification he could readily see the advantages of careful supervision. In closing Mr. Griffith declared that local censorship was the greatest evil with which the motion picture producer has to contend.

"The manufacturer will not invest money in great films when he knows that they will be torn apart by the ignorant people whom political factions have placed in power. He knows that Ohio will object to one thing, Pennsylvania to another, Cincinnati to something else, and that by the time his film has been shown in a few States he will have nothing left."

Norman Hapgood pointed out that public morals are elastic and cannot be determined by law. He declared that the co-operation between the film manufacturers and the National Board of Censorship was an ideal example of democracy. The creation of a State board would, in his mind, be the furthering of autocracy. Mr. Hapgood declared that censorship of the sort proposed in the State Legislature was simply inadequate interference. He pointed out the ridiculous outcome of the censor movement in England as a fair example of what we can expect here.

Dr. MacFarland deplored the tendency on the part of the people to resort to legal measures in regulating moral questions and then to forget entirely the moral question at issue. He stated that the present rate of installation of motion picture outfits in churches and parish houses is only a forerunner of what will take place when the cost of the apparatus is lowered.

A Huge Undertaking.

The fact that 155 members of the present censor board found it almost impossible to cope with the work which they have to do, as urged by Mrs. Ackerman as a reason for doubting that a board of this size could greatly improve upon the efficiency of the present organization, which would lose its power if the smaller board were to be instituted.

A more [illegible] account of the facts and features of the case, given by Mr. Collier, argued the efficacy of the national board. Mr. Collier sees in the recent decision of the United States Supreme Court establishing the legality of the Ohio and Kansas State boards a direct menace to the doctrine of free speech. The court declared that, because the motion picture theatres are licensed by local authorities, they are subject to their censorship. Mr. Collier says that it only remains for the newspapers and magazines to be placed under the category of licenses and they can be muzzled by censors.

Mr. Collier refuted the argument advanced by the advocates of State censorship to the effect that the national board is supported by contributions from the film manufacturers, and is therefore subject to their influence. The board, as Mr. Collier points out, serves voluntarily and without remuneration. The executive expenses, which include the maintenance of a few clerks, are borne by the manufacturers. The speaker did not seem to think it likely that the members of the board would jeopardize their good names for the sake of gaining the slender stipends of the paid clerks.

[illegible] to the Association for the Advancement of Colored People. [illegible] arrived at [illegible] Walter W. Littleton, [illegible], appeared before the board to be allowed to confer with the Commissioners and find out exactly what the movement wanted to

APR 9 1915

TRIBUNE

TRUE THO[illegible]

The Sun, N.Y. 13-1-915

WOULD STOP "BIRTH OF A NATION" FILMS

ADVANCEMENT ASSOCIATION FEARS DISTURBANCES.

Spectacle Portrays Conditions that Are a Libel on Their Race, Negroes Complain — Contend that Moving Picture of Civil War, Reconstruction, and Ku Klux Klan Days Misrepresents Colored People — Fear Play May Cause Disorder.

A campaign for the suppression of the new motion-picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," the drama of Civil War, Reconstruction, and Ku Klux Klan days in the South, based upon Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," which opened in the Liberty Theatre on Wednesday night, has been undertaken by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Evidence that the film is causing unrest among the negroes of the city, which it is feared may grow into open disturbances if the film continues to be presented, is the basis of the Association's action. Officials explained to-day at the headquarters, 70 Fifth Avenue, that negroes had been coming to them to demand that action be taken to stop the film, and that the protests arise from an intense resentment against the characterization of the negro in the story, in the justification of the violence of the Ku Klux Klan. If their opposition to the film is not successful, these officers said, they fear for the results.

The negroes feel that the story of the picture-play is a libel upon their race, in that it represents the negro as either a primitive and ignorant brute or a vicious and treacherous criminal, according to the officials of the Association. Their opposition is backed up by the decision of the National Board of Censorship, after repeated consideration, against the film in its present form. The Association also quotes Southerners who have seen the film, and have expressed condemnation of it as an injustice to negroes. Rabbi Wise, and the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant, are to preach against it to-morrow. In addition, the Association is pushing an attempt to get legal action to stop the film.

APPROVE SUPPRESSION CAMPAIGN.

Among citizens who have been to see the film with the special purpose of considering it as an appeal to race prejudice, and who have subsequently condemned it and given their approval to the association campaign against it, are A. S. Frissell, president of the Fifth Avenue Bank, and Henry Goldman, banker.

The fight to stop the film was begun after its release in Los Angeles, when a representative of the association there sent word that it was causing trouble among the negroes. It had already been viewed by a sub-committee of the National Board of Censorship, and passed; but officers of the association took the question up with Dr. F. C. Howe, chairman of the board, and gained a decision for a review by the central body. This took place Monday afternoon, and after it the National Board reversed the decision of their sub-committee by a vote of 16 to 4. The portions objected to were a section in which a negro was shown chasing a white girl until she was forced to save herself by leaping from a cliff, another scene in which a mulatto, attempting a forced marriage with a white girl through his political influence under negro franchise, seized her and carried her from the room, and a scene in which negroes were shown drinking in a saloon.

A representative of the Association went to Arthur Woods, Police Commissioner, and he called the matter to the attention of Chief Magistrate McAdoo, who warned the owners against the production of the film and called a hearing for Wednesday noon. Deputy Police Commissioner Dunham and Inspector Morris, at this hearing, expressed the fear of the Police Department that the film might cause rioting. Ephraim Kaufman, Deputy Commissioner of Licenses, was also approached on the question of whether the film could be stopped under the law on decency.

At the Magistrate's hearing, the attorney for the owners said that changes had been made in the film, to meet objections, and requested that the police and Association officials see it in its new form and consider whether it was not acceptable. This was agreed upon, and no move was made to prevent the first performances.

The film as changed, however, did not meet the approval of the association, nor [illegible] officials of the National Board of [illegible] Censors [illegible]

A FILM OF RACE HATE.

A Moving Picture Play Which Stirs Prejudice Against the Negro.

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: I wish most earnestly to protest against the continued presentation of the moving picture called "The Birth of a Nation," which is a dramatic form of "The Clansman," a sensational and prejudiced version of reconstruction days. We are appalled at the results of sectionalism and race pride in Europe and are urging that every race and nation have a chance for its own free development, yet we are fostering the same pride, hatred and injustice in our own country.

In Richmond a few months ago I saw the pathetic memorials of the brave men and women who championed the lost cause. We do not wonder at their sensitiveness, but the war was over fifty years ago and it is at this time a crime against our civilization to stir up prejudice and ill will here in the North.

The race against which such plays as this are directed is already handicapped on every side. The National Board of Censors has condemned the film. Let us say all that is American let us condemn it too. Remember that the negro is the only one of our immigrant population who did not come here of his own accord, but "received a pressing invitation." Let us give him a square deal. BEULAH KENNARD.

NEW YORK, March 12.

News, Chicago

MRS. HARRISON DIDN'T ASK MOVIE LID LIFTING

Mayor Permitted Film Plays of "Three Weeks" on Own Judgment, She Says.

"NO HARM IN THE 'LURE'"

She'd Rather Live Out in the Woods, However; Sordid Doesn't Interest Her, She Declares.

Mrs. Carter Harrison to-day scouted reports that she had been exerting artistic influence and literary pressure on her husband, the mayor. Mrs. Harrison, who is becoming one of the country's prominent contributors to the screen drama, shook her head and declared the mayor had passed the films of the "Lure," "Three Weeks" and "Tainted" acting on his own impulses and ideas of moral righteousness. These films originally were turned down by the censors, but permits to show them were issued recently on order of the mayor.

"However," continued Mrs. Harrison, "I am in accord with Mr. Harrison's views and have confidence in his artistic discrimination. I would not have passed 'Three Weeks' as it was originally. But with a few cuts there was no more harm in it than in a cake of soap. I think censors are necessary, but often inconvenient. I am not interested in films such as 'The Lure,' but properly produced there is no menace to morality in them.

Sidestepped Wife's Film Production.

"As for my exerting pressure on my husband, that is outside the question. When my own film came before the censor I asked the mayor whether he would refuse to pass it and he said he would sidestep the issue by not viewing it and letting it up to the censors. They passed it, but the feeling of uncertainty was rather annoying. The film was absolutely all right, but you never can tell.

"I was surprised to see myself credited with having acted as censor in viewing the film, 'The Birth of a Nation.' The film is a most wonderful and glorious production, but I never have expressed an opinion whether it should be shown. I viewed the film in the city hall merely as a spectator. It is one of the most magnificent things I ever have seen."

"What do you think, on the whole, of the purposeful films which point morals and involve the exhibition of white slaves and dope victims which the censors persistently condemn?" Mrs. Harrison was asked.

Would Like to Live in Backwoods.

"I do not like such things personally," she said. "I prefer beautiful things. If I could have had my way Mr. Harrison and I would have gone into the backwoods year ago and never have seen a city again. I am glad, of course, that we didn't. But now I feel that same desire, to live close to nature and the really worth while things in life.

"So films which concern themselves with the ugly truths of existence are repugnant to me. But I do not [illegible] them sweepingly. Perhaps there is necessary to spread a [illegible] ing [illegible]

[illegible] PREJUDICE FILM

[illegible] PERNICIOUS CARICATURE OF NEGRO RACE."

[illegible] Seems to Have Gathered Most Vicious and Grotesque Individuals to Show Them as Representatives of Entire Race, Says [illegible] of Hull House After Seeing "The Birth of a Nation" Moving Picture Drama.

"Pernicious caricature of the negro race," is the way in which Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, expressed her opinion to-day of the motion-picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown in New York, in which is told a story of Reconstruction days and Ku Klux Klan violence in the South following the Civil War. After having seen the film, Miss Addams softened no terms in her condemnation of it.

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among colored people, and showing them as representatives of the truth about the entire race," she said in describing her impressions of the play. "It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race. For instance, it would be easy enough to go about the slums of a city and bring together some of the criminals and degenerates, and take pictures of them purporting to show the character of the white race. It would no more be the truth about the white race than this is about the black.

AN ANACHRONISM.

"One of the most unfortunate things about this film is that it appeals to race prejudice upon the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider to-day. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the play is historical; but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events, but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest.

"Nobody denies that in the haste and confusion of the period after the Civil War the men in control of politics did many tyrannical and shortsighted things; and made a great many mistakes. The carpet-baggers' from the North, who went in and influenced the negroes against the interests of the whites unquestionably did a great deal of harm; to present the tendency they represented as the only one is as unfair to the North as to claim that all Southerners wanted to oppress the negroes would be to the South. Then the film shows a preposterous scene in a Southern Legislature, to which the election of a majority of negroes has been obtained by defrauding whites of their votes. Negro legislators are shown taking off their shoes at their desks, drinking whiskey from flasks while making speeches, acting in all sorts of uncouth ways. It is laughably false to the whole truth.

"Then there is the impression that is created of the Ku Klux Klan—perfectly ridiculous. The Klan takes the place of the melodrama hero, always doing the noble thing and rescuing the heroine in distress. There are the revolting scenes of the pursuit of one white girl, which arouse feeling against the negro; and then follows a second similar scene of attempted forced marriage between a powerful mulatto politician—there may have been such vicious individuals as this man is shown to be, but they were certainly exceptions—and a white girl. Of course, the Klan breaks in just in time to prevent the success of the design. At last the Klan is made to appeal to the enthusiasm of the spectator as the heroic defender of a victimized people. None of the outrageous, vicious, misguided outrages, which it certainly commits, are shown. I am not interested in placing blame for those outrages on the audiences who made up the Klan. It was natural that in the heat of the times they should be led, just as did the men of their own to them that [illegible] simply contending that they moved while playing in that [illegible] picture [illegible] raised quite [illegible] the country [illegible] negroes [illegible] did [illegible]

[illegible] Klan. It is not shown to them except to stir their sympathy. Of course they applaud slights and contempt for the negroes; they are shown only as despicable brutes.

"It is certainly to be hoped that such a film can be suppressed. As an appeal to race prejudice, it is full of danger."

"Do you recall any portions of the play that you found particularly objectionable?" Miss Addams was asked.

"No; it was rather the whole tone of the second part," was the reply. "Of course, there are the unpleasant episodes in which white girls figure; but the evil is rather in the dominant attitude of mind toward the negro. As I have said, it seems to me an attempt to make him appear worse than childish and brutal and vicious—actually grotesque and primitive and contemptible."

"How far did you observe that this attitude of mind influenced the spectators?"

"It is hard to tell, of course. Certainly I felt that they were made to feel a prejudice against negroes; some showed approval in applause when the hero refuses to shake hands with the mulatto politician, and they were roused to the point of clapping enthusiastically, before the end of the pictures, whenever the Ku Klux Klan appeared. That was the noticeable thing about the play—the success of the glorification of the activities of the Ku Klux Klan, contrasted with the base and elemental character of the negroes, misrepresented in the ludicrously perverted scenes of plantation life. The production is the most subtle form of untruth—a half-truth."

Sun, Eve. MAR 15 1915

DR. WISE SEES EVIL IN FILM.

Opposes "The Birth of a Nation" at Liberty Theatre.

Dr. Stephen S. Wise of the Free Synagogue spoke yesterday against the presentation of the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," now at the Liberty Theatre.

Dr. Wise said the pictures stirred hatred between the negro and the white man.

Post
MAR 17 1915

"Birth of a Nation" Passed Censors.

J. J. McCarthy, general manager of the moving-picture production called "The Birth of a Nation," made public to-day the report of the National Board of Censorship, which said that the moral effect of the play was "good," and appraised its other values as "excellent." The Evening Post's objection to the production is not based on the ground of morality, in the popular sense of that word, but on the fact that the play fosters race prejudice and is unfair to the negroes of the United States.

SALT LAKE CITY (Utah) NEWS
MARCH 20, 1915

Jane Addams Criticizes Griffith Production

"Pernicious caricature of the negro race" is the way in which Miss Jane Addams, of Hull House, Chicago, expressed her opinion of the motion picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown in [redacted] in which is told a story of reconstruction days in Ku Klux Klan violence in the south following the Civil war. After having seen the film, Miss Addams softened no terms in her condemnation of it.

Miss Addams is said to have made her criticism of the production in an interview in the New York Evening Post of March 13. Miss Addams was quoted in part as follows:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among colored people, and showing them as representatives of truth about the entire race," she said in describing her impressions of the play. "It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race. For [illegible] stance, it would be easy enough to [illegible] the slums of a city and bring [illegible]

FILM PLAY A CRIME AGAINST TWO RACES

RABBI WISE DENOUNCES "THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Charges Producers with Coining Into Money Race Prejudice and Every Unholy Instinct and That They Seek to Barter Peace and Unity of a Nation to Enrich Themselves—Voluntary Censorship a Failure, Unless It Suppresses Film.

"Race Prejudice and Race Assassination" was the subject of a sermon yesterday by the Rev. Stephen S. Wise, rabbi of the Free Synagogue. Rabbi Wise spoke earnestly against permitting the continuance of the moving-picture play "The Birth of a Nation," the film dramatization of Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman." He charged the producers with shameful misrepresentation in calling the production a peace play, when in reality it was a play of hate. They sought to coin money from race prejudice and bitterness under the pretence of picturing a nation's rebirth, but all that was ennobling in the struggle of a people was omitted, Rabbi Wise said. His sermon was in part as follows:

"When the story of which this film-play is a dramatization appeared in print, it seemed as if it could not be worse. Later the story was dramatized to the dismay of every lover of peace and fair play in the nation. Now, piling horror upon horror, the thing is so done in film form that everything loathsome in the original book is emphasized. All faith in the honesty of purpose that may have been imagined by some men to lie back of the book is shattered, as one witnesses the film-play and notes that no possibility of evil suggestion against the negro race has been left unutilized.

A PLAY OF HATE.

"The play dares to call itself a play of peace. It is not a peace play, but a war play; it is a hate play; it is a play which presents and glorifies every war passion. True, the film shows some consequences of war in the slaying of men, in the ravaging of a land, in the destruction of homes, but to the unthinking it is a panegyric of the hell of war. Again, this play is not only in its implications to the unthinking an attempt to glorify war, but utterly damnable is its deliberate resurrecting of all the embittering memories of the Reconstruction days. All the hatreds of the war-days and the after-war years, not only as against the negro, but as between white and white, are revived.

"Most serious of all is the circumstance that this play constitutes a deliberate attempt to deepen and justify within the hearts of men the more or less instinctive prejudices which it is the business of an enlightened democracy ceaselessly to challenge and to combat. If but the author and the producers had the courage to declare that of which I accuse them, of designing to foster hate and to intensify prejudice, to make it impossible for two races to live side by side in this republic upon the basis of peace and good-will, one could almost respect their frankness and courage and not be moved to despise them for their cowardice as one loathes them for their shame.

"The general effect of the play is to present the negro of a generation ago as a foul and murderous beast. Therefore, I call this play a crime against two races. The men who are responsible for it are coining prejudice and bitterness and every unholy instinct of men into money. If I shall again be told, as I have been told, that I do not understand the Anglo-Saxon spirit by those ready to capitalize every latent race prejudice, I answer that the Anglo-Saxon spirit was of Washington and Lincoln, and is not of the Tillmans and the Vardamans and the Bleases and the Dixons. It is the author and producers who do not know the Anglo-Saxon spirit nor rightly honor it, for they are its traducers and betrayers. They are bartering the peace and unity of a nation in order that they may enrich themselves.

"I charge the men answerable for the crime of this play with seeking to poison the wells of our American civilization, with seeking to slay the soul of a race, not only with doing infinite damage and hurt to American life, but with doing it consciously, deliberately, malignly. Night after night and day after day there are thousands of people to be found in a theatre of New York who are paying money for what is nominally a form of amusement and entertainment. They are paying for a play inflicting grievous damage upon the structure of our Republic. These producers are inciting to hatred and ultimately, it may be, to riot and murder. They will coin money out of it, and fatten upon the unspeakable hurt done to one people and upon the shame of another people who silently and even with approval witness the moral betrayal and spiritual assassination of a race.

"If thirty or forty years ago Europe had set her face like flint against the initial causes which inevitably brought about the campaigns that ultimately culminated in war, the war that now is upon us need never have been fought. The time to protest is not when race assassination has come to pass. The time to do that is now, when an attempt is deliberately made to foment it. It may become too late; and if too late and we have been silent, the blood will be upon our own heads, for we shall have suffered the soul of our city and our nation to be poisoned day by day by the fatal and ineradicable poisoning of race prejudice and race assassination.

"While the presentation of this play is an utter condemnation of the men responsible therefor, sadder still and infinitely more degrading is the circumstance that it should be tolerated in our community. For New York has fallen low in its tastes and ideals alike, to endure this insult to its intelligence and this wilful poisoning of its spirit. If this community is not to write itself down as bereft of the dignity of self-respect, it will insist through the courts that the presentation of this play be discontinued at once. Assuming that such discontinuance cannot be effected, then the decent elements of our citizenship should unite upon a policy which would keep such theatres empty as produce morally damaging plays, not only while such plays are in process of presentation, but long after the plays have gone and been succeeded by other and more neutral species of idiocy.

"The whole question of censorship is inevitably raised in connection with the presentation of this play. 'If "The Birth of a Nation' can be presented, then voluntary censorship has proved inadequate and we must have a censorship that shall be authoritative, and to which it would be possible to make appeal upon the broadly ethical and human grounds upon which our protest against this film-horror is based. If this play can continue to be produced in the despite of voluntary censorship, then that censorship has hopelessly failed.

"I have been informed that the voluntary Board of Censorship insisted upon certain changes being made which were made, but no censorship could substantially change the play, for the very good reason that it could not be mended without being ended. For it is not objectionable in spots; it is abhorrent in spirit from beginning to end. The birth or rebirth of a nation, which the author purports to give in the film-play, tells nothing of the industry, of the toil, of the sobriety, of the capacity for self-sacrifice, of the passion for education of the negro race. It singles out one or two lamentable things that have happened within the life of the race as the result of the waywardness of a handful of its members; things which, it must in truth be added, are not more terrible than what is happening in every civilized nation to-day in Europe."

—The Republic of Nicaragua, with an area of 49,200 square miles, has only half a million inhabitants.

Call, MAR 20 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TRIAL SET FOR WEDNESDAY

For the fourth time, the hearing of charges brought by the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People against "The Birth of a Nation" film was postponed yesterday. The case had been set for trial before Magistrate House in the Jefferson Market Court at 2 p.m. It was adjourned by agreement between the attorneys of both sides to next Wednesday afternoon [illegible] and forge[illegible] colored folks in th[illegible] [illegible] Revenue [illegible] N. Y. March [illegible] of New York that race [illegible] ged by its fruits.

[illegible] rles W. Anderson goes out of [illegible] to-day after holding for ten [illegible] this responsible post under the [illegible] sury. Many millions of dollars [illegible] passed through his hands. His [illegible] ngs have been practically all with [illegible] e men of the keenest intellect [illegible] of substantial business standing. [illegible] acity and courtesy have been the [illegible] ities most remarked in his con[illegible] t of an office maintained always [illegible] the highest efficiency. In Collec[illegible] Anderson's time, three complicat[illegible] and important new revenue meas[illegible] es, the income tax, the corpora[illegible] x and the [illegible] revenue ts [illegible]

APR 8 1915

SUN
New York City
APR 2 1915

MAYOR ORDERS MORE CUTS IN THE 'NATION'

Tells Producers of Film Play It Creates Racial Prejudice.

OWNERS DEFEND PICTURE

Having heard on Tuesday the argument of those who think the motion picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," should be stopped, or at least expurgated, Mayor Mitchel listened to the other side of the controversy yesterday.

D. W. Griffith, producer of the spectacle; his counsel, Martin W. Littleton, and Thomas Dixon, upon whose story, "The Clansman," the second half of "The Birth of a Nation" is founded, defended the work against the attack made by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Mr. Griffith said that although several of the scenes had been cut, he was notified yesterday by the Department of Licenses that the theatre would be closed unless further changes were made.

"I want to do what is right," he told the Mayor, "but I do not want to be persuaded by a few people when I know they are wrong."

To this the Mayor replied:

"My mind is quite free. I have seen the play. If it were, as you suggest, merely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites the question might be different, but there are two scenes that go further and appeal to race prejudice, and I feel that they ought to be modified. The negro citizens have certain rights that have to be observed no matter what you and I think about the matter."

He suggested that if Mr. Griffith and his friends watched the pictures in the Liberty Theatre with License Commissioner Bell and Deputy Commissioner Kaufmann a satisfactory agreement could be reached. It was decided that this should be done.

Mr. Littleton spoke harshly of the Association for the Advancement of Colored People. He said it purposed to establish social equality between whites and blacks, and that it had organized a lobby in twelve States and the District of Columbia to defeat bills which were designed to prevent interracial marriage.

Mr. Dixon defended his work as historically accurate, and said he had offered a $5,000 reward for any proof to the contrary.

In a letter Dr. Parkhurst wrote:

"It is not apparent what are the grounds of the objection urged against his drama.

"The criticism that it exhibits the negro in an unfortunate light and that it is calculated to engender racial animosity is fully met by the consideration that it represents the negro, not as [illegible] at all, but as he was in [illegible] when he had just had the chains broken from him and when he was rioting in the deliciousness of liberty."

Mrs. Rosalie M. Jonas, suffragist, sent a letter to the Mayor protesting against "The Birth of a Nation" as "vicious and vulgar." The [illegible]ter also was signed by Mrs. Harri[illegible] Stanton Blatch, Mrs. Carrie Chap[illegible] Catt, Mr. and Mrs. Norman d[illegible] Whitehouse, and other suffrage [illegible]

The he[illegible] charges against Harry Aitken and D. W. Griffith, producers of "The Birth [illegible] a Nation," was put over until next Thursday by Magistrate McQuade yesterday in the Jefferson Market police court.

The adjournment was granted at the request of Reuben Peckham, representative of James W. Osborne, attorney for the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People. Mr. Peckham told the Magistrate that in view of certain changes in the play agreed to at a recent hearing before Mayor Mitchel the charge would probably be withdrawn when the case is called.

Telegraph

[illegible] the Editor of [illegible] The day [illegible] films [illegible] introduced two [illegible] rth of a Nation" [illegible] ich holds the Ne[illegible] ticule. Fair-minde[illegible] sons are agreed th[illegible] e films will not [illegible] g about a better [illegible] but on the ot[illegible] gs of bitterness [illegible] of the white ma[illegible] colored people a[illegible] Commissione[illegible] play sho[illegible] the [illegible]

[illegible]H OF NATION'

[illegible] a Suggestion [illegible] ith It Potency [illegible] Order.

[illegible] gested that two of [illegible] irth of a Nation," [illegible] the Liberty The[illegible] deference to the [illegible] al Association for [illegible] e Colored People. [illegible] arrived at [illegible] ster[illegible] n W. Littleton, [illegible] ent, appeared be[illegible] ed to be allowed [illegible] ith the Commis[illegible] find out exactly [illegible] ant wanted to [illegible]

RECORD HERALD
Chicago, Ill.
APR 2 1915

Conference on Moving Picture.

There was another hearing before Mayor Mitchel yesterday regarding the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," to several scenes of which the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People has objected. The hearing was attended by Thomas Dixon, Jr., D. W. Griffiths, the producer; James S. Hamilton of the National Board of Censors, Martin W. Littleton, counsel for the moving picture company; License Commissioner Bell, and others. The Mayor said he felt that two scenes should be modified. At his suggestion Mr. Griffiths, Mr. Dixon, and others will confer with Commissioner Bell and try to come to some agreement.

Press

FIGHT NEGRO "MOVIE" BAN

Producers of "The Birth of a Nation" Appear Before the Mayor.

Protest was entered yesterday against the efforts of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People to have the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," in the Liberty Theatre, stopped. Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," on which the photo-play is based; D. W. Griffith, the producer, and Martin W. Littleton, their attorney, appeared in the City Hall before Mayor Mitchel and asked that a conference be arranged with George N. Bell, Commissioner of Licenses, to find out just what must be eliminated from the photo-play.

In Jefferson Market Court yesterday Magistrate McQuade held a hearing of the summons served on Harry Aitken and Griffith. The case was adjourned until Thursday next, after the assertion by a representative for the association that the objectionable scenes will be eliminated. Littleton said the theatre has been notified it must make eliminations.

The lawyer filed with the Mayor a letter from the Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, in which the clergyman praises the picture play and urges its continuance without change.

The World
APR 2 1915

MAYOR IS ASKED TO AID THE "CLANSMAN" FILM

Dixon Ha[illegible] Commissioner Bell Se[illegible] Birth of a Nation" Play.

Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," and D. W. Griffith, producer of the film "The Birth of a Nation," based on the novel, appealed to Mayor Mitchel yesterday for permission to confer with Commissioner of Licenses Bell before changes in the scenes of the film were demanded. Vigorous protest against the film was made to the Mayor Tuesday by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Martin W. Littleton, attorney for Griffith, told the Mayor that notice had been given by the Commissioner of Licenses that if certain changes were not made performances would be stopped immediately. A chance to discuss the changes was asked, and at the Mayor's suggestion Commissioner Bell went to the Liberty Theatre with Dixon and Griffith. To-day, it is expected, an agreement will be reached.

"Protest against this picture," said the lawyer, "is based on the propaganda of the Association for the Intermarriage of the Races. Its real attitude on this question is evidenced by the language of protests it has sent to Legislatures of States where bills prohibiting such marriages have been pending. In these protests the association says:

"'We oppose it for the physical reason that to prohibit such intermarriage would be publicly to acknowledge that black blood is a physical taint, something that no self-respecting colored man or woman can be asked to admit.'"

The Mayor was also told that it was not true that the National Board of Censorship had refused to pass the picture. A committee did pass it in January, it was said, after certain modifications were made. Then, on March 25, the Committee of Twenty-three of the Board, by a vote of 15 to 8 adopted the first committee's report a[illegible] passed the picture as approved.

Miss Rosalie M. Jonas, a Suffragist from the Bronx, wrote the Mayor yesterday protesting against the pla[illegible] its misleading title, "The

APR 9 1915

TRIBUNE

The Herald
APR 2 1915

FILM CENSORS

Mayor Advises Change in Scenes in Photo Play

Tells Producer of "Birth of a Nation" That Negroes' Rights Must Be Protected.

Martin W. Littleton, representing the managers of the film play "The Birth of a Nation," running at the Liberty Theatre; Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," on which the photo-drama is based, and D. W. Griffith, the man who put the play in picture form, appeared before Mayor Mitchel yesterday and asked to be permitted to confer with the Commissioner of Licenses and learn exactly what the city wished to be done in eliminating certain parts of the picture.

Mr. Littleton said that when protests were made by representatives of the National Association for the Advancement of the Negroes on last Tuesday the managers of the play had no opportunity to be heard, and that while part of the picture had been eliminated after a conference with the Commissioner of Licenses it was understood that it did not yet suit him. He added that the theatre had received notice that if further eliminations were not made the exhibition would not be permitted to go on.

Mr. Littleton filed with the Mayor a letter from the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst praising the picture play, and one from the Rev. Talbot Smith, who is connected with the official paper of the Knights of Columbus.

"The question is, Mr. Mayor," he said, "just how far you want the Commissioner of Licenses to go and stop the play. They have suggested two scenes be toned down, and yesterday (Wednesday) the play was produced with the eliminations made. If you say we must take out the entire theme that is one thing and if you say we must moderate the theme that is another thing."

The lawyer said that the play had been passed by the National Board of Censors and that before it was produced it was taken before Chief Magistrate McAdoo, who stated that he could not interfere so long as the play was not immoral.

Mr. Griffith told the Mayor he wanted to do what was right, but that he did not want to be persuaded by a few persons when he knew that they were in the wrong.

"My mind is quite free," said the Mayor at the end of the hearing.

"I have seen the play. If it were as you suggest, merely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites, it might be a different question, but there are two scenes that appeal to race prejudice, and I feel that they ought to be modified. I think the best thing you can do is to meet Commissioner Bell and Deputy Commissioner Kaufman and come to an agreement on the scenes against which the Department of Licenses protests. The negro citizens have certain rights that must be observed."

The hearing of the summons served on the play management was adjourned one week by Magistrate McQuade when the case came before him yesterday in the Jefferson Market Court.

One of the scenes to which objection is taken is that in which a negro chases a white girl over a cliff, and the other is that of a mulatto politician who tries to force marriage on the daughter of his benefactor.

VARIETY
New York City
APR 2 1915

"NATION" SCENES OUT.

After listening to strong talk objecting to some of the scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" made by 500 negroes and a number of whites interested in the uplift of the negro race, Mayor John Purroy Mitchel Tuesday announced that the "scenes" in question would be eliminated in the future.

Two scenes were pointed out as particularly offensive to the negroes—one where the "Little Sister" flees from the renegade negro and finally kills herself by jumping from a cliff, and another where Silas Lynch, the mulatto lieutenant-governor, attempts to attack the daughter of his benefactor. These are the ones the Mayor promised would be taken out of the Liberty production.

"The New Gove[illegible] feature film at the Hippodr[illegible] which is be[illegible]

TRUE THO[illegible] Say

ANTI-NEGRO [illegible] OWNERS FORC[illegible] TO CUT 2 SCEN[illegible]

Mayor Mitchel [illegible] Prominent Obje[illegible] That Parts [illegible] Up Race [illegible] Are Elimina[illegible]

Victory came to the [illegible] ciation for the Ad[illegible] Colored People in [illegible] ducers of the "[illegible] film. It wa[illegible] nounce[illegible] lars[illegible] ter[illegible] ve you det[illegible] of [illegible] all over my [illegible] to shade [illegible] ful presen[illegible] tion." [illegible] pictur[illegible] ore the [illegible] eed to [illegible] yesterday noon. [illegible]

After a number of stro[illegible] were made, the executiv[illegible] that following the adva[illegible] ment of the hearing, he [illegible] play in question and ha[illegible] with its producers. As a [illegible] said, the owners volunte[illegible] move two scenes in the [illegible] which had been the parti[illegible] of the severe criticism.

Court Proceedings Postpone[illegible]

The injunction hearing w[illegible] been set for yesterday afte[illegible] Jefferson Market Police C[illegible] postponed to Thursday n[illegible] 10:30 o'clock. Miss Nern[illegible] yesterday afternoon that [illegible] the signal victory brough[illegible] Mayor Mitchel's action, [illegible] decided to withdraw th[illegible] ceedings entirely.

"I will have to see t[illegible] however," she said, "and [illegible] that the objectional scenes [illegible] been eliminated."

The delegation that calle[illegible] Mitchel was headed by [illegible] Spingarn, chairman o[illegible] association. He intr[illegible] lowing speakers in th[illegible] Frederick C. Howe, co[illegible] National Board of Ce[illegible] William H. Brooks, col[illegible] St. Mark's M. E. Churc[illegible] sented the colored cler[illegible] lian B. Wald, secretary [illegible] Street Settlement, who [illegible] the social workers and [illegible] for white w[illegible]n; Dr. [illegible] colored, editor of the [illegible] Stephen S. Wise, re[illegible] white clergy; Frederi[illegible] colored, editor of the [illegible] representing the colore[illegible] Widecan, of the Bro[illegible] Club, and Oswald Villar[illegible] the New York Evenin[illegible] senting the press.

Present Three Objectio[illegible]

The various speakers [illegible] three primary objections [illegible] entation of the film: [illegible] caricatured the colored r[illegible] ing only the lowest ty[illegible] and ignoring the go[illegible] could be done to the [illegible] any race; second, th[illegible] the film might verybut [illegible] people to race rioting [illegible] its whole tendency [illegible] natred.

Rabbi Wise p[illegible] war in Europe [illegible] race hatred. He a[illegible] of the film in qu[illegible] all the evil clem[illegible] that existed at [illegible] that ought to be [illegible] now.

Other speakers recalled [illegible] race disturbances that o[illegible] Philadelphia four years ag[illegible] rect result of the presen[illegible] "The Clansman," the play b[illegible] Thomas Dixon's novel of th[illegible] which is also the origin of [illegible] ent film.

The association has been [illegible] its protests for weeks to var[illegible] of the city government. [illegible] sioner Woods has been app[illegible] the Council and the Mayor [illegible] informed of its objections [illegible] Mitchel's action yesterday i[illegible] a complete victory.

Censor Had Not Approved [illegible]

The two scenes climi[illegible] request are respectively [illegible] which a colored man is [illegible] suing a white girl wit[illegible] and one showing a m[illegible] forcing the daughter [illegible] benefactor to marry hi[illegible]

Mr. Howe, chairma[illegible] of Censorship, asser[illegible] not approved of [illegible]

K MAYOR TO STOP BIRTH OF A NATION

Negroes And Their Frie Call Production "Cruel and Untrue."

SCENE TO BE TONED DOWN

Violent objection to certain features the moving picture spectacle "The a Nation" was made by many both white and negro, in a ore Mayor Mitchel in the stimate room at City Hall he Mayor replied that he e play himself and had icense Commissioner Bell that were deemed objec- hint from Mr. Bell the reed to tone down some which called upon the the hearing room rep- tional Association for nt of Colored People. told a story of Rev. d, vice-president of the Ku Klux Klan viol that the production was wing the Civil Wa al and unjust," and tion as a student the film, Miss Ad some of the incide in her condemna figure are not true

"The produ owe, Commissioner the principle at his port, is chairman nal Boar of Moving p. He said: ld find round of my protest is ts 10,000,000 citizens by it. One-half de the other half port a lustful and degrad his portrayal is cruel, "It t ntr ue." hement was Rabbi St said: true that the Mayor to stop this indescribal some libel on a race of them it is true that gove down. The board of allowed this exhibition to e worse and I regret th even remotely connecte board. The negroes of th seen patient. They have n to protest as did the Irish ked "The Playboy of the W

"Old," which was really a beau if I did not know that Th upon whose novel "The C this moving picture play is b apable of this infamy I would that he had been hired to ook to stir up race prejudi that production, Mr. Mayo render a great and the people of this cour an D. Wald told the It is impossible to measure the dangers that threaten actual eviction is allowed to go on the negro speakers, Edward R. editor of the New York Age, for fairness to his race.

FILM PLAY CAUSES PROTEST TO MAYOR

Delegation Learns "Birth of a Nation" Is Now Changed.

Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Stephen Wise, Immigration Commissioner Frederic C. Howe, Joel E. Spingarn and other citizens appeared to-day before Mayor Mitchel to voice the sentiments of a number of prominent negroes in their protest against the continuance of some objectionable scenes in "The Birth of a Nation," the monster moving picture production of Tom Dixon's "Clansman," now running at the Liberty Theatre in this city.

Among the negro leaders of the crowd of about five hundred who went before the Mayor were E. B. DuBois, Fred R. Moore, ex-Collector of Internal Revenue Charles W. Anderson, the Rev. H. C. Bishop, the Rev. W. H. Brooks and President George E. Wibecan of the Citizens' Club.

All the speakers told the Mayor in substance that they thought the play as produced on the screen was bad in spots, just as bad as "The Leopard Spots," which preceded the original "Clansman."

The Mayor listened to all of the spokesmen and then told them that he himself had seen the films and had come to similar conclusions with reference to some of the scenes and without exercising any authority in the matter had already suggested to the management that two scenes be eliminated. The management acquiesced with his views in the matter and told him that beginning to-day the objectionable scenes would no longer appear. The delegation thereupon departed in a pleasant frame of mind.

Mar. 31- 1915
The World

MAY TONE DOWN PART OF ANTI-NEGRO FILM

Owners Have Made Promise, Mayor Tells Big Protesting Body That Calls on Him.

Mayor Mitchel yesterday received a delegation of negroes and their friends, who made formal protest against "The Birth of a Nation," the film version of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." The Mayor told his visitors that the owners of the show had promised Commissioner of Licenses Bell to elide two of the scenes to which there has been most objection.

At the Liberty Theatre it was said last night that no final agreement had been reached. A further conference is to be held this afternoon, at which the "toning down" of the scenes will be discussed. Elimination of even the scene which portrays a negro in pursuit of a white girl is not to be conceded, it was asserted at the theatre.

Commissioner of Immigration Frederic C. Howe, who is Chairman of the National Board of Censorship; Oswald G. Villard, Miss Lillian D. Wald, F. R. Moore, editor of the New York Age, and the Rev. S. S. Wise led in the protest against the depiction of the negro in the film. They called it degrading, historically untrue and likely to provoke disorder.

"All we ask is a fair chance," said Mr. Moore, who is a negro. "We never had a man among us who fired on a President of the United States. We never had a man who attempted to assassinate a Mayor of this city. In the thirty years of our freedom we have amassed $900,000,000, and we pay taxes on $7,000,000 in this city. We have thirty-seven registered physicians and thirty-five lawyers. If we were beasts we could not have accomplished all these things."

The Mayor told his 500 visitors that he questioned his right to interfere with the film, but that its owners had promised to take action.

MAYOR BAR BRUTE AS NEGRO ON FILM

Censures Photoplay of the "Clansman" After Big Protest Meeting.

Mayor Mitchel yesterday gave a hearing to 500 negroes and their friends who objected to certain features in "The Birth of a Nation," the photo play version of Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," now being presented at the Liberty Theatre. The fact that the management had voluntarily deleted the scenes objected to was not permitted to prevent the negroes and their friends expressing their opinion of the scenes and of the author.

The scenes objected to were two—one portraying the flight of a white girl from a negro, whom she escapes by throwing herself over a cliff, and another where a negro lieutenant governor attempts to attack the daughter of his benefactor.

One way or another the press agents of the company producing the film have made much of these scenes and discussion as to their fitness or lack of it has not been discouraged, even in Atlanta, where some of the pictures were taken. The objection to them was that they portrayed the negro as a brute and were calculated to engender race prejudice.

Frederic C. Howe, the first speaker, objected to the play as a whole as crude, vindictive and untrue, with one-half of the play devoted to war and the other half to picturing the negro as depraved. The production, he said, was an outrage upon 10,000,000 Americans who could make no protest because they have no voice in the affairs of the nation.

The Rev. Dr. William H. Bowles objected to the play as untrue. "If," said he, "the scenes were true, I'd hate my own race."

Rabbi Wise denounced the board of censors for allowing such a film to be produced, and the producers as "contemptible cowards." He congratulated the negroes of New York upon having been more patient than the Irish, "who attacked 'The Playboy of the Western World.'" If he did not know Thomas Dixon to be capable of such infamy he said he would have been forced to believe he was hired to write the book to stir up race prejudice.

"Improper, immoral and unjust," was the way Oswald G. Villard described the production. Miss Lillian D. Wald, of the Henry Street Settlement, indorsed what Mr. Villard said.

Fred R. Moore, editor of "The New York Age," appealed to the Mayor for fair play to his race.

Mayor Mitchel made all hands happy by announcing that the objectionable scenes would be presented no more in this city.

Tribune, April 1-15

Breeds Race Prejudice.

To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: There are thousands of honest, serious colored citizens working night and day to build up and preserve the amity and comity between the whites and blacks in the City of New York; and we do feel that the film play "The Birth of a Nation," especially the second half of it, unjustly imposes upon our city, as well as our people, a revival of the hatred and race prejudices of the reconstruction period.

The play is not only an affront to a large minority opinion, but it is malicious, because it falsely depicts more than ten million people as a race of rapists; and in this particular it tends toward the breach of the peace which the sound public policy of our city should not condone. JOHN M. ROYALL.

New York, March 20, 1915.

TELEGRAPH. Mar. 31-15

MAYOR HEARS FILM PROTEST

Listens to Committee and Others Who Think "Birth of a Nation" Should Be Stopped.

ALTERATIONS MADE, HE SAYS

Managers Have Already Cut Out Many So-Called Objectionable Features, He Says.

Mayor Mitchel yesterday heard protests from over five hundred representatives of the negro population of the city and Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Stephen Wise and Frederic C. Howe, who supported the arguments of the negroes, against "The Birth of a Nation," the motion picture in which the negroes allege they are portrayed as beasts. Mayor Mitchel, before the hearing closed, made the delegation happy by telling them that the managers of the moving picture show had promised to cut out the objectionable features.

There had been some suggestions made that the Mayor had no power to stop the show, and Rabbi Wise declared in his argument that if that was true the Mayor had no power to stop a libel on a race of human people.

"The Board of Censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse, and I regret that my name is even remotely connected as a member of such a board. The negroes in this city have been patient. They have not yet arisen to protest like the Irish, who attacked the production of "The Playboy of the Western World." The Irish saw the playboy as a caricature, not as a characterization.

"Stop this production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great service to the people of this country."

Mr. Villard, the vice president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, declared that the production was improper, immoral and unjust.

"I'll stake whatever reputation I have as a historical student," said Mr. Villard, "on my charges against this film play. The lugging in of the negro into this exhibition is needless and uncalled for, and the play would be improved upon in every respect if the objectionable scenes were taken out."

Mr. Howe said that he was at the meeting as a citizen, and that the ground of his protest was that the play affected ten million citizens who were degraded by the production. The speaker declared that one-half of the play dealt with war and the other half portrayed the negro as a degraded creature.

Tribune

APR 2 1915

NEGRO FILM PLAY UNFIT, MAYOR SAYS

Managers Protest, but Mitchel Insists That Race Appeal Features Be Elided.

Because the manager of the Liberty Theatre has been informed by Commissioner Bell of the License Department that he was not satisfied with the elisions that had been made in the moving picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," which deals with the negro race problem, a delegation called on Mayor Mitchel yesterday to protest against any further cuts. It included D. W. Grimth, who put the play in picture form; Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," the original play, and Martin W. Littleton, counsel for the theatre managers.

"My mind is quite free," said the Mayor at the end of the hearing. "I have seen the play. If it were, as you suggest, merely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites, it might be a different question. But there are two scenes that go further and appeal to race prejudice. I feel that these scenes ought to be modified."

The Mayor suggested that Commissioner Bell and Deputy Commissioner Kaufmann might see the play again, and then come to an agreement about further cuts.

"From its misleading title to its sacreligious ending it is an offense to the decent people of this community, and a gratuitous insult to our law-abiding and self-respecting colored citizens," wrote Miss Rosalie N. Jones, the suffragist, to the Mayor, and added she wished to "protest both as a Southern woman and a citizen of New York." Accompanying the letter was a protest against the play from fifty well known suffragists.

Magistrate M made, in t on Ma yesterday earing

EGRO PROTEST HANGES PLAY

Informs Committee That ionable Scenes in "The a Nation" Have Been Eliminated.

"spectacular moving pic- e B'rth of a Nation" ed down, Mayor Mitchel was y informed to-day that the population of New York is y to tone it down. The threat of was freely made by a couple of akers who formed part of a com- ittee which visited the mayor at ty Hall to-day to protest agai e production of the photo play, hich was built from the book of homas E. Dixon called "The Clans n."

There are two scenes in the play which especial objections are made. e is the scene where a white girl her mother, after being attacked negro, leap to their death over The other portrays the rela- etween a mulatto and a white, o was composed of Os- of the Evening Frederick C. Immigration, ist Side set- atives from n and who made up the in the heat of the mes oto-play "Birth" kes, just as did the m n to them that simply contending moved while playing in that city picture h raised quite the country negroes did

Appleman, Mar. 31-1915

00 in Race Protest to Mayor Against Movie more than 500 representatives of the race protested at City Hall against the moving picture Birth of a N portra

EVENING POST
Chicago, Ill.

APR 3 1915

Race Hatred.

CHICAGO, April 2.—To the Editor of THE POST. Sir: It is rumored, and printed notice in one of the Chicago dailies confirms the report, that a leading theater in the city has engaged the film production of "The Birth of a Nation," as a summer attraction. This play is founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," a work so plainly inspired by race hatred that it has been strongly condemned by the best minds North and South. The dramatic production was forbidden years ago in many southern cities, and was lately withdrawn from a New York stage. Surely, Chicago should not show less concern in such a matter than other communities. Every consideration, artistic and humane, should forbid a daily exhibit on the stage of a pla before Magistrate tive is to arouse the Jefferson Market Court of people against an was adjourned by agree the attorneys of both Wednesday afternoon colored folks in th es out of for ten under the of dollars ands. His ly all with intellect standing. been the his con- ed always In Collec- complicat- venue meas corpora' te

March

APR 8 1915

...ay ... Mass., ... Prominent ... of Boston, including Mr. Francis ... and the Rev. Horace Bum... sent a resolution to Mayor ... that the exhibition of the ... "The Birth of a Nation," at ... Theatre, ... April 10, ... on the ground that it en... race hatred and is a libel on the ...

SUN

CATHOLIC

Syracuse, N. Y.

APR 2 - 1915

The much-heralded film, "The Birth of a Nation," is being severely censured. Its effect on the negroes of the South is feared and, indeed, it would be more than likely to offend the white people who live below the Mason and Dixon line. "Uncle Tom's Cabin" receives a frozen reception in these latitudes even when the weather and all other things are propitious. While Old Glory is universally loved, the scenes of the past are too filled with heartches for the South to welcome these caustic memories of her antebellum ...

EVENING TELEGRAM

Philadelphia, Pa.

APR 5 - 1915

Offensive Prejudice

"The Birth of a Nation" is a moving picture based upon the novel of a notorious hater of the colored race. Its production in New York has provoked an outburst of censure from all friends of truth and justice. If the picture is suppressed it will be on the grounds set forth by the New York World, that "no race is fairly judged by holding up as types its most degraded specimens. Every race has the right to be judged by its patient, toiling, useful average and by its best."

PHILADELPHIA, (Pa.) TELEGRAPH

Date APR 5 1915

Offensive Prejudice

"The Birth of a Nation" is a moving ... based upon the novel of a no... ...ator of the colored race. Its production in New York has provoked an outburst of censure from all friends of truth and justice. If the picture is suppressed it will be on the grounds ... by the New York World, that "no race is fairly judged by holding up as types its most degraded specimens. Every race has the right to be judged by its patient, toiling, useful average and by its best."

POST STANDARD

Syracuse, N. Y.

APR 5 - 1915

Two Negro Movies.

To the Editor of The Post-Standard:

The day of films ... in its course now ... introduced two movie dramas, "The Birth of a Nation" and "The Nigger," ... which holds the Negro up to scorn and ridicule. Fair-minded and unprejudiced persons are agreed that the exhibition of these films will not ... a tendency to ... about a better feeling between the ... but on the other hand will stir up ... of bitterness and hatred on the ... of the white ... colored people ... grateful to Mayor ... and Commissioner Hancock for the ... of the play show ... them in p... ...tion of ... suggestions ... the dri... ...ro has ... ...able cri... by to ... by ... to ... ...tured in ... matters of ... has ... from ... tective ...

RECORD HERALD

Chicago, Ill.

APR 6 1915

"THE CLANSMAN."

Chicago April 1.—To the Editor: It is rumored, and printed notice in one of the Chicago dailies confirms the report, that a leading theater in the city has engaged the film production of "The Birth of a Nation" as a summer attraction. This play is founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," a work so plainly inspired by race hatred that it has been strongly condemned by the best minds North and South.

The dramatic production was forbidden years ago in many southern cities, and was lately withdrawn from a New York stage. Surely Chicago should not show less concern in such a matter than other communities. Every consideration, artistic and humane, should forbid a daily exhibit on the stage of a play whose sole motive is to arouse the hatred of one class of people against another.

CELIA PARKER WOOLLEY.

World, APR 5 1915

THE PEOPLE'S FORUM.

Police in the Wrong Place.

To the Editor of The World:

Having read of the extra police reserves of fifty men which Commissioner Woods is to place in Harlem Monday, I am voicing the sentiment of the Seabury Club when I state that it is money and time misspent. Where you need to place that extra force of men is among the whites.

Whether Johnson wins or loses, we will take the same attitude that we have taken in reference to "The Birth of a Nation"—apply to the law and appeal for the "justice" which we hope to find in the white man.

LOUISE E. JETER,
Secretary of Seabury Club.

New York, April 3.

World APR 6 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

"The Offspring of Callous Greed."

To the Editor of The World:

I returned home mortified and disgusted after witnessing a performance of "The Birth of a Nation." Mortified to think that any one could so heartlessly lampoon and insult our colored fellow-citizens and disgusted at the Board of Censors for not more emphatically condemning this dangerous and libellous production.

The play is a menace to the continuance of the existing friendly relations between the two races. It seems to be the offspring of callous greed and should be suppressed. VETERAN.

New York, April 3.

Race Prejudice in Moving Pictures.

To the Editor of The World:

Please accept thanks and our full measure of appreciation for the able and timely editorial "A Race Outraged" in the issue of The World of Saturday, March 27.

We feel that the uncompromising stand your great paper took in behalf of a sound public policy for the City of New York was a great contributing cause in having Mayor Mitchel consider the evil and unjust influences the obnoxious films of "The Birth of a Nation" would exert upon the peaceful and friendly relations between the whites and blacks of our city.

UNITED CIVIC LEAGUE,
JOHN M. ROYALL, President.

New York, April 1.

The Globe APR 6 1915

Race Prejudice Denounced.

Editor of The Globe: Sir—The chief reason for visiting the film picture play "The Birth of a Nation" is to see to what depths of infamy the lust for money can bring men. Probably some Negroes were guilty of some of the crimes depicted in that play. But to utilize the public interest in war to attempt to arouse hatred of Negroes now for crimes only a few were guilty of fifty years ago is as contemptible as to blame the Jews of to-day for the crucifixion of Christ. This latter is done chiefly by "Christians" who are daily dishonoring Christ in their lives.

It is particularly unjust that this play should be presented in a state whose legislature at the very time is repealing needed legislation to protect women and children in factories and canneries! Considering their relative training and opportunity, the "progressive" Republican leaders in this state are committing worse crimes this year than the Negro did in their ignorance a quarter century ago.

If the law doesn't permit the ... to cut out parts of this play, ... making money out of it should ... by decent people, and The Globe would render a public service if ... publish under the caption "The Messages" the names of the Na... Board who approved the ... BENJAMIN C. MARSH.

APR 9 1915

TRIBUNE

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

To the Editor of The Evening Mail:

Sir—"The Birth of a Nation," the photo-drama at the ... Theatre, is doing much to create the wrong impression of the negro. What could be a beautiful photo-drama, educative, inspiring, instructive, as well as entertaining, is marred by the injection of hideous scenes which greatly distort and twist facts as they relate to the negro.

The reconstruction period is grossly misrepresented, and the negro is greatly caricatured and wronged. Negro legislators are unfairly presented, and made to present a bill favoring intermarriage, which is a falsehood, for during no period of the negro's contact in the national legislature has any such measure been presented. On the other hand, such men as B. K. Bruce, Hyram Revells, John Mercer Langston, John R. Lynch and George H. White were types of negro representatives during reconstruction who were a distinct credit to the nation and the negro.

Then there is another scene, purporting to overemphasize "the usual crime." I wondered what would be the impression of the white people of the morals of the negro men as they gazed on this hideous picture, and if it was not possible for the wrong impression to be gained. No one can be proud of his country to see and witness such a distortion of historical facts.

CLEVELAND G. ALLEN.

The Globe, APR 6 1915

CAPITALIZING RACE HATRED.

In view of the splendors of national reunion what should be the attitude of every right-minded person toward attempts to revive the passions of the civil war period, relight the fires of sectionalism, and intensify race prejudices that are unhappily still much alive? The questions sufficiently answer themselves, and when they are answered there is no reason to ask the further question of whether it is desirable, for purely sordid reasons, to exhibit such a moving picture film as the so-called "The Birth of a Nation."

Few of us are competent to pass judgment with respect to the tangled facts of the reconstruction period. A fair and impartial narrative has never been written and probably never will be. But certain big facts shine out in the confusion. One is that never in human history did a victor show more consideration for the defeated. Men but lately in arms were restored to full citizenship, states in rebellion were received back in the sisterhood of the states. Let us rejoice that the Stonemans of Washington were magnanimous, but let us not dishonor ourselves by calling in question their great merit by presenting them as the paramours of quadroon mistresses, moved by petty spite. It is insulting to every man of southern birth to assume that he is pleased by misrepresentation so colossal.

Another big fact of the reconstruction period is that the 4,000,000 former slaves, suddenly emancipated but with no way of earning their livelihood except by working at small wages for their former masters, displayed, all things considered, the most exemplary patience. They had protected the women and children on the plantations while the struggle went on which was to decide whether they were to become men or to remain as chattels, and the great body of them continued to exhibit, under the most trying circumstances, docility and kindliness. To present the members of the race as women chasers and foul fiends is a cruel distortion of history. Bad things occurred, but what man will say that the outrages of black on white equalled in number the outrages of white on black? Which race even to the present day has the better right to complain of the unfairness and brutality of the other?

The very name of "The Birth of a Nation" is an insult to Washington, who believed that a nation, not merely a congeries of independent states, was born during the common struggles of the Revolutionary War, and devoted himself to cementing the union. It is an insult to Lincoln and the great motives inspiring him when he was called on to resist the attempt to denationalize a nation. This nation of ours was not born between 1861 and 1865, and no one will profit from trying to pervert history.

White men in this country have never been just to black men. We tore them from Africa and brought them over as slaves. For generations they toiled without recompense that their white owners might have unearned wealth and ape the ways of aristocracy. The nation finally freed them, but has but slightly protected them in the enjoyment of the legitimate fruits of their freedom. We nominally gave them the vote, but looked on inactive when the right was invaded. We do not, in any state of the Union, grant to the Negro economic and political economy. No white man of proper feeling can be proud of the record. The wonder is that the Negro is as good as he is. Then to the injury is added slander. To make a few dirty dollars men are willing to pander to depraved tastes and to foment a race antipathy that is the most sinister and dangerous feature of American life.

Houston Texas Chronicle
Apr. 5-1915

... of the board of censors is ... to prosperity among picture ... Whitness "Bachelor" and ... Griffith's "Birth of a World." ...

Say ...

TRUE THO...

Mr. Roeliter Johnson on a ... Fictionist.

To the Editor of The Su... have been very much interest... lowing the discussion of the ... demerits of Mr. Dixon's play, ... of a Nation." When his book ... "The Clansman," on which th... is partly founded, was publi... 1905), it fell to me to review ... Criterion Magazine. Will you a... to quote from that review, wh... bents some points that are not ... ally understood?

It is evident that the author ... this book to be read as history. ... the light of history it must be ... His purpose is to shew the wick... the reconstruction acts of Congr... the civil war. It is a remark... that no one who tells the stor... construction or discusses it appe... to begin at the beginning. [I am ... accused some of our best know... ans of this.] The reason for ... struction laws is always ignor... cealed. President Johnson app... visional Governors of the rec... lious States, and instruc... conventions to reestablish ... ernments. The Legislatu... proceeded at once to ... were designed to return ... dition of slavery the co... had been freed by ... proclamation. One law ... mony of colored witn... in any suit where a w... cerned. The term "... sented with such a wi... made it easy to arrest ... colored persons and ... labor as "apprentices ... "former owner" was ... ence in securing the ...

Some of the laws ... to have firearms of ... of Louisiana, freedm... tracts in the first ... which would bind th... and they must pay ... of the implements th... injury or death of ... sissippi no colored ... to lease any land o... an incorporated town ... Carolina no colored ... to pursue any tra... own account with... fee for the license ... no license was re... In the ... e. State ... on colored women, ... women.

It was the enactment ... in every one of the ... showing a determinati... cipation, that caused ... ride President Johnson ... a different plan of ... Dixon would have us ... struction laws were sim... of a fiendish spirit of ... the name of Austin Sto... a hideous travesty of hi... intends the reader to ... of Thaddeus Stevens, wh... as the supreme ... Grant's administration.

By the way, Mr. Steve... before Grant became Presi... the organization of the ... the climax of his story, an... being necessary to protect ... white women. The truth is ... nor until years afterward wa... indication or complaint that ... were in danger. Mr. Dixon ma... sweep while he is about it—h... word for Lincoln's assassin, ... silly story of Mrs. Surratt's inno... pictures the Northerners as po... of all malice and vindictiv... makes his hero, an ex-Confeder... say with equal grammar and ... Yankees know who to fool wit... them too many times for them... me any more." We could say ... of this book's deformities as ... art, but it is hardly worth wh...

I observe the announceme... Dixon has offered a reward ... any proof that his work is ... cally accurate. If this let... eye, and he is candid eno... indisputable facts, he need ... money to me. He ... deserving charity, and ... of that charity to pub... in THE SUN. I can f... errors by any one; but ... tience with any Americ... romancer who ... can history.

New Yor...

Syracuse ... Apr ...

...ing the school doors wi... ...e schools should be kept ... of immorality and the ... kept cleansed by a co... education.

...ed the co-operat...

PRESS

negroes and stirs up ...

Frederic Howe, ex... now commissioner of ... refused, as chairman ... tional board of film c... prove of the film.

Mayor Mitchel ... the owners of th... ised to cut out ...

F. R. Moore, mat... New York ...

THE MOVING WORLD

A REVIEW OF NEW AND IMPORTANT MOTION PICTURES

THE PROGRESS OF THE MOTION PICTURE

A year ago this week, when we started this department for the criticism of motion pictures, we exprest the opinion in an editorial on "The Birth of a New Art" that the motion picture already ranked with printing in the scope of its influence and that it possest possibilities of artistic development which would enable it in some respects to surpass painting and stage drama. Some of our readers were inclined to scoff at the mere suggestion that the new art could in any way rival the older. But during the past year the motion picture has developed so rapidly in beauty and freedom as to leave no room for doubt of its artistic capabilities.

The crude test of the box office is alone sufficient to show that. A few years ago the moving-picture show was thought of as something to while away a half hour of spare time. It was a scientific curiosity and well worth a nickel, even a dime, to see a diver jumping off a spring-board, a train rushing by, a fire-engine dashing forward or a lot of funny folk chasing a small boy. But this winter we have seen a line of people stretching from the box office into the street waiting for a chance to pay one or two dollars for a modern photo drama, while Broadway stars in the theater next door were playing to half-empty houses at the same price. These crowds are not drawn by novelty or by scientific interest, they are not tricked into coming by advertising; they have compared the motion picture with the melodrama, the problem play or the musical comedy as an evening's entertainment and prefer it.

The reason for their preference is obvious and not unreasonable. The film play, compared with its rival, the stage play, has certain serious defects, notably the absence of sound and color. But, on the other hand, it has certain compensating qualities of its own and producers are very wisely laying more stress on these instead of imitating what the stage can always do better. For instance, the film playwright can use all outdoors for his background instead of a painted and rumpled backdrop. He can change the scene oftener than the Elizabethan dramatist. He can dip into the future or the past as tho he were in Wells's time-machine. He can use literally an army of supernumeraries in place of a dozen attendants with spears. He can reveal the mind of his characters in two ways, neither of them possible on the stage, first by bringing the actor so close that the spectator can read his facial expression, and, second, by visualizing his memories or imaginings. He can, if he so desires, wreck a train, burn a house, sink a ship or blow up a fort, since he does not have to repeat the expense every night.

It is natural that the new art should tend to run to excess in those things which it can do best. The film artist is so tickled at the idea that he can portray motion that he is apt to put in too much motion. He keeps his actors on the jump and the projector makes it worse by turning the crank so fast that the characters flicker past like fence posts seen from a trolley car. He crowds in masses of people in meaningless movement. He flashes back and forward and all about until the spectator does not know "where he is at." He employs a sensational catastrophe as a substitute for a logical plot.

But these are the inevitable extravagances of youth and are already being eliminated in the best of the feature films. The motion picture has established itself and in some form or other will become a permanent part of the intellectual and esthetic life of the nation.

DRAMATIZED RACE PREJUDICE

It is a great pity that good photography and fine mass action should be wasted and worse than wasted on such a theme as that of The Birth of a Nation. Mr. D. W. Griffith has surpassed himself as a producer and some of the scenes are as striking as any that have ever been filmed. Sherman's march to the sea and Pickett's charge at Gettysburg are shown "as large as life" and the assassination of Lincoln is presented with a careful attention to detail that gives it a real historic interest.

But all this is subordinated to the immoral lesson which the play is designed to teach, that the negro is ever a savage and must not under any circumstances be allowed to vote or to rise from a servile or subordinate position. The Rev. Thomas Dixon's Clansman supplies the plot, but the filmed play is much worse than the book because seeing a thing is more impressive than being told about it. The grotesque excesses of the Reconstruction Period are made the most of and twice in the course of the evening the struggles of a white girl to escape from a black brute are presented at agonizing length. By an ingenious sequence of scenes the audience is led to applaud the Ku Klux Klan whenever it appears, even where it drives the negroes from the polls. Music lends insidious aid to emphasize the teaching of the screen, for the tom-tom beats from time to time to convince us that the colored man, well drest and educated tho he may be, came from Africa. Why is not some Asiatic instrument used to remind us that the Aryan came from the wrong side of the Caucasus?

Such a play, insulting as it is to a large part of our population and arousing the worst sentiments in the rest, is, in our opinion, vastly more dangerous in its influence than the obscenity or lessons in practical burglary which are now quite rightly ruled out. Still we do not hold with those who are trying to get it suppresst by law or the censorship. We do not see by what reason the voluntary Board of Censorship required the elimination of the legend: "Having profited by the trade and having no use for slaves themselves, the traders of the Seventeenth Century became the Abolitionists of the Nineteenth." This is a monstrous perversion of history, but supposing it is, Mr. Dixon and Mr. Griffith apparently believe it, and if so we cannot deny them the right to express their opinion in their own impressive way, as we express ours in the feebler medium of cold type. Still more dangerous than such a play would be to have the American people put into the hands of any officials the power to decide what is good history and bad, and to suppress any films that they regard as likely to have an injurious influence on public sentiment. Before long perhaps some reformer will write a scenario attacking some established institution of the modern world, as Uncle Tom's Cabin attacked slavery and it would be unfortunate then to have the suppression of The Birth of a Nation to appeal to as a precedent for similar action.

MAYOR TO ...

"The Birth of a Nation."

To the Editor of The Tribune.

Sir: This is the fourth week of "The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre, and although there has been a general wave of protest on the part of the negro of this city to the Mayor to remove the play or to modify it, the officials of this city have turned a deaf ear to his pleas. In company with a delegation of my race I visited the theatre where the pictures are showing a few evenings ago. For the first time I was ashamed of being called an American, as I saw a display of deep-seated race prejudice hidden behind masterful strategy and sophistry. I saw the Reconstruction period distorted, blasted and twisted out of proportion and negro legislators grossly caricatured and made to do things that have never been known in connection with their activity in the national legislature. For instance, a negro legislator is made to present a bill favoring intermarriage, which is a base falsehood, for at no time during the negro's stay in Congress and the Senate has any negro representative introduced any such measure. On the other hand, the negro Congressmen and Senators during Reconstruction were an able and capable body of men, who reflected credit on their communities. Such as B. K. Bruce, Hyram Revell, John ...er Langston, John R. Lynch and George White were types of negro representa... who were a distinct honor to their coun... Then came another scene, revolting, dis...g, irritating and inflammable. Here big colored man, with a beastlike ex... on, chasing a little girl to her death. I ... on this picture and wondered what ...e the impression of the white people ... audience of the moral status of the ... I then thought of "Uncle Tom's ... by Harriet Beecher Stowe, and her ...on of the many beautiful traits of the ...aves, and wondered which account I ...believe. The whole play is designed ...p race prejudice. I left the theatre ...g what point could be made in dis... ...cts. CLEVELAND G. ALLEN.

...ork, March 27, 1915.

Globe APR 7 1915

"Birth of a Nation."

The Globe, Sir—Will you be ...ous enough to allow me a few ... to pr...n your editorial in The Globe ...ked "... ...h inst., entitled "Capitalizing ...id,." ... ...tred"?

...t out to prove that white men ... Birth of a Nation" are slander... ... Negroes. May it not be just ... that you, in your editorial, are ...ing white men?

...rikes me, sir, that not a one of ...rges you bring against the great ...ay is true.

...not trying to "relight the fire of ...ilism." To claim that such is ...e is a monstrous perversion of ...th. On the contrary, the play, so ... the north and south are con..., is beautifully fraternal and end... a complete and glorious welding ...her of the once discordant sections. ... is not in any way or to any extent "insult to Lincoln." On the other ...d, the compliment given the martyr ...sident by the play is as hearty as it ... magnificent. Instead of trying to be...ttle the great president, it makes him ...loom in patience, love, and all moral ...grandeur as a giant among Lilliputians.

The play does not represent the mem...bers of the Negro race as "foul fiends." ...t only represents some of them as such. ...here are as many good Negroes in the ...lay as there are bad ones, and the ...eartiest applause among the auditors is ...licited by the faithfulness and rock...ibbed devotion of members of the Af...rican race.

After saying that the "very name of ...he Birth of a Nation' is an insult to ...ashington," you make the statement ...t "this nation of ours was not born ...ween 1861 and 1865, and no one will ...it by trying to pervert history."

...t, my dear sir, the fact remains that ...nation was, in the only high and ...sense, born between 1861 and 1865. ...e 1861-65 the nation existed but in ... "Union" being merely a paper ... the constitution not worth ...ment upon which it was writ... by the agony and blood of the ...he elimination of the great dis...element, slavery, and by the ...munication of north and south ...r reunion upon the higher level ... nation was born.

...my dear sir, it is the story of ...s was done that the great photo...rying to tell. And as such it is ...st and most effective educator ...country has ever seen.

...with the "ten years of hell," ...Reconstruction, it shows how ...the failure of the ...akers who ...ns of the Thaddeus Stev... ...o make the white ...the slaves of their former ...to blot out for all time ...civilization in the south... ...it a crime to do that?

...rth of a Nation" is as true ...as the old Crusader's ...he Master's Sepulchre. And can ...ge history?

...V. THOMAS B. GREGORY

...April 7.

...e is the scene where a white girl ...her mother, after being attacked ...negro, leap to their death over ... The other portrays the rela...etween a mulatto and a white ...e was composed of Os... ...of the Evening ...h, Frederick C. ...Immigration; ...st Side set... ...atives from ...nion and ...of the ...

...Blame ro... ...th was ...who made up the ... ...t in the heat of the times ...kes, just as did the ... ...own to them that ... simply contending th... ...moved while playing in that ... ...picture ... raised quite ... ...the country a... ...negroes ... ...did ...

Globe, April 6, 1915

A RACE OUTRAGED

If there still are people in the north who do not know that the reconstruction policy after the civil war was a terrible blunder, a picture play impressing that fact might do some good and need do no harm. When such a production outrageously assails 10,000,000 people, the harm outweighs any possible advantage.

The play made out of Dixon's "Clansman" does not exalt southern chivalry at the expense of northern manhood; it upholds the Union One and Inseparable; it shows Lincoln in April, 1865, as the best friend of the south; it does not, for it could not, exaggerate the antics of the black legislature of South Carolina; it is sumptuously and ably produced.

Beyond this is irreparable wrong. To hint that carpet-baggers bedevilled the south only because a mythical Mr. "Stoneman," easily recognized through his thin disguise, had a quadroon mistress, merely gratifies the taste for silly paradoxes that trace momentous events to trivial causes. The crowning sin is the sensational exploitation of a crime which is probably less common in the south than in the north and which was certainly not first heard of in 1867.

Has the black no case? Let the "movies" show him torn from his jungle village; battened down in a storm at sea in a slaver's 'tween decks three feet high; dragged out insensible when the wind falls, his stifled mates fed to the sharks; bearing unrequited toil and the overseer's lash; even his freedom made a curse to him and others by knavish whites; yet still doing the menial toil of the south, a humble but mighty agent of the south's prosperity. Does that ...y and guil...

MILWAUKEE (WIS.) FREE PRESS
APRIL 9, 1915

CALL
New York City
APR 6 1915

ANTI-NEGRO FILM STILL HAS OBJECTIONABLE PARTS

"Birth of a Nation" Owners Fail to Eliminate Two Scenes.

Despite their alleged promise to Mayor Mitchel, producers of "The Birth of a Nation" motion picture film are declared to have failed to eliminate the several scenes over which a wave of objection has been raised. Miss Mae Nerney, chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, declared yesterday that because of this discover the injunction suit started some time ago and postponed five times would probably be pushed through.

Representatives of the association witnessed the play Saturday, and to their amazement noted that the play was in virtually its original objectionable form. About a week ago the film men volunteered a promise to Mayor Mitchel, according to the latter's statement, that they would remove two scenes in the second act picturing colored men in vicious advances on white women.

The association censors declare that other changes have been made, but that these two scenes remain. It had been thought that if the film was really re... of the objectionable elements, the ...e dropped. It is now planned ...ers present at presentation ... the next few days, and

---

Gazette, Phoenix Oregon, apr. 3-15

...w when the greatest hit in years, ...th of the Nation," is setting the ...eatr... ...rld afire with its won...tory of the election of Abraham ... and his declaration of freedom for ...s, the Columbia will have as its ...ll under the wizard hand of Ed ... Winston Churchill's splendid ... the southland in the ante-bellum ...he Crisis."

...rile story of the time when men's ...re tried in the conflict between ...he nation and loyalty to a mother ...en brothers were arrayed against ...er, when fathers fought their own ... is a dramatic tale that has had ...ls in the annals of the stage.

...as it is with stirring situations, ...stumes of the period when hoop... ...d crinoline were the fad and fash... ...e belles of the land, this story of ...mes, sans the military pomp so ... to the war play, is one of the ...cinating of the age.

... strong story of the loyalty of a ... girl for the "lost cause," a girl ...ires the love of two men, one an ... the northern army and the other ... of the south. The love tale which ...rom this complication brings the ... together when the northern man ...s worth to protect the family of ...from harm and shields her father, ... of the rebel regiment, on a visit ...-long friend.

...enes are laid in the southland, ...e ravages of the cruel war were ... and the dramatic worth of "The ... enhanced with the rich humor ...te-bellum slave.

...C. Hackett found "The Crisis" ...e best vehicles of his long and ... career as a romantic star and ... Redmond expects to duplicate the ...ttendant upon his noteworthy pro... ...of "The Littlest Rebel," which ... Columbia attendance record.

...he Crisis" Minor Reed has drawn ...ainted sets from the wealth of ...rounding the old homes of the ...hers of the period and the pretty ... strewn lawns and the quaint old ...uses of the time will be relieve... ... too severe architecture of this

...s play Redmond has made more ... ordinary preparation, for it will ... end of the Lenten season and ... a measure to the theater ... those ... observed the restrictions of the ...d.

...d believes that "The Crisis" will ... the best productions of his stay ... while it will be in marked con... ...he sparkling comedy which is to ...row night it will be none the less ... for it gives all the company ...ividually and collectively, much ...everal likings.

...expecting ... the ...iss Rosalie N... con... ... the Mayor, and ... always ... "protest both ... in Collec... ... and a citizen of ... complicat... ...ing the latter ... avenue mea... ...e play from ... the corpora... ...ists. ... ...made, in ... ...yesterday ...earing ...

APR 8 1915 — The Globe — APR 9 1915 — TRIBUNE

Thomas Dixon's Reply.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—As a reader of your paper may I claim the courtesy of a reply to your editorial attack of yesterday on "The Birth of a Nation"?

As author of the book and play on which the larger film drama is based I accept the full moral responsibility for its purpose and its effects on an audience.

We have submitted "The Birth of a Nation" to a jury of three representative clergymen of New York—the Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, Universalist; the Rev. Charles H. Parkhurst, D. D., Presbyterian, and the Rev. John Talbot Smith, D. D., Roman Catholic, editor of the Columbian, organ of the Knights of Columbus.

They did not suggest a single change or cut, but fully agreed with the high praise given by the dramatic critic of The Globe.

They declare in substance that the play in its final impression on the audience does six things: 1. It reunites in common sympathy and love all sections of our country. 2. It teaches our boys the history of our nation in a way that makes them know the priceless inheritance our fathers gave us through the sacrifice of civil war and reconstruction. 3. It tends to prevent the lowering of the standard of our citizenship by its mixture with Negro blood. 4. It shows the horror and futility of war as a method of settling civic principles. 5. It reaffirms Lincoln's solution of the Negro problem as a possible guide to our future and glorifies his character as the noblest example of American democracy. 6. It gives to Daniel Webster for the first time his true place in American history as the inspiring creator of the modern nation we know to-day.

The most important point on which I take issue with your editorial is found in the sentence: "Let us rejoice that the Stonemans of Washington were magnanimous, but let us not dishonor ourselves by calling in question their great merit by presenting them as the paramours of quadroon mistresses, moved by petty spite."

Who has ever dared to declare that Thaddeus Stevens, B. F. Butler, and Benjamin Wade, the leaders of congress during this reign of terror, were magnanimous?

Abraham Lincoln was magnanimous, and his mighty spirit brooded over the Capitol after his death pleading for generous treatment of the south.

The magnanimity extended was in spite of Stevens and his associates, not through them.

The established facts are that Stevens, who lived and died a bachelor, separated a quadroon Negress from her husband of her youth and kept her in his house for thirty-six years. For this woman he became a social outcast in Washington and at the last moment lost his place in Lincoln's cabinet, the appointment suddenly going to Simon Cameron, his rival.

He left this woman, Lydia Brown, an annuity in his will and was buried in a Negro cemetery in Lancaster, Pa., that he might sleep beside her in death.

Do you question these facts? If so I will submit them to a jury of three historians of established character, and if they decide against me I will agree to withdraw "The Birth of a Nation" from the stage.

Was Mr. Stevens magnanimous even when the shadow of death was upon him in the last year of his life?

Read his famous bill to confiscate the remaining property of the stricken, starving south and give it to the Negroes, two years after Lee's surrender. If you still doubt that he was ungenerous, read his awful speech in the Congressional Record pressing this pet measure. House bill No. 29, to a vote. Nothing so fierce, cruel, and vindictive was ever uttered on the floor of the House of Representatives in our history, before or since.

The stricken south was only saved from this act of brutal vengeance by Mr. Stevens's death. No other man had ability to pass such a measure.

I am not attacking the Negro of to-day. I am recording faithfully the history of fifty years ago. I portray three Negroes faithful unto death to every trust and two vicious Negroes, misled by white scoundrels. Is it a crime to hint at a bad black man, seeing we have so many bad white ones?

THOMAS DIXON.

New York, April 7.

"The Birth of a Nation" Controversy.

A Statement by the Producer, D. W. Griffith.

Editor of The Globe, Sir:—In editorial in your issue of April 1915, under the heading: "Capitalizing Race Hatred," you undertake to l our picture "The Birth of a Nati with alleged feelings of sectional ference between the north and so You ask yourself questions and proceed to answer them in the same old way that the same things have been gone over and over again. Where I must take issue with you is that you intimate that these old differences have been raised and exhibited "for purely sordid reasons," to quote your own words.

In presenting this motion picture story before the intelligent theatregoers of New York City, in a regular theatre, which has been well advertised, I thought the moving drama told its own story. My associates have maintained a dignified silence in the face of an organized attack of letter writers, publicity seekers, and fanatics against our work. We have traced this attack to its source, and know the reasons for it. Without wishing to tell any newspaper its business, permit me to suggest that a cub reporter in one hour could find out that this attack is an organized effort to suppress a production which was brought forth to reveal the beautiful possibilities of the art of motion pictures and to tell a story which is based upon truth in every vital detail. Our story states, as plainly as the English language can express a fact, the reasons for this presentation. In our captions we reiterate that the events depicted upon the screen are not meant as a reflection upon any race or people of to-day.

I demand to know the authority upon which you base your intimation that this work of art has been exhibited "for purely sordid reasons." I further demand that failing to establish this authority you retract your statement in as prominent and direct a manner as you have given publicity to the opinions of the writer of your editorial.

Our picture tells its own story and we are willing to stand upon the verdict of the New York public as to the fitness of this work of art to be judged as a drama of action based upon the authenticated history of the period covering the action of our plot. The succeeding paragraphs of your editorial are political generalities which have nothing in common with the truths and purposes of the motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation." Our picture does show historic events which you undertake to use for an entirely different argument. We have contrasted the bad with the good and following the formula of the best dramas of the world we establish our ideals by revealing the victory of right over wrong.

I do not agree with your statements regarding the history of slavery and the reconstruction period of this nation, but that is not a matter of importance in this connection. Most well-informed men know now that slavery was an economic mistake. The treatment of the Negroes during the days of reconstruction is shown effectually and graphically in our picture. We show many phases of the question and we do pay particular attention to those faithful Negroes who stayed with their former masters and were ready to give up their lives to protect their white friends. No characters in the story are applauded with greater fervor than the good Negroes whose devotion is so clearly shown. If prejudiced witnesses do not see the message in this portion of the entire drama we are not to blame.

Your editorial is an insult to the intelligence and the human kindness of nearly 100,000 of the best people in New York City, who have viewed this picture from artistic interests and not through any depraved taste such as you try to indicate. Among those you have insulted are your contemporaries on the newspapers of New York, whose expert reviewers were unanimous in their praise of this work as an artistic achievement. Included in this list is your own able critic, Mr. Louis Sherwin, of The Globe.

We have received letters of the heartiest commendation from statesmen, writers, clergymen, artists, educators and laymen. I have in my possession applications for reservations from the principals of ten schools, who, having seen the picture, are desirous of bringing their pupils to view it for its historic truths.

The Rev. Dr. Charles H. Parkhurst, the Rev. Father John Talbot Smith, and the Rev. Thomas B. Gregory, are among the clergy who have given us permission to use their names in approval of this picture in its entirety. Parents have asked us to make reservation for them that they may bring their children to see it. In every walk of life there are men and women of this city who have expressed their appreciation of this picture. Do you dare to intimate that these voluntary expressions of approval were voiced "for purely sordid reasons"?

The attack of the organized opponents to this picture is centred upon that feature of it which they deem might become an influence against the intermarriage of blacks and whites. The organizing opponents are white leaders of the National Asociation for the Advancement of the Colored People, including Oswald Garrison Villard and J. E. Spingarn, who hold official positions in this pro-intermarriage organization.

May I inquire if you desire to espouse the cause of a society which openly boasts in its official organ, The Crisis, that it has been able to throttle "anti-intermarriage legislation" in over ten states? Do you know what this society means by "anti-intermarriage legislation?" It means that they successfully opposed bills which were framed to prohibit the marriage of Negroes to whites.

Do you know that in their official organ, The Crisis, for March, 1915 they brand 238 members of the Sixty-third Congress as "Negro baiters" because these representatives voted to prohibit the marriage of Negroes to white in the District of Columbia?

You close your editorial, in which by inuendo you link our picture to your own assertions, with this sentence:

"To make a few dirty dollars, men are willing to pander to depraved tastes and to foment a race antipathy that is the most sinister and dangerous feature of American life."

That statement is obviously a generality, but it is printed at the end of an editorial which is a covert attack upon our picture, "The Birth of a Nation." As the producer of that picture, I wish to say if the man who wrote it meant one iota of the sentence just quoted to apply to our picture he is a liar and a coward.

Whether this was the intent of the sentence quoted it could not fail to create an impression in the minds of your readers, damaging my reputation as a producer. Therefore, as a matter of justice, I ask that you publish my statement of the facts.

D. W. GRIFFITH.

New York, April 7.

What Some Globe Readers Have to Say.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—I have read with regret numerous criticisms of the photo play known as "The Birth of a Nation." I had the pleasure of witnessing the first performance at the Liberty theatre. It is a wonderful tale of the important events in American history, forcibly and accurately told, and brings into strong relief the contrast between the greatness and the kindliness of Lincoln as compared with the pettiness of the carpet-bag politicians who so utterly failed in their attempt to reconstruct the south after the civil war. The Negro question is a problem which must be met with fearless candor and free discussion if we would preserve our race and civilization from disaster. I see nothing objectionable in this play, but, on the other hand, it truthfully presents the Negro question, which is not fully comprehended by the people of the north, and it teaches great moral lessons in government even more forcibly than could be done by word of mouth or pen.

H. M. BRIGAM.

New York, April 7.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—Your editorial on "Capitalizing Race Prejudice" is the most manly and straightforward comment against the many wrongs heaped upon a struggling race, and is sure to meet the approval of every true American. "The Birth of a Nation" should be given a sudden death by the city authorities, for it is true that no good can result from the continued showing of pictures that bring out the crudest and vilest traits of a people.

J. ESTES GARDNER.

New York, April 7.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—The criticism of the Photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," is, in my opinion, totally unjustified. If anybody who should see "The Birth of a Nation" should feel bitter against the colored race, what effect would "The Huguenots" have on the average man who goes to the opera?

I have seen the play and I do not think that there is a man living who has less prejudice against the colored race than I have, and if there were anything in the play of such an incendiary nature I should not have cared to let my children go and see it.

"The Birth of a Nation" is a credit to the American stage, and I, for one, find that the average person benefits more by seeing such a historical play than by going to a performance such as "Peg o' My Heart."

The narrow-minded people who object to such a play should object to history and strike out of the annals of the United States most importatnt happenings. Previously to my seeing "The Birth of a Nation" I read "The Clansman." If there is anything wrong with the play or the book, there is something wrong with our history. Your paper should take a broader view of the thing and not applaud when a minority raises its voice, defending an unjustified cause.

New York, April 7. MAX GRAB.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—The writer, who is an admirer and daily reader of your paper and a member of the race so unjustly slandered by the moving picture film "The Birth of a Nation," wishes to thank you for your admirable editorial entitled "Capitalizing Race Hatred."

Having read "The Clansman," a book which untruthfully describes all the bad and none of the good qualities of the African race in America, and upon which the scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" are founded, I could not believe it possible until it came to pass that so enlightened a community as that of New York City could say at this present day: "We will make you wealthy, D. W. Griffith, if you will display the impossible side of the Negro."

WILLIAM C. MORRIS.

New York, April 8.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—Born in the north, but reared in the south, I find there are good and bad people in all colors and creeds everywhere.

The photo drama in question shows the bad Negro and the bad man, and the good Negro and the good man, and I can see nothing in it a perfect history of enlightening educating detail shown upon the s

I note the good in this picture it refers to the Negro, receives should, the heartiest applause fr audience, and I cheerfully join in self, the same as one applauds any deed.

I fail to see where any atte made in this production to arouse ling between blacks and whites. matter of artistic production. Birth of a Nation" is, to my without a peer in its painstaki sign and presentation, and as a of fact it impresses me as having cational possibilities simply incalc

New York, April 7. J. C. W

Editor of The Globe, Sir—After ing your editorial entitled "Capita Race Hatred" I went to see "The of a Nation." I found that the mainly justified itself, but was note you were wrong with resp Lincoln.

One could not but notice, if an has any significance, just how the ence was affected by the pictu clearly aims at destroying any b ly feeling for the Negro. cisely the spirit which in 1865 in putting the Negro on his fe then tying them there.

The play may be very interesting amusing, but the harm it can do outweighs its benefits.

IRVING I. FREEDM

New York, April 7.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—Yes dently know nothing of the recon tion period, with its attendant and misery, or you would not have ten the editorial in to-night's With you it may be a matter of vague and unreal. To those wh through it it is a matter of gri rors never to be forgotten. I co it were expedient, give you deta things that took place all over my county that would put to shame depicted in the wonderful presen of "The Birth of a Nation."

The Negroes seem to be the class to be affected by the pictu should have supposed the Sto would have resented it as well. great picture, and a great lesson be learned if the wise are not confou by the foolish.

G.

New York, April 6.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—To woman who said "Why should a live?" after seeing "The Birth of tion" the self-respecting members race feel like saying what the Christ said to his persecutors cross: "Forgive them, for th not what they do." We have to make for our existence, termine just why "niggers" I would refer the "lady" fo to God the great Creator, one blood created mankind a query should be asked aft film play, "The Birth of a onstrates beyond measure pression it is making on the public. I venture to s that this expression does n best thought of the Amer Already there have been from the best white men and this city to satisfy the mem race that this is not the pre timent against the Negro.

CLEVELAND G.

New York, April 6.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—I to offer you my congratula thanks for your splendid edit day's Globe under the capt italizing Race Prejudice." ageous and manly tone dis there are still some good he nation, some white men w tice and fair play even fo "The Birth of a Nation" representation of histor out of all proportion.

JOH

Yonkers, N. Y., April

Preparations are afoot to open "The Birth of a Nation" with the near future at the Tremont, Boston. Much the same difficulty that has just arisen from the negro source being encountered in the Hub.

Dayton, Ohio Apr. 9-15

Item, New Or. La. Apr. 2-1915 press Cleveland Ohio Apr 8-15

REVIEW March 31-1915

A Race Outraged

FROM N. Y. WORLD.

IF THERE still are people in the north who do not know that the reconstruction policy after the Civil war was a terrible blunder, a picture-play impressing that fact might do some good and need do no harm. When such a production outrageously assails 10,000,000 people, the harm outweighs any possible advantage.

The play made out of Dixon's "Clansman" does not exalt southern chivalry at the expense of northern manhood; it upholds the Union one and inseparable; it shows Lincoln in April, 1865, as the best friend of the south; it does not, for it could not, exaggerate the antics of the black legislature of South Carolina; it is sumptuously and ably produced.

Beyond this is irreparable wrong. To hint that carpet-baggers bedevilled the south only because a mythical Mr. "Stoneman," easily recognized through his thin disguise, had a quadroon mistress, merely gratifies the taste for silly paradoxes that trace momentous events to trivial causes. The crowning sin is the sensational exploitation of a crime which is probably less common in the south than in the north and which was certainly not first heard of in 1867.

Has the black no case? Let the "movies" show him—torn from his jungle village; battened down in storm at sea in a slaver's 'tween-decks three feet high; dragged out insensible when the wind falls, his stifled mates fed to the sharks; bearing unrequited toil and the overseer's lash; even his freedom made a curse to him and others by such whites; yet still doing the menial of the south, a humble but [illegible] citizen of his country's p[illegible]

[illegible] Bureau in the [illegible] press SPOKANE, WASH.

APR 6

BY [illegible] FRUITS.

New York World: In the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in this city a race is libeled. In the office of the collector of internal revenue for the Second district of New York that race may be judged by its fruits.

Charles W. Anderson goes out of office today after holding for 10 years this responsible post under the treasury. Many millions of dollars have passed through his hands. His dealings have been practically all with white men of the keenest intellect and of substantial business standing. Capacity and courtesy have been the qualities most remarked in his conduct of an office maintained always in the highest efficiency. In Collector Anderson's time three complicated and important new revenue measures, the income tax, the corporation tax and the war revenue tax, have made this office the most difficult, as it is the most important, ever held by a colored man under the government. He has stood the test.

No race is fairly judged by holding up as types for reprobation its most degraded specimens. Every race has the right to be judged by its patient, toiling, useful average, and by its best.

How Mrs. Harrison Censors.

City hall interest in the movies is said to have become intensified since the debut of Mrs. Harrison as a movie playwright and a wide range of comment has followed her blanket approval of "The Birth of the Nation," a dramatization of "The Clansman," which split the national board of censorship and caused the resignation of one of its members.

Further facts in connection with her inspection of this big film have been disclosed. Charles C. Fitzmorris, the mayor's secretary, preceded her to the tenth floor and made arrangements for the exhibition of the picture. The projection room was cleared of the ordinary censors, who were told their services were not needed.

The records show the permit was issued "By executive order through Charles C. Fitzmorris."

CLEVELAND (Ohio) PRESS MARCH 31, 1915

NEGROES KICK ON MOVIE PLAY

Special to The Press.

NEW YORK, March 31.—Mayor Mitchel yesterday received a delegation of negroes and their friends to protest against certain portions of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," a version of [illegible] novel. [illegible] negroes and stirs up [illegible] Frederic Howe, ex- now commissioner of [illegible] refused, as chairman [illegible] tional board of film c[illegible] prove of the film.

Mayor Mitchel [illegible] the owners of the [illegible] ised to cut out [illegible]

F. H. Moorenat

New York

Call, Apr 10-15

IF LINCOLN WERE THERE

In the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" Abraham Lincoln is presented agreeably, even eulogistically. In view of this acknowledgment of Lincoln's magnanimity it may assist in forming a just estimate of the play to imagine what the great president would have thought had he seen its performance. Would he have regarded it as historically accurate and fair to the Negro, or would he have repudiated its history and considered it to be provocative of sectionalism and stimulative of race hatred?

One can imagine that his attention would have first been challenged by the title and the argument interpreting it to the effect that prior to the events of 1861-1865 the United States was not a nation—that the nation was born at Appomattox and not Bunker Hill and Yorktown and Philadelphia under the nationalistic guidance of Washington. What would have crossed Lincoln's mind as he encountered this thesis is indicated by recalling the words of his first inaugural. "I hold," he said, "that in contemplation of universal law and of the Constitution the union of these states is perpetual. Perpetuity is implied if not expressed in the fundamental law of all national governments. . . . No state upon its own mere motion can lawfully get out of the union—resolves and ordinances to that effect are legally void, and acts of violence within any state or states against the authority of the United States are insurrectionary or revolutionary, according to circumstances." Abraham Lincoln would not have much respect for the historical conclusion of Thomas Dixon.

The next thing to attract Lincoln's notice would have been the repetition of the charge, with which he was quite familiar, that slavery was introduced into the South by greedy Yankee skippers, and that the abolition movement was born of northern hypocrisy and jealousy. As to the Yankee skippers, he acknowledged their offense, but held that when one gladly bought goods from a transporter he could hardly claim exemption from fault. Lincoln's notion, expressed in his wonderful second inaugural, was that slavery was wrong, inherently wrong, and that both sections were to blame—one for consenting to it and for a long time encouraging it, and the other for stubbornly insisting on retaining it. He declared that if the struggle should "continue until all the wealth piled by the bondman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword," "the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." As to the motives of the abolitionists, he knew what they were. They burned in his own breast from the day he travelled down the Mississippi and saw slavery face to face. He did not consider them an outgrowth of hypocrisy and jealousy.

As to reconstruction, Lincoln, although strongly believing in a policy of magnanimity, held that the results of the war must be conserved—that slavery should be regarded as gone forever. We can be sure of what would have been his attitude toward the so-called "personal liberty" laws which sought to revive slavery under another name and whose enactment was a chief cause of the troubles of reconstruction. Whether he would have supported the flat enfranchisement of the Negro we do not know, but we do know that at all times he opposed to discrimination in the laws based on race. He would not have contended that the ignorant white man should vote and the intelligent colored man should be debarred.

As to the intermarriage question, on which D. W. Griffith lays so much stress in his letter to The Globe, Lincoln often encountered it in his day. Douglas constantly taunted him with the question as to whether he proposed to marry a Negro. He responded that he could see that any aversion he might have to making a black woman his wife was a reason why he should not wish to make her his slave. The intermarriage stuff in Griffith's film he would regard as full cousin to the same sort of nonsense that he had so often heard. Forsooth there was much danger of undesirable blood coming through illicit relations, which were inevitable where race was degraded, while there was no danger from regular marriage. Lincoln would not be more pleased by Mr. Dixon's solicitude concerning race than he was by the similar solicitude of Douglas. He was of the opinion that such anxiety merely indicated a general desire to be unjust to the Negro and was an excuse for the injustice.

It is no honor to Lincoln on the anniversary of his birth to eulogize him and then to attack the great cause he stood for.

GLOBE
ATCHISON, KANSAS
APR 8 1915

Speaking of "The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture drama founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," a writer named Francis Hackett says: "Whatever happened during Reconstruction, this film is aggressively vicious and defamatory. It is spiritual assassination. It degrades the censors that passed it, and the white race that endures it." This photoplay now running at a New York theatre that charges $2 for reserved best seats, and packs the house every night.

Colored People Not Satisfied With Film

Investigators for the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People are not satisfied with the revision that has been made in the film production, "The Birth of a Nation." This conclusion was expressed yesterday in arrangement for the enforcement of injunction proceedings against the production.

Hearing on the charges had been set for Thursday in the Jefferson Market Court, but it had been tacitly understood that if the recent promises of the film producers to Mayor Mitchel to remove the objectionable scenes in the film were fulfilled the injunction suit would be called off.

Attorneys were not ready to proceed with the case Thursday, but the complainants announced they intended to go through with the case. The hearing was set for April 13.

From EVENING WORLD
Address COLUMBUS, Ohio
Date APR 3 - 1915

Women To Criticise Thomas Dixon's "Birth of a Nation"

New York, April 2.—Opposition to "The Birth of a Nation," the film version of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," took a new turn yesterday when four prominent women were summoned to appear in Jefferson Market court today to express their opinion of the production. They did not appear this morning, however, as the scheduled hearing was postponed until a week from today.

James W. Osborne will appear for the protestors and Martin W. Littleton for D. W. Griffith, the producer. The resulting action is expected to overshadow the protest made to Mayor Mitchel.

Mr. Osborne was engaged by the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, of No. 70 Fifth avenue. It objects to the two big scenes of the pictures, in one of which a negro chases a white girl over a cliff and in the other a mulatto politician tries to force marriage upon the daughter of his benefactor. The association admits these scenes have been modified but holds they have not been changed sufficiently.

Joel E. Spingarn, chairman of the board of the association, caused a letter to be sent to Mayor Mitchel calling his attention to that fact, but before that he had summonses served on those who are expected to be the star witnesses in court.

They are Mrs. Norman De R. Whitehouse, Miss Rosalie Jonas, Miss Mary White Ovington, authoress; Mrs. Helen Lansdowne and Frederic C. Howe, chairman of the National Board of Censorship, who requested that his name be taken off the approval stamp of the national board when a majority approved the film.

Miss Ovington went to see the pictures yesterday afternoon and said afterward she was ready to voice her disapproval of them. One of the interesting points is expected to be whether the women who criticise the pictures will object to its fundamental opposition to intermarriage of the races.

CALL
New York City
APR 8 1915

PROTESTS AGAINST "BIRTH OF A NATION."

Editor of The Call:

Why have readers of The Call not raised their voices in protest against the picture, "Birth of a Nation"?

My first act upon getting into New York was to see this picture, and now I am protesting to the right, the left, and all around me. Why cannot those of you that believe in and live in the spirit of fair play protest with me and the few other feeble voices that are heard?

A more outrageous yet cunningly devised piece of slander and breeder of race prejudice I have rarely come across.

All that is hateful in the Negro, just freed from slavery, is pictured most minutely, while the many things that have caused the breeding of this hatred are not even hinted at.

The white South is angelic; the Negro is all that is mean and devilish.

Why not see the picture, then write letters of protest to the Mayor and the National Board of Censors?

In the name of decency, get together and strike a blow for our colored sisters and brothers. Goodness knows their struggles are many, their battle harder than ours. We have only our economic masters to fight, while they must fight these and the haters of their race.

Their blood is as red as ours, and if we possess souls, why, who can prove to me that souls are possessed of different colors?

See the picture, then write your letters, and, to add your supreme protest, join the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, 70 Fifth avenue. Two dollars a year (less than 4 cents a week), which includes a year's subscription to an excellent magazine, the Crisis.

Sincerely,

VERNE E. SHERIDAN.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

FILMS AND BIRTHS AND CENSORSHIP

Two questions of censorship are before in New York. One concerns a photo-drama, The Birth of a Nation, which has been passed by the National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures by a divided vote against protests by friends of the Negro. The other has to do with the arrest of the husband of a woman who wrote and circulated a pamphlet entitled Family Limitation.

The two incidents differ in many aspects, as do the groups who urge the suppressing of the play and the circulating of the pamphlet. But motion pictures no less than printed pages have come to be recognized media for expressing thought; so that the new question of freedom and censorship of the film comes up alongside the old and reopened one of freedom of the press.

The Birth of a Nation, produced in California by D. W. Griffith, has been hailed as the most splendid of movies. It is packing a New York theater for two performances daily, seven days a week, at prices running up to $2 a seat. Its first half portrays Civil War scenes on a scale never before attempted and with a scenic variety that ranges from the heroic clash of whole armies to the playful spat of a kitten and a puppy on the veranda of the southern home where the interest of the play centers. It ends with the surrender of Lee and the assassination of Lincoln.

The second half—the film runs three hours with a single break of eight minutes—is based entirely on Thomas Dixon's anti-Negro novel, The Clansman. It shows the South in the grip of the carpet-baggers and a mulatto lieutenant-governor building up a black party. Negroes are called from their work to a wild revel in the streets. On election day they vote with both hands and keep white men from the polls. In the legislature they sit with hats on and bare feet on the desks as they drink from flasks and pass an intermarriage law.

A harrowing climax comes in the pursuit of a young white girl by a renegade Negro through aching miles of woodland. Finally, she escapes him by jumping from a high rock to her death. Her brother organizes the Ku Klux Klan to avenge her—or to stop the reign of terror, as the producers put it—and the clan, cast as saviors of the South, drives out the rioting Negroes just in time to save another white girl from a forced marriage with the mulatto lieutenant-governor. The final outcome suggested is a Negro republic in Liberia.

Criticism has been prompt and vigorous. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has branded it as unjust and tending to arouse bitter race antagonism. The association made an unsuccessful attempt to stop the production by court action, on the ground that it tended to a breach of the peace, pointing out that the play founded on the same novel was stopped in Philadelphia some time since after a riot had actually started in the theater.

The association was unsuccessful, also, in its attempt to have the National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures revoke its approval—an attempt which had the sympathy of many other individuals and bodies. The board has been roundly criticized as a result.

The film was viewed originally by ten members of the board's large censoring committee, who passed it unanimously. Upon appeal to Frederic C. Howe, chairman of the board, it was brought before the general committee, which is the board's governing body. Various changes were suggested which were made. These are said to have been chiefly a substantial reduction in the details of the chase of the white girl by the renegade Negro, which in the original is said to have been the most dreadful portrayal of rape ever offered for public view; the insertion of various soothing captions such as, "I won't hurt you, little Missy"; the entire excision of a lynching; and a toning down of the scene in which the mulatto all but marries a white girl by force.

Again the general committee viewed the film. This time it was passed by a vote of 15 to 8. Mr. Howe, chairman of the board, was among the eight voting No, and he has refused the use of the board's regular form of approval which reads: "Passed by the National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures. Frederic C. Howe, chairman."

While the board is purely a voluntary body without actual power of stopping any motion picture, its decisions are so widely accepted that disapproval of a film debars it from 80 per cent of the motion picture houses of the country.

W. D. McGUIRE, Jr., executive secretary of the board, holds that the decision in this case squares with the board's printed standards that the "board does not regard itself as a censor of accuracy, unless the inaccuracy in question is of the kind that will result in some concrete disaster to the person whom the inaccuracy misleads." He holds that "any historical inaccuracy in The Birth of a Nation would hardly result in leading any individuals into any concrete disaster." Further, he says,

"A board of censorship for motion pictures or dramatic productions should confine itself entirely to the consideration of whether a given production is objectionable from the standpoint of public morals. If it can pass this test it should be permitted. If not, it should be stopped. Public authorities have no more right to interfere with the production of a play or a motion picture which emphasizes the southern point of view of our great conflict and the subsequent period of reconstruction, than that of a play which lays emphasis upon the northern point of view."

HAGERSTOWN (Md.) MAIL
APRIL 8 1915

THE CENSORS.

New York there is being displayed a motion picture film called "The Birth of a Nation," which is built largely on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman." The film story begins with the events leading up to the Civil War, the war itself and the death of Lincoln. That constitutes the first part of the pictured story and then comes the film of "The Clansman." It is said that the taking of this occupied a year or more, that at times as high as 18,000 people were employed, and that the sum invested runs close to $50,000. By everyone it is conceded to be the biggest thing in motion pictures that has ever been taken in this country, and has been equalled only by an Italian film called "Cabeiria."

But now comes the censors of motion picture films and their action created a small tempest. It appears that a protest is going up, principally from negroes and their sympathisers, against showing this film because the tendency is to incite race prejudice and bring the whites and blacks into conflict, or at least open enmity.

The film was first passed by the board, then this action was reconsidered, and after a second viewing the first part was passed but the second held up. Then came another rehearsing and the whole film, after changes were made, was passed. A protestant was the National Association that the film is an "unwarranted attack on a race, and is productive of race hatred and prejudice."

The objectionable element in this film is the fact that it shows the South during the period of reconstruction with Northern carpetbaggers and

ATCHISON (Kas.) GLOBE
APRIL 10, 1915

[illegible] collects a tax [illegible] upon theatre tickets for the benefit of its hospitals.

Mayor Mitchel, of New York, has stricken two scenes from "The Birth of a Nation," (The Clansman), an elaborate motion picture production now running there at prices ranging as high as $2 a seat. One of the objectionable scenes was where "Little Sister" flees from the renegade negro and kills herself by jumping from a cliff, and the other is where Silas, the mulatto lieutenant-governor, grabs the daughter of his white benefactor. Mayor Mitchel's action was taken upon the petition of 500 negroes and whites interested in the uplift of the colored race.

Mr. McGuire states that the Pennsylvania State Board of Censorship, the Chicago Municipal Board of Censorship and local committees in Los Angeles and San Francisco have all approved it. It has run for several weeks in these cities without adverse comment, he says, and a vote taken at a performance in Los Angeles polled over 2,500 favorable to 23 adverse ballots. "The national board seeks to represent public opinion throughout the country which, as far as it has registered it through the actions noted above, holds the decision of the national board."

The most incisive criticism yet offered is by a southerner now living in New York. Speaking as a southern man who has been through ten years of recent political campaigning, he charges the film with being an attempt to drag back into public discussion "the myth of Negro domination." More and more, he reasons, the South is getting away from this bogey and more and more it is passing out of southern politics. Only a few interested people, he says, are trying to keep the well-worn head of the scarecrow above water and Thomas Dixon is one of these few. He has kept at it persistently in his books and now he has secured the aid of the most stunning of all motion picture dramas; to this southerner, it is a clear case of an attempt to whet the edge of race feeling.

Jane Addams, in an interview in the New York Evening Post, said:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among colored people and showing them as representatives of the truth about the entire race. It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race.

"Moreover, it appeals to race prejudice on the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider to-day. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the play is historical; but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events; but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain of its facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest. The production is the most subtle form of untruth—a half truth."

THE pamphlet on Family Limitation was written by Margaret Sanger, a trained nurse and known as a writer on hygiene. Her articles on the subject in the New York Call, addressed particularly to working girls, were finally stopped by the Post Office Department. Mrs. Sanger then started a paper of her own called the Woman Rebel. This in turn was suspended by federal action and she was indicted on several counts, including sending obscene matter through the mail and the publication of an article which is held to have favored assassination.

Released without bail, Mrs. Sanger ran away to England, where the discussion of birth control is open and practically unhindered. There she wrote the pamphlet, Family Limitation, and her friends are said to have circulated 100,000 copies of it.

While she was away a man called upon her husband, William Sanger, an architect, and asked for a copy of Family Limitation. Mr. Sanger is reported to have said he was not circulating it, but upon the man's insistence that he was a friend of Mrs. Sanger's and interested in her work, the husband rummaged about, found a copy and gave it to him.

Shortly after the man reappeared with Anthony Comstock, secretary of the New York Society for the Suppression of Vice, who arrested him under the New York law which makes his action in "circulating" the pamphlet a misdemeanor punishable by a fine of $1,000 and a year's imprisonment. His motion for trial by jury was denied. His wife is said to be coming home soon to stand trial on the charge against her.

Friends of both Mr. and Mrs. Sanger have sprung to their defense. The Free Speech League of New York, of which Leonard D. Abbott, of the Ferrer School of Anarchism, is president, is raising a fund to bear the expenses of the trial and has issued an open letter on the subject signed by Theodore Schroeder, Bolton Hall, Lincoln Steffens and Hutchins Hapgood. The letter states that "this case involves much more than Mr. Sanger and his wife. It involves personal liberty and a free press."

And there is in process of formation the Birth Control League whose announced objects are: "1. To create an intelligent public demand for the repeal of all laws prohibiting the giving out of information concerning methods of birth control; 2. To distribute accurate information on the subject of birth control, after it has become legal to do so."

The call for the formation of the league is signed by Jessie Ashley, Otto Bobsien, Mary Ware Dennett, Martha Gruening, Bolton Hall, Charles T. Hallinan, Paul Kennaday, Helen Marot, James F. Morton, Jr., Lucy Sprague Mitchell, Lincoln Steffens and Clara Gruening Stillman.

Printed matter sent out by the Birth Control League points out that contraceptive devices are advertised in the public press in France, Belgium and Holland; that in England information is distributed legally to anyone who declares in writing that he or she is about to be married and that the Neo-Malthusian Society distributes pamphlets, holds public meetings and publishes a monthly paper, the Malthusian, whose sub-title is "a crusade against poverty."

HOW conflicting principles—social, sectional, religious—enter into these practical problems of censorship, is brought out by the various groups interested, and in some instances by the activity of the same people against the film and for the pamphlet.

In exercising social control two agencies have been resorted to: 1, legal suppression and censorship; 2, individual and collective but voluntary blasts of opinion. For example, in the case of the film, some of those who would be opposed to governmental suppression, are strong in criticizing the play and in censuring the National Board of Censorship for not throwing its great weight of opinion against the production.

HERALD
Washington, D. C.
APR 11 1915

FACTS ABOUT "THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

The following statement has been issued by the sponsors of the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now running at the Liberty Theater, New York, preliminary to a country-wide tour:

1. The drama has been shown for four weeks in the metropolis and, for nine weeks in Los Angeles, Cal., without the slightest disturbance of any kind. The New York run is expected to continue for many months at absolute capacity at the regular price-scale of first-class theatrical attractions.

2. One hundred and fifty thousand patrons have seen and approved the play. The only opposition has been voiced by members of the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People. This reason, as admitted, is the effect of the play on those Northern States permitting the intermarriage of blacks and whites. Birth of a Nation exhibits the folly of such mongrelism.

3. The play has been officially approved by the Board of Censors, nationally, dramatically and artistically. This should be a guide to motion picture boards in likewise approving it as artistically pure.

"The Clansman," criticised as [illegible] this play received [illegible] of praise ever [illegible] New York City. [illegible] triumph of a native South[illegible] who has advanced [illegible] from a toy to [illegible] between the [illegible] pictured in [illegible] matters of [illegible]

EVENING NEWS
Buffalo, N. Y.
APR - 7 1915

A PROPER PROTEST.

The colored people of New York city have protested so vigorously against a moving picture performance there that the owners have finally toned down certain scenes which have done an injustice to the negro though the film is still far from satisfactory.

The moving picture drama is founded on Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." The Southern minister has done much to offend the colored race in his writings and lectures and "The Clansman" stirred up more race prejudice than perhaps any book of recent years. Judging from reviews of the photoplay the most objectionable scenes of "The Clansman" have been visualized. It may be true that some of the scenes that Dixon describes did actually happen, but they are not descriptive of the negro race.

The negro has advanced much since the war and despite great obstacles. Just at present more tolerance is shown him than at any time in the history of man. It would be regrettable to [illegible] a moving picture drama to stir [illegible] race prejudice.

EVENING POST
Chicago, Ill.
APR 9 1915

Drawn from the inspiration of Edgar Allen Poe and visualized thru the genius of David W. Griffith, whose latest production, "The Birth of a Nation," is a sensation in the East, this wonderful bit of motographic mystery has been selected by Alfred Hamburger as the one best bet of the season with which to open the second year of photoplays at the Fine Arts.

"The Avenging Conscience" promises to be a revelation as a new and daring departure in melodrama of thrilling emotional values, blended with beautiful playcraft and charming love interest.

While the specific crime in this instance is the vengeful dream of taking human life, its lesson applies with equal force to the commission of any act of evil impulse that haunts the one who yields to ignoble temptation. Nothing of this sort has ever before been attempted, to our knowledge, much less successfully reproduced upon the screen. The demands on a producer for such a production as this were, therefore, stupendous, but the artistic breadth and power of Griffith fairly compasses this daring ability.

His generalship did not stop with merely making the shadow motions of the fascinating substance of the fiction, for he selected the greatest artists procurable for the character portrayals and did not hesitate to introduce a specter to mingle with his mortals.

With such artists as Blanche Sweet, Henry B. Walthall and Spottiswoode Aiken and almost limitless resources at command, it is not strange the genius of Griffith achieved remarkable results with "The Avenging Conscience."

CHRONICLE
AUGUSTA, GA.
APR 7 1915

Spottiswoode Aiken, who figures prominently in Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," did not make good in his first attempts at motion-picture acting. His overwhelming success in "The Birth of a Nation" proves the effect of grit and perseverance.

TRIBUNE
Chicago, Ill.
APR 7 1915

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.

Chicago, April 4.—(Editor of The Tribune.)—May I call your attention to the fact that Chicago has an extremely good board of censorship for films, the members of which, appointed under the rules of civil service, are under the supervision of the morals division of police.

These censors pass upon all moving pictures before they are shown in Chicago. I note from THE TRIBUNE of April 1 that a film recently shown in New York known as "The Birth of a Nation" has been "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, secretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitzmorris may be a most excellent secretary and well versed in his duties as such, is it not rather unnecessary that he should usurp the work of the entire censorship board and that a film should be authorized upon the recommendation of one person?

"The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to arouse race prejudice against colored people; in it they are all bestial and villainous, while the white men—especially those of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly heroes, performing magnanimous acts of chivalry and invariably appearing at the right moment to rescue the virtuous and save the country from destruction. Such a presentation of an historic period works untold harm. Doubtless some of the incidents are correctly reported, but they have been selected with the most sinister motive and for that reason are most misleading and harmful.

A large number of the best citizens of New York protested against the appearance of the film in that city. Is it not singular that permission should have been given for such a notorious film to be shown in Chicago before it was submitted to our board of censors or to the committee of citizens who are occasionally asked to help them? If the city of Chicago considers it worth while to spend $10,000 a year to sustain this board of censors, is it not at such a time as this that their services would be the most valuable? Certainly, public spirited citizens may be expected to protest against this extraordinary usurpation of power on the part of a city official.

LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
President Juvenile Protective Association.

Eve. Globe, Apr. 8-1915.

DIXON ON HIS MOTIVE.

In another column is published a letter from Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," on which "The Birth of a Nation" is based, in which an attempt is made to meet the charge that both book and moving picture film are historically unfair and are calculated to revive sectionalism and to stimulate race prejudice.

In his letter Mr. Dixon disclaims a bad motive and affirms that he is controlled by a good one. As to his motive The Globe is not interested. What is pertinent with respect to a book or a stage production is not what its author says that he intended but the meaning its readers or spectators naturally and inevitably derive from it. It is not open to question that "The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to increase a prejudice against Negroes already cruelly and unjustly strong. It is only necessary to watch the behavior of the spectators at a performance of "The Birth of a Nation" to know what they understand. As to Mr. Dixon's real motives, we leave this question to his own conscience.

Should a film be prepared which should epitomize in moving picture form the lecture of Slattery, the ex-priest, it is possible that it could be proved that every scene in it could be historically supported. Yet such a presentation might be grossly unfair and viciously arouse religious prejudices. We don't believe many during a performance would be fooled by "inserts" to the effect that the producers disclaimed any desire to stir up religious feelings and were of good motive. The story of any people and concerning any series of events can be told in such a selective way as to be the worst sort of falsehood and yet every item be true.

As to Thaddeus Stevens and his relations to Lydia Brown, these may be wisely left in obscurity just as the relations of distinguished leaders of the south to other Lydia Browns may be left in obscurity. The place of Thaddeus Stevens in history is due to his authorship of the Fourteenth Amendment and to his unconquerable hostility to human slavery and his sympathy for and belief in a downtrodden race. His memory is not now attacked because of irregularities in his personal life but because of his leadership in the anti-slavery movement. His soul was a stormy one and he was in earnest to the verge of fanaticism. Doubtless it can be established that not many of his words and proposals were unwise and extreme. The time in which he lived was troubled, and it is not surprising that if there was a Robert Toombs who proposed to call the roll of his slaves from Bunker Hill Monument, there was a Thaddeus Stevens who held that a great wrong should meet a great punishment.

The Globe has not demanded the suppression of "The Birth of a Nation." It does not like legal censorships. It prefers to think that the best way to expose a bad cause is to give it the freest way to express itself. The best way to cure an abscess is to open it. Open plumbing is good. Nevertheless, while concessions to prejudice and ignorance and narrow-mindedness in freest privilege to exhibit themselves, this is no reason why there should not be equally frank recognition of their character. The exhibition occurs [illegible] "man" and all its [illegible]

PPER
New York City
APR 1 0 1915

MAYOR MITCHEL ORDERS ELIMINATIONS IN "BIRTH OF NATION."

VICTOR HERBERT LOSES SUIT AGAINST WORLD FILM.

COLONIAL SUES GEO. RANDOLPH CHESTER FOR $50,000.

ANOTHER FREAK BILL INTRODUCED IN OHIO.

FRISCO GETS NEXT NATIONAL M.P.E.L.OF A. CONVENTION IN JULY.

DEATH OF WM. V. RANOUS, PIONEER PICTURE DIRECTOR.

HORKHEIMERS WOULD ENJOIN WALTHALL.

PENN. CENSOR LAW STANDS--NEW BILL TO SUPERSEDE PRESENT LAW INTRODUCED.

MAYOR MITCHELL ORDERS ELIMINATIONS IN "BIRTH OF A NATION."

Acting on a complaint presented by Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Wise and Frederick C. Howe, representing the interests of several colored societies of New York City, Mayor Mitchell, Tuesday, March 30, ordered several eliminations to be made in Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," playing to capacity business currently at the Liberty Theatre. Rabbi Wise who is connected with the National Board of Censors, in his request, asking the Mayor to take action on the picture, gave utterance to the following remarks:

"The Board of Censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse, and I regret that my name is even remotely connected as a member of such a board. The negroes in this city have been patient. They have not yet arisen to protest like the Irish, who attacked the production of 'The Playboy of the Western World.' The Irish saw the playboy as a caricature, not as a characterization.

"Stop this production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great service to the people of this country."

Rabbi Wise is a prominent Jew prelate of New York City. Oswald Garrison Villard, the editor of The Evening Post, declared that "The Birth of a Nation," as far as the negro was concerned, was "improper, unjust and immoral." "I'll stake whatever reputation I have as a historical student," said Mr. Villard, "on my charges against this film play. The logging in of the negro into this exhibition is needless and uncalled for, and the play would be improved upon in every respect if the objectionable scenes were taken out."

Mr. Villard, in addition to his editorial activities, finds time to attend to the duties of vice president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Frederic C. Howe claimed that certain scenes in the picture affected ten million citizens of the United States, who were degraded by the production.

The scenes chiefly objected to were the pursuing of a white girl by a crazed negro, and the attempted love-making with a white woman on the part of the mulatto governor of the piece. "The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," which in literary form caused a mild sensation when it was first published.

GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH COUNSEL.

Following the presentation of the above recorded complaints, D. W. Griffith, Thursday afternoon, April 1, accompanied by his attorney, Martin W. Littleton and armed with letters commending "The Birth of a Nation," from Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, Rev. J. Talbot Smith and other prominent clergymen and laymen, appeared before the Mayor to state his side of the case. Following the Mayor's instructions, License Commissioner Bell had ordered certain eliminations, which were made March 31.

Martin W. Littleton informed the Mayor that his orders had been complied with, and pleaded for the picture's presentation in its present form.

Mr. Littleton said in part:

"Protest against this picture is based on the propaganda of the Association for the Intermarriage of the Races. Its real attitude on this question is evidenced by the language of protests it has sent to legislatures of States where bills prohibiting such marriages have been pending. In these protests the association says:

"'We oppose it for the physical reason that to prohibit such intermarriage would be publicly to acknowledge that black blood is a physical taint, something that no self-respecting colored man or woman can be asked to admit.'"

After listening to argument by D. W. Griffith, Thomas Dixon and several others, Mayo Mitchel suggested that Commissioner Bell see the picture once more and use his best judgment.

Mayor Mitchel, at the finish of the hearing, said:

"My mind is quite free.

"I have seen the play. If it were as you suggest, merely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites, it might be a different question, but there are two scenes that appeal to race prejudice, and I feel that they ought to be modified. I think the best thing you can do is to meet Commissioner Bell and Deputy Commissioner Kaufman and come to an agreement on the scenes against which the Department of Licenses protests. The negro citizens have certain rights that must be observed."

COURT CASE POSTPONED ONE WEEK.

As a result of the Mayor's decision, the court case which came up before Magistrate McQuade, April 1, in the Jefferson Market Court, was postponed for one week.

The management of the Liberty and the sponsors of "Th Birth of a Nation" having been summoned to appear in court by the representatives of a negro society.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.

Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I call your attention to the fact that Chicago has an extremely good board of censorship for films, the members of which, appointed under the rules of civil service, are under the supervision of the morals division of police.

These censors pass upon all moving pictures before they are shown in Chicago. I note from THE TRIBUNE of April 1 that a film recently shown in New York known as "The Birth of a Nation" has been "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, secretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitzmorris may be a most excellent secretary and well versed in his duties as such, is it not rather unnecessary that he should usurp the work of the entire censorship board and that a film should be authorized upon the recommendation of one person?

"The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to arouse race prejudice against colored people; in it they are all bestial and villainous, while the white men—especially those of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly noble, performing magnanimous acts of chivalry and invariably appearing at the critical moment to rescue the virtuous and save the country from destruction. Such a presentation of an historic period works untold harm. Doubtless some of the incidents are correctly reported, but they have been selected with the most sinister motive—and for that reason are most misleading and harmful.

A large number of the best citizens of New York protested against the appearance of the film in that city. Is it not regular that permission should have been given for such a notorious film to be shown in Chicago before it was submitted to our board of censors or to the committee of citizens who are occasionally asked to help them? If the city of Chicago considers it worth while to spend $100 a year to sustain this board of censors, is it not at such a time as this that their services would be the most valuable? Certainly, public spirited citizens may be expected to protest against this extraordinary usurpation of power on the part of a city official.

LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
President Juvenile Protective Association.

CHRONICLE
HOUSTON, TEXAS
APR 6 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

The following statement has been issued by the sponsors of the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now running at the Liberty Theatre, New York, preliminary to a countrywide tour:

The drama has been shown for four weeks in the metropolis and for nine weeks in Los Angeles, Cal., without the slightest disturbance of any kind. The New York run is expected to continue for many months to absolute capacity at the regular price scale of first class theatrical attractions.

One hundred and fifty thousands patrons have seen and approved the play. The only opposition has been voiced by members of the National Association for the Improvement of Colored People. Their reason, as admitted, is the effect of the play on those Northern states permitting the inter-marriage of blacks and whites. "The Birth of a Nation" exhibits the folly of such mongrelization.

The play has been officially approved by the National Board of Censorship, who say: "Educationally, dramatically and artistically this should prove a great step forward in motion picture production." It is likewise approved as clean and morally pure.

Unlike its predecessor, "The Clansman," which was severely criticized artistically and otherwise, this play received the greatest verdict of praise ever given to a production in New York City. The critics hailed as "the triumph of a new art" this work by a native Southerner, David W. Griffith, who has advanced the motion picture from a toy to the dignity of epic drama.

The events of the war between the states and a reconstruction, pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," are matters of authentic history. Every detail has been verified. So confident is Mr. Griffith of its accuracy and truth that he has invited a committee of representative editors to come to New York at his own expense and see the play, with the promise that if they find "The Birth of a Nation" objectionable he will withdraw it from the boards.

"The Birth of a Nation," First $2 Movie, May Do Great Harm Through Class Prejudice

[By Walter Prichard Eaton]
[Special to The Indianapolis News]

NEW YORK, April 10.—Undoubtedly one of the most interesting developments on Broadway this spring is the success of the motion picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty theater, at a scale of prices which in the evening is as high as the regular scale for plays. In the afternoon it is only half as high, but as there are matinees every day, and no actors to pay, it can readily be seen that the profits are enormous. To be sure, the initial expenses were enormous, also—probably over $100,000. But they practically ceased after the picture was made, and second and third companies can be sent out merely by printing extra rolls of film, up to twenty-five or thirty. No wonder the managers are all turning hungrily toward the motion picture field.

"The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's lurid and one-sided tale of "The Clansman," which was made into a play some years ago. It wasn't much of a book, and it was a very poor play, but as a motion picture it has decided elements of pictorial appeal. Perhaps this is due rather less to Mr. Dixon than to the producer of the film, and writer of the scenario, D. W. Griffith, who is in a class by himself in the movie world. Mr. Griffith is the one genius the movies have so far produced in this country. He is the one man who attempts with any definite conception of method and any prospect of success to make a motion picture drama present an idea as well as tell a story; who, in other words, attempts to use the screen drama to fulfill some of the higher functions of the spoken drama. In a screen play of his, last year, "The Escape," he really projected in a manner that was not ludicrous to the sophisticated, a sociological message. In "The Birth of a Nation" he has again tried to give his story something of the intellectual appeal which inheres in spoken and written literature. That, and not because seats cost $2, is why the experiment is important.

But, alas, in this case he is most unfortunate in his choice of subject. Tackling the vexed questions of southern reconstruction in a motion picture—and a picture based, too, on the yellow, prejudiced, lurid tale of Tom Dixon—is a perilous proceeding. It is perilous because there were so distinctly two sides of these questions. They were subjects for debate, nay, for prayer. The motion picture, showing only physical action in pantomime, falls down utterly and helplessly when it comes to grapple with such a theme. "The Birth of a Nation" has many stirring pictorial moments, and, because Griffith staged it, it has a coherent story that drives along. But as a picture of reconstruction, it is one sided, unfair and in its ultimate effect extremely pernicious. The negroes, and such people as Jane Addams and Frederick Howe, who have protested against it, are entirely right in their protest.

The picture is staged in two acts. The first is a civil war act, which includes many remarkable pictures of battles and charges, some of them pretty ineffective because the camera has tried to take in too wide a field, some of them, showing charges of smaller bodies of men, extraordinarily realistic. This act culminates with the assassination of Lincoln in Ford's theater, the camera being placed in the balcony so that you see the play on the stage, the audience, and the President's box. It is said that the interior was reconstructed very carefully to meet historical requirements. Nevertheless, to some of us the scene is decidedly unpleasant. Lincoln is one of those men you instinctively resent any attempt to imitate on the stage.

* * *

There is nothing, however, in the first part of the film to which objection can seriously be taken, except on grounds of taste. The trouble comes in the second part. Here we see a character called the Hon. Austin Stoneman, "leader of the house" (a rather evident attempt to embody the disagreeable side of Thaddeus Stevens), as dictatorial leader of the radicals in congress, force his carpet bag methods upon the south, with the aid of a huge and disagreeable mulatto bully, and his own mulatto mistress. The results are shown in a series of pictures, all of them based more or less on facts, to be sure, but none the less pernicious for that. For instance, we see a meeting of the South Carolina legislature when there were about twenty-five whites in it to about 100 blacks. We see, also, much more terrible results of black rule. And, finally, as a result of all this, we see the organization of the Ku-Klux, and watch them sweep all before them and regain what the pictures call "their Aryan birthright."

Now, there is no question but South Carolina, before the balance was restored, and other states as well, were terribly misruled by the black legislatures. Of course they were. But it must also be borne in mind that the blacks were not ready for the franchise. They had but just emerged from slavery. It was quite as cruel to them as to the south to give them this sudden power. A film, however, can take no account of that.

There is no question, again, but the blacks committed many outrages, and under the circumstances the Ku-Klux Klans were sometimes defensive organizations which we can not help sympathizing with. But it is equally certain that at other times these klans committed outrages quite as bad as, or even worse than, any committed by the blacks. Nothing of that fact, however, gets into the picture. You can not balance things that way in a film drama.

Above all, it should not be forgotten by either north or south, that if the south smarted under this black rule for a time, the north was also smarting from the misery, the toll of life and money exacted by the war; that it regarded, and rightly regarded, the south as a conquered enemy, and under the circumstances, human nature being what it is, neutral peoples have been astonished, not at the troubles caused by reconstruction, but at the magnanimity shown.

In other words, both sides acted in a perfectly natural manner, and both sides made mistakes, and the job for us today is to forget those bitter hours as fast as we may, and, as a united people, realizing at last that the negro is a human being like us, but a human being still—after fifty years of freedom—in a low state of civilization, give the utmost that is in us to the task of making a man of him.

Now, "The Birth of a Nation" doesn't aid in this purpose at all; it hinders it, rather. It makes for class prejudice and passion, it rakes up memories better dead, it utterly lacks the balanced view, the fair presentation of history, which alone could justify a work for public exhibition on the subject of reconstruction. It lacks it in part because Tom Dixon's novel lacks them; it lacks them still more, perhaps, because the motion picture drama can not carry any such weight of intellectual appeal. Only bald, physical action is possible, and that means inevitably a one-sided story, a one-sided, if not a positively false emphasis. The motion picture, in other words, must stick to unimportant fables, or it will make a mess of things. It has made a mess of things in this case. The national board of censors was much to be blamed for ever passing this film. It is likely to do great harm.

Advertiser
London, Ont.
1915

A three-cent movie house has been opened in Cincinnati. Five reels of pictures are shown. Two newsboys and a tailor are the owners and promoters. Thus Cincinnati has reached the opposite extreme in movie prices from New York, where "The Birth of a Nation" opened at the Liberty Theatre in March charging two dollars a seat.

LONDON LIBERAL

Herald
Chicago Ill
4-11-15

IT HAS recently come to light that Frederick C. Howe, United States commissioner of immigration, has forbidden the use of his name on the usual document signed by the board of censorship given to "The Birth of a Nation." Mr. Howe and several other members of the censor board have objected to this well-known photodrama as being apt to cause race riots.

SENTINEL
MILWAUKEE, WIS.
APR 1 1 1915

Denies Big Film Is Causing Disturbance

The following statement has been issued by the sponsors of the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now running at the Liberty theater, New York, preliminary to a country-wide tour:

1. The drama has been shown for four weeks in the metropolis and for nine weeks in Los Angeles, Cal., without the slightest disturbance of any kind. The New York run is expected to continue for many months to absolute capacity at the regular price scale of first-class theatrical attractions.

2. One hundred and fifty thousand patrons have seen and approved the play. The only opposition has been voiced by members of the National Association for the Improvement of Colored people. Their reason, as admitted, is the effect of the play on those northern states permitting the intermarriage of blacks and whites. "The Birth of a Nation" exhibits the folly of such mongrelization.

3. The play has been officially approved by the National Board of Censorship, who say: "Educationally, dramatically and artistically this should prove a great step forward in motion picture." It is likewise approved as clean and morally pure.

4. Unlike its predecessor "The Clansman," which was severely criticised artistically and otherwise, this play received the greatest verdict of praise ever given to a production in New York City. The critics hailed it as "the triumph of a new art" this work by a native southerner, David W. Griffith, who has advanced the motion picture from a toy to the dignity of epic drama.

5. The events of the war between the states and of reconstruction, pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," are matters of authentic history. Every detail has been verified. So confident is its accuracy and truth that he has invited a committee of representative editors to come to New York at his own expense and see the play, with the promise that if they find "The Birth of a Nation" objectionable he will withdraw it from the boards.

Brooklyn

BAR COUNCIL

Demands to ... moral Pic- ... 'Get By.'

...val of the bare po... up by the mu... ...ensors against white slave, sex ..., and similar pictures may lead to ... action on the subject.

... may be an effort to repeal the ...nce passed last July which author- ...e issuance of special permits for ...o be shown to adults only. That ... under consideration by Ald. John ...der. He was chairman of the sub- ...tee of the judiciary committee ... recommended the ordinance only ... upon assurances that it would ...them the hands of the censors.

Mayor Defends Action.

...r Harrison claimed responsibility ... issuance of permits for "The ... Three Weeks," and "A Foo ... Was," and defended his decision ... are becoming Peckersniffian," we ... the expressions he used. "We are ... to lay down rules governing th ... of others that we do not observe ...

...y are to stop a picture based on ... that is being shown in one of our ...heaters we will make ourselves ...us. It makes me think of the ...ber Maine incident, when Chi- ...s made the laughing stock of the ..."

...o More Films "Get By."

...ayor's decision, which precipitat- ...ment situation, is that films must ...d entirely by the acts portrayed ... words used to supplement these ... there to be immoral act presented ...n and no immoral thought pre- ... words on the screen, the picture ... refused a permit for exhibition ...

...In spite of this ruling, the cen- ... the day issued permits "for ...ly" to two more films rejected ... previous standard of morality. ... passed on two.

...e "Woman, Thou Art Woman," ...ed of ... who, because ...y, ...ing ... who around ...

...In the case of Si... ... about th ... said the ... ...ption of its manager by ... ...o marries another woman. ...llander Starts Inquiry.

...llander's study of the situation ... determined ... Mr. Harri- ...g does not ... the way for a ...lms based on ...sationably ...nsors, ...ove.

...d to look into the matter fur- ... the alderman, "and if I find ...rdinance for the issuance of ...r adults only has been the ...letting down the bars to pic- ...ought not be ... either to ... grown persons I shall seek to ... its repeal.

...hat ordinance ... taken ...subcommittee ... possibility ...ed. Between ... that danger ...ict Vittum ... Gertrude ...n, and others ... inclined to ... ordinance ... I agreed with ... objections ... overcome by ...tements ... Bernstein, ...rporation counsel, that the ...ld not ... lessen in the ... power of the censors to re- ... to immoral pictures."

...ll These Get By?

...cted films expected back be- ...sors are "The Fatal Wed- ...shing the Vice Trust," "The ... Black," "The Erring," and ...e Story of Little Gray."

...rrison said that while Mrs. ... "The Birth of the Nation" ... big room, she took no hand ...dgment on it. He said his ...harles C. Fitzmorris, was the ... picture and issue the order ...t be given for its production. ... "The Clansman" done in

Chicago Tribune

...Wife Censors "The ...h of a Nation."

...iming of "The Clansman," ... Birth of a Nation," which ... discussion when ... shown, ...ch the nation ... of ... now. ... in Chicago ... shot ...d and without ... ...ipal ...sors having ... Harrison, ... April ... Charles Fitz... ... had the film ... Fitzmorris ... ...a, O. K. ... ...ected by ... ...of its production ... ...ilation. ... ...agains to ... ...mer at $2 ...

Pasadena Star, April 9-1915

TRUE THOMAS.

The Eminent Historian and Novelist Defends His Accuracy.

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: The attack of Mr. Rossiter Johnson on my book "The Clansman" raises the question of its historical accuracy and the honesty of its author. I am free to confess that "The Birth of a Nation" is in every way bigger and more catholic than my novel or play on which it is founded. It is so much broader that when I saw the finished film I immediately suggested to Griffith the changing of the title. I did this not because the book was in any sense inaccurate but because its argument was more narrow and militant and stood for less than the film drama.

The statement that the reconstruction laws were enacted in order to protect the negro from Southern tyranny is a silly campaign falsehood of the Presidential election year of 1868. Mr. Johnson is pathetically reminiscent.

The reconstruction laws were passed for one reason only, to give the radical majority of Congress an indefinite lease of power through negro votes. That these laws were a disgrace to the nation is proved to-day by the fact that the Supreme Court of the United States has declared them null and void.

The assertion that the South attempted to enact laws which would return the negro to slavery is another cheap campaign canard of 1868 which Mr. Johnson repeats from memory. I challenge him to give the names of the States which passed such laws and name the laws. He has not named one to back such a vicious assertion. The laws relating to vagrancy and apprentices were all copied from the statute books of New York, Massachusetts and other Northern States in absolute good faith in an effort by the Southern people to adjust themselves to the new order.

I deny the silly assertion that I have in any way made a travesty of the character of Thaddeus Stevens. On the other hand I have softened and humanized him. I dare Mr. Rossiter Johnson to publish to-day Mr. Stevens's bill to confiscate the property of the white people of the South and give it to the negroes! This vile measure, known as "House bill No. 29," was introduced by Mr. Stevens two years after the surrender of Lee at a moment when the South was suffering for bread. If any man of to-day doubts my view of Mr. Stevens's character let him read this bill! And if they doubt his purpose to pass it let them read his fierce, vindictive and brutal attack on a conquered and helpless people in the speech he made pressing it to a vote. Only his death saved the fallen South from this last cruel act of vengeance.

If I have a good word for poor deluded John Wilkes Booth I told the truth, and I challenge Mr. Rossiter Johnson to quote the sentence to which he refers and deny it! I repeat that the hanging of Mrs. Surratt was a disgrace to the nation. Her execution was murder, and it was done on the perjured testimony of scoundrels who were afterward imprisoned as felons. I challenge him to deny this.

The assertion that I "picture Northerners as poltroons full of all malice and vindictiveness" is untrue. I challenge him to make good this assertion with a single page of "The Clansman" to support it.

The one sentence he pretends to quote from my book is not in it.

He accuses me of historical inaccuracy in my novel and yet fails to put his hand on a single sentence to prove his assertion.

Mr. Johnson says that Southern white women were in no danger during the reconstruction period! This is a fair sample of his knowledge of history.

I refer him to the sworn testimony of the ten enormous volumes of the Government reports on the Ku Klux Klan conspiracy. In the volume on North Carolina in the testimony from my county he will find recorded under oath the incident on which the tragedy in "The Clansman" is founded. It was this incident which caused my father to leave his pulpit and join the Ku Klux Klan. The chase by Gus, in "The Birth of a Nation" and the leap of the girl over the cliff to escape him is the reduction of this crime, and a thousand others of the period, to the last equation of delicacy by which an idea can be expressed.

I not only renew my offer of $5,000 to Mr. Rossiter Johnson to find a single historical error in my novel, but I will join with the Negro Intermarriage Society in its efforts to suppress "The Birth of a Nation" if he can find one.

I know he can find none because I submitted the proofs of the book to the Hon. John Hay, Lincoln's private secretary and biographer, while Secretary of State and asked Mr. Hay to purge them of all historical errors. He gave the book his enthusiastic indorsement in a personal letter, and asked and obtained my permission to file these untouched proofs in the State Department at Washington as a historical document. Walter Hines Page, our Ambassador to Great Britain, publisher of "The Clansman," read this letter from John Hay and will testify to my statement.

Mr. Johnson has consulted a very bad memory both for his facts and principles.

THOMAS DIXON.

NEW YORK, April 7.

RECONSTRUCTION.

Good Feeling to the South Should Not Gloss Over the Facts of History.

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: The letter published in The Sun of April 6 from Mr. Rossiter Johnson in reference to the play "The Birth of a Nation" and the novel "The Clansman," on which it is based, is not only admirable in temper, but greatly needed as a corrective of imperfect historical information. The Republican leaders of the '70s and the reconstruction acts have been so long held up to scorn; and misstatements concerning that legislation have been so continuously made that, as Mr. Johnson says, it is exceedingly desirable that the reason for the reconstruction laws should no longer be ignored or concealed.

We of the North have been so anxious that the Southern sensitiveness should be respected and an "era of good feeling" inaugurated that those who are familiar with the oppressive acts which led Congress to pass the legislation complained of have been silent, hoping that all this might be forgotten in the reign of justice and good will. Even the impression that the Republican Congress passed acts designed to hinder Southern progress and liberty might be allowed to remain, false and unjust as it is, but when by misstatements of fact and the distortion of history men create a greater prejudice against the colored element and cast upon it a burden of opprobrium it does not deserve, it is well for the truth to be told and the responsibility for the wrongs of the reconstruction period to be justly apportioned.

So many readers of "The Clansman" and spectators of "The Birth of a Nation" are uninformed concerning the truth of the case that assuming, as the author intends, that the period of negro legislation was without justification, they are roused to condemnation and to greater prejudice. They do not understand that Congress discovered that after the most remarkable liberality and kindness practised toward a conquered enemy, the race for whose emancipation many a soldier enlisted and suffered was being sorely oppressed and practically returned to slavery. It is by such perversion of history that a great wrong is done not only the negro but also the growing generation of students of our history.

Some day, and I trust soon, we shall have a history in which clearly and without partiality or bias the story of the reconstruction days and the wonderful forbearance on the part of the North shall be given. Meantime it behooves every just man and woman to resist these attempts for financial gain to hinder the progress and limit the development of the negro.

S. J. FISHER.

PITTSBURG, Pa., April 10.

Pasadena Star, April 15

City Asked to Stop Clansman Production

Deputy City Attorney Holds Courts Have Ruled City Has Not the Power to Stop Show.

Objecting to the forthcoming production of "The Clansman" on the grounds that it will stir up race feeling, a delegation of negroes of this city called upon Deputy City Attorney Howard this morning and asked what could be done to prevent the presentation at Clune's theater next week. Mr. Howard pointed out to the delegation that an injunction restraining the production of "The Clansman" had been asked by the negroes of Los Angeles and had been denied by the courts because the court held that to prevent the production was not within the police power of the city of Los Angeles. Mr. Howard held that what was the law as laid down by the court for Los Angeles would undoubtedly be the law in Pasadena, and since the court has held that the city had not the police power to prevent the showing of the film, Pasadena would not be able to act as requested.

All of the members of the city commission, save Commissioner Allin, who has already seen "The Clansman" in Los Angeles, will attend the show at Clune's theater next Monday evening. The board will go in its official capacity to pass upon the film.

At the request of the city board of play censors, Deputy City Attorney Howard will give a written opinion of the powers of the board to control the production. His written opinion will merely place on record his decision as given to the delegation which protested at allowing the production, this morning.

MAYOR CURLEY CUTS

"BIRTH OF A NATION"

As Revised by His Honor, Boston Public May Now See This Exciting Photo-Play.

(Special Dispatch to the Morning Telegraph.)

APR 12 1915

BOSTON, April 11.

With the elimination of certain scenes which he regards as offensive, Mayor Curley will permit the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," to be shown in Boston. According to a statement issued by the Mayor, he finds that the play is not "obscene or immoral or injurious to the morals of the community." He says in part:

"I requested the elimination of a portion of the chase of a white girl. I further requested that certain scenes descriptive of the visit of Charles Sumner to the home of Austin Stoneham and his meeting with a mulatto woman there be eliminated.

"I further requested that portions of the reels portraying scenes in the South Carolina House of Representatives, wherein a member is shown removing his shoes and the consideration by the said assembly of a motion requiring the member to replace his shoes, be eliminated."

HERALD

Washington, D. C.

APR 12 1915

In the production of "The Birth of a Nation"—the $2 movie show—the negro race is libelled. Coincident with the production, Charles W. Anderson, a negro, has completed ten years of courteous and efficient service in the office of the collector of internal revenue. Many millions of dollars have passed through his hands and through all of the complexities of changing revenues he has stood the test. Every race has the right to be judged by its patient, toiling, useful average, and by its best.

SUN

Baltimore, Md.

APR 12 1915

THRILLING TRAIN WRECK

One of the most thrilling scenes ever shown in the pictures is that of the train wreck in "The Juggernaut," now running at the Vitagraph Theatre. It has caused more comment in New York than anything presented in the "movies," with the exception of "The Birth of a Nation."

Gazette

St. Joseph, Mo.

APR 12 1915

In the production of "The Birth of a Nation"—the $2 movie show—the negro race is libelled. Coincident with the production, Charles W. Anderson, a negro, has completed ten years of courteous and efficient service in the office of the collector of internal revenue. Many millions of dollars have passed through his hands and through all of the complexities of changing revenues he has stood the test. Every race has the right to be judged by its patient, toiling, useful average, and by its best.

RECORD HERALD

Chicago, Ill.

APR 13 1915

The Guide Post

CONDUCTED BY

William L. Chenery

MORE CENSORSHIP.

APPARENTLY we are on for a row about the movie film, "The Birth of a Nation." The second half of this elaborate cinema spectacle is based on Thomas Dixon's anti-negro novel, "The Clansman." Many liberals have protested against the production on the ground that it does injustice to colored people. For example, Miss Jane Addams said:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among the colored people and showing them as the representatives of the truth about the entire race. It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race.

"Moreover, it appeals to race prejudice upon the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider today. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the play is historical, but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events, but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain of its facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest. The production is the most subtle form of untruth—a half truth.

* * * * *

THE LIBERALS' DILEMMA.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People have asked that the play be suppressed. The request must have embarrassed those members of the association who, like Charles T. Hallinan, have always fought a censorship of any kind. Liberals are torn between two desires. They hate injustice to the negro and they hate a bureaucratic control of thought. But a practical world must decide the matter.

For our own part we have no faith in censorship. That means "passing the buck." If a vicious minority is bent on stirring up trouble, or if it is willing to stir up trouble for the profit to be made, a virtuous minority can start a counter movement. It is much safer to spread the truth than to suppress error. A censorship which barred the works of even so unpleasant a person as the Rev. Thomas Dixon can quickly be stretched to exclude so pleasant a person as William Shakespeare. And, as a matter of history, the Chicago censors have long looked askance at the master dramatist of the world.

* * * * *

Pasadena Star, April 3-1915

CLANSMAN PACK... CLUNE THEA...

Interest in Great Fil... Intense and Appreci... Most Flattering.

Packed houses greeted "The Cl... man" film on its initial public pro... tion in Pasadena yesterday, and if ... statements made by those who ... nessed the production indicate ... thing it was generally agreed th... film is the most spectacular an... matic which has ever come ... city. The presentation was ... with the same incidental musi... given in Los Angeles. This ... helps greatly to emphasize t... matic moments of the producti... while the incidental music has ... been added to the New York ... tion of the same film, it is to ... next few days.

There seems to be no doub... that this great film will set ... Pasadena attendance record. I... be here the entire week and t... every indication of packed ho... Clune's while it is showing.

The film is being run as ... presented to the Pasadena cen... private showing. Most o... ould n... specifically complaine... er when "Negro Taxpayers' ... "The Clansman eliminated ... through the ... was thought ... ...thout los... the storm ... that ...

PPER
New York City
APR 10 1915

MAYOR MITCHEL ORDERS ELIMINATIONS IN "BIRTH OF NATION."

VICTOR HERBERT LOSES SUIT AGAINST WORLD FILM.

COLONIAL SUES GEO. RANDOLPH CHESTER FOR $50,000.

ANOTHER FREAK BILL INTRODUCED IN OHIO.

FRISCO GETS NEXT NATIONAL M.P.E.L. OF A. CONVENTION IN JULY.

DEATH OF WM. V. RANOUS, PIONEER PICTURE DIRECTOR.

HORKHEIMERS WOULD ENJOIN WALTHALL.

PENN. CENSOR LAW STANDS---NEW BILL TO SUPERSEDE PRESENT LAW INTRODUCED.

MAYOR MITCHELL ORDERS ELIMINATIONS IN "BIRTH OF A NATION."

Acting on a complaint presented by Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Wise and Frederick C. Howe, representing the interests of several colored societies of New York City, Mayor Mitchell, Tuesday, March 30, ordered several eliminations to be made in Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," playing to capacity business currently at the Liberty Theatre. Rabbi Wise who is connected with the National Board of Censors, in his request, asking the Mayor to take action on the picture, gave utterance to the following remarks:

"The Board of Censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse, and I regret that my name is even remotely connected as a member of such a board. The negroes in this city have been patient. They have not yet arisen to protest like the Irish, who attacked the production of 'The Playboy of the Western World.' The Irish saw the playboy as a caricature, not as a characterization.

"Stop this production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great service to the people of this country."

Rabbi Wise is a prominent Jew prelate of New York City. Oswald Garrison Villard, the editor of The Evening Post, declared that "The Birth of a Nation," as far as the negro was concerned, was "improper, unjust and immoral." "I'll stake whatever reputation I have as a historical student," said Mr. Villard, "on my charges against this film play. The dragging in of the negro into this exhibition is needless and uncalled for, and the play would be improved upon in every respect if the objectionable scenes were taken out."

Mr. Villard, in addition to his editorial activities, finds time to attend to the duties of vice president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Frederic C. Howe claimed that certain scenes in the picture affected ten million citizens of the United States, who were degraded by the production.

The scenes chiefly objected to were the pursuing of a white girl by a crazed negro, and the attempted love-making with a white woman on the part of the mulatto governor of the piece. "The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," which in literary form caused a mild sensation when it was first published.

GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH COUNSEL.

Following the presentation of the above recorded complaints, D. W. Griffith, Thursday afternoon, April 1, accompanied by his attorney, Martin W. Littleton and armed with letters commending "The Birth of a Nation," from Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, Rev. J. Talbot Smith and other prominent clergymen and laymen, appeared before the Mayor to state his side of the case. Following the Mayor's instructions, License Commissioner Bell had ordered certain eliminations, which were made March 31.

Martin W. Littleton informed the Mayor that his orders had been complied with, and pleaded for the picture's presentation in its present form.

Mr. Littleton said in part:

"Protest against this picture is based on the propaganda of the Association for the Intermarriage of the Races. Its real attitude on this question is evidenced by the language of protests it has sent to legislatures of States where bills prohibiting such marriages have been pending. In these protests the association says:

"'We oppose it for the physical reason that to prohibit such intermarriage would be publicly to acknowledge that black blood is a physical taint, something that no self-respecting colored man or woman can be asked to admit.'"

After listening to argument by D. W. Griffith, Thomas Dixon and several others, Mayor Mitchel suggested that Commissioner Bell see the picture once more and use his best judgment.

Mayor Mitchel, at the finish of the hearing, said:

"My mind is quite free.

"I have seen the play. If it were as you suggest, merely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites, it might be a different question, but there are two scenes that appeal to race prejudice, and I feel that they ought to be modified. I think the best thing you can do is to meet Commissioner Bell and Deputy Commissioner Kaufman and come to an agreement on the scenes against which the Department of Licenses protests. The negro citizens have certain rights that must be observed."

COURT CASE POSTPONED ONE WEEK.

As a result of the Mayor's decision, the court case which came up before Magistrate McQuade, April 1, in the Jefferson Market Court, was postponed for one week.

The management of the Liberty and the sponsors of "Th Birth of a Nation" having been summoned to appear in court by the representatives of a negro society.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.

Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I call your attention to the fact that Chicago has an extremely good board of censorship for films, the members of which, appointed under the rules of civil service, are under the supervision of the morals division of police.

These censors pass upon all moving pictures before they are shown in Chicago. I note from THE TRIBUNE of April 1 that a film recently shown in New York known as "The Birth of a Nation" has been "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, secretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitzmorris may be a most excellent secretary and well versed in his duties as such, is it not rather unnecessary that he should usurp the work of the entire censorship board and that a film should be authorized upon the recommendation of one person? "The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to arouse race prejudice against colored people; in it they are all bestial and villainous, while the white men—especially those of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly angels, performing magnanimous acts of chivalry and invariably appearing at the last moment to rescue the virtuous and save the country from destruction. Such a misrepresentation of an historic period works untold harm. Doubtless some of the incidents are correctly reported, but they have been selected with the most sinister motive, and for that reason are most misleading and harmful.

A large number of the best citizens of New York protested against the appearance of the film in that city. Is it not unusual that permission should have been given for such a notorious film to be shown in Chicago before it was submitted to our board of censors or to the committee of citizens who are occasionally asked to help them? If the city of Chicago considers it worth while to spend $5,000 a year to sustain this board of censors, is it not at such a time as this that their services would be the most valuable? Certainly, public spirited citizens should be expected to protest against this extraordinary usurpation of power on the part of a city official.

LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
President Juvenile Protective Association.

GREENSBORO, N. C.
APR 4 1915

ASK MAYOR TO STOP "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Negroes and Their Friends Call Production "Cruel And Untrue."

SCENE TO BE TONED DOWN

New York, April 3.—Violent objection to certain features of the moving picture spectacle "The Birth of a Nation" was made by many speakers, both white and negro, in a hearing before Mayor Mitchel in the board of estimate room at city hall yesterday. The mayor replied that he had seen the play himself and had spoken to License Commissioner Bell about parts that were deemed objectionable. On a hint from Mr. Bell the producers had agreed to tone down some scenes.

The delegation which called upon the mayor and filled the hearing room represented the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Oswald G. Villard, vice president of the association, said that the production was "improper, immoral and unjust," and he staked his reputation as a student on the assertion that some of the incidents in which negroes figure are not true to history.

Frederick C. Howe, commissioner of immigration at this port, is chairman of the National Board of Moving Picture Censorship. He said:

"The ground of my protest is that the play affects 10,000,000 citizens who are degraded by it. One-half deals with war and the other half portrays the negro as a lustful and degraded creature. This portrayal is cruel, vindictive and untrue."

Most vehement was Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, who said:

"If it is true that the mayor has no power to stop this indescribably foul and loathsome libel on a race of human beings then it is true that government has broken down. The board of censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse and I regret that my name is even remotely connected with such a board. The negroes of this city have been patient. They have not yet risen to protest as did the Irish who attacked "The Playboy of the Western World," which was really a beautiful poem. If I did not know that Thomas Dixon, upon whose novel "The Clansman" this moving picture play is based was capable of this infamy I would believe that he had been hired to write that book to stir up race prejudice.

"Stop that production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great and abiding service to the people of this country."

Lillian D. Wald told the mayor that it "was impossible to measure the potential dangers that threaten us if this production is allowed to go on."

One of the negro speakers, Edward R. Moore, editor of the New York Age, appealed for fairness to his race.

CHRONICLE
HOUSTON, TEXAS
APR 6 1915

"The Birth of a Nation"

The following statement has been issued by the sponsors of the film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which is now running at the Liberty Theatre, New York, preliminary to a countrywide tour:

The drama has been shown for four weeks in the metropolis and for nine weeks in Los Angeles, Cal., without the slightest disturbance of any kind. The New York run is expected to continue for many months to absolute capacity at the regular price scale of first class theatrical attractions.

One hundred and fifty thousands patrons have seen and approved the play. The only opposition has been voiced by members of the National Association for the Improvement of Colored People. Their reason, as admitted, is the effect of the play on those Northern states permitting the inter-marriage of blacks and whites. "The Birth of a Nation" exhibits the folly of such mongrelization.

The play has been officially approved by the National Board of Censorship, who say: "Educationally, dramatically and artistically this should prove a great step forward in motion picture production." It is likewise approved as clean and morally pure.

Unlike its predecessor, "The Clansman," which was severely criticized artistically and otherwise, this play received the greatest verdict of praise ever given to a production in New York City. The critics hailed as "the triumph of a new art" this work by a native Southerner, David W. Griffith, who has advanced the motion picture from a toy to the dignity of epic drama.

The events of the war between the states and a reconstruction, pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," are matters of authentic history. Every detail has been verified. So confident is Mr. Griffith of its accuracy and truth that he has invited a committee of representative editors to come to New York at his own expense and see the play, with the promise that if they find "The Birth of a Nation" objectionable he will withdraw it from the boards.

SENT

MILWAU

Denie

The follo by the a
"The Bir running York, pr 1. The weeks in weeks in slightest
New York
many mon regular pri attractions
2. One patrons have
The only op members of t the Improve reason, a play on

Brooklyn

POST Express
ROCHESTER, N. Y.
APR 7 - 1915

Charles A. Green.

TRUE THOMAS.

Dr. Rossiter Johnson on a Celebrated Fictionist.

I have been very much interested in following the discussion of the merits or demerits of Mr. Dixon's play, "The Birth of a Nation." When his book entitled "The Clansman," on which the drama is partly founded, was published (in 1905), it fell to me to review it in the "Criterion Magazine." Will you allow me to quote from that review, which presents some points that are not generally understood?

"It is evident that the author intends this book to be read as history, and in the light of history it must be judged. His purpose is to show the wickedness of the reconstruction acts of congress after the Civil war. It is a remarkable fact that no one who tells the story of reconstruction or discusses it appears able to begin at the beginning. (I might have accused some of our best known historians of this.) The reason for the reconstruction laws is always ignored or concealed. President Johnson appointed provisional governors of the recently rebellious states, and instructed them to call conventions to reestablish the state governments. The legislatures so constituted proceeded at once to enact laws that were designed to return to a virtual condition of slavery the colored people who had been freed by President Lincoln's proclamation. One law made the testimony of colored witnesses inadmissible in any suit where a white man was concerned. The term 'vagrant' was presented with such a wide interpretation as made it easy to arrest almost any young colored persons and bind them out to labor as 'apprentices,' and in this the 'former owner' was to have the preference in securing their services.

"Some of the laws forbade colored men to have firearms of any kind. By a law of Louisiana, freedmen must make contracts in the first ten days of January, which would bind them through the year, and they must pay for the wear and tear of the implements they used and for any injury or death of the animals. In Mississippi no colored person was permitted to lease any land or tenement except in an incorporated town or village. In South Carolina no colored person was permitted to pursue any trade or business on his own account without a license, and the fee for the license was very high, while no license was required for a white man. In the same state a poll tax was levied on colored women, but not on white women.

"It was the enactment of such laws as these in every one of the ten seceding states, showing a determination to nullify emancipation, that caused congress to override President Johnson's policy and adopt a different plan of reconstruction. Mr. Dixon would have us believe the reconstruction laws were simply the expression of a fiendish spirit of vengeance. Under the name of Austin Stoneman he makes a hideous travesty of humanity, which he intends the reader to take for a portrait of Thaddeus Stevens, whom he represents as the supreme boss during President Grant's administration.

"By the way, Mr. Stevens died the year before Grant became president. He makes the organization of the Ku Klux Klan the climax of his story, and justifies it as being necessary to protect the Southern white women. The truth is that not then nor until years afterward was there any indication or complaint that those women were in danger. Mr. Dixon makes a clean sweep while he is about it—has a good word for Lincoln's assassin, repeats the silly story of Mrs. Surratt's innocence, and pictures the Northerners as politicians full of all malice and vindictiveness. He makes his hero, an ex-Confederate colonel, say with equal grammar and grace, 'The Yankees know who to fool with. I licked 'em too many times for them to bother me any more.' We could say something of this book's deformities as a work of art, but it is hardly worth while."

I observe the announcement that Mr. Dixon has offered a reward of $5,000 for any proof that his work is not historically accurate. If this letter meets his eye, and he is candid enough to admit indisputable facts, he need not send the money to me. He may give it to any deserving charity, and ask the trustees of that charity to publish their receipts in the "Sun." I can forgive occasional errors by any one; but I have no patience with any American historian or romancer who grossly falsifies American history.

—Rossiter Johnson in New York "Sun."

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

[Notice to correspondents: Brief letters are preferred. Write on one side of the paper only. Give full name and address for editor's information.]

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION."

Thomas Dixon's Rejoinder and Other Comments, Ending a Controversy.

[The Globe is obliged on account of space limitations to close the debate on the Griffith-Dixon film.]

Editor of The Globe. Sir—I accept the challenge of your editorial in Saturday's issue to answer the question, If Lincoln were here what would he think of a performance of "The Birth of a Nation"? This week is the anniversary of his assassination, an event which our play records with impressive power. In my judgment this scene is the most remarkable tragedy ever staged in the history of the drama.

To begin with, if Lincoln were here "The Birth of a Nation" could never have been written. There would have been no material for the reign of terror which the second act so faithfully records. There could have been no disfranchisement of whites and no wholesale enfranchisement of blacks.

We must not forget that Stevens, who became the dictator of the republic on the death of the president, hated Lincoln with fierce, consuming fury. When Lincoln fell the south was at the mercy of this strange, savage old man, whose iron mills—Lee's army had burned at Chambersburg, Pa., and whose soul was still more embittered by his long association with his quadroon mistress and the ostracism he suffered on her account.

How deep the gulf which separated Stevens, the author of reconstruction, from Abraham Lincoln we can best judge by extracts from Lincoln's own words.

Our play opposes the marriage of blacks to whites. Lincoln says (page 101, "Letters and Addresses"): "Judge Douglas is especially horrified at the thought of the mixing of the blood of the white and black races. Agreed for once—a thousand times agreed! A separation of the races is the only perfect preventive of amalgamation. The enterprise is a difficult one, but where there is a will there is a way."

Again he says on the issue: "What next? Free them and make them politically and socially our equals? My own feelings will not admit this."

And with still more direct and vivid words: "I have no purpose to introduce political and social equality between the white and black races. I am not, nor ever have been, in favor of making voters or jurors of Negroes, nor of qualifying them to hold office, nor to intermarry with white people, and I will say in addition to this that there is a physical difference between the white and black races which, I believe, will forever forbid them living together on terms of social and political equality." (Page 121, "Letters and Addresses.")

How could the man who uttered those words approve to-day the attempt of a Negro intermarriage society to stop this great patriotic play?

Your statement that Lincoln held the Union indissoluble is a silly quibble. Who questions it? You mean to imply, of course, that "The Birth of a Nation" denies it! And yet the whole play rests squarely on the fact that Lincoln held it, the south denied it, and the civil war settled it in Lincoln's favor! We glorify his name for that reason.

In my historical note in the programme I say in so many words: "The north, under the leadership of Abraham Lincoln, held that the Union was indestructible and its sovereignty supreme."

And yet you say, "Abraham Lincoln would not have much respect for the historical conclusions of Thomas Dixon!"

He certainly could have no respect for the historical information of the writer of that editorial. I have studied the life of Lincoln for more than twenty years. Your editorial reads as if it were written by a good Methodist exhorter.

Again you set up a man of straw, all your own, and proceed to knock him down. You intimate that "The Birth of a Nation" teaches that slavery was introduced into the south by greedy Yankee skippers and that the abolition movement was born of northern hypocrisy and jealousy—no such idea is conveyed in the play anywhere from start to finish. Where did you get it? Have you seen the play?

Again you repeat the cheap campaign lie of 1868 which declared that the south was trying to re-enslave the Negro. I challenge you to make good this assertion with a single fact of history.

You say, "Whether he would have supported the flat enfranchisement of the Negro we do not know." Of course you do not know. You show it in every line! I know, and prove my position by the words from Lincoln's lips quoted above and the further sentence from his famous letter to Governor Hahn of Louisiana on this issue. "You are about to have a convention," he writes, "which, among other things, will probably define the elective franchise. I barely suggest for your private consideration whether some of the colored people may not be let in—as, for instance, the very intelligent, and especially those who have fought gallantly in our ranks."

If you had ever read this letter, written March 13, 1864, you certainly could not doubt his attitude toward the flat enfranchisement of a million ignorant slaves and at the same time the disfranchisement of their masters, whose fathers had created this republic!

You indulge in some fine generalities in denouncing Mr. Griffith and myself for raising issue of the marriage of blacks to whites and refer to Lincoln as our antagonist! I challenge you to quote all of Lincoln's words on this point in his debate with Douglas. I've only taken a few sentences. I suggest that it's a good time to set your readers right on this point. Give the paragraphs in full. I can stand it if you can.

You intimate that we eulogize Lincoln and then attack the great ideas for which he stood. You haven't shown it. Abraham Lincoln never believed that the Negro could be assimilated into our social or political life. With his Proclamation of Emancipation he coupled his plan for their colonization and asked for millions of dollars to begin it. With every message he sent to congress—ten the subject of the Negro he repeated this demand to the hour of his death. In his appeal to the border states for compensated emancipation [illegible] in South America for [illegible] be obtained simply [illegible] possible in the hope that next year a production of this sort will be artistically and aesthetically out of fashion. Melodrama on the stage has vanished, why not episodic [illegible] in the movies?

INEZ MILHOLLAND BOISSEVAIN.
Harmon, N. Y., April 9.

Editor of The Globe, Sir— . . . Not satisfied with what I read about Mr. Dixon's photo-play, and desiring to be just in my judgment, I went to see it and have tried to judge it impartially. If it ended with the first act, there would be but little to criticize adversely, although the evident leaning toward the southern point of view, and the gross injustice to the memory of that great commoner, Thaddeus Stevens—who with all his faults was probably the truest Democrat that ever lived—are very pronounced. During the whole course of the civil war it was always known where Stevens would be found—on the side of liberty and union, and opposed to slavery and disunion. That was a distinction in those days that must have been dear to the heart of Lincoln.

But it is in the last act that violence is done to historical accuracy, to the general character of the colored race, for of all the races on the earth they take the lead for patience and long suffering under great provocation—and to the character of several great leaders of the period treated, especially of the great senator from Massachusetts, Charles Sumner. The only way to judge a production like this, as to its effect upon members of the colored race, is to try to put yourself in their place and then say how you would like it.

ISAAC ROBERTS.
New York, April 10.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—The last sentence of your Saturday editorial on Lincoln concisely summed up the condition which makes possible such things as "The Birth of a Nation." Negroes don't wish to marry white women, and any Negro who does so is ostracized. And I don't think that white women are so eager to marry Negroes that laws have to be passed to keep them from it. Then why such laws? The answer is in your editorial—"A general desire to be unjust to the Negro and to get an excuse for the injustice."

AUBREY BOWSER.
New York, April 11.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—I am glad to see that you possess the virtue of expressing your convictions publicly when you see the necessity. I am glad, too, to see you do it so courageously and so fairly. The "Birth of a Nation" depicts a most regrettable period of our national life, and one that might well be allowed to remain in oblivion, even though its present pictorial representations had excluded all references to the colored race. Armed conflicts such as that of 1861-65 and such as the awful series now proceeding are an eternal disgrace and damnation to the human race, and the less familiar we are made with the incarnated vices of mankind the better for our mental and spiritual health. We have no need whatever, either from a historic or a moral point of view, for the visualization of horrors.

T. E. W.
New York, April 9.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—I have read your two editorials this week in regard to the moving picture, "Birth of a Nation," and am compelled to call you to account for inconsistency. I was first interested in the "Birth of a Nation" through your critic's notice of the first production, and the notice was unusually strong, and, I may state, one of the most enthusiastic descriptions I have even seen in The Globe. . . . So I was led to invest, and I must say both as an old timer of the days of the old Bowery and a veteran of the civil war, I don't remember when I so fully enjoyed a night at the show, and I don't remember ever seeing an audience so unanimous in its approval of the picture. In all parts of the house it was one continual roar. . . . I am going again and are if your and other influences have spoiled the morals of the story.

A VETERAN OF THE CIVIL WAR.
New York, April 9.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—Away with all exhibitions of anti-Christian race prejudice, especially in this land in which all members of the human family should dwell together in genuine brotherhood! Of the most demoralizing five curses afflicting the human race, to wit, insincerity, selfishness, false pride, bigotry, and race prejudice, race prejudice is the most baneful, the most soul-withering.

P. K. P.
Woodhaven, N. Y., April 10.

Editor of The Globe, Sir— . . . I protest against the "Birth of a Nation" as vigorously as my neighbor. I find it's historically false, untrue to life, bad art, melodramatic, meretricious, caddish, dull, exaggerated as drama, and, compared to "Cabiria," spectacularly imitative and inferior. (Many of its individual scenes are very lovely, of course, and its atmosphere is preserved throughout.)

But I would not suppress it just because it does not happen to suit my taste or morals. I would try to extend my taste and morals to as many people as FILM TO ...

...eatures ...ected
...egro Asso...
Eliminated

...ASILY MASTERPIECE

...etails Faithful in ...eature to the ...s Depicted.

...he Clansman," or as it is now ...led, "The Birth of a Nation," is ... and cannot ever be pleasing to ... negro race. The great film was ...en a special ... for Picture Censor ...apin, Deputy City Attorney How... and members of the press so that ... specific objection and alleged ob...tionable features complained of by ... Negro Taxpayers and Voters' as...iation could be passed upon. The ...ult showed that complaint number ...ee, the scene regarding Gus and the ...le girl, had already been as com...tely expurged as possible during ... latter part of the Los Angeles ..., while complaint number six, con...ning that part of the picture in ...ich a mob of negroes are shown ...alting white women, has also been ...minated.

...t is felt that to make any other ...nges than those already made, ... in minor details (and Mana... Neilson of Clune's theater is ...king such corrective changes as ... possible) would simply spoil ... film. The story itself must ... necessity find ...ection among ... negro race, for the black man ... always see in it a bitter ar...gnment of his people at their worst, ...le the white man who thinks will, ... the contrary, never blame the ...ro as a race for the faults which ...e brought out in the circum...ces. To take a people which had ...n held in slavery and denied all ... advantages of education, save in ...equent cases, and suddenly turn ... tables so that the former slave ...inated and governed, would neces...ly cause hundreds thus treated to ... license for ...erty.

The Clansman ... a much better ... the film than the one now ... selected, is far greater as a picture than "Cabiria," for it couples spectacular features even superior to the wonderful ones shown in that film, with a story which is both intensely dramatic and interest-holding. Great as were the battle scenes of "Cabiria" they lag far behind the war pictures of the Griffith reel. Both teach historic lessons, but "The Clansman" brings history close to the present time and tells a tale of what is admittedly the darkest period in the nation's life. That this story, especially the historic features such as the assassination of Lincoln, the surrender of Lee, is told with fidelity to facts every close student of the history of this country will admit at once.

Fidelity to Detail Marvelous.

One example of this accuracy is enough. On the evening of April 8 The Star printed in its civil war history a minutely detailed account of the surrender of Lee. This account was made up out of every narrative of that event obtainable and told exactly how the room looked in which the surrender took place, described the dress of those who took part and even told what kind of tables were used. In the picture-story of the same event every detail mentioned in this history of the war will be found reproduced in every feature.

The Lincoln assassination is, perhaps, the most wonderful feature of the whole film. Where Griffith found the exact spot for the picture or whether he really built the interior of his Ford theater for this part of the picture, is not known, but the portrayal of the tragedy is wonderful, even to the acting of "Our American Cousin" on the stage in the show house.

Some idea of the magnitude of the war sections of the picture can be obtained in terms of money. Each day during the taking of the battle scenes there was shot away $12,000 in cash. It is not to be wondered, therefore, that they are adequate, especially the scenes from the hilltop showing Sherman in his march to the sea.

Whether "The Clansman" is overdrawn or not only those who passed through such episodes as those depicted, can say. Objection is made to a feature in which a negro judge and jury tries a negro for an alleged assault against a white, acquitting the accused. The local association says that there never was such an episode in the history of the reconstruction. Granted that the scene is probably overdrawn, it is but a minor and really unimportant feature, one which would not be noted in particular were attention not called to it.

There is ample testimony in contemporary history that the conditions during the period of reconstruction after the death of Lincoln, the one man who could have solved the problem with equity, were terrible. The picture endeavors to show that the ...formation ... such an organization as the Ku-Klux Klan was an absolute necessity to preserve the white race in the south. It does make of this organization a God-sent boon to the suffering whites, a punisher of the wrongdoings of the negroes who had been led on by whites from the north, men much worse than the negroes themselves ever were. This is the south's side of the argument, and "The Clansman" presents it with force and mute eloquence. The heroes of this film are, undoubtedly, the hundreds of white figures who ride at night. The spectator rides with them in the film as the mind rides with Paul Revere in the colonial war days. One holds one's breath until the clans arrive in time to prevent further damage, and so the film must plead guilty to the charge of crowning the K.K.K. with the crown of noble work well done.

Whatever the sentiment invoked, "The Clansman" should be seen. It is not only the world's greatest film in size, it is the greatest film in the world in point of heart interest, dramatic detail and historic fidelity to those scenes picked from the pages of history. No one can ever see it without having a better idea of the nation's story than ever before, and no one will ever leave Clune's theater after seeing it without marveling that the negro has risen to his present position from such a start—a position so high that in nearly every city in the country negroes are to be found filling positions of trust, discharging their duties in such a way as to command the respect of citizens generally.

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 11, 1915

Race Problem Eclipses White Slave in Movies

Minneapolis Woman at Head of Club's Drama Committee Visits the East.

Mrs. C. W. Cartwright Gives Her Impressions of Censorship System.

Motion pictures on race problems are succeeding the white slave pictures, says Mrs. Charles W. Cartwright, chairman of the Drama Committee of the General Federation of Womens Clubs, who has just returned from a six weeks' stay in New York.

"Public interest in white slave films had waned and producers have brought out 'The Nigger' and 'The Birth of a Nation,' two race plays which are the best of this type, which I am sure will shortly be sweeping over the country," said Mrs. Cartwright. "The latter play is true to history for the most part, and a wonderfully beautiful production but not likely to meet with entire favor in the South."

"The Nigger" is considered objectionable by Mrs. Cartwright because of the race question it brings up and it would be desirable to have public opinion taboo it, she says.

Up to Each Community.

"This film was censored by the National Board of Censorship in New York City," she says, "and was greatly modified by it, but this organization had no authority to stop its presentation. Each community must act for itself in dealing with a play of this kind that is likely to arouse race prejudices and antagonisms."

After studying the movies in New York and the theaters producing plays as well, Mrs. Cartwright believes the movies are about to become the tired business man's pet form of relaxation. She believes the movies will to a large extent supplant the extravaganzas and that the intimate form of plays in the small theaters will become the favorites with those interested in the drama.

Mrs. Cartwright spent some time studying the procedure of the National Board of Censorship in New York and she is of the opinion the integrity of that body is unassailable.

The Best Way Out.

"I do not say that it is the best thing that can be for censoring motion pictures, but I do believe it is the best thing that exists," she said. "It tries to reflect public opinion in judging pictures and to eliminate what might be baneful or vicious in its influence. The producers need public opinion with them and the producers of 95 per cent of the films shown in this country are co-operating with the National Board of Censorship. The judgment of the board must necessarily be very broad and liberal. It must pass things which at times some communities would not approve, but which public opinion would not on the whole condemn. Every city should have its own volunteer committee to supplement for each community the work done by the National Board, I believe."

Mrs. Cartwright thinks it is as feasible to talk of federal censorship of newspapers, books and art as it is to talk of federal censorship of motion picture films, and she is firmly of opinion that no paid board of censors can ever handle censorship satisfactorily.

CLANSMAN IS PASSED BY BOARD

Rehearsal of Wonderful Motion Picture Meets With General Approval

Full of Thrills and Action and Reveals American History in Detail

When a motion picture can hold you in thrall for three full hours, when in that time you feel all the emotions sway you and your breath come in short gasps; when you know the tears are near the surface and in another instant your face is flushed, there comes a realization of the power of the silent drama. Imagine, if you will, an empty theater save for a mere handful of persons occupying a few seats in the rear of the house, before you nothing but empty seats, a cold, bleak, unresponsive theater, not even stage settings; an orchestra rehearsing, the leader in a cracked voice humming the air and giving sharp directions to the players, a scene like this with everything possible unattractive and calculated to dampen your interest; then the lights are turned off and the operator in his booth overhead starts the first reel of "The Clansman" on the screen.

That was the setting at the rehearsal at Clune's theater when the picture was "tried out" before representatives of the press, the legal department of the city of Pasadena in the person of Assistant City Attorney Howard, and Mr. F. M. Chapin, censor. It was most uninviting, dismal, even depressing, but before the picture had run five minutes that little handful of critics forgot about their surroundings and they knew they were witnessing a wonderful performance.

There is not a dull moment in the three hours of its presentation. Thrill follows thrill, action follows action, and the story it tells is still more wonderful.

It is as if some mighty magician had brought his powers into being to reveal the controversy over slavery before the Civil War, to show the causes leading up to the bloody conflicts and the bitter feelings of the north and the south. Then follows a vivid, fascinating, awe-inspiring portion of American history when President Lincoln was the victim of an assassin. So truly is this pictured, so accurate the detail, that one marvels at the work of the camera.

The interior of Ford's theater is shown, the president's box draped in the national colors. The audience assembles and finally the president appears and takes his seat in the box, bowing to the applauding crowd. Then Booth, the assassin, appears. He is shown making his way into the president's box, there is a flash, a puff of smoke and the assassin leaps from the box to the stage, turns to shout "Sic semper tyrannis," and then makes his escape from the stage.

There is not a flaw in the presentation of this wonderful and tragic event in American history.

The final battle of the war is shown, so realistic that one shudders at the appalling sight. There is a wonderful scene showing Sherman's historic march to the sea and the destruction and poverty that followed. Then the surrender of Lee and the Confederate soldiers going back to their ruined homes.

Up to this point the picture deals with the Civil War and the slaughter of that mighty conflict. Then follows that awful page in American history, the days of the reconstruction period when the proud southerners were compelled to treat the negroes as free men.

It is the blackest page in American history. Certain of the lower typ... negroes took advantage of the ...sion in conjunction with ... whites to place the negro ... white persons were mi... finally it became nece... whites to organize and ... Klan, white robed night ... into being. It was a d... for a despera... condition ... of the Ku ... their stro...

CLANSMAN PROVES WONDERFUL FILM

Rehearsal Given Before Members of Press- Censors and City Attorney

(Continued from Page Nine)

the negroes, drunk with power, mistaking license for freedom, committing unpardonable crimes, rioting, abusing their former owners, shoving whites from the sidewalks and invading their homes, that has brought forth protests from the negroes against the picture. It is truly a sordid, terrible story, but these conditions really did exist and the picture is but a portrayal of the truth, horrible though that truth may be, and the truth is no libel.

In the picture is also shown the baseness of the whites and the better, law-abiding class of negroes.

There is one scene in particular, a fight in a gin mill, wheer a white youth in quest of a human fiend known as Gus enters and gives battle to ... blacks. This is one of the greatest hand-to-hand fights ever shown on a motion picture screen. It rivals the fight in "The Spoilers." The youth hammers the blacks into insensibility, he hurls them through windows and crushes them with chairs and bottles. It is thrilling to a degree and one of those gems of motion picture production that makes the spectator fairly gasp.

The Ku Klux Klan throws the body of the fiend on the doorsteps of the colored lieutenant-governor, Lynch. It is the firebrand that starts the negroes on the war path. They take possession of the city, abusing the whites and entering the homes. The Ku Klux Klan, 1500 strong, ride into the city and entering their homes. The Ku Klux Klan, in every detail. With the blacks swarming the streets the Ku Klux riders come sweeping through the city. It is as perfect a picture as can be conceived, thrilling, crowded with action and the spectator wonders at the marvel of motion picture construction.

All through the picture there runs a romance, all through the picture is depicted the horrors of war and ignorance, tragedy follows tragedy, in some parts the tears instinctively come to your eyes and in other parts the flush of anger. It is a strong, wonderful picture and it is projected at Clune's Theater in Pasadena better than at Clune's Auditorium in Los Angeles. The picture is larger, clearer and will be accompanied by the same music, the same quartette and stage settings.

After the rehearsal, it was seen that the parts to which objection had been made by the negroes of this ci... had been eliminated in Los Ange... some time ago and Assistant City A...torney Howard gave as his opinion that there was nothing objectionable. Mr. Chapin, a member of the local board of censors, agreed that the main objections of the negroes had been complied with and that the picture as shown was acceptable in every way.

Manager Neilson of Clune's asserted that it was the strongest and best picture he had ever seen and he failed to see where any objection could be raised against it as shown at the rehearsal.

NEWS TRIBUNE
...s: Detroit, Mich.
Apr 11, 1915

BY THEIR FRUITS KNOW THEIR WORTH.

In the production of "The Birth of a Nation" in this city a race is li... belled. In the office of the collect... of internal revenue for the seco... district of New York that race ma... be judged by its fruits.

Charles W. Anderson goes out ... office today after holding for ten yea... this responsible post under the treas...ury. Many millions of dollars hav... passed through his hands. His dea...ings have been practically all wit... white men of the keenest intellec... and of substantial business standin... Capacity and courtesy have been th... qualities most remarked in his co...duct of an office maintained alwa... in the highest efficiency. In Colle... Anderson's time, three complic... and important new revenue meas... the income tax, the corporatio... and the war revenue tax, hav... this office the most difficult, ... the most important, ever h... colored man under the ... He has stood the tests ... that ... No race is fairly ... up as types ... grade...

PER
New York City
APR 1 0 1915

MAYOR MITCHE
VICTOR HE COLONIAL SU
ANOTHER
FRISCO GETS NEXT
DEATH OF WM.
HORKHEI
PENN. CENSOR LAW

MAYOR MITCHELL ORD ATIONS IN "BIRTH OF
Acting on a complaint prese
Garrison Villard, Rabbi Wise
C. Howe, representing the inte colored societies of New Yor
Mitchell, Tuesday, March 30, al eliminations to be made in Birth of a Nation," playing to ness currently at the Liberty Th
Wise who is connected with
Board of Censors, in his request
Mayor to take action on the p utterance to the following remar exhibition to go is stupid or wor regret that my name is even ren nected as a member of such a b negroes in this city have been pati have not yet arisen to protest like who attacked the production of boy of the Western World.' The the playboy as a caricature, not a satisfaction.
"So this production, Mr. Mayor, will render a great service to the
this country."
Rabbi Wise is a prominent
of New York City. Oswald Garrison
the editor of The Evening Post, that "The Birth of a Nation," as far as it was concerned, was "improper, unji and immoral." "I'll state whatever repu
tion I have as a historical student," sa
Mr. Villard, "on my charges against this fil play. The logging in of the negro into th exhibition is needless and uncalled for, an the play would be improved upon in respect if the objectionable scenes were out."
Mr. Villard, in addition to his edi activities, finds time to attend to the of vice president of the National Associ for the Advancement of Colored People.
Frederic C. Howe claimed that cer scenes in the picture affected ten mil citizens of the United States, who were graded by the production.
The scenes chiefly objected to were pursuing of a white girl by a crazed negro, and the attempted love-making with a white woman on the part of the mulatto governor of the piece. "The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," which in literary form caused a mild sensation when it was first published.
GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH COUNSEL.
Following the presentation of the recorded complaints, D. W. Griffith, Thursday afternoon, April 1, accompanied by his attorney, Martin W. Littleton and armed with

ICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.
Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of the Tribune.]—
I call your attention to the fact that Chicago has an extremely good board of censorship for films, the members of which, appointed under the rules of civil service, are under the supervi sion of the morals division of police.
These censors pass upon all moving pictures before they are shown in Chicago. I note from THE TRIBUNE of April that a film recently shown in New York known as "The Birth of a Nation" has been "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, secretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitzmorris may be a most excellent secretary and well versed in his duties as such, is it not rather unnecessary that he should usurp the work of the entire censorship board and that a film should be authorized upon the recommendation of one person?
"The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to arouse race prejudice against colored people; in it they are all bestial and villainous, while the white men—especially one of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly noble, performing magnanimous acts of chivalry and invariably appearing at the last moment to rescue the virtuous and save the country from destruction. Such a presentation of an historic period works untold harm. Doubtless some of the incidents are correctly reported, but they have been selected with the most sinister motive and for that reason are most misleading and harmful.
A large number of the best citizens of New York protested against the appearance of the film in that city. Is it not singular that permission should have been given for such a notorious film to be shown in Chicago before it was submitted to our board of censors or to the committee of citizens who are occasionally asked to help them? If the city of Chicago considers it worth while to spend $200 a year to sustain this board of censors is it not at such a time as this that its services would be the most valuable? Certainly, public spirited citizens have a right to expect to protest against this extraordinary usurpation of power on the part of a city official.
LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
President Juvenile Protective Association.

Negroes
Call SCENE
New Yo to certain spectacle made by and negr
Mitchel at city plied the and bad Hall abo tionable ducers scenes.
The d mayor resented the Adv
Oswald
associat was and tent tion
Even the N Censor
"Th play degra war negro ture.
and Mr
Wise
"If it power and lea beings has bre
which stupi same such have risen attacke World, poem.
Dixon, man" t was ca lieve that
"S you servi Lilli that potent this pro
One Moore, appeale

Thaddeus Stevens, Statesman.

Editor of The Globe. Sir—In his letter to The Globe of the 8th inst. Mr. Thomas Dixon makes a most bitter attack on the private life of Thaddeus Stevens. The writer does not see how his private life can detract from the great public services of him who justly won the title of America's great commoner.

It is, therefore, refreshing to turn from Mr. Dixon's narration of private frailts, expressed without one charitable word, to an appreciation of this statesman who believed that the nation was born at Lexington rather than at Appomattox.

Mr. Blaine in his "Twenty Years in Congress" (vol. 1, page 325), writes as follows, speaking of the Thirty-ninth Congress, which assembled in 1861: "The natural leader who assumed his place by common consent was Thaddeus Stevens, a man of strong peculiarities of character, able, trained, and fearless. . . . He had the reputation of being somewhat unscrupulous as to political methods, somewhat careless in personal conduct, somewhat lax in personal morals; but to the one great object of his life, the destruction of slavery and the elevation of the slave, he was supremely devoted. From the pursuit of that object nothing could deflect him. Upon no phase of it would he listen to compromise. Any man who was truly anti-slavery was his friend. Whoever espoused the cause and proved faithless in never so small a degree became his enemy inevitably and irreconcilably. Toward his own race he seemed often to be misanthropic. He was learned in the law, and for a third of a century had held high rank at the bar of a state distinguished for great lawyers. . . . His memory of facts, dates, and figures was exact, and in argument he knew the book and chapter and page for reference. He was fond of young men, invited their society, encouraged and generously aided them.

"He was easily moved by the distress of others. He was kind, charitable, lavish of his money in the relief of poverty. He had characteristics which seemed contradictory, but which combined to make one of the memorable figures in the parliamentary history of the United States, a man who had the courage to meet any opponent and who was never overmatched in intellectual conflict."

Mr. Stevens in the House of Representatives, June 10, 1850, did not hesitate to take issue with the great leader of his party, Mr. Webster, in the speech popularly known as "Against Webster and Northern Compromisers," and at its close, with almost prophetic vision, in these words he foretold the downfall of slavery:

"For unless progressive civilization and the increasing love of freedom throughout the Christian and civilized world are fallacious, the sun of liberty, of universal liberty, is already above the horizon and fast coursing to his meridian splendor, when no advocate of slavery, no apologist of slavery, can look upon his face and live."

He did not live to see the adoption of the Fifteenth Amendment, but his courageous leadership, beginning a generation before, when he stood almost alone, resulted in its adoption, and is it not possible that in this success may be found the source at this late day of the attack on the private life of Thaddeus Stevens as expressed by Mr. Dixon?

HENRY K. DAVIS.

New York, April 12.

THE KU KLUX KLAN.

Mr. Rossiter Johnson and the Rev. Thomas Dixon.

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: I deem it regrettable that two men of culture and good breeding and rearing cannot discuss a difference of opinion or conviction without growing overwarm.

Having been a Confederate soldier and having lived in the South during the period of reconstruction, I had a fair opportunity of knowing something of the remarkable organization called the Ku Klux, which Mr. Johnson designates as a "hideous band." In my native county of Marshall, in Alabama, there was not a respectable white citizen who did not either belong to the Klan or stand in full sympathy with its purposes and conduct. The captain of our Klan had been a captain in the Ninth Alabama Infantry, Mahone's Division, Army of Northern Virginia, a gallant soldier who did his duty and was trying to rebuild his home, which, with ours and hundreds of other homes, had been ruthlessly burned. His first lieutenant was an officer of my company who had lost an arm under Forrest. The rest were men of this class, and I can assure Mr. Johnson that if these made a "hideous band" the whole Southern people were hideous. I do not think they were.

The fact is that in its incipiency and until it had accomplished the purposes for which it was intended the Klan had the sanction of practically the entire white population of the States which had been of the Confederacy. When it was disbanded and the lawless element, which, unfortunately, is not confined to any section, began to use the name to cover robbery or acts of private revenge, the ex-Confederate soldiers and their families joined in the movement to suppress these unjustifiable deeds. General Forrest personally took charge, and his work was an important factor in the restoration of order.

The conditions with us were very distressing. A company of negro soldiers garrisoned our village, and while the captain of this company was a white man and a gentleman, it was very galling to have over us soldiers some of whom had been our slaves. My father, having been a Judge before secession, was disfranchised, while "Peyton," one of the ex-slaves of our family, who was still living with us, announced himself as a candidate for the Legislature, and he could neither read nor write. It was not until the carpetbaggers began to drill the negroes at night that the Klan sprang into existence.

Mr. Johnson quotes from the author of that well named book "A Fool's Errand," who says the Ku Klux caused the hair of his wife's head to turn "completely white in a single night." In this they performed a miracle of depigmentation which was never done before, and probably will never again be recorded without the use of peroxide.

JOHN A. WYETH.

New York, April 13.

PITTSFIELD, MASS
APR 14 1915

Evening Post
APR 15 1915

If only somebody could capture the author of "The Birth of a Nation," keep him in captivity for a year or so and tame him and civilize him—that would be doing a genuine missionary service.

CHRONICLE
San Francisco, Cal.

HELD FOR FILM PLAY ROW.

White Man to Be Tried for Disturbance at "Birth of a Nation."

The case against the white man who created a disturbance at last night's performance of the film-play "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre, has been set for trial to-morrow evening in the Night Court. The offender, Howard Schaeffle, twenty years old, of 123 Washington Place, who said he was a reporter, was arraigned before Magistrate Ten Eyck last night and held in $500 bail. Schaeffle said that he was born in Maryland and had come to this city recently from Boston. He declared that he had acted as he did because he couldn't sit quietly and see negroes maligned as they were in the film. He threw two eggs, which landed among the orchestra, and the police found three more in his pockets.

Although Schaeffle was the only man arrested, there was plenty of evidence that a number of other persons were present in the theatre who did not approve of the way in which the Negro was depicted in certain incidents. One man, a negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen, head of a Negro news agency, rose after Schaeffle had been led from the theatre by private detectives and called out loudly:

"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination, it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't have liked this play."

Allen was ushered to the street by employees of the theatre without being arrested. Several other men, some of them white and some colored, also got up and left. A group of negroes escorted Schaeffle to the West 37th Street police station, whence he was taken to the Night Court. James T. Thomas, jr., a negro lawyer of 3 Broadway, volunteered his services as counsel for Schaeffle.

APR 15 1915

'Birth of the Nation' Brings Forth Bad Eggs

Young Man Bombards Movie Screen in Protest to Slur on Negro Race.

Special Dispatch to The Chronicle.

NEW YORK, April 14.—A whistle shrilled tonight in the Liberty Theater, where the much-discussed moving picture, "The Birth of the Nation," is being shown, and a young man rose up in the gallery and began throwing eggs at the screen. The eggs fell in the orchestra pit, and although the fiddlers stood their ground manfully, it was evidently a trial. The eggs were not fresh.

Private detectives in the house yanked the young man from his seat and took him over to the police station, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct.

He said he was Howard Schaeffle, 20 years old, of Washington place; that he had recently come from Boston and couldn't sit quietly by and see the negro race maligned. Several negroes followed him from the theater and went to the Night Court with him, vowing to defend him.

PROTESTS ON CLANSMAN FILM

Following a meeting of the Negro Taxpayers' and Voters' Association last night, a committee of its members conferred with the board of censors this morning to request that "The Clansman" be censored when the film is shown in Pasadena at Clune's theater next week.

Fear of arousing race hatred and prejudice against the negroes was the cause of the protest lodged with the board of censors by A. H. Evans, president of the association. The committee does not object to "The Clansman" as a whole but to certain features. These they have asked the censors to eliminate. F. M. Chapin and Homer F. Stone, members of the board of censors and Commissioner A. L. Hamilton considered the objections with the committee and have promised to take the matter up with J. C. Neilsen, manager of Clune's theater.

Under the provisions of section six of Ordinance 1498 creating the board of censors, it states "that the board shall be empowered and authorized and it shall be its duty to prohibit, or prohibit in part, any picture which it finds to be obscene, indecent, improper, licentious or immoral." Evans and the members of the negroes' committee claim that several scenes in the film play are decidedly objectionable to them.

Following the conference, Chapin and Stone took the matter up with Deputy City Attorney Howard. He does not believe that the censors can do anything in the matter, advising them not to prohibit the action of the play. To satisfy the members of the negroes' committee, the censors will request Neilsen to eliminate the scenes that they take exception to. The petition of the negroes to the censors follows:

"The Negro Taxpayers' and Voters' Association of Pasadena, California, an organization existing for the promotion of good government and better citizenship, having learned that a certain dramatized film moving picture known as 'The Clansman' is scheduled to be exhibited in one of the theaters of the city of Pasadena, and believing as we do that said picture tends to degrade the negro race, and that if said picture is publicly exhibited in the theaters or play houses of the city of Pasadena it will create racial hatred as well as revive race hatred otherwise dormant, thereby rupturing the harmonious relations now existing between the citizens of this community, and will work a great detriment generally to this great and progressive commonwealth, and since it is known that the book entitled 'The Clansman' out of which the play was dramatized, is not a truthful story of facts, but a gross exaggeration of everything that relates to the negro and the white race as well as of the reconstruction period, which is especially illustrated in the picture by the following objectionable features:

"First, the overdrawn and unnatural description of the character known as Lieut. Gov. Lynch.

"Second, the scene between the mulatto housekeeper and Stoneman, where he finds her after she has torn her clothes, especially that part of the scene where he strokes her shoulders and his feelings are seen to be aroused.

"Third, the attempted rape of the little girl by the character known as Gus.

"Fourth, the representation of the negro judge, jury and attorney. No such thing ever occurred at any time in any part of the south.

"Fifth, the impression given that the Ku Klux Klan was a God-sent mission.

"Sixth, the mistreatment of the white woman by the negroes in the mob scene just before the arrival of the Ku Klux Klan.

"Therefore, we do hereby protest to your honorable body against the public exhibition of the aforesaid picture, or pictures in the city of Pasadena.

(Signed) "A. H. EVANS,
"RAINE M. WRIGHT,
"Committee of N. T. and V. Asso.
Incorporated body under the la the State of California, in th Pasadena, Cal."

CLAN
FI Great Moving at Clune's
Audi
Only One Note of First Prod
Famous
Cheering and app
Clune's theater at the sentation of "The night. The house w a representative Pa
The city commission with their wives, bu professional men, ba ers in every line of the unfolding of the
There were a few co audience also.
So masterfully has pictured the story th are worked up to a m
the spectator and finds an outlet for cheering the dashing assault.
So it was last even audience cold and gradually warmed up patriotic spirit when pleting Abraham Linco upon the screen. Prob
American history, unle
Washington, is so nea of the people as Linc revealed in the scene ceives the mother of demned to death and chair in the executive respect and listens att story. Then follows h and when he turns to signs the pardon, the
the man so beloved by revealed and the appla taneous.
Just once last evenin
note of discord on th audience. In a scene man is shot down the
the lips of some person tion "good" and in an in drowned in hisses. It w dent, quickly over, but feeling of the audience
Mae March, who has t favorite sister of "The L Ben Cameron, takes her cinatingly that she ove
other young man in th
In the scene where she a herself fittingly to wel turn of her brother after is shown trimming her cotton and blackening it make it appear as ermi trick which pleases the a Mr. Griffith has fou types. The mulatto, St giant, is truly represen renegade Gus is repulsive acter is intended. Austi as the leader of the R foment trouble between and the black, is well act
Lewis. Abraham Lincol
the pictures of the great gether Mr. Griffith has s which are absolutely r and it is this that makes man" so great a picture
The story has been tol columns before. It deals events preceding the Ci afterwards, the reconstru in the South when the cured the power over the enfranchised the white vo
the state government ab pleased.
They were inspired by sought to gain from it all.
tion, however, got beyond result one of the black history resulted ala with this in all merely arouses a part of the sp
most wonderful

HURLS EGGS AT FILMS OF WAR

"Birth of a Nation" Arouses Ire of Howard Schoeffle in Liberty Theatre.

IS HELD IN $500 BAIL

Missiles Fall Short of the Screen. Negro Lawyer Conducts Defense.

Howard Schoeffle, of 123 Washington place, was arrested last night in the Liberty Theatre, during an exhibition of the moving picture drama, "The Birth of a Nation." The police say Schoeffle threw two eggs from his seat in the balcony, aiming at the stage. They fell short and struck musicians in the orchestra pit.

Schoeffle was accompanied to the West Thirty-seventh street police station by a negro lawyer, James T. Thomas, Jr., of 203 Broadway, who later represented him in the Men's Night Court, where Magistrate Ten Eyck held him in $500 bail for examination to-morrow in Jefferson Market Court, on a charge of disorderly conduct.

Schoeffle, the police said, admitted throwing the eggs, declaring that the pictured action aroused his anger by its injustice to the negro race and he threw eggs to express his disapproval.

Since the photo play has been running at the Liberty the theatre has been guarded by men from a private detective agency. Last night when Schoeffle rose in his seat and threw eggs from a paper bag, women screamed and the detectives looked for the cause of excitement. Captain Convoy of the West Thirty-seventh street police station, who was nearby, was called.

He had ordered the traffic policeman on post in Forty-second street to keep an eye on the Liberty, where there was some fear a negro demonstration might be staged. The police said there were few negroes in the theatre when they entered, but several left just after the egg-throwing incident. When Schoeffle was searched at the police station, the paper bag was still in his hand. It contained one broken egg.

Telegram APR 15 1915

EGG NEGRO SCENES IN LIBERTY FILM PLAY

Police Quell Disturbers at "Birth of a Nation," and Arrest Indignant Southerner.

A mixed crowd of white men and negroes who had obtained seats in the front row of the gallery started a demonstration against the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre at 10:30 o'clock last night.

Policemen, ushers and private detectives who had been stationed at convenient intervals in anticipation of a demonstration swarmed down upon the noise makers and seized two of the leaders. As they did so two eggs splattered over the screen, blotting out portions of a picture showing a white Southern girl in the act of leaping off a cliff to escape from a negro pursuer.

A white man, who gave the name of Howard Schaeffle, was hurried from the theatre after private detectives had asserted it was he who threw the eggs. He cried out, "Rotten, rotten," as the detectives pushed him down the stairs toward the street. He was taken to the West Thirty-seventh Street station on a charge of disorderly conduct.

A negro who walked with a slight limp followed the white man out with the help of detectives. He protested loudly that "that play's a libel on a race. It's got to be stopped."

A negro arose some minutes after the main party had left.

"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination," he shouted, "it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't like this play." The negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen and that he was the head of a colored news agency, was ushered to the street.

At the West Thirty-seventh Street Station Schaeffle was searched and a paper bag containing three eggs was found in his overcoat pocket.

"I was taking the eggs home for breakfast," he said, "and I stopped in to see this play. I am a Southerner and a libertarian, and I believe in the education and the uplifting of the negro. It made my blood boil to see the play and I threw the eggs at the screen. The play will have to be removed from the boards."

Schaeffle said he was born in Maryland. A negro lawyer, escorted by a delegation of negroes who had not been in the theatre, appeared at the station to take charge of Schaeffle's case.

The management of the theatre pointed out this scene as a refutation of the charge that the play was meant to libel the negroes, or show them in an especially bad light. The management insisted that most of the applause during the progress of the play was for scenes showing negroes performing heroic acts.

NEWS
YONKERS, N. Y.

HURLS EGGS AT "NATION" FILM.

Friend of Negroes Locked Up After Liberty Theatre Attack.

A whistle shrilled last night in the Liberty Theatre, where the much discussed moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, and a young man rose up in the gallery and began throwing eggs at the screen. The eggs fell in the orchestra pit, and although the fiddlers stood their ground manfully it was evidently a trial. The eggs were not fresh.

Private detectives in the house yanked the young man from his seat and took him over to the West Thirty-seventh street station, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct. One egg made life more unpleasant for him. It was found in his pocket broken.

He said he was Howard Schaeffle, 20 years old, of 123 Washington place; that he had recently come from Boston and couldn't sit quietly by and see the negro race maligned. Several negroes followed him from the theatre and went to the night court with him, vowing to defend him. Schaeffle was held in $500 bail.

Telegram APR 15 1915

'FRIEND OF NEGRO' HURLS AGED EGGS AT FILM SCENE

"The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre, Causes Disturbance.

YOUTH ARRESTED, WILL BE ARRAIGNED TO-DAY.

Charged with showering ancient eggs on the orchestra at the Liberty Theatre while "The Birth of a Nation" was being reeled off, Howard Schaeffle, who gave his address as No. 123 Washington place, will be arraigned to-day in the Washington Market Police Court. The young man said he was a lover of liberty and that the pictures aroused his anger "through their injustice to the negro race." A small demonstration in the theatre followed the "cannoneer's" ejection by private detectives, but order was quickly restored.

The signal for the egg bombardment was a whistle, blown somewhere in the gallery. Suddenly a rain of eggs fell about the screen, splashing great streaks of yellow over the musicians. The first volley was followed by another, and, although the man's aim was poor, the eggs worked havoc among the orchestra, driving the players to cover in a jiffy.

Private detectives had been stationed throough the audience in anticipation of trouble, and the man was quickly ejected. At the West Thirty-seventh street police station, it was said, a bag containing several more eggs, probably laid last summer, was found in his possession.

A negro lawyer, escorted a delegation of his race to the station and offered his legal services to Schaeffle.

Immediately after Schaeffle was taken from the gallery a negro arose from his seat and declared:—"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination it is inappropriate to present a play that libels ten million loyal American negroes. Ithink President Lincoln would not have liked this play." The speaker was ushered to the street.

Sun, APR 15 1915

HURLS EGGS AT "NATION" FILM.

Friend of Negroes Locked Up After Liberty Theatre Attack.

A whistle shrilled last night in the Liberty Theatre, where the much discussed moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, and a young man rose up in the gallery and began throwing eggs at the screen. The eggs fell in the orchestra pit, and although the fiddlers stood their ground manfully it was evidently a trial. The eggs were not fresh.

Private detectives in the house yanked the young man from his seat and took him over to the West Thirty-seventh street station, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct. One egg made life more unpleasant for him. It was found in his pocket broken.

He said he was Howard Schaeffle, 20 years old, of 123 Washington place; that he had recently come from Boston and couldn't sit quietly by and see the negro race maligned. Several negroes followed him from the theatre and went to the night court with him, vowing to defend him. Schaeffle was held in $500 bail.

Mail, Apr. 15-15

Shell 'Birth of a Nation' Film with Ripe Eggs

Spectators in the gallery of the Liberty Theatre, to show their displeasure at the scenes depicted in the film play "The Birth of a Nation," last night hurled ripe eggs at the screen.

The eggs fell short of their mark, but did telling execution among the orchestra. The suave drummer ordered a retreat and police made Howard Schaefle, of 123 Washington place, a magazine writer, their prisoner. In Night Court he was held in $500 bail on a disorderly conduct charge.

EVE. STAATS ZEITUNG
New York City

APR 15 1915

Mit faulen Eiern bombardirt wurde der im Liberty Theater über die Leinwand gehende Film „The Birth of a Nation". Howard Schaeffle von No. 123 Washington Place wurde als Thäter festgehalten. Er will das Bombardement auf den negerfeindlichen Film als freiheitsliebender Mann unternommen haben.

EVE. STAATS ZEITUNG
New York City

APR 15 1915

Am Gedenktag, der den Amerikanern in die Erinnerung ruft, daß der größte Amerikaner, seit Washington, das Opfer wilden Rassenhasses wurde, feiert man „The Birth of a new nation", indem Neger gegen die Vorstellung protestiren, und ein „echter Amerikaner" Namens Schaeffle auf die Films Eier warf. Und es waren frische Eier. Deshalb wurde er auch verhaftet.

Ev. Sun APR 15 1915

Hurling bad eggs at an unpopular film show is one idea of criticism that strikes aside the mark.

PUBLIC LEDGER
Philadelphia, Pa.

APR

NEGRO FILM SCENE EGGED

Police Quell Disturbance in New York "Movie" Theatre.

NEW YORK, April 15.—A mixed crowd of white men and Negroes who had obtained seats in the front row of the gallery started a demonstration against the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre last night.

Policemen, ushers and private detectives who had been stationed at convenient intervals in anticipation of a demonstration swarmed down upon the noisemakers and seized two of the leaders. As they did so two eggs splattered over the screen, blotting out portions of a picture showing a white Southern girl in the act of leaping off a cliff to escape from a negro pursuer. Two arrests were made.

EVENING SUN
Baltimore, Md.

APR 15 1915

HURLS EGGS AT FILM

Friend Of Negroes Locked Up After Liberty Theatre Attack.

New York, April 15.—A whistle shrilled last night in the Liberty Theatre, where the much-discussed moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, and a young man rose up in the gallery and began throwing eggs at the screen. The eggs fell in the orchestra pit, and although the fiddlers stood their ground manfully it was evidently a trial. The eggs were not fresh.

Private detectives in the house yanked the young man from his seat and took him over to the West Thirty-seventh Street Station, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct. One egg made life more unpleasant for him. It was found in his pocket broken.

He said he was Howard Schaeffle, 20 years old, of 123 Washington Place; fellow-citizen recently come from Boston and couldn't sit quietly by and see the political attack [illegible] negro race maligned. Several negroes followed him from the theatre and went to the night court with him, vowing to defend him. Schaeffle was held in $500 bail.

Post APR 15 1915

HELD FOR FILM PLAY ROW.

White Man to Be Tried for Disturbance at "Birth of a Nation."

The case against the white man who created a disturbance at last night's performance of the film-play "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre, has been set for trial to-morrow evening in the Night Court. The offender, Howard Schaeffle, twenty years old, of 123 Washington Place, who said he was a reporter, was arraigned before Magistrate Ten Eyck last night and held in $500 bail. Schaeffle said that he was born in Maryland and had come to this city recently from Boston. He declared that he had acted as he did because he couldn't sit quietly and see negroes maligned as they were in the film. He threw two eggs, which landed among the orchestra, and the police found three more in his pockets.

Although Schaeffle was the only man arrested, there was plenty of evidence that a number of other persons were present in the theatre who did not approve of the way in which the Negro was depicted in certain incidents. One man, a negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen, head of a Negro news agency, was after Schaeffle had been led from the theatre by private detectives and called loudly:

"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't have liked this play."

Allen was ushered to the street by employees of the theatre without being arrested. Several other persons, some of them white and some colored, got up and left.

A group of men escorted Schaeffle to the West Thirty-seventh street police station, where he was taken before Night Court Magistrate Ten Eyck. James T. Thomas, a negro lawyer, of 203 Broadway, tendered his services and bail for Schaeffle.

TIMES
Washington, D. C.

APR 15 1915

Friend of Colored Race Hurls Eggs at Film

NEW YORK, April 15.—A whistle shrilled in the Liberty Theater, where the much discussed moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, and a young man rose up in the gallery and began throwing eggs at the screen. The eggs fell in the orchestra pit, and although the fiddlers stood their ground manfully it was evidently a trial. The eggs were not fresh.

Private detectives yanked the young man from his seat and took him over to the station, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct. One egg made life more unpleasant for him. It was found in his pocket broken.

He said he was Howard Schaeffle, twenty years old; that he had recently come from Boston and couldn't sit quietly by and see the race maligned.

PPER
New York City
APR 10

MAYOR MITCHEL ORDE
VICTOR HERBERT
COLONIAL SUES GEO
ANOTHER FREA
FRISCO GETS NEXT NATIO
DEATH OF WM. V. RA HORKHEIMERS
PENN. CENSOR LAW STAN
LA

MAYOR MITCHELL ORDERS E ATIONS IN "BIRTH OF A NAT

Acting on a complaint presented by Garrison Villard, Rabbi Wise and F C. Howe, representing the interests of colored societies of New York City, Mitchell, Tuesday, March 30, ordered al eliminations to be made in Griffith's Birth of a Nation," playing to capacity ness currently at the Liberty Theatre. Wise who is connected with the Nati Board of Censors, in his request, asking Mayor to take action on the picture, utterance to the following remarks:

"The Board of Censors which allowed exhibition to go is stupid or worse, a regret that my name is even remotely nected as a member of such a board. negroes in this city have been patient. have not yet arisen to protest like the who attacked the production of 'The boy of the Western World.' The Irish the playboy as a caricature, not as a ch acterization.

"Stop this production, Mr. Mayor, and will render a great service to the people this country."

Rabbi Wise is a prominent Hebrew prelate of New York City. Oswald Garrison Villard, the editor of The Evening Post, declared that "The Birth of a Nation," as far as the city was concerned, was "improper, unjust and immoral." "I'll stake whatever reputation I have as a historical student," said Mr. Villard, "on my charges against this film play. The logging in of the negro into this exhibition is needless and uncalled for, and the play would be improved upon in every respect if the objectionable scenes were taken out."

Mr. Villard, in addition to his editorial activities, finds time to attend to the duties of vice president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Frederic C. Howe claimed that certain scenes in the picture affected ten million citizens of the United States, who were degraded by the production.

The scenes chiefly objected to were the pursuing of a white girl by a crazed negro, and the attempted love-making with a white woman on the part of the mulatto governor of the piece. "The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," which in literary form caused a mild sensation when it was first published.

GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH COUNSEL.

Following the presentation of the recorded complaints, D. W. Griffith, day afternoon, April 1, accompanied by his attorney, Martin W. Littleton and armed with

ICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.

Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I call your attention to the fact that Chicago has an extremely good board of censorship for films, the members of which, appointed under the rules of civil service, are under the supervision of the morals division of police.

These censors pass upon all moving pictures before they are shown in Chicago. I note from THE TRIBUNE of April 1 that a film recently shown in New York known as "The Birth of a Nation" has been "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, secretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitzmorris may be a most excellent secretary and well versed in his duties as such, is it not rather unnecessary that he should usurp the work of the entire censorship board and that a film should be authorized upon the recommendation of one person? "The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to arouse race prejudice against colored people; in it they are all bestial and vicious, while the white men—especially those of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly noble, performing magnanimous acts of chivalry and invariably appearing at the last moment to rescue the virtuous and save the country from destruction. Such a representation of an historic period works untold harm. Doubtless some of the incidents are correctly reported, but they have been selected with the most sinister motive and for that reason are most misleading and harmful.

A number of the best citizens of Chicago protested against the appearance of the film in that city. Is it not strange that permission should have been given for such a notorious film to be shown in Chicago before it was submitted to our board of censors or to the board of citizens who are occasionally called to help them? If the city of Chicago considers it worth while to spend money year to sustain this board of censors, why not at such a time as this that their services would be the most valuable? Surely, public spirited citizens are expected to protest against this flagrant usurpation of power on the part of a city official.

LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
Juvenile Protective Association.

Morning Telegraph
APR 16 1915

Eggs, "The Birth of a Nation," and the San Juan Hill Spirit of Unrest.

Just why a person of the name of Schoeffle should feel called upon to nominate himself the defender and champion of the negro race is not exactly clear, and just what he expects to gain by disturbing the peace of a theatre full of patrons is equally obscure. There may be two opinions as to whether "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Liberty Theatre, is likely to unduly excite racial hate, but there can be but one conclusion when a notoriety seeking individual endangers an auditorium full of people for the mere sake of projecting himself into the spotlight. He should be handed over to the law and given to understand that whatever the shortcomings of the Police Department, it is not ready to surrender its functions to a hare-brained, egg-throwing terrorist.

The fact that a negro lawyer was so close at hand that he accompanied Schoeffle to the station is not an encouraging sign. The negro race has made some progress since emancipation, but it should be borne in mind that there would be no such pictures as those shown in "The Birth of a Nation" if the negro race had not, previous to the advent of the regulators (Ku-Klux) so conducted itself as to make the sinister history now being reproduced.

The Ku-Klux no longer exist because there is no longer any necessity of them in the South. What might happen in New York if the negroes were numerically as strong as in South Carolina we can only surmise, our conclusion being somewhat influenced perhaps, by the fact that even now San Juan Hill, a local habitat, is policed in pairs, not because the average patrolman is likely to be lonesome in that section, but because the race instinct is found to be rather more than self-assertive with a single representative of authority in sight.

Meantime we suggest that adequate punishment for Schoeffle would be a sentence to spend the remainder of his life between Fifty-eighth and Seventy-second streets west of Columbus avenue.

Eve. World APR 16 1915

MAN WHO THREW EGGS AT 'BIRTH OF A NATION' FILM HELD BY COURT

White Who Joined Negroes in Demonstration Will Get Hearing To-Night.

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre gave birth to a small sized riot last night, when a mixed party of negroes and whites took exception to one of the scenes on the film, and hissed and hooted it.

Howard Schaeffle, white, living at No. 173 Washington Place, is charged with having thrown eggs at the screen. Schaeffle was taken to the night court last night and will have a further examination there to-night.

The row started at 10.30. In the scene then on the screen a burly negro pursues a white girl up a hill and to the slightest escape his attack she throws herself over a precipice.

"Rotten! Rotten!" cried several with the eggs. He made one bullseye, and the remainder of the farm products spattered over members of the orchestra and the musicians beat it in getting under cover.

Ushers and special policemen vooped down upon the offenders and hurried them out of the theatre. They were turned over to the police. A bag with three eggs in it was found in Schaeffle's overcoat.

"I had bought these eggs for my breakfast," he told the police. "I dropped into the show, and when I saw that revolting scene I presented my breakfast to the management. I am a Southerner and I believe in the uplift of the negro. That play is an outrage and it's got to be stopped."

When quiet had been restored in the theatre a negro arose in the gallery. He said that his name was Cleveland Allen and that he was at the head of the negro news agency.

"It is inappropriate," he shouted, "to present a play that libels 300 loyal American negroes. I am President Lincoln wouldn't like it today." He was escorted to the James T. Thomas jr., a negro, who by profession was a lawyer, appeared at the police house to offer his services in behalf of the irate Southerner who had thrown the eggs.

MINNEAPOLIS (Minn.) NEWS
APRIL 15, 1915

FILM IS "EGGED"

Shower of Hen Fruit Greets "Birth of a Nation."

(Special to The Daily News.)

New York, April 15.—Actors of the water tank variety have been known to be rotten egged, but New York pulled a new one last night when the moving picture drama of Thomas Dixon's "Birth of a Nation" was egged.

A whistle was blown and at once a shower of ancient hen fruits was sent towards the screen, missing it, but hitting some of the orchestra.

Negroes have made many protests about the film drama.

GAZETTE TIMES
Pittsburgh, Pa.
APR 15 1915

RECONSTRUCTION.

Good Feeling to the South Should Not Gloss Over the Facts of History.

New York Sun.

To the Editor of The Sun—Sir: The letter published in The Sun of April 6 from Mr. Rossiter Johnson in reference to the play "The Birth of a Nation" and the novel "The Clansman," on which it is based, is not only admirable in temper, but greatly needed as a corrective of imperfect historical information. The Republican leaders of the '70s and the reconstruction acts have been so long held up to scorn, and misstatements concerning that legislation have been so continuously made that, as Mr. Johnson says, it is exceedingly desirable that the reason for the reconstruction laws should no longer be ignored or concealed.

We of the North have been so anxious that the Southern sensitiveness should be respected and an "era of good feeling" inaugurated that those who are familiar with the oppressive acts which led Congress to pass the legislation complained of have been silent, hoping that all this might be forgotten in the reign of justice and good will. Even the impression that the Republican Congress passed acts designed to hinder Southern progress and liberty might be allowed to remain, false and unjust as it is, but when by misstatements of fact and the distortion of history men create a greater prejudice against the colored element and cast upon it a burden of opprobrium it does not deserve, it is well for the truth to be told and the responsibility for the wrongs of the reconstruction period to be justly apportioned.

So many readers of "The Clansman" and spectators of "The Birth of a Nation" are uninformed concerning the truth of the case that assuming, as the author intends, that the period of negro legislation was without justification, they are roused to condemnation and to greater prejudice. They do not understand that Congress discovered that after the most remarkable liberality and kindness practiced toward a conquered enemy, the race for whose emancipation many a soldier enlisted and suffered was being sorely oppressed and practically returned to slavery. It is by such perversion of history that a great wrong is done not only the negro but also the growing generation of students of our history.

Some day, and I trust soon, we shall have a history in which clearly and without partiality or bias the story of the reconstruction days and the wonderful forbearance on the part of the North shall be given. Meantime it behooves every just man and women to resist these attempts for financial gain to hinder the progress and limit the development of the negro.

S. J. FISHER.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 10.

CALL
New York City
~~APR 16 1915~~

Threw Bad Eggs at Birth of Nation Film

Howard Schaeffle, a writer, of 123 Washington place, was arraigned yesterday on charges of throwing overripe eggs at the screen in the Liberty Theater the night before while "The Birth of a Nation" film was being presented.

The eggs were reported to have fallen short of the screen, among the orchestra. Schaeffle asserted he threw the eggs as a protest against the film, which, he declared, an insult to a race.

Globe APR 16 1915

Attempts to Re-enslave.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—The challenge of Thomas Dixon in yesterday's Globe, calling upon you to make good with a single fact in history your assertion with regard to efforts directed toward the re-enslavement by certain southern states, should not be left to go unanswered, as your statement was in accord with the true facts.

The efforts referred to are contained in the legislation enacted in said states during the sessions of 1865, 1866, and 1867. After these states had ratified the thirteenth amendment abolishing slavery, which was required as a condition to their reinstatement as states in the Union, they endeavored, by the legislation aforesaid, to inflict a more wretched condition of slavery upon the newly emancipated race. It was this legislation and the proceedings taken thereunder which led to the enactment of the reconstruction measures by the national congress, about which Mr. Dixon complains.

For reference, see the statute aforesaid of Alabama, providing "that stubborn or refactory servants and servants who loiter away time be declared vagrants and fined $50, in default of payment whereof they be hired out to service for six months." This punishment could be repeated whenever desired, and was sure to be desired each year for the cotton crop; for the remainder of the year the victim would be left to shift for himself. The money collected from these fines, etc., went to the county treasuries to relieve the whites from taxation; those statutes making it the duty of sheriffs, etc., to report all minors whose parents are unable to support them and apprentice said minors, giving former owner the preference, and making it a crime, subject to fine of $500, to entice such apprentice from master or furnish food or clothing. Similar acts were enacted by Florida, South Carolina, Mississippi, Louisiana, Georgia, and Texas.

In South Carolina one of the acts provided that no person of color should pursue any trade or business or employment, except that of husbandry or servant, until license therefor was obtained from judge; this license was good only for one year, and cost $100 for shopkeeper or peddler.

Mississippi provided that if the servant quit before the expiration of term he was to forfeit all wages for the year, to be returned to the master and the expenses and fine incurred to be set off against his wages.

Louisiana provided "that every adult freed man or woman shall furnish themselves with a comfortable home and visible means of support within twenty days after the passage of this act."

In default thereof, arrest was provided for, the victim to be hired out for the remainder of the year. If he left his employer without consent he was to be arrested and assigned to labor on public works, without compensation, until reclaimed by his employer. It was further provided that all agricultural laborers should make contracts for labor only during the first ten days of January for the entire year.

See also the laws of said states levying poll taxes, ranging from $1 to $3 per head, although the voting franchise was withheld, making the tax a lien on labor and providing that in default of payment he should be hired out to service. This legislation was enacted at a time when the newly emancipated were without funds or property, and its purpose is clearly apparent.

It was to overcome the effects of this legislation that Thaddeus Stevens and his colleagues advocated the measures complained of by Mr. Dixon. They felt that the reconstruction measures were necessary for the protection of the new wards.

G. W. EKAEF.

Jersey City, April 14.

EVENING SUN
New York City
APR 16 1915

FILM CASE DELAYED AGAIN.

Colored People's Association Retains James W. Osborne.

The date for the appearance in Jefferson Market court of D. W. Griffith and H. E. Aitken, managers of the "Birth of a Nation" film, to answer a complaint of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People against the manner of portrayal of the negro race in the film, has been adjourned for the eighth time by the complainants.

The latest reason given is that the complainants have retained James W. Osborne, ex-Assistant District Attorney, as counsel, and he is not quite prepared to prosecute.

N. Y. Eve. N.Y.

MANY CHANGES MADE IN VICIOUS MOVIE FILM

The many of the objectionable features of the vicious moving picture play, "The Birth of a Nation," being shown in this city, have been eliminated already, is the information given to THE AGE by Commission of Licenses Bell. Mr. Bell states also, that a deputy commissioner is present at the Liberty Theatre every night, and that further changes will be required of the management of the picture play.

The picture company has made a strong fight against eliminating objectionable features of the film but Mayor Mitchell and License Commissioner Bell have stood firmly by their decision that those parts of the film which slander and libel the Negro race must be eliminated.

It is [illegible] the picture management will [illegible] conformed to the mandate of the city officials.

TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R.I.
APR 16 1915

"NATION" FILM EGGED.

Friend of Negroes Locked Up After Liberty Theatre Attack.

NEW YORK, April 14.—A whistle shrilled Monday in the Liberty Theatre, where the much discussed moving picture "The Birth of a Nation" is being shown, and a young man rose up in the gallery and began throwing eggs at the screen. The eggs fell in the orchestra pit, and although the soldiers stood their ground manfully it was evidently a trial. The eggs were not fresh.

Private detectives in the house yanked the young man from his seat and took him over to the West 47th street station, where he was locked up on a charge of disorderly conduct. One egg made life more unpleasant for him. It was found in his pocket, unbroken.

He said he was Howard Schaeffle, 30 years old, of 123 Washington Place; that he had recently come from Boston and couldn't sit quietly by and see the negro race maligned. Several negroes followed him from the theatre and went to the night court with him, vowing to defend him.

TIMES
PAWTUCKET, R.I.
APR 16 1915

It takes the national board of censorship to let "The Birth of a Nation" and kindred strife-stirring films get into the theatres. Of course, theatre patrons are entitled to what they want, but they shouldn't be allowed to take poison.

SEEKER

New York City

APR 17 1915

ERNE E. SHERIDAN, New York.—We told that the offensive parts of the pic "Birth of a Nation" have been elimi ed, and that therefore further protest not needed. You are readily given room mention that "there is an organization tells its purpose in its name, National ociation for the Advancement of Col d People, 70 Fifth avenue," which dis ragers of race prejudice may join to ir advantage.

Press APR 17 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION."

We are [illegible] loss to understand the persistent attacks upon the motion picture play "The Birth of a Nation," which is an historic portrayal of that dark time in the late sixties when the Republic was in the terrible agony of a new birth.

It tells in pictures the story of a vital period of our history. It illustrates scenes that were common in one of the greatest crises in the life of the nation. It is not a cheerful tale. The Reconstruction is not a theme which any American, North or South, can dwell on with pleasure. But there is no reason why our children and children's children should be ignorant of the events of that fateful time. There is little instruction in the bright pages of history. It is only by studying the plague spots of the past brought on by the mistakes of our own forefathers that we can hope to arm ourselves with wisdom against the great problems of the future.

In the old school histories more chapters are given to the battles of the Civil War than pages to the Reconstruction, where were shown the true power and greatness of our people. There we emerged from the night of half a century ago a free and united people is the marvel of civilization. How we did it should be the pride of all Americans.

CALL

New York City

APR 17 1915

Anti-Negro Film Case Is Again Postponed

The eighth postponement of the hearing of the Liberty Theatre case involving "The Birth of a Nation" film, which is the dramatization of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," was granted by Magistrate [illegible] in Jefferson Market Court yesterday [illegible] instance of James W. Ormond, [illegible] for the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, [illegible] the complainant.

A summons was issued for D. W. Griffith and H. [illegible], managers of the film, to appear in court on May 2, when it is hoped the case will reach the trial stage. All [illegible] adjournments of the case have been at the instance of the complainant, [illegible] claimed by Martin V. Littleton, [illegible] the defense.

The case of Harry [illegible]haelfe, charged with disorderly conduct in the theater, by throwing old eggs [illegible] the theater, by [illegible] screen and hitting the orchestra [illegible] be heard on Monday.

SUN

New York City

APR 17 19

FILM CASE PUT OFF 8TH TIME.

"Birth of a Nation" Trial Now Set [illegible].

The eighth postponement of the hearing of the Liberty Theatre case involving the "Birth of a Nation" film, which is a dramatization of Thomas Dixon's novel "The Clansman," was granted by Magistrate [illegible] in the Jefferson Market court yesterday at the request of James W. Ormond, [illegible] for the National Association for the Advancement of the Colored People, which is the complainant.

A summons was issued for D. W. Griffith and H. [illegible], managers of the film, to appear [illegible] May 3, when it is hoped the case will reach the trial stage.

The case of Harry [illegible]haelfe, charged with disorderly conduct, [illegible] the same [illegible] in throwing eggs at the screen and hitting the orchestra [illegible] of the ex[illegible], will be heard [illegible]day.

DARD

INDIANAPOLIS, IND.

APR 17 1915

[illegible] characterizes the moving picture "Birth of a Nation," founded [illegible] Dixon's book, [illegible] Clansman."

[illegible] horribly foul [illegible] wholesome [illegible] human [illegible]

APR 17 1915

A Final Word From Mr. Dixon.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—A word in reply to the great American historian, Mr. Ekaef of Hobokon, who gave in yesterday's Globe an expose of the attempt of the south to re-enslave the Negro after the civil war.

Mr. Ekaef's name has a suspiciously familiar sound. It reminds me of the illustrious rotten egg gentleman, Mr. Schaeffle, whose exploit at the Liberty Theatre ended so disastrously to his ambitions last Wednesday evening. I've a very definite impression that the roll call of the I. W. W. would find both the illustrious American historian, Mr. Ekaef, and the enthusiastic "southerner," Mr. Schaeffle, present any evening.

However, let that pass.

The letter Mr. Ekaef writes is a puerile attempt to pose as an historical authority by bodily copying poor Rossiter Johnson's recent reminiscent attack on me in the Sun. He pretends to quote from the statutes of southern states which he never saw.

The attack of Rossiter Johnson, which he copies almost word for word is not history—it is merely a page from the old campaign book of 1868, which was filled with partisan lies to justify the infamies of the black regime which had just been established in the south.

Only a fool could believ that the conquered, half-starved south, with a million gleaming bayonets of the victorious Union armies at her breast, could attempt to re-enslave the Negro!

Besides the federal army to protect the Negro the Freedman's Bureau of blessed memory was always there! The Freedman's Bureau, established by federal power and protected by federal bayonets, had absolute control of the relations of Negroes and whites. No contract could be made without the approval of these armed guardians of the Negro.

Every law passed by a southern legislature during this period before Negro enfranchisement was done under the direct superintendence and advice of the Freedman's Bureau, and every law relating to the adjustment of the newly emancipated slaves to their new duties was copied from northern states.

The assertion that the Freedman's Bureau and the army could not protect the Negro from his former master was a malicious lie, which could have been invented only in the heat of a presidential campaign. The laws of vagrancy and apprenticeship referred to by Mr. Johnson and copied by the great American historian from Hoboken—Mr. Ekaef—were all enacted with the advice and co-operation of the Freedman's Bureau in an attempt to make a lot of joyous Negroes go back to work and quit trying to live on the free rations furnished by the United States government.

If this discussion gives our raw foreign population a little insight into American history it will not be in vain. For this reason I have taken the time and pains to set Mr. Ekaef right.

THOMAS DIXON.

New York, April 17.

Adieu.

Editor of The Globe, Sir—You may be a brilliant writer and famous juggler with words, but what a pitiful creature after all to pocket such an affront as Griffith offered you; branding you publicly as a liar and a coward and not showing the slightest resentment! This may be the Yankee code, but thoroughly disgusting to any one born south of Mason and Dixon's line. Probably the whole thing was got up between you beforehand for advertising purposes, so you are just as deserving of the epithet "working for the dirty dollars," as he is. To such a creature any words of contempt cast at you will probably glance harmlessly away, but to others life would be intolerable, their food would be belched up, the feeling of contempt and isolation would weigh so heavily upon them they would end their wretched existence. Adieu, Jesuit of the first order.

DU BARRY.

New York, April 15.

OBSERVER

CHARLOTTE, N. C.

APR 17 1915

EGGING THE DIXON SHOW.

Rev. Tom Dixon comes in for some more advertising. The moving picture play, "Birth of a Nation," running at a New York theater at the aristocratic price of $2.50 for the best seats, got the negro part of it out of Dixon's book. There are scenes in it that aroused the resentment of a lot of negroes and white sympathizers, and these went to the theater with paper bags of eggs in their pockets. When one of the offending scenes came on, the screen was made a target for the eggs. The police appeared and hustled the offenders out and the people who attended that particular performance got the worth of their money. The negroes and white sympathizers whose feelings were outraged at the pictures, took no account of the parts in which the negroes of the South were depicted in the performance of acts of heroism, nor of the picture showing Northern carpetbaggers beating negro slaves for loyalty to their friends, particularly women and children. The probabilities are that if Dixon's name had not been connected with the pictures there would never have been a suggestion of resentment. It was simply an outcropping of the prejudicial feeling against Dixon and anything with which his name is associated in the minds of an ignorantly sentimental class of both blacks and whites.

[illegible] the act [illegible] escape from [illegible] gave the name [illegible] was hurried [illegible] after private de[illegible] it was he who [illegible] cried out, "Ro[illegible] detectives [illegible]

APR 17 1915

CONDEMN KU KLUX KLAN FILM.

Moorfield Storey and George Foster Peabody in Boston "Herald."

Condemnation of the motion-picture drama of Civil War and Ku Klux Klan days in the South, "The Birth of a Nation," on the ground of injustice to the negro race, is expressed in letters by Moorfield Storey, of Boston, and George Foster Peabody, of New York, to the Boston Herald. Mr. Storey wrote:

"I was very sorry to see Mr. Fleischer's letter in regard to 'The Birth of a Nation,' and I note especially his statement that it aims 'only to present an historic picture of a rather unknown period of American history, during which the negro was given powers which he had not then been prepared to use.' Nothing can be more misleading, and it is precisely because this period of American history is, to our shame, so little known that we object to the gross perversion of that history which this play presents.

"The theory of the play is that the negro in slavery and devoted to his master was in his place, but that, given his freedom and the right to vote, and thereby placed in power, he developed an unbridled passion which led him to pursue the white women of the South, and that the Ku Klux Klan was formed to protect these women from outrage. This is absolutely untrue, and the mere dates disprove it.

"Andrew Johnson took office in April, 1865, and before Congress met in the following December he had appointed a provisional Governor in each State, and provided for the election and organization of State government in which negroes were uniformly denied the right of suffrage and the right to hold office. This was white reconstruction, and the governments were in the hands of those lately engaged in rebellion. The Legislatures thus created passed statutes 'which reduced the freedmen to a condition of peonage, punished their breaches of contract as crimes, denied them the power to acquire real estate or carry arms,' and in various other ways reduced them substantially to the condition of slaves. An association of 'regulators' had already been formed in Georgia, of whom it was said in the New York Herald:

"'It is needless to say that their attention is largely directed to maintaining quiet and submission among the blacks. The shooting or stringing up of some obstreperous "nigger" by the regulators is so common an occurrence as to excite little remark.'

"All over the South conditions were substantially the same, as was abundantly shown by a report made by Carl Schurz, who was sent down by President Johnson to examine and report. This was the state of the South which confronted Congress when, on December 4, 1865, it met for the first time after Mr. Lincoln's assassination. White reconstruction had been tried, and had failed disastrously. The Ku Klux Klan was organized in 1866, and of it the Encyclopedia American says:

"'Formed originally for purposes of amusement only, it soon developed into an association of "regulators," and became notorious for the lawless deeds of violence performed in its name. The proceedings of the Ku Klux in the Southern States were a feature of the determined struggle to withhold from the emancipated slaves the right of voting. The outrages and murders which convulsed the country in 1868-69 ended in calling out of troops and the formal disbandment of the society in March of the latter year.'

"The first act which assured the negroes the right to vote by setting aside the existing State Governments and providing that no seceded State should be readmitted to the Union unless its Constitution gave the suffrage to white and black alike, was not passed till about February 15, 1867. It was not until after May, 1868, that acts were passed admitting the Southern States, and the last of these, Virginia, Mississippi, and Texas, were not admitted till 1870. Only after these acts were passed and after the fundamental conditions which they imposed were complied with did the Governments of the Southern States come under the control of the colored voters. The Ku Klux Klan had really run its course before the colored voters exercised any substantial power.

"This simple chronological statement could be much amplified, but it is sufficient to show how absolutely false is the view of history presented by this play. It is an effort to mislead the people of this country who are ignorant of these facts to excite a strong feeling against the colored people, already suffering everywhere from race prejudice, and to strengthen the hands of those who would deny them their equal rights as citizens. If it is immoral to bear false witness against one's neighbor, to excite hate, to say those things which directly lead to disorder, assault, and perhaps homicide; unless, in a word, the only immorality is sexual immorality, this play tends to corrupt public morals and should be suppressed, as it certainly would be if, instead of libelling the weakest among our fellow-citizens, it were in like manner to attack a body of great political [illegible]."

[illegible] Peabody protested against [illegible] his name in apparent approval of the film and its producer, as follows:

"My attention just called to advertisement in your issue Sunday, in which an entirely unauthorized use is made of my name. My appreciation of the ability of Mr. Griffith in developing such use of films only added to my profound regret that he should do injustice to true Southern character by the use of scenes that cannot but demoralize all who see them. I think the play as I saw it was unfair to the negro and to the white equally, and a travesty of sound peace principles because of its false appeals to a superficial sympathy. Please kindly give due prominence to this correction."

Explaining the use of the names, the Herald adds:

"It is fair to say that the advertisement referred to read as follows:

"'George Foster Peabody, banker and philanthropist, gave one a new idea of the possibilities of the film. I want Mr. Griffith to make the great coming peace picture.'

"There is obviously nothing incompatible in this quotation with Mr. Peabody's more elaborately expressed view.—[Ed."

NEWS

YONKERS, N. Y.

APR 17 1915

The Orpheum management states that no dramatic offering in photoplays has ever been presented in this city that equals "The Nigger," and believes that the booking of this attraction, next to "The Birth of a Nation" in the film world, will be appreciated here; the appreciation to be manifested by large attendance tomorrow.

Besides "The Nigger," a Charlie Chaplin comedy will be on the screen.

***

PPER
New York City
APR 1 0 1916

MAYOR MITCHEL
VICTOR HERE
COLONIAL SUES
ANOTHER
FRISCO GETS NEXT N
DEATH OF WM. V
HORKHEIM
PENN. CENSOR LAW

MAYOR MITCHELL ORDE
ATIONS IN "BIRTH OF A
Acting on a complaint presen
Garrison Villard, Rabbi Wise
C. Howe, representing the inter colored societies of New York
Mitchell, Tuesday, March 30,
al eliminations to be made in G Birth of a Nation," playing to ness currently at the Liberty Th
Wise, who is connected with
Board of Censors, in his request
Mayor to take action on the pl utterance to the following remark
"The Board of Censors which al exhibition to go is stupid or w regret that my name is even re
nected as a member of such a b
Negroes in this city have been pat
have not yet arisen to protest like who attacked the production of the playboy as a caricature, not
the playboy as a caricature, not
"Stop this production, Mr. Mayor will render a great service to the
this country."
Rabbi Wise is a prominent
of New York City. Oswald Garrison the editor of The Evening Post, d that "The Birth of a Nation," as far [illegible] was concerned, was "improper, and Lamoral." "I'll stake whatever tion I have as a historical student,
Mr. Villard, on my charges against th play. The logging in of the negro int exhibition is needless and uncalled fo the play would be improved upon respect if the objectionable scenes we our."
Mr. Villard, in addition to his e activities, finds time to attend to the of vice president of the National Asso for the Advancement of Colored Peop Frederic C. Howe claimed that scenes in the picture affected ten m citizens of the United States, who we graded by the production.
The scenes chiefly objected to were pursuing of a white girl by a crazed neg and the attempted love-making with a wh woman on the part of the mulatto govern of the piece. "The Birth of a Nation" based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clan man," which in literary form caused a mi sensation when it was first published.
GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH COUNSEL
Following the presentation of the above recorded complaints, D. W. Griffith, who ay afternoon, April 1, accompanied by his atorney, Martin W. Littleton and armed with

AGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.
Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I call your attention to the not that Chicago has an extremely good oard of censorship for films, the mem-rs of which, appointed under the rules civil service, are under the supervi
n of the morals division of police.
hese censors pass upon all moving ctures before they are shown in Chi-
o. I note from THE TRIBUNE of April at a film recently shown in New York wn as "The Birth of a Nation" has "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, tary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitz-s may be a most excellent secretary ell versed in his duties as such, is rather unnecessary that he should the work of the entire censorship and that a film should be authorized he recommendation of one person?
"Birth of a Nation" is calculated se race prejudice against colored in it they are all bestial and vil-while the white men—especially the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly performing magnanimous acts of and invariably appearing at the ment to rescue the virtuous and ountry from destruction. Such tion of an historic period works rm. Doubtless some of the ine correctly reported, but they selected with the most sinister for that reason are most mis-l harmful.
umber of the best citizens of protested against the appear-film in that city. Is it not at permission should have for such a notorious film to Chicago before it was sub-board of censors or to the citizens who are occasion-help them? If the city of lers it worth while to spend o sustain this board of cen-at such a time as this that would be the most valu-y, public spirited citizens d to protest against this urpation of power on the icial.
S DE KOVEN BOWEN,
e Protective Association.

SURVEY
New York City
APR 3 1915

FILMS AND BIRTHS AND CENSORSHIP

Two questions of censorship are to the fore in New York. One concerns the photo-drama, The Birth of a Nation, which has been passed by the National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures by a divided vote against protests by friends of the Negro. The other has to do with the arrest of the husband of a woman who wrote and circulated a pamphlet entitled Family Limitation.

The two incidents differ in many aspects, as do the groups who urge the suppressing of the play and the circulating of the pamphlet. But motion pictures no less than printed pages have come to be recognized media for expressing thought; so that the new question of freedom and censorship of the film comes up alongside the old and reopened one of freedom of the press.

The Birth of a Nation, produced in California by D. W. Griffith, has been hailed as the most splendid of movies. It is packing a New York theater for two performances daily, seven days a week, at prices running up to $2 a seat. Its first half portrays Civil War scenes on a scale never before attempted and with a scenic variety that ranges from the heroic clash of whole armies to the playful spat of a kitten and a puppy on the veranda of the southern home where the interest of the play centers. It ends with the surrender of Lee and the assassination of Lincoln.

The second half—the film runs three hours with a single break of eight minutes—is based entirely on Thomas Dixon's anti-Negro novel, The Clansman. It shows the South in the grip of the carpet-baggers and a mulatto lieutenant-governor building up a black party. Negroes are called from their work to a wild revel in the streets. On election day they vote with both hands and keep white men from the polls. In the legislature they sit with hats on and bare feet on the desks as they drink from flasks and pass an intermarriage law.

A harrowing climax comes in the pursuit of a young white girl by a renegade Negro through aching miles of woodland. Finally, she escapes him by jumping from a high rock to her death. Her brother organizes the Ku Klux Klan to avenge her—or to stop the reign of terror, as the producers put it—and the clan, cast as saviors of the South, drives out the rioting Negroes just in time to save another white girl from a forced marriage with the mulatto lieutenant-governor. The final outcome suggested is a Negro republic in Liberia.

Criticism has been prompt and vigorous. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People has branded it as unjust and tending to arouse bitter race antagonism. The association made an unsuccessful attempt to stop the production by court action, on the ground that it tended to a breach of the peace, pointing out that the play founded on the same novel was stopped in Philadelphia some time since after riot had actually started in the theater.

The association was unsuccessful also, in its attempt to have the National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures revoke its approval—an attempt which had the sympathy of many other individuals and bodies. The board has been roundly criticized as a result.

The film was viewed originally by ten members of the board's large censoring committee, who passed it unanimously. Upon appeal to Frederic C. Howe, chairman of the board, it was brought before the general committee, which is the board's governing body. Various changes were suggested which were made. These are said to have been chiefly a substantial reduction in the details of the chase of the white girl by the renegade Negro, which in the original is said to have been the most dreadful portrayal of rape ever offered for public view; the insertion of various soothing captions such as, "I won't hurt you, little Missy"; the entire excision of a lynching; and a toning down of the scene in which the mulatto all but marries a white girl by force.

Again the general committee viewed the film. This time it was passed by a vote of 15 to 8. Mr. Howe, chairman of the board, was among the eight voting No, and he has refused the use of the board's regular form of approval which reads: "Passed by the National Board of Censorship of Motion Pictures Frederic C. Howe, chairman."

While the board is purely a voluntary body without actual power of stopping any motion picture, its decisions are so widely accepted that disapproval of a film debars it from 80 per cent of the motion picture houses of the country.

W. D. McGUIRE, Jr., executive secretary of the board, holds that the decision in this case squares with the board's printed standards that the "board does not regard itself as a censor of accuracy, unless the inaccuracy in question is of the kind that will result in some concrete disaster to the person whom the inaccuracy misleads." He holds that "any historical inaccuracy in The Birth of a Nation would hardly result in leading any individuals into any concrete disaster." Further, he says:

"A board of censorship for motion pictures or dramatic productions should confine itself entirely to the consideration of whether a given production is objectionable from the standpoint of public morals. If it can pass this test it should be permitted. If not, it should be stopped. Public authorities have no more right to interfere with the production of a play or a motion picture which emphasizes the southern point of view of our great conflict and the subsequent period of reconstruction, than that of a play which lays emphasis upon the northern point of view."

The Survey, April 3, 1915

pointing out that the play

Washington Times on
April 16 - 1915

may be of interest to you
JACOB WILK,
Publicity Director, World Film Corp.

Subjects Banned in Social Discussion Usually Have No Place in Film

The criticism to which the great Griffith film, "The Birth of the Nation," has been subjected in New York and elsewhere—despite the fact that it is financially a success at $2 theater prices—raises a most interesting question with regard to the motion picture industry. Why is it necessary for producers to utilize such controversial themes for their plays?

The people of Washington and other Southern sections of the country cannot appreciate the comment that has been caused by "The Birth of a Nation." We know it is a dramatization of Thomas Dixon's "Clansmen"—at least the latter half of it is. We know that it deals in a very dramatic way with the period that made such books as the "Clansmen" possible—but we cannot get the point of view of the people who live in a section of the country that was not touched by the disasters that are pictured because to many of us those disasters were most real and appalling. Appreciation and commendation of the story of the Griffith-Dixon is therefore confined to one section of the country. In other sections they fail absolutely to grasp it. And they criticise it with perfect honesty and justice.

Therefore, in view of the fact that motion pictures are made to be exhibited in all sections of the country; as motion picture producers depend upon the nation as a whole for support, doesn't it seem to be the wisest sort of policy to steer away from any subject that is controversial and confine bids for popularity to those mediums most likely to satisfy all types and classes?

There is no industry that we know of that has a broader field in which to work than the motion pictures. There are so many thousands of stories that have been written which could be turned into motion picture plays. There are so many more thousands of stories yet unwritten that could be made into picture plays. There are so many themes that would not make stories at all but would make good plays and there are so many subjects that have neither story or dramatic value which, nevertheless, could be prepared for the screen.

There is no medium for the discussion of great public questions that seems to us to offer such unlimited possibilities as the motion pictures. For years there has been constant discussion of the tenement house problem, the housing conditions generally, the matter of personal hygiene, the hygiene of the home and the neighborhood, the pure milk and pure food questions, the matters of cruelty to children and to animals, the political questions that come up from time to time and revolve about what is good government.

All of these can be treated on the screen in picture plays that tell a story with a conspicuous moral dealing with the subject discussed, or by simply giving practical examples of actual conditions that are to be corrected with pictures of places where these conditions have been corrected, thus showing the difference.

There is no book in the world that is so widely read and so little appreciated as the Bible. Some one has said that the Bible contains [illegible] of every novel and every [illegible] was ever written. It is [illegible] mance, of poetry, of tragedy [illegible] quence. Plays could be [illegible] Bible stories, without [illegible] whit from the text which [illegible] tremendously instructive and [illegible] get more people to read the [illegible] book intelligently.

The history of every country is filled with romance. From [illegible] tory of the United States [illegible] of picture plays could be [illegible] out touching the Civil War period which might arouse feeling that would give a much clearer idea of the nation's greatness and the causes of it to a great mass of people who would never take the time to study out the moral themselves.

All of these things are adapted to motion picture plays—real dramatic entertainments. We have not touched upon the purely educational subjects, the scientific studies, the geographical lessons. We simply wish to deal with those subjects about which semi-fiction plays could be written. And we have not touched the literature of the world which lies open to whoever cares to make use of it.

With such a field—why try to seek sensation in controversy? That sort of business has never paid in the long run. It brings an immediate return that looks big—but it does not keep up. It cannot keep up. The greater the sensation the quicker the people grow tired of it. So why not try to confine the films to a more legitimate and conservative plane.

Amusement is the most democratic mental attitude of the people. They are bound to select their own kind—no matter how insistent the manager of the entertainment is to induce them to go to his show, and no matter how blatantly it is advertised. They will patronize the manager they have learned to know supplies them the sort of thing they want. Most subjects banned in social discussion, however, should never be outlined on the screen—for exactly the same reasons that put them without the pale of social conversation.

G. M.

CALL RECORD
APRIL 10, 1915

COLORED PEOPLE MAKING PROTEST

"THE CLANSMAN" PICTURES OFFEND THE NEGROES

Mayor and Police Officials Asked to Prohibit Them. No Censorship Here

[illegible] Stockton colored population is [illegible] aroused over the presentation [illegible] great photo play "The Clans-[illegible] at the Yosemite theater in this [illegible] this afternoon and this evening. [illegible] photo play is founded on the [illegible] by Thomas Dixon Jr., also au-[illegible] of "The Leopard's Spots." It [illegible] with the race question. Many [illegible]tonians who have seen the photo [illegible] presented elsewhere declare that [illegible] produced on a scale larger than [illegible] any other production they [illegible] passed.

[illegible] W. Reed, pastor of the Sec-[illegible] church, arrived home last [illegible] Chico and on learning [illegible] "man" was to be pro-[illegible] a lot of data on [illegible] Mayor R.

"I have never seen these pictures," said Rev. Reed, "but I have read criticisms of the play and I know of the storm of indignation which they have produced among our people elsewhere. I am going to see the pictures this afternoon and I will preach on them tomorrow at my church.

"These pictures show the negro up in a false and most unfavorable light. They make it appear that the negro has not yet risen to a state of civilization. They picture scenes which are shockingly brutal and offensive. The board of censors in San Francisco compelled the management of the pictures to eliminate a number of these scenes. If the pictures cannot be stopped from exhibiting in this city, the authorities ought to prohibit the showing of scenes which they were forced to eliminate in San Francisco."

"We have no ordinance providing for the censorship of film produce for the censorship of plays or film productions," said Commissioner Kenyon, "and we are powerless to grant the requests of the colored people. We will be glad to use moral suasion with the management of the company, however."

Mayor Reibenstein assured Rev. Reed that he would "look into the matter and see what could be done."

Eliminated Objectionable Features

"It is true that there were features in the picture which met with objection in San Francisco and these were eliminated," said Manager W. C. Wheeler of "The Clansman" film attraction. "We are producing the pictures in Stockton just as they were given in San Francisco. We have not reincorporated features once eliminated. These pictures are really educational. While the story of the Ku Klux Klan figures in the photo play [illegible] dominating feature. The [illegible] film censors spoke of [illegible] of highest praise [illegible] in the picture

APR 17 1915

WAYS OF SM

THE newspaper [illegible] raging over The Birth of a Nation in the metropolitan press is amusing. I [illegible] agree with the editor of the Globe that the name is a misnomer. It should have been called The Aftermath of Uncle Tom's Cabin, the latter part of it at least, since that charming work of fiction is said to have precipitated the Civil War. Messrs. Griffith and Dixon should make a compact with the agitators against the photo play. They should agree to withdraw The Birth of a Nation if all editors will agree not to reprint Uncle Tom's Cabin, and if bookseller agree not to keep it in stock. If the photo play is an offense to the North, think what the book [illegible] has been, [illegible] South.

TELEGRAPH
k City
APR 18 1915

NORTH AMERICAN
Philadelphia, Pa.
APR 18 1915

JOURNAL
COLUMBUS, O
APR 18 1915

TO describe a big photoplay according to the mode, one must say it is "the last word in photography." At present, "the last word" is "The Birth of a Nation," which has succeeded "Cabiria" and "Hypocrites" in holding that title. As we read accounts of this picture, which is supposed to touch on the salient points of our nation's history, we are impressed with the fact that the camera can treat of epic themes.

No one guessed that at the beginning of motion picture photography, horse play formed the chief s... But an art which can depict th... gence of a nation from the ... of wars and lesser strife can ... trusted to deal with other big ...ltimore, Md.

APR 18 1915

...Griffith's dramatic spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," continues to ... at the Liberty Theatre.

...the elimination of certain scenes which ...gards as offensive, Mayor Curley will ...it the photoplay, "The Birth of a Na..." to be shown in Boston.

NORTH SIDE NEWS
New York City
APR 18 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" at the Liberty Theatre is very popular.

Gazette
MONTREAL, CAN.
APR 15

FILM PLAY STIRS RACIAL FEELING

Negroes and Whites Created Disturbance at Liberty Theatre, New York

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Both Sides Took Umbrage at Scene Showing White Girl Fleeing From Colored Pursuer

(Special to The Gazette.)

New York, April 15.—A mixed crowd of white men and Negroes, who had obtained seats in the front row of the gallery, started a demonstration against the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theatre at 10:30 o'clock last night.

Policemen, ushers and private detectives who had been stationed at convenient intervals in anticipation of a demonstration swarmed down upon the noise makers and seized two of the leaders. As they did so, two eggs splattered over the screen, blotting out portions of a picture showing a white Southern girl in the act of leaping off a cliff to escape from a Negro pursuer.

A white man, who gave the name of Howard Schaeffle, was hurried from the theater after private detectives had asserted it was he who threw the eggs. He cried out, "Rotten!" as the detectives pushed him down the stairs.

He was taken to police station and charged with disorderly conduct.

As the theatre was in semi-darkness, the eggs that struck the screen made no noise, only a few of those in the audience became aware of the extent of the disturbance. They heard the outcries in the gallery, but showed no disposition to leave their seats.

"VOULDN'T LIKE LINCOLN."

Minutes after the main party had left, he shouted, "On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination, it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American Negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't like this play." The Negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen and that he was the head of a colored news agency, was ushered to the street.

At the West Thirty-Seventh Street Station, Schaeffle was searched and a paper bag containing three eggs was found in his overcoat pocket.

"I was taking the eggs home for breakfast," he said, "and I stopped in to see this play. I am a Southerner and a libertarian, and I believe in the education and the uplifting of the Negro. It made my blood boil to see the play and I threw the eggs at the screen. The play will have to be removed from the boards."

Schaeffle said he was born in Maryland. A Negro lawyer, escorted by a delegation of Negroes who had not been in the theater, appeared at the station to take charge of Schaeffle's case.

The next scene after the one to which the Negroes objected so violently showed Northern carpetbaggers beating Negro slaves who were loyal to their Southern white friends and were trying to protect the Southern whites from being pillaged by the carpetbaggers.

The management of the theater pointed out this ... refuted the charge that the pictures libel the negroes, ... an especially bad li... agement insisted that ... plause during the pro... was for scenes showi... forming heroic acts ...

...MOVING PICTURE W...
New York City
APR 17 1915

...TH OF A NATION"
TO OPEN IN BOSTON

Protest Realized—Mayor Curley Petitioned—What Parkhurst Says.

...th of a Nation" will open ... engagement at the Tremont Th... ...urday afternoon, April 18, ... period.

...as this announcement was ... several prominent Boston ... Francis J. Garrison and ... Horace Humeston signed ... which were sent to Mayor Curley ... the exhibition of the photo... prohibited.

...owing is the communication ... Mayor Curley from the ...

Sir: At a meeting of the ... of Boston branch of the ... Advancement of ... Association for the Advancement ... People, the following ... unanimously adopted ... requesting you ... for the purpose of ... opposing the ... of "The Birth of a Nation" ... And I respectfully request ... hearing be granted at some ... to April 19, 1915.

Very Respectfully,
Butler Wilson, Secretary.

...s it is announced that "The Birth of a Nation" ... at the Tremont theatre ... beginning April 19, 1915, and ... the film should not be ...

...because it is a libel upon a large number of Boston ...

...because it ... because it ... peace ...ed, that the ... Boston branch of the ... for the Advancement ... respectfully request ... Curley, mayor ... a public hearing at ... or to April 19, 1915, for the ... producing the evidence and ... reasons why the film should ... in Boston ... following resolution was ...

...the exhibition ... Dixon's play, "The ... This play, it ... dramatic ... ing a gross ...tation of ... country, ... fruitful of ... whites ... us to the ... the mayors ... cities, and ... to use every ... suppress this ... Curley has ... Charles H. ... City, regard... read in part: ... criticism that ... unfortunate ... ted to engen... met by the ... ents the neg... but as he ... just had the ... and when he ... ness of a liberty ... that he had not ... nd it and ... way to see it ... is in this respect exactly true ... and if it reflects upon the ... was then, it is a compliment to ... man of today ... lawlessness might not have ... thirty or forty years ago ... eties, however, change with ... of time."

...Sir: At a meeting of the ... of Boston branch of the ... Advancement ... Association for the Advancement ... People, the following ... unanimously adopted ... requesting you ... for the purpose of ... opposing the ... of "The Birth of a Nation" ... And I respectfully request ... hearing be granted at some ... to April 19, 1915.

Very Respectfully,
Butler Wilson, Secretary.

...s it is announced that "The Birth of a Nation" ... at the Tremont theatre ... beginning April 19, 1915, and ... the film should not be ...

...because it is a libel upon a large number of Boston ...

...because it ... because it ... peace ...ed, that the ... Boston branch of the ... for the Advancement ... respectfully request ... Curley, mayor ... a public hearing at ... or to April 19, 1915, for the ... producing the evidence and ... reasons why the film should ... in Boston ... following resolution was ...

...the exhibition ... Dixon's play, "The ... This play, it ... dramatic ... ing a gross ...tation of ... country, ... fruitful of ... whites ... us to the ... the mayors ... cities, and ... to use every ... suppress this ... Curley has ... Charles H. ... City, regard... read in part: ... criticism that ... unfortunate ... ted to engen... met by the ... ents the neg... but as he ... just had the ... and when he ... ness of a liberty ... that he had not ... nd it and ... way to see it ... is in this respect exactly true ... and if it reflects upon the ... was then, it is a compliment to ... man of today ... lawlessness might not have ... thirty or forty years ago ... eties, however, change with ... of time."

American
APR 18 1915

Rev. Dr. Wise Sees "The Birth of a Nation"

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY.

IN strict justice, this article should have a different heading.

Dr. Wise did not really SEE the great photo-drama he so severely criticised in the Post of the 15th ult.

When the good Doctor took his seat in the theatre he was in the "state of mind" that made any true seeing of the play impossible.

When Dr. Wise reached the Liberty Theatre he asked for a ticket, and was informed that the last one had been disposed of, whereupon he intimated, with tremendous emphasis, that he was being lied to.

The astonished ticket-man assured him that he was mistaken, that he would be most happy to sell him a ticket, or better yet, to give him one, but that it was impossible for him to do either, as they had all been sold.

Instead of accepting the explanation thus given quietly and gracefully, Dr. Wise grew furious, raised a rumpus that was but sadly in keeping with his high position and recognized abilities, and desisted not until he had been informed by the theatre police that unless he quieted down he would be thrown out of the building.

Rushing to the street, the doctor managed to procure some kind of a ticket from a speculator on the sidewalk, and returned to see the play.

But did he see it? Was he in any condition to see it, after the tempest of wrath through which he had just passed, and by which he was still deeply agitated?

Were the notes that he jotted down in such disturbed condition, and that were later on developed into the sermon that was printed in the Post of the 15th ult., a fair representation of the character of the picture he would pass judgment upon?

There can be but one answer to the question: The good doctor's sermon was not a calm, judicial criticism of the play, but was simply the reflection of his personal anger.

Quite in keeping with this fact are the statements found in the doctor's sermon.

He calls the play "a panegyric of the hell of war"—a charge that could not possibly have been further from the truth.

The play is full of the most eloquent protests against war, and the net result of seeing the pictures is the feeling that war is the master-crime, the blackest of all the sins of man against man.

Or take this other statement from the Doctor's sermon: All the hatreds of the war-day and the after-war days, not only as against the negro, but as between white and white, are revived."

But what do such statements amount to in the light of the fact that the very acme of the art of the play centres in the loves and subsequent marriages between the Camerons and Stonemans, as typical of the reunion of North and South under the old Constitution and the old flag?

The charge that "The Birth of a Nation" is the deliberate attempt to "create in the minds of the whites a feeling of hatred for the negro" was probably born out of the doctor's unhappy frame of mind at the time he saw the play.

He was in no very lovable mental condition about that time, and he mistook his own feelings for the teachings of the play.

So far from teaching hatred for the negro, some of the most beautiful and touching scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" are those in which the auditors are shown the unsophisticated goodwill, the deep and cordial affection and devotion between whites and Negroes, one-time masters and slaves.

A Negro arose some minutes after the main party had left.

"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination," he shouted, "it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American Negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't like this play." The Negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen and that he was the head of a colored news agency, was ushered to the street.

At the West Thirty-Seventh Street Station, Schaeffle was searched and a paper bag containing three eggs was found in his overcoat pocket.

"I was taking the eggs home for breakfast," he said, "and I stopped in to see this play. I am a Southerner and a libertarian, and I believe in the education and the uplifting of the Negro. It made my blood boil to see the play and I threw the eggs at the screen. The play will have to be removed from the boards."

Schaeffle said he was born in Maryland. A Negro lawyer, escorted by a delegation of Negroes who had not been in the theater, appeared at the station to take charge of Schaeffle's case.

The next scene after the one to which the Negroes objected so violently showed Northern carpetbaggers beating Negro slaves who were loyal to their Southern white friends and were trying to protect the Southern whites from being pillaged by the carpetbaggers.

The management of the theater pointed out this ... refuted the charge that the pictures libel the negroes, ... an especially bad li... agement insisted that ... plause during the pro... was for scenes showi... forming heroic acts ...

But the matter is really becoming ridiculous; for look you what follows. Says the doctor: "The play is not objectionable in spots; it is abhorrent in spirit from beginning to end."

Let's see about this sweeping statement, to find out just how much it is worth.

The play makes every one who sees it feel deep down in his heart how great and good, how just and kind and true Abraham Lincoln was, and what a crime it was against humanity when he was taken away from the tasks which he only was able to perform.

The character of this kind-hearted, great-souled martyr President, his simple honesty and unfailing love for all men, was never shown up as it is being done in this wonderful drama, the "Birth of a Nation."

And is it "abhorrent" to do this?

The play again makes us realize to the full the terrible mistake that we made in introducing slavery into our country. Do you want to realize what an accursed thing slavery is, what a crime it is for man to own property in man? Then go and see the "Birth of a Nation." Do you want to realize how certain and how fearful are the penalties that the old eternal justice always attaches to the oppression of man by man? Then take a look at the "Birth of a Nation," and it will be made as clear as day to you.

And is it "abhorrent" to do this?

But Dr. Wise does not like the play—notwithstanding the fact that he has never fairly seen it—and therefore he would have it suppressed.

But this is not Russia, and the American people are not the Russian people.

Finally—and it were well to remember it—WE HAVE A DICTATOR BEFORE WHOM WE MUST PROSTRATE OURSELVES, AND BEND OUR HEADS, AND BE SILENT. THAT DIRECTOR IS HISTORY.

The worst that can possibly be said of the "Birth of a Nation" is that it is a magnificently faithful reflection of history—a marvellous picture-story of the greatest period in the history of earth's greatest nation.

OREGONIAN
Portland, Ore.
APR 18 1915

Dr. Stephen S. Wise, formerly rabbi of the Jewish Synagogue in Portland, is one of the leading orators and thinkers of New York. His weekly addresses at Carnegie Hall are attended by throngs including hosts of Gentiles as well as regular members of his congregation. The charities which he discusses are known for their effectiveness. Mrs. Samuel Wachenheimer, who formerly lived in Eugene, says:

"Whoever volunteers for service under Doctor Wise must be prepared to devote a large amount of time to the work."

Dr. Wise has taken a decided stand against Mayor Mitchel's permitting of the exhibition of the film entitled, "The Birth of a Nation." The pictures represent a dramatization of Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," and include scenes of outrages by negroes on white women.

The colored citizens and preachers of New York have raised a loud protest against the film as misrepresenting and insulting the negro. Dr. Wise accompanied leading colored citizens in a call upon the Mayor during the past week.

Union
SPRINGFIELD, MASS.
APR 15 1915

EGG NEGRO SCENES IN A FILM PLAY

Police Quell Disturbers at "Birth of a Nation" in New York.

NEW YORK, April 15—A mixed crowd of white men and Negroes who had obtained seats in the front row of the gallery started a demonstration against the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," at the Liberty Theater at 10:30 o'clock last night.

Policemen, ushers and private detectives who had been stationed at convenient intervals in anticipation of a demonstration swarmed down upon the noise makers and seized two of the leaders. As they did so two eggs splattered over the screen, blotting out portions of a picture showing a white Southern girl in the act of leaping off a cliff to escape from a Negro pursuer.

A white man, who gave the name of Howard Schaeffle, was hurried from the theater after private detectives had asserted it was he who threw the eggs. He cried out, "Rotten!" as the detectives pushed him down the stairs.

He was taken to police station and charged with disorderly conduct.

As the theatre was in semi-darkness, the eggs that struck the screen made no noise, only a few of those in the audience became aware of the extent of the disturbance. They heard the outcries in the gallery, but showed no disposition to leave their seats.

A Negro arose some minutes after the main party had left.

"On the anniversary of Lincoln's assassination," he shouted, "it is inappropriate to present a play that libels 10,000,000 loyal American Negroes. I think President Lincoln wouldn't like this play." The Negro, who said his name was Cleveland G. Allen and that he was the head of a colored news agency, was ushered to the street.

At the West Thirty-Seventh Street Station, Schaeffle was searched and a paper bag containing three eggs was found in his overcoat pocket.

"I was taking the eggs home for breakfast," he said, "and I stopped in to see this play. I am a Southerner and a libertarian, and I believe in the education and the uplifting of the Negro. It made my blood boil to see the play and I threw the eggs at the screen. The play will have to be removed from the boards."

Schaeffle said he was born in Maryland. A Negro lawyer, escorted by a delegation of Negroes who had not been in the theater, appeared at the station to take charge of Schaeffle's case.

The next scene after the one to which the Negroes objected so violently showed Northern carpetbaggers beating Negro slaves who were loyal to their Southern white friends and were trying to protect the Southern whites from being pillaged by the carpetbaggers.

The management of the theater pointed out this ... refuted the charge that the pictures libel the negroes, ... an especially bad li... agement insisted that ... plause during the pro... was for scenes showi... forming heroic acts ...

Pi...
GREENV...

FILM PLAY OF NEAR NEW YO...

Demonstration by a ... White Men and N... Film Play Name... Nation"—Eggs T... Screen—Police ar... Arrive on the Sc...

New York, Apr... crowd of white men ... had obtained seats ... of the gallery star... tion against the ... Birth of a Nation," ... atre at 10:30 o'clock ...

Policemen, usher... tectives who had ... convenient intervals ... a demonstration sw... the noise makers ... the leaders. As the ... splattered over the s... portions of a pictur... Southern girl in th... off a cliff to escape ...

A white man, who ... Howard Schaeffle, ... the theatre after ... had asserted it was ... eggs. He cried ut... as the detective pus... stairs toward the st... en to the West Thi... station on a charge ... duct.

A negro who wal... limp followed the w... the help of detectiv... loudly that "that p... race. It's got to b... other negroes and ... seemed to have com... came frightened at t... ence by the police ... ives.

"Let's get out of h... "I think we'll be in ... stay." Seven negro... gested.

As the theatre wa... and the eggs that ... made no noise, only ... the audience became ... tent of the disturba... the outcries in the g... no disposition to le...

A negro arose so... the main party had l... "On the anniversa... sassination," he sho... propriate to present ... 10,000,000 loyal Am... don't think Preside... like this play." The ... his name was Cleev... that he was the head ... agency, was ushere...

At the West Thir... station Schaeffle wa... paper bag containin... found in his overcoa...

"I was taking th... breakfast," he said, ... to see this play. I ... and a libertarian, a... ducation and the up... ro. It made my b... ne play and I threw ... screen. The play wi... moved from the boar...

Schaeffle said he w... nd. A negro law... delegation of negro... been in the theatre, ... station to take char... case.

The next scene a... which the negroes ... lently showed Northe... beating negro slaves ... to their Southern w... were trying to prote... whites from being pil... petbaggers.

The management ... pointed out this scen... of the charge that the ... to libel the negroes, ... an especially bad li... agement insisted that ... plause during the pro... was for scenes showi... forming heroic acts ...

The Survey, April 3, 1915

EVENING NEWS
Newark, N. J.
1915

At last the film plays have reached the elevation of the "legitimate" drama. Pictures of "The Birth of a Nation" have been erged in New York.

SAN JOSE (Cal.) MERCURY-HER'LD
APRIL 10, 1915

Clansman Shows Facts of Ku Klux Klan?

Pictures Depict Occurrences of Attempt to Justify Lawless Band.

Editor Mercury Herald: Every impartial man familiar with the events of the days which The Clansman attempts to portray as facts, must be impressed with this truth: That while the pictures are wonderful productions of art and industry, they are the culmination of past futile efforts to justify and glorify the Ku Klux Klan, whom everyone who lived in those days must know was a lawless band of secret night prowlers, organized and acting by threats and violence and sometimes by murder, to prevent not only negroes, but white men of the south who were loyal to the union from going to the polls on election day, or like the night-riders in Missouri today, to intimidate those against whom they had a grievance. Many union men, both north and south, thought it a mistake to confer the electoral franchise on the negro before he was prepared to properly exercise that franchise, but all men of high character and standing, north and south, condemned acts of violence and bloodshed by the Ku Klux Klan.

The attempt in these moving picture falsehoods to make it appear that it was simply to protect the white families from the insults and injuries threatened by the blacks is contradicted, contradicted by many of the brave and honorable confederate soldiers who have borne testimony to the faithfulness of the old slaves who, while the master was at the front, worked peacefully in the field and the household. Of course there were isolated cases of wrong doing by the blacks as there were by the whites.

The slander on the fair fame of that distinguished and able Senator Charles Sumner, who is represented in these pictures as truckling to and kissing the hand of a big negress, in those days subsequent to the war, must be apparent to every one whether he lived in those days, or who has read impartial history. So liberal and just was Senator Sumner to the people of the south after the war, not only in his speeches in the senate, but in his efforts and influence with the administration, that so distinguished and able a statesman, scholar, jurist and soldier as Hon. L. Q. C. Lamar, in congress from Mississippi, on the 25th day of April, 1874, delivered a most eloquent speech on the floor of the house in eulogy of Senator Sumner, who had died on March 11, 1874.

In Indiana and Tennessee the members of the Ku Klux Klan so frequently in their night raids of violence and intimidation violated the laws of the state that the state authorities arrested and punished such of its members as could be identified. In Tennessee I recall a case where a white man was murdered, and the perpetrators were subsequently discovered, arrested and one of them convicted and hanged.

Let those who have no recollection of these events read impartial history, and on its pages he will find refuted these slanders.

As an old Democrat remarked to me as we witnessed these moving pictures, "It is a mistake to present such scenes, for it awakens old animosities long since dead or sleeping."

JUSTICE.

Durham (N.C.) Herald
4-18-15

"The Birth of a Nation."

It is going to be quite a long time before those who do not live in New York, Los Angeles or San Francisco or who do not visit these cities will see "A Birth of a Nation." "Indefinite" is the announcement in regard to the run of this biggest American feature. More than 150,000 persons have seen it in New York, and seats are sold out now four weeks in advance.

Though the picture deals with the Civil War and its subsequent problems and was directed by a Southerner, based on the bare outline of "The Clansman," there has been but one objection registered against it so far. This was by the National Association for the Improvement of Colored People, and the reason given was that the picture would have a bad influence in Northern States, where the intermarriage of blacks and whites was permitted by law. "The Birth of a Nation" shows up the evil results of racial mongrelization

OUTLOOK. - NEW YORK
APR 14 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION"

Criticism of moving pictures comes perhaps more properly within the field of a weekly journal than criticism of the "legitimate stage." The noted play, whatever its literary merits, may not live to pass beyond the dramatic confines of the metropolis. The "movie" drama, whatever its defects, will not improbably reach every city, if not every town, in the country. Of the great feature films costing thousands of dollars, advertised more extensively than any all-star play of the past, this is particularly true.

Such a film is "The Birth of a Nation," a drama of the Reconstruction period based upon the writings of the Rev. Thomas Dixon. In interest and technical mastery of the moving picture art this film is one of the best yet produced by a modern director. Apparently neither expense nor time has been spared in preparing for the screen the story of the Civil War and the unhappy period which followed. The opportunity, indeed, was one that would have been the delight of any great and creative novelist, and one which would have tested the knowledge of a great historian. Unhappily for the value of "The Birth of a Nation," Mr. Dixon is neither.

The story of "The Birth of a Nation," as Mr. Dixon sees it, is briefly this: Slavery is brought to the South by the traders of New England. Under slavery the Negroes are happy, working, as we are told in large letters, only from six in the morning to six at night, with two hours off in the middle of the day. The spirit of abolition grows in the North and the spirit of secession in the South. The war comes. Lincoln, Grant, Lee, the burning of Atlanta, Gettysburg and Appomattox, are passed in rapid review upon the screen. The North triumphs. Lincoln is killed, and the radical element in his party, led by a Congressman with a Negro mistress, adopts a policy of reconstruction involving social as well as political intercourse between the black and white races. Reconstruction means Negro domination of the white civilization of the South. Confronting this menace the Ku-Klux Klan springs into being, marshaled in legions that never were, and redeems the South from destruction.

The difficulty with Mr. Dixon as a purveyor of history is that he is not a historian. A historian not only presents true incidents from the past, but, if he is a fair-minded and impartial, takes care that the incidents are representative and typical. Many of the most effective and most misleading scenes in "The Birth of a Nation" doubtless occurred some time, somewhere in the South. Chosen as the whole picture of the Reconstruction period, however, they are unfair and misleading. Mr. Dixon has a single-track mind, and the track leads only through very unpleasant country. He is a partisan and a dangerous one. He can see questions only in broad splotches of black and white. He knows but one side of Southern life, the sex problem of "Aryan and African."

As Mr. Dixon rightly believes and dramatically shows, the American Nation was born from the travail of civil war and the injustice of the Reconstruction period, and therefore his photodrama shows emotions opening of the wounds of the North and the white South. The effect of "The Birth of a Nation" is to the fact that the play is both a denial of the power of development within the free Negro and an excitement of race war.

It would be difficult, indeed, to paint in colors dark enough the shame of the Reconstruction period. To say this is not to excuse the conduct of a people who outlots this shame and which the blurred picture [illegible]

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.

Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I call your attention to the fact that Chicago has an extremely good board of censorship for films, the members of which, appointed under the rules of civil service, are under the supervision of the morals division of police. These censors pass upon all moving pictures before they are shown in Chicago. A note from THE TRIBUNE of April 1 says a film recently shown in New York as "The Birth of a Nation" has passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, and by the mayor. While Mr. Fitzmorris may be a most excellent secretary, versed in his duties as such, is he not unnecessary that he should work of the entire board, that a film should be submitted for the recommendation of one person. "The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to incite prejudice against colored people, they are all bestial and the white men—especially the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly the gleaming magnanimous acts of invariably appearing at the last to rescue the virtuous from destruction. Such an art from destruction. Such an art of an historic period works doubtless some of the indirectly reported, but they are filled with the most sinister that reason are most mis-ful.

Of the best citizens of against the appearance that city. Is it not mission should have a notorious film to before it was submitted to censors or to those who are occasion-m? If the city of rth while to spend this board of cen-time as this that the most valu-spirited citizens st against this of power on the

EN BOWEN, Association.

CHICAGO (Ill.) HERALD
MAY 17, 1915

Egging the Dixon Show.

Rev. Tom Dixon comes in for some more advertising. The moving picture play, "Birth of a Nation," running at a New York theater at the aristocratic price of $2.50 for the best seats, got the negro part of it out of Dixon's book. There are scenes in it that aroused the resentment of a lot of negroes and white sympathizers, and these went to the theater with paper bags of eggs in their pockets. When one of the offending scenes came on, the screen was made a target for the eggs. The police appeared and hustled the offenders out and the people who attended that particular performance got the worth of their money. The negroes and white sympathizers whose feelings were outraged at the pictures, took no account of the parts in which the negroes of the south were depicted in the performance of acts of heroism, nor of the picture showing northern carpetbaggers beating negro slaves for loyalty to their friends, particularly women and children. The proabilities are that if Dixon's name had not been connected with the pictures there would never have been a suggestion of resentment. It was simply an outcropping of the prejudicial feeling against Dixon and anything with which his name is associated in the minds of an ignorantly sentimental class of both blacks and whites.—Charlotte Observer.

LET IT STAY BARRED.

Mayor THOMPSON has barred from Chicago the notorious photoplay based on the romances of racial hatred by the Rev. THOMAS DIXON. Mayor THOMPSON is right. It should be barred.

In vain do the promoters protest that in their spectacle there is "a note of optimism, brotherly love and readjustment of racial conditions intended to soothe and brighten."

A famous French author dedicated to "My sons, when they reach the age of 20," a graphic account of the disasters that follow on yielding to enticements to enter into illicit sexual relations.

The book may, perhaps, be usefully read by many young men. Yet when presented in dramatic form it became merely the picture of a brothel and its inmates, affronting all clean-minded spectators and gratifying only the morbid emotions it stimulated.

However excellent the intentions, everything depends on the way they are carried out. The public derives no benefit from "popular" presentation of the scenes of the clinic and the confessional. This particular presentation, both in its ordinary and its film dramatization, has a riot-provoking record. Let it stay barred, so far as Chicago can bar it.

NEW YORK (N.Y.)

UPTON SINCLAIR "THE BIRTH OF

Alexander Irving atrical Manager 'Know Dr

"As I see there are present, I want to sa Upton Sinclair. The n did not exert his eye ably or The Call report the job was very unob

Sinclair spoke at a Women's Professiona which delegates from had been invited at th quarters, 1999 Broadw

Continued the au Jungle." "I saw 'The tion.' It is the most a ing and poisonous pl ever seen. If the pla the South the produc sponsible for a hun murders. All the arts lization have been ser ment of the most ign one group of people other.

Might Solve Industri

"If the same pow the portrayal of the working class the in would be solved in th tained Sinclair. "It good ladies and m throughout the Unit know the facts that continues to suffer."

Here was the pro conscious actors plays before the pu lieves that it canno it costs too much m

Irving Put It Plain

Alexander Irving thusiasm of the m said: "The workin does not go to th drama cuts no managers don't kn any more than th They never resp along dramatic lin only know that co must be satisfied that carry a 'pun

He deplored th labor plays were not go to see the "I don't believe will do much to plution. The wor itself. Out of th millions must "conclusi thirty of the

RECORD HERALD
Chicago, Ill.
APR 20 1915

Birth of a Nation" Stirs Protests From Chicagoans

PROTESTS against the showing of "The Birth of a Nation," which has been promised as a special at-[illegible] Illinois Theater next [illegible] daily.

"The Birth of a Nation," you will remember, is the film that David Griffith produced from Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman." It took eight months to complete.

Mrs. Louise de Koven Bowen, president of the Juvenile Protective Association, is especially outspoken in her desire either to have the most harrowing scenes eliminated or else suppress the film entirely.

"What is your chief objection to this picture?" I asked Mrs. Bowen.

"It is calculated to arouse race prejudice. In it the negroes are bestial and villainous, while the white men—especially those of the Kuklux Klan—are entirely heroes, performing magnanimous acts of chivalry and appearing always at the right moment to save the country from destruction. Such a presentation of this historic period will work great harm. It will stimulate and foster intense race hatred.

"Miss Jane Addams saw it before she went abroad and she felt just as I do about its harmful influence."

"But, I am told, the most objectionable parts have been cut out," I told her.

"The picture is remarkable and I should be glad to hear that all of those unpleasant scenes had been taken out of the film," said Mrs. Bowen. "You see our own Chicago censor board refused the picture a permit."

"Aside from the race question have you any other reasons for wishing the picture suppressed?" I asked.

"Yes," was the reply. "I think it would be exceedingly harmful for children. I should be sorry to have the children see it."

Mrs. Carter Harrison, who viewed the picture as a guest when it was shown in private exhibition, is of much the same opinion.

It seems unfortunate that a picture in which the best efforts of the master producer, David Griffith, and one of the most [illegible] screen actors, Harry Walthall, have been used to create this marvelous [illegible] deal with a subject that [illegible] it under public disapproval.

The Chicago "movie fans" have been greatly [illegible] in this Broadway production [illegible] are hoping that the picture in [illegible] way may have the unwholesome [illegible] cut out, so that they, too, [illegible] the first $2 "movie"

EVENING GLOBE
New York City
APR 14 1915

LINCOLN'S POLITICAL PHILOSOPHY.

Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," "The Leopard's Spots," and other volumes generally regarded as strongly inciting race prejudice, puts himself forward in his letter to The Globe yesterday as an authority on what Abraham Lincoln thought and intended to do. With all due respect The Globe is not able to accept him as such an authority.

The bias of Mr. Dixon's mind is not such as to make it probable that he can enter into the thoughts of the great emancipator. If he had been a contemporary of Lincoln he would have opposed Lincoln's policies, probably with arms. We may safely surmise he would have asserted that Lincoln was wickedly seeking to break down the barriers between white man and black man that God had established. If he would not have been in sympathy with the living Lincoln it is unlikely he now correctly understands him.

Lincoln was a fundamental democrat. He believed in the brotherhood of man and in the democratic spirit whose unfolding wars against everything impeding the realization of brotherhood. From his earliest days to the hour, fifty years ago to-day, when his eyes were closed in death, he constantly quoted Jefferson's words in the Declaration of Independence that "all men are created equal." He rejoiced that they had been inserted in our first great national document. He did not contend that the forefathers had consistently applied this principle, or that it had been done in his day, but he gloried over the fact that a standard maxim had been set up, constantly to be labored for and approximated to, which had been and was to continue to be a stumbling block in the way of those opposed to democratic progress.

Lincoln, radical and even revolutionary in his political thought, was an opportunist, and not ashamed to modify principles to meet circumstances. He had patience and was satisfied with slow progress. Thus he can at times be apparently quoted on both sides of particular questions. But the inconsistency is seeming rather than actual. In the heart of no one of our public men did faith in and desire to advance true democracy burn more brightly. He rejected in toto the philosophy that teaches men to this day that the Negro was to be taught and kept in his place.

Much trouble would probably have been avoided if Lincoln had lived. Andrew Johnson was not an acceptable leader. In his speech after the fall of Richmond he demanded that the influential men of the south should be sent to the halter. In a short time he flew to the other side and supported the views of those who wanted to assume that nothing had happened. Lincoln would have been steadier and have done better. It is probable that the mistake of indiscriminate bestowal of the ballot would have been avoided and also the mistake of doing nothing in an economic way for the emancipated slaves. When Alexander of Russia liberated the serfs he recognized that they had a title to some of the land they and their ancestors had tilled, and set aside 70 per cent. of the estates of the nobles for their benefit. We gave the slaves a theoretical freedom, but turned them loose propertyless and dependent. On the political side the nation was overkind, but on the more important economic side was underkind. But whatever the policy of Lincoln it is reasonably clear what would be his policy if alive to-day. He would not see any good in blowing into new and noxious life enmities and prejudices that had better die. He would not be one of those seeking to prevent the rise of Negroes of personal merit by denying to them equal rights under the law.

MAY 31, 1915
MUNCIE (Ind.) STAR

BOOSTING THE KU KLUX.

The Chicago Tribune, the midwest's self appointed organ of social justice, makes an ardent plea for the presentation in Chicago of a moving picture film which glorifies the Ku Klux clan and its use of the rope, the bludgeon, the shotgun and the torch on the black man in showing the "nigger" his proper place in the social and political economy of the Southland.

It's a little curious that so much of the agonizing over social justice fails to include the southern negro in its scheme for the uplift. The wrongs of the peons of Mexico and the coolies of the Philippines draw tears to the eyes of these reformers, but the denial to the Southern black man of his political and industrial rights and his trial by torture appeals to them as a heroic transaction in the establishment of "white supremacy."

It's a little curious, of course, to hear the paper Joseph Medill used to edit advocating the exhibition in Chicago of films which glorify the suppression of human rights by violence. It doesn't seem to go along very well with the rest of the Tribune stage business. But of course the direction of the Tribune among men is considered [illegible]

CLIPPING FROM Star Minn. Minn.
Date 3-12-15
MINNEAPOLIS, MIN

DISAPPROVES OF "CLANSMAN" PLAY

National Board of Censorship Takes Quick Action.

BIG VICTORY FOR OUR RACE

National Association For the Advancement of Colored People Administers Severe Blow to Production of Film Show Called "Birth of the Nation," Based on Dixon's Book.

New York.—The National Association For the Advancement of Colored People has scored a real triumph in this city in succeeding in getting the national board of censorship to reverse its approval of the moving picture film called "The Birth of a Nation," which is based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman."

As soon as advised of the action of the board of censorship, at the suggestion of Paul Kennaday, a member of the board of the National Association For the Advancement of Colored People, officers of the association got in touch with the police commissioner through Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, who has been advised by the commissioner that the entire matter has been placed in the hands of Chief Magistrate McAdoo, and the owners of the film have been warned not to produce it.

It had been extensively advertised for production beginning on the night of March 8 in the Liberty theater, Forty-second street, west of Broadway. One hundred thousand dollars has been invested in it. Its owners are Messrs. Aitken and Griffith. The latter is reported to be a Virginian. An advance performance of the production was given in Washington, and it is said that Chief Justice White and President Wilson were present.

The reversal of the decision of the board of censorship to approve the film will probably prevent its production in about 80 per cent of the theaters of this country, since many cities have ordinances prohibiting the production of moving pictures when not approved by the national board of censorship, and even when there are not such prohibitive ordinances many theaters will not produce films unless they have the approval of the censorship board.

The National association had a very difficult task to perform in suppressing this film since it had already been approved by the censorship board when the association first heard of it through its Los Angeles branch, where it is alleged a duplicate film had been released and produced in spite of the protest of the branch. The reason given by the police department and the city council for refusing to interfere was that the film had been approved by the national board of censorship.

When the national association first made its appeal to the national board of censorship there seemed to be little prospect of getting an unfavorable decision on this film in the limited time left before its advertised public production. The association communicated with every member of the board of censorship, and through the latter's courtesy an advance performance was arranged at the Liberty theater Monday afternoon, March 1. All the members of the board of censorship were present, and a small committee from the National Association For the Advancement of Colored People was in the audience. At the close of the performance the board of censorship met and unanimously voted to disapprove the film.

In connection with the difficulties that the national association met in having this criticised film censored, it is interesting to note the action taken in Atlanta, Ga., in regard to "Uncle Tom's Cabin," which has recently been produced there in moving pictures. To suit the southern community the name of the production had to be changed to "Old Plantation Folks" and all disagreeable scenes cut out, such as the whipping post. Legree is made almost a saint.

In justifying this action Mrs. Joseph Morgan of Atlanta, president of the Pioneers, says: "Nobody has any right to come here and stir up sectional prejudice by showing such a play."

NIAGARA FALLS (N. Y.) JOURNAL
MARCH 16, 1915

NEGROES SEEK TO STOP FILM PLAY

Resent Scenes in "Birth of Nation" Production—Claim is Race Libel.

BROOKLYN, March 16.—A campaign for the suppression of the new motion picture spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," the drama of Civil War, reconstruction and Ku Klux days in the South, based upon Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," which opened here, has been undertaken by the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. Evidence that the film is causing unrest among the negroes of the city, which it is feared may grow into open disturbances if the film continues to be presented, is the basis of the association's action.

Officials explained at the headquarters at No. 70 Fifth avenue that negroes had been coming to them to demand that action be taken to stop the film, and that the protests arise from an intense resentment against the characterization of the negro in the story, in the justification of the violence of the Ku Klux Klan. If their opposition to the film is not successful, these officers said, they fear for the results.

The negroes feel that the story of the picture play is a libel upon their race in that it represents the negro as either a primitive and ignorant brute or a vicious and treacherous criminal according to the officials of the association. Their opposition is backed up by the decision of the National Board of Censorship, after repeated consideration, against the film in its present form. The association also quotes Southerners who have seen the film and have expressed condemnation of it as an injustice to negroes. Rabbi Wise and the Rev. Dr. Percy Stickney Grant protested against it. In addition, the association is pushing an attempt to get legal action to stop the film.

The fight to stop the film was begun after its release in Los Angeles, where a branch of the association there sent word that it was causing trouble among the negroes. It had already been viewed by a sub-committee of the National Board of Censorship, and passed; but officers of the association took the question up with Dr. F. C. Howe, chairman of the Board, and gained a decision for a review by the central body. This took place Monday afternoon, and after it the National Board reversed the decision of their sub-committee by a vote of sixteen to four.

The portions objected to were a section in which a negro was shown chasing a white girl until she was forced to save herself by leaping from a cliff; another scene in which a mulatto attempting a forced marriage [illegible] white girl through his political [illegible] under negro franchise, seized [illegible] carried her from the room [illegible] scene in which negroes were shown drinking in a saloon.

A representative of the association went to Police Commissioner Woods, and he called the matter to the attention of Chief Magistrate McAdoo, who warned the owners against the production of the film. Deputy Police Commissioner Dunham and Inspector Morris expressed the fear of the police department that the film might cause rioting. Mr. Kaufman, deputy commissioner of licenses, was also approached on the question of whether the film could be stopped under the law on decency.

At the magistrate's hearing, the attorney for the owners said that changes had been made in the film, to meet objections.

The film as changed, however, did not meet the approval of the association nor of the officials of the National Board of Censorship who attended the first night performance.

PPER

New York City

MAY

FRISCO G

DEATH

PENN. CEN

MAYOR MIT ATIONS IN

Acting on a c arrison Villard
. Howe, represe
olored societies itchell, Tuesday eliminations to rth of a Nation, s currently at t
se who is con
rd of Censors, fi or to take actio
rance to the follo
The Board of Ce
bition to go to et that my name
ed as a member oes in this city h
not yet arisen t attacked the pr of the Western W layboy as a cari
zation.
op this production ender a great ser ountry."
l Wise is a promin York City. Oswald
tor of The Evenin
he Birth of a Natio
as concerned, was oral." "I'll stake have, as a historica rd, 'on my charges
he logging in of th is needless and would be improv
f the objectionable

liard, in addition finds time to atte resident of the Nati dvancement of Colo
C. Howe claimed the picture affecte
the United States,
the production.
es chiefly objected t a white girl by a c empted love-making w he part of the mulatt omas Dixon's book, " in literary form caus en it was first publish APPEARS WITH CO
the presentation of the plaints, D. W. Griffith,
April 1, accompanied by
W. Littleton and arme

TRIBUNE
PRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

F AGAINST A FILM.
4.—[Editor of The Tri call your attention to the ago has an extremely good rship for films, the mem appointed under the rules are under the supervi als division of police.
pass upon all movin
they are shown in Chi m THE TRIBUNE of April ntly shown in New York Birth of a Nation" has
by Charles Fitzmorris, mayor. While Mr. Fitz ost excellent secretary his duties as such, is cessary that he should the entire censorship should be authorized
dation of one person?
Nation" is calculated dice against colored e all bestial and vil
ite men—especially Klan—are uniformly agnanimous acts of ly appearing at the e the virtuo and destruction. Such toric period works
s some of the in eported, but they
the most sinister on are most mis best citizens of nst the appear city. Is it not should have torious film to re it was sub sors or to the are occasion t the city of hile to spend board of cen as this that most valu ted citizens gainst this ower on the

OWEN, ociation.

Tu Survey

EVE

At eleva Pictu tabli been

SA

F

to the wh
B by fr do w pa

as s in tu c p ti fi
o clan, out th save marr gove is a

C ous
A br
a Tour white perpe cover convi

Let of these tory, and refuted th
As an o
as we w
tures, "It scenes, long

Bure

It is before York, I who de Birth announ this bi than 150,000
New York, and sa
four weeks in advan
Though the pictu
Civil War and its and was directed on the bare outli
there has be tered against National Ass
ment of Colore given was that a bad influen
where the intermarriage of whites was permitted by law.
Birth of a Nation" shows up results of racial mongrelizati essed.
W. Reed, pastor church, arrived home Chico and on learning man" was to be proa lot of data on Mayor R.

ally ed

ow Yor best se ry night

opriates, however, sing of time."

Dramatic Mirror
New York
4-21-15

STPONE "CLANSMAN" SUIT

eighth postponement of the hearing Liberty Theater case involving "The of a Nation" film, which is a dram- n of Thomas Dixon's novel, "The an," was granted by Magistrate in the Jefferson Market Court last at the reque-t of James W. Osborne, rney for the National Association for Advancement of the Colored People, h is the complainant.

PORTLAND PRESS HERALD

APR 21 1915

advertising the photo play rth of a Nation" is touring in is making the press agents of moving picture productions ith envy.

Bureau in the Press

Editor The Morning Telegraph:

I wish to express to you my sincere thanks for your editorial in this last week's paper in which you say some kind words for our "Birth of the Nation." I assure you that it came to me at a time when kindness was most welcome.

Yours sincerely, D. W. Griffith.

La Grange, Ky., April 20.

PER
New York City
APR 1 0 1915

MAYOR MITCHEL ORDERS ELIMINATIONS IN "BIRTH OF NATION."

VICTOR HERBERT LOSES SUIT AGAINST WORLD FILM.

COLONIAL SUES GEO. RANDOLPH CHESTER FOR $50,000.

ANOTHER FREAK BILL INTRODUCED IN OHIO.

FRISCO GETS NEXT NATIONAL M.P.E.L. OF A. CONVENTION IN JULY

DEATH OF WM. V. RANOUS, PIONEER PICTURE DIRECTOR.

HORKHEIMERS WOULD ENJOIN WALTHALL.

PENN. CENSOR LAW STANDS---NEW BILL TO SUPERSEDE PRESENT LAW INTRODUCED.

MAYOR MITCHELL ORDERS ELIMINATIONS IN "BIRTH OF A NATION."

Acting on a complaint presented by Oswald Garrison Villard, Rabbi Wise and Frederick C. Howe, representing the interests of several colored societies of New York City, Mayor Mitchell, Tuesday, March 30, ordered several eliminations to be made in Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation," playing to capacity business currently at the Liberty Theatre. Rabbi Wise who is connected with the National Board of Censors, in his request, asking the Mayor to take action on the picture, gave utterance to the following remarks:

"The Board of Censors which allowed this exhibition to go is stupid or worse, and I regret that my name is even remotely connected as a member of such a board. The negroes in this city have been patient. They have not yet arisen to protest like the Irish, who attacked the production of 'The Playboy of the Western World.' The Irish saw the playboy as a caricature, not as a characterization.

"Stop this production, Mr. Mayor, and you will render a great service to the people of this country."

Rabbi Wise is a prominent Hebrew prelate of New York City. Oswald Garrison Villard, the editor of The Evening Post, declared that "The Birth of a Nation," as far as the negro was concerned, was "improper, unjust and immoral." "I'll stake whatever reputation I have as a historical student," said Mr. Villard, "on my charges against this film play. The dragging in of the negro into this exhibition is needless and uncalled for, and the play would be improved upon in every respect if the objectionable scenes were taken out."

Mr. Villard, in addition to his editorial activities, finds time to attend to the duties of vice president of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

Frederic C. Howe claimed that certain scenes in the picture affected ten million citizens of the United States, who were degraded by the production.

The scenes chiefly objected to were the pursuing of a white girl by a crazed negro, and the attempted love-making with a white woman on the part of the mulatto governor of the piece. "The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman," which in literary form caused a mild sensation when it was first published.

GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH COUNSEL.

Following the presentation of the above recorded complaints, D. W. Griffith, Thursday afternoon, April 1, accompanied by his attorney, Martin W. Littleton and armed with letters commending "The Birth of a Nation," from Rev. Dr. Parkhurst, Rev. J. Talbot Smith and other prominent clergymen and laymen, appeared before the Mayor to state his side of the case. Following the Mayor's instructions, License Commissioner Bell had ordered certain eliminations, which were made March 31.

Martin W. Littleton informed the Mayor that his orders had been complied with, and pleaded for the picture's presentation in its present form.

Mr. Littleton said in part:

"Protest against this picture is based on the propaganda of the Association for the Intermarriage of the Races. Its real attitude on this question is evidenced by the language of protests it has sent to legislatures of States where bills prohibiting such marriages have been pending. In these protests the association says:

"'We oppose it for the physical reason that to prohibit such intermarriage would be publicly to acknowledge that black blood is a physical taint, something that no self-respecting colored man or woman can be asked to admit.'"

After listening to argument by D. W. Griffith, Thomas Dixon and several others, Mayor Mitchel suggested that Commissioner Bell see the picture once more and use his best judgment.

Mayor Mitchel, at the finish of the hearing, said:

"My mind is quite free.

"I have seen the play. If it were as you suggest, merely an argument against the marriage of blacks and whites, it might be a different question, but there are two scenes that appeal to race prejudice, and I feel that they ought to be modified. I think the best thing you can do is to meet Commissioner Bell and Deputy Commissioner Kaufman and come to an agreement on the scenes against which the Department of Licenses protests. The negro citizens have certain rights that must be observed."

COURT CASE POSTPONED ONE WEEK.

As a result of the Mayor's decision, the court case which came up before Magistrate McQuade, April 1, in the Jefferson Market Court, was postponed for one week.

The management of the Liberty and the sponsors of "The Birth of a Nation" having been summoned to appear in court by the representatives of a negro society.

CHRONICLE
HOUSTON, TEXAS
APR 6 1915

NEWARK, (N. J.) STAR
APR 2 7 1915

Mayor Minahan Puts Ban on Proposed Film Play

Mayor Daniel F. Minahan of Orange, has given assurance to the Colored Citizens' Union of that town in a letter that he would not permit the production of the film, "The Birth of the Nations" if he found, upon investigation, that the film story showed prejudice against the negro race.

Mayor Minahan had been approached by the league and told that the film might come to Orange.

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) CHRONICLE
APRIL 20, 1915

"THE BIRTH OF A NATION" TO BE STOPPED

Boston, April 19.—As a result of a protest made at the state house today by a crowd of over a thousand colored people, Governor Walsh and a committee proposed a plan to the people to prosecute the producers of the film, "The Birth of a Nation," now playing at the Tremont Theatre.

The prosecution will be asked for under section 367 of the Acts of 1910, which prohibits the showing of "suggestive" entertainments and provides for a fine of $500 or imprisonment for one year or both for the producers of such entertainment as shall be proved "suggestive."

A group of colored people on the steps of the state house began to sing "America," but hissing drowned out the singing. The singing of the "Star Spangled Banner" was received in the same manner. A parody on "We'll Hang Jeff Davis to a Sour Apple Tree," substituting the name of Tom Dixon, the author of the "Clansman," from which the play was taken, was sung by nearly the entire crowd.

(Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE OF

PROTEST AGAINST A FILM.

Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I call your attention to the fact that Chicago has an extremely good board of censorship for films, the members of which, appointed under the rules of civil service, are under the supervision of the mor[illegible]sion of police. These censors [illegible] upon all moving pictures before t[illegible] shown in Chicago. I note from [illegible]IBUNE of April that a film recently [illegible] New York known as "The Birt[illegible]ation" has been "passed" by [illegible] Fitzmorris, secretary to the mayor[illegible]le Mr. Fitzmorris may be a most ex[illegible]nt secretary and well versed in his duties as such, is it not rather unnecessary that he should usurp the work of the entire censorship board and that a film should be authorized upon the recommendation of one person? "The Birth of a Nation" is calculated to arouse race prejudice against colored people; in [illegible] they are all bestial and vicious, while the white men—especially [illegible] of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniformly [illegible]es, performing magnanimous acts of chivalry and invariably appearing at the [illegible] moment to rescue the virtuous and save the country from destruction. Such [illegible]entation of an historic period works [illegible] harm. Doubtless some of the in[illegible] are correctly reported, but they [illegible]een selected with the most sinister [illegible] and for that reason are most misleading and harmful.

[illegible]e number of the best citizens of [illegible]rk protested against the appearance of the film in that city. Is it not [illegible] that permission should have [illegible]n for such a notorious film to [illegible] in Chicago before it was submitted to our board of censors or to the [illegible] of citizens who are occasionally [illegible] to help them? If the city of [illegible] considers it worth while to spend [illegible]ear to sustain this board of censors [illegible] not at such a time as this that [illegible]ices would be the most valuable. [illegible]rtainly, public spirited citizens [illegible]ected to protest against this [illegible]ry usurpation of power on the [illegible]ty official.

[illegible]LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
[illegible]venile Protective Association.

"The Birth of a Nation

The following statement [illegible] has been issued by the sponsors [illegible] York, 1884 spectacle, "The Birth of [illegible] which is now running at the Liberty Theatre, New York, preliminary to a countrywide tour:

The drama has been shown for four weeks in the metropolis and for nine weeks in Los Angeles, Cal., without the slightest disturbance of any kind. The New York run is expected to continue for many months to absolute capacity at the regular price scale of first class theatrical attractions.

One hundred and fifty thousands patrons have seen and approved the play. The only opposition has been voiced by members of the National Association for the Improvement of Colored People. Their reason, [illegible] mitted, is the effect of the [illegible] those Northern states permit [illegible] inter-marriage of blacks and [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" ex[illegible] folly of such mongrelizing [illegible]

The play has been [illegible] proved by the National Board [illegible] sorship, who [illegible] dramatically an[illegible] should prove a [illegible] motion picture pro[illegible] wise approved as [illegible] pure.

Unlike its pre[illegible] man," which [illegible] artistically and other[illegible] received the greatest [illegible] ever given to a product[illegible] in New York City. The critics hailed as "the triumph of a new art" this work by a native Southerner, David W. Griffith, who has advanced the motion picture from a toy to the dignity of epic drama.

The events of the war between the states and a reconstruction, pictured in "The Birth of a Nation," are matters of authentic history. Every detail has been verified. So confident is Mr. Griffith of its accuracy and truth that he has invited a committee of representative editors to come to New York at his own expense and see the play, with the promise that if they find "The Birth of a Nation" objectionable he will withdraw it from the boards.

BART[illegible]ER FOU[illegible] SALOONS

Murderi[illegible]an, Pr[illegible]ds m Whi[illegible] Being Sough[illegible] f Police[illegible]n.

Michael Crei[illegible] South State street, ordered the bartender, Thomas Creighton, brother of the owner, to hold up his hands, and shot and killed him when he resisted; got $5 and escaped.

6 A. M.—Held up John Ingram in his saloon at 6135 South Halsted street; got $26 and escaped.

6.15 A. M.—Held up a porter and two customers in Oscar A. Dahlberg's saloon, 6025 South Halsted street, and escaped with $9.

In the meantime [illegible]cores of policemen who had been notifi[illegible] of the killing of Creighton were scouring the whole South Side for the bandit, who calmly continued his work [illegible]

Paramount group and some others stood aloof. Those who were susceptible swallowed the alarmist theories that all the politicians, big and little, national, State and municipal, would prey on the new industry, and it was industriously declared and believed with implicit faith that the promoters of the Hughes bill were irreconcilable fanatics, who would concede nothing to the motion picture interests.

In this undertaking Mr. Binder had the aid of his salaried associate in the national board, Orrin Cocks, and of Stephen W. Rush, editor of the Motion Picture World, who has stood almost alone in the theory that no censorship is needed and that the demand for censorship may be crushed out.

Now that the motion picture producers that approached the authors of the bill in a cooperative spirit have found them considerative of the filmmakers' point of view and are actually nearing complete agreement on a new bill jointly made. Messrs. Binder and Rush are making desperate efforts by more scare literature to hold their constituents in line. It is a sign of their desperate straits that they err out that Paramount, Lasky, World, Equitable and Famous Players companies are favoring Federal censorship only to advertise the superior moral quality of their photo-plays.

Interest of the Theatres.

What then of the other companies who a year before took the same stand, but were turned about by Mr. Binder? Again the desperate status of Mr. Binder's sheaf is seen in that they are circulating the rumor that high-grade theatrical stars which act for the Paramount group are using it to kill motion pictures in the interest of the theatres. But that argument, too, fails in that some companies in like case are still Word fr[illegible]

[illegible] has never seen the [illegible] Johnson to which [illegible] ers, but stated for Mr. [illegible] it the legislation of [illegible] Southern States, as taken from [illegible] d pamphlet laws for the [illegible] These printed volumes [illegible] any law library. Does [illegible] timent of the statutes by [illegible] entioned?

gest that these laws were [illegible] ith a million gleaming bayo[illegible] nion army at her breast, [illegible] "advice and co-operation of the [illegible] 's Bureau" is so [illegible] te an unbalanced [illegible] ion of the facts will [illegible] ich nonsense to be unworthy [illegible] consideration.

G. W. EKAEF.

City, April 17.

AR

Baltimore, Md.

APR 23 1915

tectives Guard Movie

as charged in the Jefferson [illegible] Police Court yesterday that [illegible] perty Theater, where the film [illegible] rth of a Nation" is being shown, [illegible] ployed 15 private detectives to [illegible] negroes who do not like the [illegible] play. The charge was made [illegible] case of John [illegible] against [illegible] d Schaeffe[illegible] affie is charged [illegible] t the screening [illegible] shown on [illegible] 12. [illegible] t of the [illegible] lay. The [illegible] 1 until [illegible] fense, so [illegible] seman W. [illegible] t to represent [illegible]

Will do mu[illegible] solution. The [illegible] itself. Out of the heart of the [illegible] millions must come the revolu[illegible] concluded Irvine. [illegible] thirty or [illegible] the somewhat [illegible] propriety, however [illegible] on the part [illegible] the members [illegible] dual League [illegible] enthusiasm [illegible] losing of time."

[illegible] Bureau in the World

CLIPPING

BANGOR, ME.

APR 23 1915

The controversy over the presentation of the photo play, The Birth of a Nation, which has so stirred Boston of late, because of the objection of colored residents to certain scenes that do not represent the negro in an attractive light, is finished, the theatre management having agreed to eliminate the particularly objectionable scene. The management would doubtless have taken this position long ago, except that it realized the great advertising that the film was obtaining without expense. One of the chief drawbacks to campaigns against books and plays of doubtful propriety is that the attention thereby drawn to them focuses public attention upon them to a far greater degree than if no objection is registered.

scenes, such as throwing herself [illegible] sued by a negro [illegible] fore the film is [illegible] of the country.

[illegible]-April 24-15

TAFT OFFICIATES AT HAMPTON GRADUATION

PRESENTS THE CANDIDATES FOR DEGREES TO TRUSTEES.

Hundreds of Guests Assemble from North and South for the Forty-seventh Anniversary of the Institute — Julius Rosenwald and Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin Among Speakers—Annual Report of Dr. Frissell, Principal of the Institution.

[Special Dispatch to The Evening Post.]

HAMPTON, Va., April 23.—The forty-seventh anniversary of Hampton Institute closed to-day with the presentation of candidates for certificates and diplomas to the Hampton board of trustees by William Howard Taft. Hundreds of visitors from the South, as well as the North, attended the anniversary celebration, which included a reunion of the Hampton class of 1890. A folklore concert, an inspection of the Trade School, some interesting demonstrations, addresses by members of the Hampton graduating class, an inspection of domestic-science and agricultural classes, and addresses by visitors composed the programme. Alexander B. Trowbridge, of New York, president of the National Hampton Association, brought down from the North a party of over one hundred prominent men and women. A large delegation of Southerners came from Norfolk and vicinity, under the leadership of A. T. Stroud.

Addresses were delivered by the Rev. Dr. W. T. Merrill, Eben E. Olcott, Julius Rosenwald, the Rev. Francis G. Peabody, the Rev. Dr. W. S. Melton, the Rev. Dr. Henry Sloane Coffin, Job E. Hedges, and William Howard Taft.

"When you come to Hampton," said Mr. Taft, "you come to a centre of national movement, development, and progress. It is that which makes Hampton the most conspicuous and to-day the most important institution of learning that we have in this country."

The influence of Hampton Institute as a socializing force throughout the Southern rural districts and its coöperation with the other organizations in the same work are brought out in the forty-seventh annual report of the principal. Dr. Frissell also takes up the need for a larger auditorium which should seat as many as 1,600 people, and announces several important gifts which have been made to Hampton during the past year, and emphasizes the educative importance of the summer campaigns as a corrective against the false emphasis of the newspapers and such productions as the "Birth of a Nation."

Speaking of the ideas for negro education, which were held by the founder of Hampton Institute, Dr. Frissell says: "While Gen. Armstrong was thoroughly in sympathy with what is called 'higher education' for negroes as well as for whites, he realized that the greatest need of a backward race like the negroes was for leaders who could teach the 'ordinary man how to do ordinary things in an extraordinary way.'" At the same time, Dr. Frissell points out that the Hampton graduate is unable to secure certain important academic positions because of his ignorance of Latin and the higher mathematics. "It is deserving of consideration," he continues, "whether, at Hampton or elsewhere, training shall be given to fit selected youth for such positions." His report reads further, in part, as follows:

"The rural-school supervisors of seven different S[illegible]es met at Hampton last fall, to[illegible] [illegible]th a large number of coun[illegible]rs and farm-demonstration [illegible] ev[illegible] people understand the trem[illegible] importance to the South of the [illegible]tary, rural-school, and farm-demonstration work, directed by men like Dr. Rose, Dr. Dillard, and the late Dr. Knapp. The Department of Agriculture at Washington has cordially coöperated with Hampton's work. The Bureau of Education also has rendered all possible assistance.

"Mr. Fenninger reports, in regard to the summer conference of the negro ministers of Tidewater, Virginia, which was held in connection with the Summer School, that over fifty ministers from Virginia and North Carolina were in attendance. Hampton must do all in its power to help the negro preacher, who is still probably the greatest single power among his people."

Speaking of the summer campaigns, Dr. Frissell says in part:

If the only object of these campaigns were the raising of funds for Hampton, their cost might properly be criticised. But General Armstrong felt that Hamp- [illegible] Tuskegee had another mission [illegible] as the education of [illegible] people toward these races and their education. Thousands of people in New York City are now attending a moving-picture show called "The Birth of a Nation," which presents an utterly false and abhorrent picture of negro life. The papers of the country dwell upon the crimes of the negro race, but not upon its progress. It seems incumbent upon schools like Hampton to help people realize that under proper conditions the negro can be fitted for Christian citizenship.

Among the gifts to Hampton during the past year have been the Robert C. Ogden Scholarship Fund of $40,000, raised by the Brooklyn Armstrong Association; $100,000 for the D. Willis James hall, given by Mrs. D. Willis James for a dormitory for 175 boys; and $22,000 towards the $100,000 needed for the Robert C. Ogden Auditorium. Armstrong Associations were formed at Williams, at Groton and Phillips Andover, and among the younger women in New York. Three separate exhibits have been sent to the San Francisco Exposition.

TIMES

TROY, N. Y.

APR 24 1915

SOUTHERN HISTORY.

Dr. Rossiter Johnson on a Celebrated Fictionist.

(Rossiter Johnson in The New York Sun.)

I have been very much interested in following the discussion of the merits or demerits of Mr. Dixon's play, "The Birth of a Nation." When his book entitled "The Clansman," on which the drama is partly founded, was published (in 1905), it fell to me to review it in The "Criterion Magazine." Will you allow me to quote from that review, which presents some points that are not generally understood?

"It is evident that the author intends this book to be read as history, and in the light of history it must be judged. His purpose is to show the wickedness of the reconstruction acts of Congress after the Civil War. It is a remarkable fact that no one who tells the story of reconstruction or discusses it appears able to begin at the beginning. (I might have accused some of our best known historians of this.) The reason for the reconstruction laws is always ignored or concealed. President Johnson appointed provisional Governors of the recently rebellious states, and instructed them to call conventions to reestablish the state governments. The Legislatures so constituted proceeded at once to enact laws that were designed to return to a virtual condition of slavery the colored people who had been freed by President Lincoln's proclamation. One law made the testimony of colored witnesses inadmissible in any suit where a white man was concerned. The term 'vagrant' was presented with such a wide interpretation as made it easy to arrest almost any young colored persons and bind them out to labor as 'apprentices,' and in this the 'former owner' was to have the preference in securing their services.

"Some of the laws forbade colored men to have firearms of any kind. By a law of Louisiana, freedmen must make contracts in the first ten days of January, which would bind them through the year, and they must pay for the wear and tear of the implements they used and for any injury or death of the animals. In Mississippi no colored person was permitted to lease any land or tenement except in an incorporated town or village. In South Carolina no colored person was permitted to pursue any trade or business on his own account without a license and the fee for the license was very high, while no license was required for a white man. In the same state a poll tax was levied on colored women, but not on white women.

"It was the enactment of such laws as these in every one of the ten seceding states, showing a determination to nullify emancipation, that caused Congress to override President Johnson's policy and adopt a different plan of reconstruction. Mr. Dixon would have us believe the reconstruction laws were simply the expression of a fiendish spirit of vengeance. Under the name of Austin Stoneman he makes a hideous travesty of humanity, which he intends the reader to take for a portrait of Thaddeus Stevens, whom he represents as the supreme boss during President Grant's administration.

"By the way, Mr. Stevens died the year before Grant became President. He makes the organization of the Ku Klux Klan the climax of his story, and justifies it as being necessary to protect the Southern white women. The truth is that not then nor until years afterward was there any indication or complaint that those women were in danger. Mr. Dixon makes a clean sweep while he is about it—has a good word for Lincoln's assassin, repeats the silly story of Mrs. Surratt's innocence, and pictures the Northerners as politicians full of all malice and vindictiveness. He makes his hero, an ex-Confederate Colonel, say with equal grammar and grace, 'The Yankees know who to fool with. I licked 'em too many times for them to bother me any more.' We could say something of this book's deformities as a work of art, but it is hardly worth while."

I observe the announcement that Mr. Dixon has offered a reward of $5,000 for any proof that his work is not historically accurate. If this letter meets his eye, and he is candid enough to admit indisputable facts, he need not send the money to me. He may give it to any deserving charity, and ask the trustees of that charity to publish their receipts in The Sun."

PER
New York

MAYOR MITCH
VICTOR E
COLONIAL ANOT
FRISCO GETS N
DEATH OF HO
PENN. CENSOR

MAYOR MITCHEL
ATIONS IN "BIR
Acting on a compla
Garrison Villard, Rab
C. Howe, representing colored societies of N
Mitchell, Tuesday, Ma
al eliminations to be m Birth of a Nation," pla ness currently at the L
Wise who is connecte
Board of Censors, in h
Mayor to take action utterance to the follow
"The Board of Censo exhibition to go is stu regret that my name nected as a member of negroes in this city hav have not yet arisen to who attacked the prod boy of the Western Wo
the playboy as a caricat
acterization.
"Stop this production, M will render a great servic
this country."
Rabbi Wise is a prominen of New York City. Oswald the editor of The Event that "The Birth of a Nati as was concerned, was and immoral." "I'll sta tion I have as a histo
Mr. Villard, 'on my char play. The logging in of exhibition is needless and the play would be impro respect if the objectionable out."
Mr. Villard, in addition activities, finds time to at of vice president of the Na for the Advancement of Col Frederic C. Howe claim scenes in the picture affec citizens of the United State
graded by the production.
The scenes chiefly objecte pursuing of a white girl by and the attempted love-makin woman on the part of the m of the piece. "The Birth of based on Thomas Dixon's book man," which in literary form sensation when it was first pu
GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH
Following the presentation o recorded complaints, D. W. Grif day afternoon, April 1, accompan torney, Martin W. Littleton an

CAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE

PROTEST AGAINST A Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of une.]—May I call your attenti fact that Chicago has an extren board of censorship for films, th ers of which, appointed under t civil service, are under the s on of the morals division of polic
These censors pass upon all m ctures before they are shown i go. I note from THE TRIBUNE of that a film recently shown in New town as "The Birth of a Nation" en "passed" by Charles Fitzmor secretary to the mayor. While Mr. F norris may be a most excellent secret and well versed in his duties as such is not rather unnecessary that he shoul usurp the work of the entire censorsh d and that a film should be authori the recommendation of one pers
"The Birth of a Nation" is calcul arouse race prejudice against colo ple; that they are all bestial and ros, while the white men—especia e of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniform e, performing magnanimous acts lry and invariably appearing at t moment to rescue the virtuous a the country from destruction. Su entation of an historic period wor harm. Doubtless some of the are correctly reported, but th en selected with the most sinis and for that reason are most m
and harmful.
number of the best citizens
k protested against the appear the film in that city. Is it not that permission should have n for such a notorious film to in Chicago before it was subour board of censors or to the of citizens who are occasion-to help them? If the city o nsiders it worth while to spend ar to sustain this board of cen-hot at such a time as this that ices would be the most valutainly, public spirited citizens pected to protest against this ery usurpation of power on the ty official.
LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
Juvenile Protective Association.

NATIONAL CENSORS DEFINE POSITION.

The attitude of the National Board of Censorship toward D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" is expressed in a statement signed W. D. McGuire, Jr., executive secretary. On January 20th the picture was viewed and passed by a section of the censoring committee; but later, at the request of Frederick C. Howe, chairman of the board, the film was shown before the general committee. Several suggested alterations were acted upon by the producers. Again the picture was reviewed by the general committee, two additional modifications were requested and these having been made the picture was passed.

The statement declares that whether a play is historically accurate or not does not concern the National Board, for it is stated in the printed standards that "the National Board does not regard itself as a censor of accuracy, unless the inaccuracy in question is of the kind that will result in some concrete disaster to the person whom the inaccuracy misleads." As an illustration of this, the board would not approve a film conveying under the guise of scientific truth the idea that tuberculosis can be cured by means of patent medicines.

It is further claimed that a board of censorship for motion pictures or dramatic productions should confine itself entirely to the consideration as to whether a given production is objectionable from a standpoint of public morals. If it can pass this test, it should be permitted. If not, it should be stopped. Public authorities have no more right to interfere with the production of a play or motion picture which emphasizes the southern point of view of our great conflict and the subsequent period of reconstruction than that of a play which lays emphasis upon the northern point of view.

PUBLIC.
New York City
APR 24 1915

DURING the censorship agitation in England, Bernard Shaw made at least one extremely pertinent epigram: "The Achilles heel of the censorship is not the fine plays it has suppressed, but the abominable plays it has licensed." Our national board for censuring motion pictures does not license. It merely "passes." But it is fair to say that its Achilles heel is also the abominable plays it lets go by. It grows plainer with every week that the wisdom of the board was with the minority who voted to censor the negrophobe part of "The Birth of a Nation." The painful obtuseness of the majority is being emphasized every day from all over the country, especially from Boston and Chicago. The majority will probably resent such criticism. They will fall back on their "policy" and their "standards." But the fact remains that while they are rightly active in suppressing films which are likely to arouse race prejudice as a reflex of the European war, they were dull and delinquent in regard to race prejudice at home. Did it occur to them, we wonder, to seek any negro's opinion on this film? They call themselves "coöperative." To have elicited the negro view in time would have been to put a wise construction on their boast.

THE SURVEY, NEW YORK
APR 24 1915

MURDER

TO THE EDITOR: Is lynching Negroes immoral? That seems to be the question raised by the approval of the Ku-Klux and anti-Negro features of the Birth of a Nation film. Appealing to the strongest race prejudice in the most vivid possible way at the precise point where it has led to wholesale murder in the South is, of course, an incitement to continued murder. One only possible point of doubt is whether murder is wrong. Or no—that is not the only point. Safe, cold-blooded incitement to murder is a meaner and more cowardly offense.

JOSEPH LEE.

Boston.

JOURNAL
Lewiston, Me.
APR 24 1915

The much advertised film play, "The Birth of a Nation," has been taken before the courts in Massachusetts. The judge decided that the exhibition might go on provided one objectionable film was cut out. This film, with the one showing the chasing of a white girl by a negro, has been cut out. A Boston paper says: "'The Birth of a Nation' goes further in genuine constructive work by means of photographic films that any of its predecessors have gone or tried to go. It deserves the unqualified support of those who seek something better and more satisfactory than a few hours of enjoyment and who can appreciate the zeal and energy, the intelligence and patriotism, that are so happily blended in Mr. Griffith's masterpiece. No man or woman can see 'The Birth of a Nation' without rejoicing that he or she is part of that nation and a sharer in a glorious heritage."

REVIEW
ATLANTIC CITY, N. J.
APR 24

mortgage on June 27th, various auxiliaries of the church are thoroughly organized for that purpose.

Among the series of entertainments under their auspices a lecture will be given on May 12th at which time William Monroe Trotter, the distinguished editor of the Boston Guardian, will speak. He will give the gist of his conversation with President Wilson, that caused quite a stir at that time and will also tell of how Boston people fought the exhibition of "The Birth of a Nation."

JOURNAL
JERSEY CITY, N. J.

"BIRTH OF A NATION" —A CRITICISM

Editor Jersey Journal:

Dear Sir—I am surprised at Mr. Canon and Mr. Mayo for their indorsement of the photo play, "The Nigger." The title alone is an insult to the Negro race, there is no name that we are called more offensive to the Negro than the word "nigger." And all through the production the word "nigger" is used. Now, if they think that productions like "The Nigger" will help wipe out prejudice I think they are very much mistaken.

"The Birth of a Nation" should not come to Jersey City, as Negroes have about the same battle to fight in New York as we have in New Jersey and elsewhere. I am sorry to see men of my race indorse such a production.

Jersey City, April 22, 1915.

J. M. L.

Griffith Home.

David Griffith, producer of "The Clansman," or "The Birth of a Nation," as the photodrama is now called, arrived in the city Saturday from New York. He reported the film still running at the Liberty in Gotham to big business and that the production is also meeting with big success in Boston, despite some trouble with the censors in both places.

CHRONICLE
San Francisco, Cal.
APR 27 1915

I. W. W. Egg Thrower Coming to California

Howard Shaeffle, Who Bombarded Moving Picture in New York, Says He Will Go West.

Special Dispatch to The Chronicle.

NEW YORK April 26.—Howard Shaeffle, the I. W. W. egg thrower, who was charged with creating a disturbance in the Liberty Theater during the showing of "The Birth of a Nation" film April 12th, is contemplating a trip to California not later than tomorrow.

Magistrate Dowell of Jefferson Market Court told him not to be found here later than tomorrow night. He was convicted this afternoon on a disorderly conduct charge, but his sentence was suspended on condition that he leaves town.

Schaeffle said that if he was permitted he would leave for California on the first train.

THE ARGONAUT
274
San Francisco

THE CLANSMAN AT THE COURT

When Th novel- they tendency to tendency made from text belie was than rule is to except of negro clergy, a the negro

PUBLIC LEDGER
Philadelphia
APR 25 1915

CENSORED MOTION PICTURES FOR SOUTHERN CHILDREN

Women's Clubs in Many Cities Arrange Special Weekly Programs for Juvenile Audiences

By a Staff Correspondent

ATLANTA, April 24.

THE idea of censored motion picture shows for children, which was originated in Louisville, is spreading throughout the South, and it will be only a brief time, in all probability, when every large city in this section will have at least once a week a motion picture program especially censored for juvenile spectators.

Mrs. Frederick Levy, chairman of the Louisville board of censorship, with her co-workers, has credit for the idea. The plan, however, in many cities, originated with women's civic clubs. A club and a picture house in a given city will agree that the picture house shall set aside one day a week as "children's day." The women agree to aid this theatre on that day all they can to send their own children, to appeal to other mothers and to solicit the aid of newspapers. The idea is being carried out particularly to fit in with the studies of the school children.

* * *

As a result of peculiar conditions in the South, a number of the greatest of motion pictures have not yet been shown generally in this section. "The Birth of a Nation" is one of these. It is a screen dramatization of Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," which, as a play, was barred from a number of Southern cities after its first tour because it was felt it would engender race prejudice.

The feeling the film version already has aroused in Boston forbodes evil days for it in Dixie. The fact that the book originally was written as an answer to "Uncle Tom's Cabin" will be used in its favor, and, it is said, too, it has been shown in New York with decided success, and so far as is known here, without creating any trouble.

Another picture about which there has been stormy discussion is "The New Governor," a screen dramatization of "The Nigger." The films are laid in and around Augusta, Ga. The film actors were warmly entertained in that city, but now the city officials and others say they gave these silent players a hospitable welcome because they had been deceived as to the production being made. "The Nigger" has not been seen in this vicinity.

The same is true of a motion picture supposed to portray scenes from the trial of Leo M. Frank. It is contended here that the picture in no way represents the facts and in many ways injures the South in the eyes of the nation.

* * *

A preliminary program has been announced for the Southern Sociological Congress, which meets in Houston, Tex., May 8-11. The theme of the convention will be "The Conservation of Health." Ex-Governor William Hodges Mann, of Virginia, who is president of the congress, will preside. The welcoming address will be delivered by Governor James E. Ferguson, of Texas.

Among the speakers invited are: Dr. Oscar Dowling, president of the Louisiana State Board of Health; Dr. Seala Harrison, secretary of the Southern Medical Association, Moblie, Ala.; Dr. R. M. Cunningham, ex-Governor of Alabama; Dr. George Creel, Harper's Weekly; Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, Washington, D. C.; Richard I. Manning, Governor of South Carolina; Dr. C. R. Henderson, professor of sociology, University of Chicago; Prof. F. B. Dressler, George Peabody College for Teachers, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. Booker T. Washington, of Tuskegee Institute; Dr. Charles S. McFarland, secretary of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, New York city.

At the same time there will be held in Houston a conference of Methodists for the purpose of organizing a social service federation similar to the one organized by the Southern Baptist Convention. In conjunction with the congress will be held also a conference on travelers' aid.

Among the interesting subjects named for discussion are these two: "The Duty of the State to Prohibit the Reproduction of the Unfit" and "Is the Negro Race Dying Out? Who cares?" J. D. G.

LBANY (N. Y.) ARGUS
APRIL 25, 1915

TRIBUNE
APRIL 25 1915

YOR THOMPSON MAY BAN FILM "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Negroes Ask Mayor to Stop Showing of Film

Mrs. Carter H. Harrison and Others Protest

Movie News Right Off the Reel

Despite opposition [illegible] men New York, "The Birth of a Nation," David Griffith's film is [illegible]wding the Liberty Theatre to the [illegible]rs every afternoon and night. It is [illegible]erally regarded as the last word in [illegible]dom.

ES
New York City
APR 27 1915

Prisoner Exile[illegible] California.

When Howard [illegible] 123 Washington Place was [illegible]fore Magistrate Deuel in [illegible] Market Court yesterday [illegible] guilty to throwing eggs [illegible] Theatre recently during [illegible] of the showing picture [illegible] Birth of a Nation." [illegible] afterward Schoeffle's counsel [illegible] court for leniency, saying [illegible] granted.

The prisoner [illegible] town or California. [illegible] finally acceded, saying [illegible] would have him arrested [illegible] to the Workhouse.

AMERICAN
New York
APR 27 1915

[illegible] pictures.
[illegible]ward Schoeffle [illegible]
[illegible]vies" of "Birth [illegible]
[illegible] promise [illegible]

POST
Washington, D. C.
APR 25 1915

It is said that the producers of the Griffith motion picture, "The Birth of a Nation" have found it expedient to employ fifteen detectives to oversee the audiences at the Liberty Theater, New York, and prevent disorder on the part of those who resent the "reconstruction period" episodes depicted.

CALL
New York City
APR 27 1915

WILL LEAVE FOR WEST TODAY.

Howard Shaeffle, the I. W. W. egg thrower who was charged with creating a disturbance in the Liberty Theater during the showing of "The Birth Of A Nation" film on April 13, is contemplating a trip to California not later than today. In fact Magistrate Douel of the Jefferson Market Court told him not to be found here later than tonight. He was convicted yesterday afternoon of the disorderly con duct charge, but his sentence was suspended on condition that he leave town. He stated that if he was permitted he would leave for California on the first train.

DEUTSCHES JOURNAL
New York City
APR 27

Warf mit faulen Eiern.

Wenn Howard Schoeffle von 123 Washington Place sein gestern Richter Deuel im Jefferson Market-Polizeigericht gegebenes Versprechen nicht erfüllt und sofort die Stadt verläßt, wird er wieder verhaftet und nach dem Arbeitshaus gebracht werden. Schoeffle hatte, wie er eingestand, in einem Wandelbilder-Theater bei der Vorführung des Films „Die Geburt der Nation" die weiße Leinwand mit faulen Eiern beworfen und bejubelt.

Times Leader, New Haven, Conn. apr 28-15

Racial antagonism stirred up by the handling of the souths' negro problem in this film has caused a tremendous amount of discussion of the production, and culminated in the throwing of eggs at the screen and a small-sized riot in the theatre the other day. It is probable that some of the objectionable scenes, such as that of the white girl throwing herself over a cliff when pursued by a negro, will be toned down before the film is shown in other parts of the country.

STAR
New York City
APR 28 1915

"The Birth of a Nation" has trouble in Boston. Local colored folks protest against it. Like New York, however, Boston is turning out in great numbers to see the Griffith masterpiece.

JOURNAL
Providence, R. I.
APR 23 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" NOT TO BE SHOWN IN THIS CITY

Police Commissioners Refuse Managers' Applications.

Applications by managers of several Providence moving picture houses to present "The Birth of a Nation," the photoplay which is causing so much discussion in Boston at the present time, have been refused by the Board of Police Commissioners.

"We do not intend to allow anything presented here," said Chairman Presbrey yesterday, "that will tend to corrupt the morals of youth, that shows and exploits crime, or that affects race or creed.

"This board has been interviewed by a society of colored people in this city, who protest against the picture. Our censor, Sergt. Richard Gamble, has rendered an unfavorable opinion on the play, and we are backing him up."

STATES
COLUMBIA, S. C.
APR 27 1915

Why Indefinite Accusation?

Protesting and with good reason against the passage by the Massachusetts legislature of the Sullivan bill, aimed at the production of Tom Dixon's "Birth of the Nation" and other plays that may be objectionable to this or that group of persons, The Transcript of Boston employs this language:

". . . our citizens of Southern origin could have the license of any theatre revoked where a picture was exhibited in illustration of the hideous conditions to which helpless negro prisoners are today subjected in some of the Southern States."

Here The Transcript brings the charge, first, of "hideous treatment of helpless prisoners" and implies that the treatment is discriminatory against negroes—indeed, confined to negroes.

On what does The Transcript base the accusation?

Why is not The Transcript specific in the charge?

Unquestionably, the South is backward in the matter of prison reform—almost as much so as New York has been shown to be by the exposure of conditions at Sing Sing—but, so far as South Carolina is concerned, the charge of The Transcript of discrimination against negro prisoners, if aimed at this State, could not be sustained. Nor do we believe that conditions of punishment are "hideous" in South Carolina except in so far as that they have been "hideous" everywhere until comparatively recent times.

A few years ago it was fashionable in the North to print invectives against Southern "chaingangs." Now imitation of the Southern gangs is advocated in the North—that is, working of convicts, in the open air, on the public roads, is held up as a desirable reform.

Prison reform is sadly needed in South Carolina—just as is reform of some of our public hospitals and other charitable institutions. No one discerns more keenly than we do that in many departments of progress the South lags; that South Carolina, in particular, lags. The first need of our commonwealth is to perceive and acknowledge its shortcomings—to throw off the arrogant and ridiculous vanity that is the child of ignorance—and then to set about improvement, though, by reason of poverty, progress must be slow. If The Transcript's loose accusation applied to South Carolina, The State would welcome its substantiation. The State would second endeavors to right the wrongs if they exist, especially cruel treatment of helpless negro prisoners, and we are sure that the newly organized board of charities of South Carolina would seriously consider any evidence that The Transcript might present. But if The Transcript has no evidence to support what it says, as to this State, we wish it would say so. The truth about South Carolina—as about Massachusetts—is, we fear, bad enough and subjection to unwarranted insinuation is a little too much.

TRIBUNE
Chicago, Ill.
APR 28 1915

Mrs. Harrison Objects to "Birth of a Nation."

Mrs. Carter H. Harrison yesterday requested THE TRIBUNE to enroll her among those strongly opposed to the public presentation of the moving picture, "The Birth of a Nation."

This film is "The Clansman" done in celluloid and obtained a permit "by executive order through Charles C. Fitzmorris," Mr. Harrison's secretary. Mr. Fitzmorris acted as censor when the film was approved and Mrs. Harrison's presence during the inspection led to a belief she also had approved it.

"I wish you would publish a story," she said, "explaining that I did not approve the picture. I do not approve it and believe it should not be shown. While it is a great picture from the producer's standpoint, it is the most awful thing I have seen. It would arouse racial feeling. I am a southerner and you naturally would expect me to oppose such pictures as this."

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.) HERALD
APRIL 29, 1915

It is possible the negroes of this city are more excited than they need to be over the production of moving pictures entitled "The Birth of a Nation," which they consider a serious reflection on their race, but under the circumstances it may be well to suppress the pictures. There should be room enough in the moving picture world for all the entertainment demanded without trenching upon the sensibilties of any race.

JOURNAL
Lewiston, Me.
APR 27 1915

Women's Clubs

Sorosis.

Much-talked-of "moving picture, Birth of the Nation," was interpreted described by Mrs. W. H. New-the Monday afternoon meeting of Christian Association building. The session was at the Wom-The nominating committee the following list of officers: Mrs. Wallace White; vice-pres., C. O. Morrell; sec., Miss Frances treas., Mrs. H. E. E. Ste-philanthropic com., Mrs. W. H. Mrs. A. L. Tempeton, Mrs. C. Mrs. G. H. Channell; educational Dr. Lilian Wells. The program committee reported and read the course ahead for 1915-16 which was accepted. was piano music by Miss Ben-Punch and wafers were served.

annual meeting will be May 3 in members of Pine street Congregation-church.

ARGUS LEADER
SIOUX FALLS, S. DAKOTA
MAY 23 1915

A CIVIL WAR MOVY.

"The Birth of a Nation," such is the title of a movy now being produced which may cause much excitement in the country. Its importance may be gathered from the fact that in the making of the films eighteen thousand persons were employed and three thousand horses used. Its purposes is to describe leading facts in American history, beginning with the importation of slaves from Africa in the eighteenth century and ending with the reconstruction period after the civil war. Much labor has been done to give the production all the historical accuracy possible and maintain throughout the local color. The actors impersonating Lincoln, Lee Grant and other notable figures in the drama have a make-up that is strictly accurate and makes them look like the characters they represent.

But there is bound to be some trouble over the second part of the film. It seems that the events and characters in it are taken from Thomas Dixon's novel, "The Clansman." And the responsibility for the agitation of those days, such as found expression in the Kaldux Klan movement and others, is ascribed to unscrupulous white leaders from the north who were chiefly responsible for the whole thing. This is a disputed question, and the way the movy film settles it brings out again all the elements needed for a bitter controversy.

Rev. Thomas B. Gregory in the New York American writes about the play and defends the way it sets forth the Kaldux Klan matters:

"That the story as told by the picture is true I am ready to swear on the Bible, the Koran, the Zend, and all the other Holy Scriptures put together.

"I know it is true, because I lived through the actual conflict themselves. I saw the real carpet-baggers, the real Tom Peters; the real reconstruction Statesmen; the real Kaldux Klansmen. I knew the real Runneman, the real Lynch, the real Cameron, and was a living part of the stupendous tragedy, watching it with wonderful eyes and bated breath from its inception under the Runnemans and Lynches to its consummation under the invisible blows of the Kaldux Klan.

"I am prepared to say that not one of the more than five thousand pictures that go to make up the wonderful drama is in any essential way an exaggeration. They are one and all faithful to historic fact, so that, looking upon them, you may feel that you are witnessing that which actually happened."

It is to be hoped that there is not going to be any more waving of the "bloody shirt" over the reproduction of events of one of the darkest hours in American history. The reality was bad enough. And there is no need of any further controversy about its results. Fifty years should be long enough to divine motives and make both sides forget, the bad to remember the good only.

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
APRIL 7, 1915

VOICE

PROTEST AGAINST A I
Chicago, April 4.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—May I call your attentio fact that Chicago has an extrem board of censorship for films, th ers of which, appointed under th civil service, are under the su on of the morals division of polic These censors pass upon all m ctures before they are shown in go. I note from THE TRIBUNE of that a film recently shown in New shown as "The Birth of a Nation" been "passed" by Charles Fitzmori secretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fi morris may be a most excellent secreta and well versed in his duties as such, it not rather unnecessary that he shoul usurp the work of the entire censorshi and that a film should be authoris the recommendation of one perso "The Birth of a Nation" is calcula arouse race prejudice against colo ple; that they are all bestial and ous, while the white men—especia of the Ku Klux Klan—are uniform s, performing magnanimous acts lry and invariably appearing at t moment to rescue the virtuous a the country from destruction. Su entation of an historic period wor harm. Doubtless some of the are correctly reported, but th en selected with the most sinis and for that reason are most m and harmful.

number of the best citizens protested against the appear the film in that city. Is it no that permission should have n for such a notorious film to in Chicago before it was sub our board of censors or to the of citizens who are occasion to help them? If the city o nsiders it worth while to spend ar to sustain this board of cen not at such a time as this that ses would be the most valu tainly, public spirited citizens pected to protest against this ry usurpation of power on the ty official.

LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
Juvenile Protective Association.

BUFFALO (N. Y.) NEWS
APRIL 22, 1915

STOPPING A FILM BY LAW.

Governor Walsh has stopped the showing of a moving-picture film in Massachusetts until the court has decided at his request whether or not the picture is to be excluded under a law covering incitement to riot. The picture is one that stirred up the negroes of New York city. It is based upon the work of Thomas Dixon's books and is decidedly offensive to the colored people.

Governor Walsh believes the law covers the case but is prepared in the event the decision is adverse to ask the Legislature to pass a measure to meet the situation.

The bulletin just issued by the government on negro statistics is very gratifying to friends of the colored race. It shows increasing tendency to home ownership, a marked increase in the percentage of schools, an increase in church membership, a decided decrease in illiteracy and a decrease in the mortality record.

Those interested in the advancement of the race point to the home buying tendency. In 1910 there were in the Southern States 1,917,391 negro homes of which 430,449, or 22.4, were owned by negroes. In Virginia the percentage rises to 41 per cent. It is a very hopeful sign.

VIDENCE (R. I.) EVE. TRIBUNE
APRIL 27, 1915

Kennebec Journal
AUGUSTA, ME.
APR 27 1915

OLEAN (N. Y.) TIMES
APRIL 30, 1915

WILSON ENDORSES NOT THE BIRTH OF A NATION

Washington, April 30.—President Wilson today repudiated the claim that he had endorsed the photo play, "The Birth of a Nation," which has given offense to negroes throughout the country. W. H. Lewis of Boston, the only negro ever appointed assistant attorney general, and Bishop Walters of the African M. E. church called at the White House and procured the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the President's secretary.

ANTI-NEGRO FILM NOT INDORSED BY WILSON

NO APPROBATION BY PRESIDENT OF "BIRTH OF A NATION."

How Cinema Production Was Shown at White House — Negroes See Tumulty and Are Told Chief Executive Was Unaware of Character of the Production—Words from President's History Used with Film Production at Theatre in Boston.

[Special Dispatch to The Evening Post.]

WASHINGTON, April 30.—Official denial that the President ever has endorsed "The Birth of a Nation," a photo-play based on the "Clansman" of Thomas Dixon, was issued from the White House to-day by the Secretary to the President, Joseph P. Tumulty, in the form of a letter addressed by Mr. Tumulty to Representative Thacher, of Massachusetts. Mr. Tumulty's letter in full was as follows:

"Replying to your recent letter and enclosures, I beg to say that it is true that "The Birth of a Nation" was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

Publicity was given the letter to-day following a call by W. H. Lewis, a lawyer of Boston, the only negro who has ever held the office of Assistant Attorney General of the United States, and Bishop A. Walters, of New Jersey, of the A. M. E. Church Zion, a political supporter of President Wilson in the last campaign.

Mr. Lewis and Bishop Walters called the attention of Mr. Tumulty to a letter sent recently to the Mayor of Boston by protestants against the play, in which it stated that "The Birth of a Nation" has been "interpreted as political and social propaganda carefully planned to prepare the minds for the reduction of the negro to a state in which full rights of citizenship are denied."

PRESIDENT'S WORD USED.

It was also stated that a spokesman before the Massachusetts Legislature had referred to the play "as an educational and historical document." The same spokesman is alleged to have read excerpts from President Wilson's history of the United States as thrown upon the screen in a Boston theatre which quoted the President as writing that "The Ku Klux Klan was organized to protect the Southern country from some of the ugliest hazards since the time of the Revolution" and "protect their people from indignities." The use of these excerpts was said in the letter to imply an endorsement by the President of the play. And it was stated that "they are placed amid scenes inciting to the bitterest race hatred. To the unthinking they place the President of the United States in the position of approving of mob violence of sympathizing with efforts to deprive negro citizens of the rights guaranteed by the Constitution."

In conclusion, the letter stated "no civilized nation allows its Chief Magistrate to represent it in public places as inciting to hatred against any body of citizens. It is obviously impossible for the President to be aware of the use that may be used of his published words, or the interpretation put upon them in any particular community, the dignity of his high office does not permit him to explain words written while a private citizen and now used in places of public entertainment."

DIXON AND WILSON CLASSMATES.

The letter concluded by asking the Mayor of Boston to prohibit the use of the name of the President till such time as authority shall be received from Washington for the use of his name in such play in Boston.

The photo-play not only in Boston and New York, but elsewhere incited considerable trouble of a racial nature, and it was because of this fact that protests were made against its production.

Regarding the circumstances of the private exhibition of the photo-play at the White House, it was stated here today, that Mr. Dixon, author of the "Clansman" and the President were former classmates at Johns Hopkins University and that Mr. Dixon requested that the play be shown at the White House and was present on the occasion. The nature of the photo-play was not known to the President in advance, and no approval of it ever was given.

THE REGULATION OF FILMS.

Wherever it goes, the "Birth of the Nation" film arouses widespread indignation. In Boston the excitement has been at white heat, because of a series of hearings before Mayor, Governor, and a committee of the Legislature. A judge has been found with authority and courage enough to cut out the most objectionable scene. The press has been full of arguments for and against the film and the proposed legislation. On Sunday last many clergymen preached about the play; and ex-President Eliot, speaking in a Cambridge church, was one of those who protested against its falsification of history. Never before have the colored people of Boston been so united and determined, or appeared to better advantage, and their white friends have rallied in great force to their aid. Gov. Walsh, ex-Congressman McCall, and Lieut.-Gov. Cushing have spoken out emphatically against permitting the play to continue, though the Mayor sided with the producers—as our own New York Mayor has failed to recognize in his utterances the gravity of the situation, or to rise to the emergency, being content with the promise of certain slight excisions, which appear to be of little or no value. The play continues to do its devilish work of misrepresentation and of arousing race hatred.

That Mayor Mitchel has had little legal authority to deal with the play is admitted, though there are differences of opinion as to just what powers were available. But this alleged lack of authority is to be remedied by an ordinance now before the Board of Aldermen to empower the Commissioner of Licenses to revoke, suspend, or annul any moving-picture license "for cause after a trial." The ordinance further reads:

Proof shall be taken before the Commissioner of Licenses upon notice of not less than two (2) days to the proprietor, manager, or person in charge of said place to show cause why such license should not be revoked, annulled, or suspended. The Commissioner of Licenses shall hear the proofs and allegations in each case and determine the same, and any place the license for which shall have been revoked, annulled, or suspended shall not thereafter be licensed again to the same licensee within one year, under the provisions of said sections. On any examination before a Commissioner of Licenses, pursuant to a notice to show cause as aforesaid, the accused party may be a witness in his own behalf.

This plainly constitutes the Commissioner of Licenses a censor of all moving-picture plays, precisely as the Mayor of every town in Massachusetts, except Boston, now has similar powers. That the plan has its defects is obvious, for a Commissioner of Licenses with bad judgment might work great harm.

But this risk is inevitable with any censorship, and no bill has as yet been suggested to the Massachusetts Legislature—which is bent on passing some measure before it adjourns—that is free from defects of one kind or another, save the proposal to put Boston on an equal footing with the other Massachusetts cities. The truth is that this wonderful new means for public amusement and education has brought with it grave perils which we are only just beginning to realize, for side by side with its educational possibilities are the dangers of unrestricted propaganda. As the Rev. Dr. Crothers has pointed out, we have lulled ourselves into a sense of security by repeating to ourselves that the "past at least is secure." But along comes this play, which is not only planned to make large sums for its promoters, but is admittedly a deliberate propaganda to degrade and injure ten millions of citizens, besides misrepresenting some of the noblest figures in our past, Stevens, Sumner, and Lincoln, and perverting history, if only by the onesidedness of its portrayal. Now, let us suppose, as Dr. Crothers has also suggested, that others inspired by this shameful example turn to religious propaganda, and represent the horrible murdering of Catholics at Drogheda by Cromwell, or the massacre of Protestants on St. Bartholomew's night—what then?

Undoubtedly, the tortures of the Inquisition would make effective capital against the Pope at Rome; and if moving pictures had existed in 1898, we might have seen a still more vindictive anti-Spanish crusade by films of battle, or devastation, or reconcentrado camps. Pictures of Russian pogroms would make plenty of money, yet rouse bitter national and racial antipathies. Obviously, the feeling that would result fr[illegible] a religious film-propaganda mig[illegible] in most serious [illegible]

30-1915

If a mild, gentle, humorous philosopher like Dr. Crothers admits that the offending film in Boston stirred his heart to mutiny and rage, the potentialities for evil in less-balanced minds need no stressing. What makes the matter worse is that it is not a question of dealing with a single theatrical production, for the film can be duplicated so that the objectionable performance may be going on in forty or more cities at the same moment. It is not surprising, in view of this power for evil, that the United States Supreme Court on February 23 last in three unanimous decisions upheld the Ohio and Kansas laws creating official censors. "We would have," it said, "to shut our eyes to the facts of the world to regard the precaution unreasonable or the legislation to effect it a mere wanton interference with personal liberty." The Court plainly had in mind the difficulty of controlling by public sentiment alone a series of films scattered over the whole country.

Yet so excellent a newspaper as the Boston Advertiser feels that the proposed censorship may be a most dangerous infringement of our freedom of speech and of expression, on a par with the efforts to suppress Garrison and Phillips in anti-slavery days. The Boston Transcript and Herald appear to believe that if one bill proposed should become a law any citizens who indulged in a fight over a play could stop it, and that any play with a lesson to teach or one which undertook to dwell on the weaknesses of a group of our citizens might easily be driven off the stage. The plan of an official censor for whom the Mayor is responsible, with such a trial as is provided in the pending Aldermanic ordinance in this city, seems for the moment the best way out.

[illegible] OHIO

APR 30 1915

SAYS HE DIDN'T O. K. MOVIE

Wilson Repudiates Endorsement of New Photo Play.

Special to The Blade.

Washington, April 30.—President Wilson today repudiated the claim that he had endorsed the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," which has given offense to negroes throughout the country.

W. H. Lewis of Boston, the only negro ever appointed an assistant attorney general and Bishop Walters of the African M. E. Church, called at the White House and procured the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the President's secretary.

The Crisis

New York City

MAY - 1915

THE CLANSMAN

SEVERAL years ago a "professional southerner" named Dixon wrote a sensational and melodramatic novel which has been widely read. Eight years ago Dixon brought out his novel as a sordid and lurid melodrama. In several cities the performance of this play was prohibited because of its indecency or incitement to riot. Recently this vicious play has been put into moving pictures. With great adroitness the real play is preceded by a number of marvelously good war pictures; then in the second part comes the real "Clansman" with the Negro represented either as an ignorant fool, a vicious rapist, a venal and unscrupulous politician or a faithful but doddering idiot. By curious procedure this film received the preliminary approval of the National Board of Censors. It was put on in Los Angeles and immediately the fine organization of the N. A. A. C. P. was manifest. The facts were telegraphed to us from our Los Angeles Branch. We started at the Board of Censors. The proprietors of the film fought madly but the Censors met, viewed the film and immediately withdrew their sanction. Many of them were astonished that any committee of their board had ever passed it. The owners of the film promised to modify it but the modifications were unimportant. Yet this remarkable Board of Censors met a third time and passed the film over the protests of a minority of nine persons. Among these nine, however, was the chairman and founder of the board, Frederick C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration at the Port of New York and several others equally influential. In other words, the board of censorship is now practically split in two. The Association was not discouraged but immediately took steps on the one hand to bring the matter into court and on the other hand to interview the mayor. The interview with the mayor was after some difficulty arranged. The delegation of five hundred of the most prominent white and colored people in the city filled the Council Chamber at City Hall and for an hour in terse, tense speeches urged the mayor to act. The mayor promised to have the two rape scenes cut out immediately and to go further than this if the play still seemed objectionable from the point of view of public peace and decency.

This action while commendable is not sufficient. The whole second half of the play ought to be suppressed and the Association will continue to work to this end. It is gratifying to know that in this work we have the cordial co-operation of all elements of colored people. The New York Age and the CRISIS worked hand in hand with Harlem, Brooklyn and Jersey City. We know no factions in the righting of this great wrong.

It is sufficient to add that the main incident in the "Clansman" turns on a thinly veiled charge that Thaddeus Stephens, the great abolition statesman, was induced to give the Negroes the right to vote and secretly rejoice in Lincoln's assassination because of his infatuation for a mulatto mistress. Small wonder that a man who can thus brutally falsify history has never been able to do a single piece of literary work that has brought the slightest attention, except when he seeks to capitalize burning race antagonisms.

The Sun. May 1-1915

WILSON DENIES HE O.K'D FILM.

"Birth of a Nation" Shown at White House, but Not Approved.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—A statement issued at the White House to-day indicates that President Wilson is chafing under the criticism that is alleged at him in some parts of the country because he permitted the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," which is based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," to be presented at the White House. Secretary Tumulty sent the following letter to Representative Thatcher of Massachusetts, which was made public here:

"Replying to your letters and enclosures I beg to say that it is true that the 'Birth of a Nation' was produced before the President and the family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

The World May 1-1915

NOT APPROVE RACE FILM

President Has Not Commended "Birth of a Nation."

(Special to The World.)

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson to-day made it plain that he has not indorsed "The Birth of a Nation," Thomas Dixon's photo play, which has caused race trouble when exhibited in Northern cities.

Several months ago the play was shown at the White House before the President and the members of his personal and official family, and as a result the impression has been sent through the country that the play had the President's approval.

A delegation of colored men who called to-day to protest against the use which is being made of the President's name were assured that the President had not approved the films. Mr. Wilson and Dixon are old acquaintances, it is stated.

Fifty-

Herald May 1 1915

NOT INDORSED BY PRESIDENT.

Has Taken No Stand on "The Birth of a Nation."

HERALD BUREAU,
No. 1,502 H STREET, N. W.,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday.

President Wilson is experiencing some annoyance because of an impression which is gaining ground that he indorsed the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," which is said to reflect on the negro race. The motion picture was presented at the White House recently at a special performance attended by Mr. Wilson, several members of the Cabinet and their families.

In an effort to put an end to the report that the picture has Mr. Wilson's indorsement, Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, made public a letter to-day written to Representative Thomas C. Thatcher, of Massachusetts, which said:—

"MY DEAR MR. THATCHER:—Replying to your recent letter and enclosures, I beg to say that it is true that the 'Birth of a Nation' was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance. Sincerely yours,

"J. P. TUMULTY."

"The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman." Mr. Dixon was a classmate of Mr. Wilson at Johns Hopkins.

The Crisis

New York City

MAY 1915

TOM DIXON'S "CLANSMAN"

A CONTEMPTIBLE SLANDER

Of the "Reverend" Tom Dixon's latest attack on colored people, Jane Addams says:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among colored people, and showing them as representatives of the truth about the entire race," she said in describing her impressions of the play. "It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race. For instance, it would be easy enough to go about the slums of a city and bring together some of the criminals and degenerates, and take pictures of them purporting to show the character of the white race. It would no more be the truth about the white race than this is about the black."

Rabbi Stephen S. Wise said in a recent sermon:

"Most serious of all is the circumstance that this play constitutes a deliberate attempt to deepen and justify within the hearts of men the more or less instinctive prejudices which it is the business of an enlightened democracy ceaselessly to challenge and to combat. If but the author and the producers had the courage to declare that of which I accuse them, of designing to foster hate and to intensify prejudice, to make it impossible for two races to live side by side in this republic upon the basis of peace and good-will, one could almost respect their frankness and courage and not be moved to despise them for their cowardice as one loathes them for their shame.

"The general effect of the play is to present the Negro of a generation ago as a foul and murderous beast. Therefore, I call this play a crime against two races. The men who are responsible for it are coining prejudice and bitterness and every unholy instinct of men into money.

"If thirty or forty years ago Europe had set her face like flint against the initial causes which inevitably brought about the campaigns that ultimately ended in war, the war that now is upon us need never have been fought. The time to protest is not when race assassination has come to pass. The time to do that is now, when an attempt is deliberately made to foment it. It may become too late; and if too late and we have been silent, the blood will be upon our own heads, for we shall have suffered the soul of our city and our nation to be poisoned day by day by the fatal and ineradicable poisoning of race prejudice and race assassination."

The Brooklyn Standard Union says:

"If a whole race, other than the Negro race, were slandered as the Negroes are slandered in the current moving picture play, it would not run two nights in New York or in any other city. If a college professor should attack the morality of the women of any race, other than the white race, as a college professor slandered Negro women in a lecture in Boston not long ago, he would not long be either a lecturer or a college pro-

WILSON DENIES INDORSING "BIRTH OF A NATION" FILM

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson today denied having indorsed the anti-Negro "Birth of a Nation" movies, which, it was explained, were shown at the White House only out of courtesy to an old classmate, Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," from which the movies were evolved.

TRY TO BLOCK EXHIBITION OF "NATION" IN BAY STATE

Should an attempt be made to show the much disputed film, "Birth of a Nation," in Massachusetts theatres outside the Boston metropolitan district, opposition of the state police is expected, because of the chief's refusal to allow the film to be shown on Sunday in Lynn.

Despite opposition, carried before Governor Walsh himself, the film, with elisions demanded by Mayor Curley, is on daily exhibition at the Tremont Theatre in Boston. The state police chief's attitude regarding the Lynn application for a Sunday showing, is believed to foreshadow refusal of permission for the picture to be taken to any city other than Boston.

In Boston itself the opposition has not given up hope of driving the picture from the local screen. Meanwhile the film draws big crowds. As a result a mass meeting of colored people has been held, at which a Cambridge business man went so far as to urge his fellows to war on the whites.

TRUTH SEEKER

New York City

MAY 1 - 1915

STILL ROOM FOR PROTEST.

From Verne E. Sheridan, New York.

To the Editor of The Truth Seeker:

You inform me in the letter box column of THE TRUTH SEEKER that you have been "told that the offensive parts of the picture 'Birth of a Nation' have been eliminated and that therefore further protest is not needed."

Pray permit me to acquaint you with the fact that they have not been eliminated, and that protest against this infamous thing should continue until the entire picture is forbidden.

I shall not take up more of your time about this picture. I am not angry because my letter was not printed, only sorry.

Your proper course should have been to print my letter, then add your own footnote to the effect that further protest was not necessary, which would have given me the right to have my letter correcting you printed. Too much space, you say? Perhaps, but let us stop "repeating" so much on B. S.—otherwise Wm. Sunday, and use the space on a few problems nearer home.

No offense, and may good luck and prosperity always attend you.

[Miss Sheridan's former letter was an indignant protest against the toleration of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," now running in New York city, a portion of which is based on "The Clansman," by the Rev. Thomas E. Dixon, which is described by many who have seen the production as a virulent and malignant appeal to race hatred as against the Negro. When our correspondent's letter came to hand, the papers had announced that Mayor Mitchel had required the excision of the offending passages. Subsequent events bear out Miss Sheridan's statement that the cuts, if made, did not go far enough. The reverend author is well known as a writer careless of his facts, and disposed to a large measure of calumny in dealing with the objects of his displeasure. Whether the true remedy is to prohibit the offending drama, is a question on which opinions will differ. Some very strong opponents of race prejudice, to whom the play is especially disgusting, have refused to join in the movement for its suppression, on the ground that to prohibit the expression of even the most evil idea establishes a dangerous precedent, to which the enemies of free speech will be only too ready to appeal.—ED.]

The Crisis

New York City

MAY 1915

JEANNETTE EAGET

A Liberal Censorship

THE board of censorship which passes on the morality of films has given its sanction to one called "The Birth of a Nation," made from a book by the notorious Negro-hater, Thomas Dixon. It shows what horrible things happened (according to Mr. Dixon) when the Negro was given equal political rights with the white race. It teaches that the Negro is a monster that must be deprived of all human rights, and lynched occasionally to keep him "in his place." It glorifies the outrages of the Klu Klux Klan and libels the Negro character with malignant ferocity. It perverts history, incites race-prejudice and justifies crime.

Our censors are getting "liberal." But there is one more stage of liberality.

It is possible to say: "We will take the risk of this picture doing harm. We will take the risk of any picture doing harm. We will prohibit nothing." That is an honorable, if difficult, thing to say.

Let the board of censorship say that, and resign.

FIGHTING RACE CALUMNY

AN INSTANCE OF THE WAY THE N. A. A. C. P. WORKS

THE CHRONOLOGICAL RECORD OF THE FIGHT AGAINST THE "CLANSMAN" IN MOVING PICTURES.

February 12-26:

We are advised by our Los Angeles Branch that "The Birth of a Nation," a picture play founded on Dixon's "Clansman," is running in that city and that the branch has been unable to suppress the play because it has the approval of the National Board of Censorship, located in New York.

Advance announcement of this performance in New York appears in the local press.

We go to the office of the Board of Censorship and request:

The names of the committee who approved the picture so that we may ascertain its character from someone who has seen it; the names and addresses of the National Board of Censorship; a list of the cities where the film has been released; the possibility of arranging for an advance performance when the film could be reviewed by the entire Board of Censorship and a committee from our Association.

The office of the Board of Censorship reply that there is nothing objectionable in the picture and refuse to give us the names of any of the committee who have approved it. They also refuse the addresses of members of their board and advise us not to communicate with them. They say that since the picture has been passed by the Board, no advance performance can be arranged in New York and nothing can be done about it.

We appeal to the Chairman of the National Board of Censorship, Mr. Frederic C. Howe, for an advance performance and it is arranged.

February 27:

We write a letter to the members of the National Board of Censorship stating our position in regard to the picture.

The National Board of Censorship and a committee from our Association are invited to attend the advance performance on March 1. We were at first promised twelve tickets; later the number is cut to two by the office of the Board of Censorship and colored people are excluded.

March 1:

The National Board of Censorship meet after the performance and (according to their Chairman, Dr. Howe), disapprove certain incidents in the first section of the film and practically the entire second part. No communication in regard to this action is sent from the office of the Board of Censorship to the N. A. A. C. P.

March 3:

The owner and producer of the film are summoned by the N. A. A. C. P. to the Police Court on the grounds that they are maintaining a public nuisance and endangering the public peace. They are represented by Martin W. Littleton. Chief Magistrate McAdoo rules that it is not within his jurisdiction to stop the performance unless it actually leads to a breach of the peace.

March 8:

We write for a statement of the disapproval of the play by the Board of Censorship. We do not get it. We request all our members in New York and vicinity to write letters of protest to the press.

March 9:

We again write to the Board of Censorship for a statement of their disapproval of the film and also request a copy of the statement of release which is being sent to other cities, and a list of the states where bills for public censors are pending.

We are advised by a member of the Board of Censorship that the action of the Board on March 1 in disapproving the film was not official. No communication on the subject comes from the office of the Board.

March 10:

Prominent members of our Association, Mr. Jacob H. Schiff, Miss Jane Addams, Dr. Jacques Loeb, Miss Lillian

---

The Crisis
New York City
MAY - 1915

ING PICTURE WORLD
New York City
MAY 1 1915

Many Protests Against Showing "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago.

Heated discussions and speeches and letters by several prominent citizens still continue against the giving of permission to show "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago. Jane Addams and others protest against its exhibition because of its injustice to colored people. Miss Addams has said:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among the colored people and showing them as the representatives of the truth about the entire race. It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race.

Moreover, it appeals to race prejudice upon the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider today. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the play is historical, but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events, but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain of its facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest. The production is the most subtle form of untruth—a half truth."

It will be remembered that in my letter of April 10 Charles Fitzmorris, Mayor Harrison's secretary, passed on these films and reported to Major Funkhouser that they should be shown in their entirety.

TIMES
Washington, D. C.
APR 30 1915

HERALD
Washington, D. C.
MAY 1 19

DIXON'S PLAY IS NOT INDORSED BY WILSON

Letter From White House Explains Why "Birth of Nation" Was Produced There.

Efforts to make it appear that President Wilson had indorsed the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," reflecting on the character of the colored race, were nipped today when President Wilson, through Secretary Tumulty, directed a letter to Congressman Thatcher of Massachusetts, denying that the President had given the play his approval.

The "Birth of a Nation," which is based upon Thomas Dixon's play "The Clansman," was recently shown at the President, members of his family and Cabinet officers at a private exhibition at the White House. Mr. Dixon and the President were classmates at the Johns Hopkins University, in Baltimore, and at the conclusion of the latter, the letter to Thatcher explains, the exhibition was permitted.

Resented By Colored Men.

Because of the severe picture which the film play draws of the colored man at the close of the civil war, its production in certain Northern cities, including New York, has brought about several near-riots. Leading colored men of the country have bitterly resented its production, claiming that it was defamatory of the race, and intended to prejudice the mind of the people for the restriction of the colored race to a state in which the full rights of citizenship are denied.

The President has received many letters protesting against his attitude in indorsing the picture, and today W. H. Lewis, of Boston, the only colored man ever in half the period of Assistant Attorney General, and Bishop A. Walters, colored, of the A. M. E. Zion Church, of New Jersey, called at the White House to add their protests.

They were shown the letter written by Mr. Thatcher, which read as follows:

"My Dear Mr. Thatcher: Replying to your recent letter and inclosures, I beg to say that it is true that 'The Birth of a Nation' was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance. Sincerely yours,

J. P. TUMULTY,
Secretary to the President."

Bishop Walters said that Chief Justice White, of the United States Supreme Court, who was appointed by President Taft, had written a letter denouncing the scene as

Leave Petition At White House.

The visitors left a copy of a petition signed by the mayor of Boston, urging the suppression of the production of the play, but it is stated that President Wilson's name appears among the people who signed the petition from the Northern states.

HERALD
Syracuse, N. Y.
APR 30 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" BRINGS WILSON WORRY

Tumulty Says President Did Not Know Nature of Play Based on Dixon's Novel.

A statement issued at the White House yesterday indicates that President Wilson is chafing under the criticism aimed against him in some parts of the country because he permitted the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," to be presented at the White House. Secretary Tumulty sent the following letter to Representative Thatcher, of Massachusetts, which was made public here:

"Replying to your letter and enclosures, I beg to say that it is true that the "Birth of a Nation" was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

The letter was given out following a call at the White House by W. H. Lewis, former Assistant Attorney General, and Bishop A. Walters, of New Jersey, both colored. They called the attention of Mr. Tumulty to the use of President Wilson's name by some people in a way to indicate his approval of the principle depicted in this photo-play.

PUBLIC LEDGER
Philadelphia
1915

NEGROES AT WHITE HOUSE IN PROTEST ON "MOVIE"

Ask if President Indorsed Reconstruction Scene Film.

WASHINGTON, April 30. — W. H. Lewis, a Boston negro who was formerly Assistant Attorney General of the United States, and Bishop Alexander Walters, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, of New York, called at the White House today to inquire about reports that President Wilson had given his indorsement to a moving picture film depicting scenes during the reconstruction period in the South, in a manner distasteful to negroes.

Secretary Tumulty showed them a letter to Representative Thatcher, of Massachusetts, saying that while the film was once shown at the White House as a courtesy to a former classmate of the President's, the President was unaware of its character and has at no time expressed any approbation of it.

GEORGIAN
ATLANTA, GA
APR 30 1915

Wilson Did Not O. K. Film Negroes Dislike

[By International News Service.]

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson to-day repudiated the claim that he had indorsed the photo-play, "The Birth of a Nation," which has given offense to negroes throughout the country.

W. H. Lewis, of Boston, the only negro ever appointed an Assistant Attorney General, and Bishop Walters, of the African M. E. Church, called at the White House and obtained the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the President's secretary.

NEWS
Chicago, Ill.
APR 30 1915

NO O. K. OF FILM BY WILSON

Explanation Given of Exhibition of "Clansman" at White House.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Washington, D. C., April 30. — Official denial that President Wilson has ever indorsed "The Birth of a Nation," a photo play based on "The Clansman" of Thomas Dixon, was issued from the white house to-day by Secretary Tumulty in a letter addressed to Representative Thacher of Massachusetts.

"Replying to your recent letter and inclosures," Mr. Tumulty writes, "I beg to say that it is true 'The Birth of a Nation' was produced before the president and his family at the white house, but the president was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the white house was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

Publicity was given the letter to-day following a call by W. H. Lewis, a lawyer of Boston, the only colored man who has ever held the office of assistant attorney-general of the United States, and Bishop A. Walters of New Jersey of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion church, a supporter of President Wilson in the 1912 campaign. Mr. Lewis and Bishop Walters called the attention of Mr. Tumulty to a letter recently sent to the mayor of Boston by protesters against the play in which it was stated that "The Birth of a Nation" has been "interpreted as a political and social propaganda carefully planned to prepare the minds for the reduction of the negro to a state in which full rights of citizenship are denied."

Regarding the circumstances of the private exhibition before President Wilson, it was said here to-day that Mr. Dixon and the president were former classmates at Johns Hopkins university, and that Mr. Dixon requested that the play be shown at the white house.

HERALD
APR 30 1915

Wilson Denies He Endorsed Photoplay

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson today repudiated the claim that he had endorsed the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," which has given offense to negroes throughout the country.

W. H. Lewis, of Boston, the only negro ever appointed an assistant attorney general, and Bishop Walters, of the African M. E. church, called at the White House and procured the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the president's secretary.

SARATOGA (N. Y.) SUN
APRIL 30, 1915

WILSON DENIES HE ENDORSED PHOTO PLAY

Washington, April 30—President Wilson today repudiated the claim that he had endorsed the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" which has given offense to negroes throughout the country.

W. H. Lewis, of Boston, the only negro ever appointed an assistant attorney general and B. P. Walters of the African M. E. church called at the White House and procured the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the president's secretary.

IF LINCOLN WERE THERE.

In the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" Abraham Lincoln is presented agreeably, even eulogistically. In view of this acknowledgment of Lincoln's magnanimity, it may assist in forming a just estimate of the play to imagine what the great president would have thought had he seen its performance. Would he have regarded it as historically accurate and fair to the Negro, or would he have repudiated its history and considered it to be provocative of sectionalism and stimulative of race hatred?

One can imagine that his attention would have first been challenged by the title and the argument interpreting it to the effect that prior to the events of 1861-1865 the United States was not a nation—that the nation was born at Appomattox and not Bunker Hill and Yorktown and Philadelphia under the nationalistic guidance of Washington. What would have crossed Lincoln's mind as he encountered this thesis is indicated by recalling the words of his first inaugural. "I hold," he said, "that in contemplation of universal law and of the Constitution the union of these states is perpetual. Perpetuity is implied if not expressed in the fundamental law of all national governments. . . . No state upon its own mere motion can lawfully get out of the union—resolves and ordinances to that effect are legally void, and acts of violence within any state or states against the authority of the United States are insurrectionary or revolutionary, according to circumstances." Abraham Lincoln would not have much respect for the historical conclusion of Thomas Dixon.

The next thing to attract Lincoln's notice would have been the repetition of the charge, with which he was quite familiar, that slavery was introduced into the South by greedy Yankee skippers, and that the abolition movement was born of northern hypocrisy and jealousy. As to the Yankee skippers, he acknowledged their offense, but held that when one gladly bought goods from a transporter he could hardly claim exemption from fault. Lincoln's notion, expressed in his wonderful second inaugural, was that slavery was wrong, inherently wrong, and that both sections were to blame—the one for consenting to it and for a long time encouraging it, the other for stubbornly insisting on retaining it. He declared that if the struggle should "continue until the wealth piled by the bondman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword," "the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." As to the motives of the abolitionists, he knew what they were. They burned in his own breast from the day he travelled down the Mississippi and saw slavery face to face. He did not consider them an outgrowth of hypocrisy and jealousy.

As to reconstruction, Lincoln, although strongly believing in a policy of magnanimity, held that the results of the war must be conserved—that slavery should be regarded as gone forever. We can be sure of what would have been his attitude toward the so-called "personal liberty" laws which sought to revive slavery under a mutual other name and whose enactment was a chief cause of the troubles of reconstruction. Whether he would have supported the flat enfranchisement of the Negro we do not know, but we do know that at all times he was opposed to discrimination in the laws based on race. Nobody could not have contended that the ignorant white man should vote and the intelligent colored man should be barred.

As to the intermarriage question, on which D. W. Griffith lays so much stress in his letters to The Globe, Lincoln often encountered it in his days. Douglas constantly taunted him with the question as to whether he would be willing to marry a Negro. He responded that he could see that any aversion he might have to making a woman his wife was a reason why he should not make her his slave. The intermarriage stuff in the Griffith film he would regard as full of the same sort of nonsense that he had spoken of often. It was much danger of undesirable blending through illicit relations, which were inevitable when the race was degraded, while there was no danger regular marriage. Lincoln would not be more by Mr. Dixon's solicitude concerning race than he was by the similar solicitude of Douglas. of the opinion that such anxiety merely indicated a general desire to be unjust to the Negro and an excuse for the injustice.

is no honor to Lincoln on the anniversary to eulogize him and to attack the great he stood for.

GLOBE
ATCHISON, KANSAS
APR 8 1915

Speaking of "The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture drama founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," a writer named Francis Hackett says: "Whatever happened during Reconstruction, this film is aggressively vicious and defamatory. It is spiritual assassination. It degrades the censors that passed it, and the white race that endures it." This the photoplay now running at a New York theatre that charges $2 for best seats, and packs the house ry night.

The Crisis
New York City
MAY - 1915

THE CLANSMAN

SEVERAL years ago a "professional southerner" named Dixon wrote a sensational and melodramatic novel which has been widely read. Eight years ago Dixon brought out his novel as a sordid and lurid melodrama. In several cities the performance of this play was prohibited because of its indecency or incitement to riot. Recently this vicious play has been put into moving pictures. With great adroitness the real play is preceded by a number of marvelously good war pictures; then in the second part comes the real "Clansman" with the Negro represented either as an ignorant fool, a vicious rapist, a venal and unscrupulous politician or a faithful but doddering idiot. By curious procedure this film received the preliminary approval of the National Board of Censors. It was put on in Los Angeles and immediately the fine organization of the N. A. A. C. P. was manifest. The facts were telegraphed to us from our Los Angeles Branch. We started at the Board of Censors. The proprietors of the film fought madly but the Censors met, viewed the film and immediately withdrew their sanction. Many of them were astonished that any committee of their board had ever passed it. The owners of the film promised to modify it but the modifications were unimportant. Yet this remarkable Board of Censors met a third time and passed the film over the protests of a minority of nine persons. Among these nine, however, was the chairman and founder of the board, Frederick C. Howe, Commissioner of Immigration at the Port of New York and several others equally influential. In other words, the board of censorship is now practically split in two. The Association was not discouraged but immediately took steps on the one hand to bring the matter into court and on the other hand to interview the mayor. The interview with the mayor was after some difficulty arranged. The delegation of five hundred of the most prominent white and colored people in the city filled the Council Chamber at City Hall and for an hour in terse, tense speeches urged the mayor to act. The mayor promised to have the two rape scenes cut out immediately and to go further than this if the play still seemed objectionable from the point of view of public peace and decency.

This action while commendable is not sufficient. The whole second half of the play ought to be suppressed and the Association will continue to work to this end. It is gratifying to know that in this work we have the cordial co-operation of all elements of colored people. The New York Age and the Crisis worked hand in hand with Harlem, Brooklyn and Jersey City. We know no factions in the righting of this great wrong.

It is sufficient to add that the main incident in the "Clansman" turns on a thinly veiled charge that Thaddeus Stephens, the great abolition statesman, was induced to give the Negroes the right to vote and secretly rejoice in Lincoln's assassination because of his infatuation for a mulatto mistress. Small wonder that a man who can thus brutally falsify history has never been able to do a single piece of literary work that has brought the slightest attention, except when he seeks to capitalize burning race antagonisms.

NOT INDORSED BY PRESIDENT

Has Taken No Stand on "The Birth of a Nation."

HERALD BUREAU,
No. 1,462 H Street, N. W.,
WASHINGTON, D. C., Friday.

President Wilson is experiencing some annoyance because of an impression which is gaining ground that he indorsed the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," which is said to reflect on the negro race. The motion picture was presented at the White House recently at a special performance attended by Mr. Wilson, several members of the Cabinet and their families.

In an effort to put an end to the report that the picture has Mr. Wilson's indorsement, Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to the President, made public a letter to-day written to Representative Thomas C. Thatcher, of Massachusetts, which said:—

"MY DEAR MR. THATCHER:—Replying to your recent letter and enclosures, I beg to say that it is true that the 'Birth of a Nation' was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance. Sincerely yours,

"J. P. TUMULTY."

"The Birth of a Nation" is based on Thomas Dixon's book, "The Clansman." Mr. Dixon was a classmate of Mr. Wilson at Johns Hopkins.

The Crisis
New York City
1915

TOM DIXON'S "CLANSMAN"

A CONTEMPT OF THE "REFORM" [illegible] BY SLANDER. Dixon's [illegible] colored people.

Addams says:

"The producer seems to have [illegible] the principle of gathering the most [illegible] ous and grotesque individuals he could find among colored people and showing them as representatives of the truth about the entire race. [illegible] scribing her impression of the film, she is both [illegible] and unfair. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race. For instance, it would be easy enough to go out into the slums of a city and bring together some of the criminals, degenerates and [illegible] take pictures of them purporting to show the character of the white race. It would no more be the truth about the

The Sun. May 1-1915

WILSON DENIES HE O.K.D FILM.

"Birth of a Nation" Shown at White House, but Not Approved.

WASHINGTON, April 30.—A statement issued at the White House to-day indicates that President Wilson is chafing under the criticism that is aimed at him in some parts of the country because he visited the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," which is based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," to be presented at the White House. Secretary Tumulty made the following letter to Representative Thatcher of Massachusetts, which he made public here:

"Replying to your letters and enclosures, I beg to say that it is true that the 'Birth of a Nation' was produced before the President and the family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

The Sun. May 1-1915

WILSON DENIES INDORSING "BIRTH OF A NATION" FILM

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson today denied having indorsed the anti-Negro "Birth of a Nation" movies, which, it was explained, were shown at the White House only out of courtesy to an old classmate, Thomas Dixon, author of "The Clansman," from which the movies were evolved.

TRIBUNE
New York City
MAY 1 - 1915

STILL ROOM FOR PROTEST.

From Verne E. Sheridan, New York.

To the Editor of The Tribune Sir:

You inform me in the letter to a [illegible] of THE TRIBUNE SERVICE that you have [illegible] that the Reform Series [illegible] ture Birth of a Nation have been eliminated and that therefore further protest is not needed.

Pray permit me to acquaint you with the fact that they have not been eliminated and that protest against this film should continue until the entire picture is withdrawn from exhibition.

I shall take up your letter with the [illegible] about this picture. I [illegible] cause my letter was [illegible] printed. Only sorry.

Your [illegible] my letter [illegible] to the effect that further protest was not necessary, which would have given me the right to have my letter correctly printed. Too much space, you say? Perhaps, but let us stop "repeating" so much on B. S.—otherwise Wm. Sunday, and use the space on a few problems nearer home.

No offense, and may good luck and prosperity always attend you.

[Miss Sheridan's former letter was an indignant protest against the toleration of the film play, The Birth of a Nation, now running in New York city, a version of which is based on "The Clansman" by the Rev. Thomas F. Dixon, which is described by many who have seen the production as a virulent and malignant appeal to race hatred as against the Negro. When our correspondent's letter came to hand, the press had announced that Mayor Mitchel had required the excision of the offending passages. Subsequent events bear out Miss Sheridan's statement that the cuts it made, did not go far enough. The reverend author is well known as a writer careless of his facts and disposed to a large measure of calumny in dealing with the objects of his displeasure. Whether the true remedy is to prohibit the offending drama, is a question on which opinions will differ. Some very strong opponents of race prejudice, to whom the play is especially disgusting, have refused to join in the movement for suppression, on the ground that to prohibit the expression of even the most evil idea establishes a dangerous precedent, to which the enemies of free speech will be only too ready to appeal.—ED. T. S.]

CAL

APR 8

PROTESTS

Editor of The Why have raised their the picture,
My first act
York was to
I am protesting and all around those of you in the spirit of me and the
that are heard?
A more outr devised piece of of race prejudice across.
All that is ha
just freed from most minutely, w that have caused hatred are not ev
The white So
Negro is all that Why not see the letters of protest
the National Boa
In the name o gether and strike ored sisters and knows their struggle battle harder than only our economic while they must fig
haters of their race.
Their blood is as possess souls, to me that so different colors?
the picture,
and, to add join the Na Advancement fifth avenue than 4 cents
a year's subscri cellent magazine, the Sincerely,
VERNE E.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

The World May 1-1915

NOT APPROVE RACE FILM

President Has Not Commended "Birth of a Nation."

(Special to The World.)

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson to-day made it plain that he did not indorse "The Birth of a Nation," Thomas Dixon's photo play, which has caused race trouble when exhibited in Northern cities.

The white South are the play was shown at the White House before the President and the members of his personal and official family, and as a result the impression has been sent through the country that the play had President's approval.

A delegation of colored men who called to protest against the use which was made of the President's name assured that the President had not approved the films. Mr. Wilson and Dixon are old acquaintances, [illegible]

TRY TO BLOCK EXHIBITION OF "NATION" IN BAY STATE

Should an attempt be made to show the much disputed film, "Birth of a Nation," in Massachusetts theatres outside the Boston metropolitan district, opposition of the state police is expected, because of the chief's refusal to allow the film to be shown on Sunday in Lynn.

Despite opposition, carried before Governor Walsh himself, the film, with elisions demanded by Mayor Curley, is on daily exhibition at the Tremont Theatre in Boston. The state police chief's attitude regarding the Lynn application for a Sunday showing, is believed to foreshadow refusal of permission for the picture to be taken to any city other than Boston.

In Boston itself the opposition has not given up hope of driving the picture from the local screen. Meanwhile the film draws big crowds. As a result a mass meeting of colored people has been held, at which a Cambridge business man went so far as to urge his fellows to war on the whites.

Louisville:

A case to test the new segregation ordinance was brought by this branch through their attorneys, Blakey, Quinn & Lewis, the leading lawyers of the city. This week the ordinance was declared valid. Record is now being prepared and the case will probably be argued in the Court of Appeals in May.

Portland:

This branch has made the first step in removing the so-called "black laws" from the statute books. A bill has passed the Legislature which will place on the ballot at the next election a constitutional amendment to repeal that section of the state constitution which excludes Negroes and mulattoes from the state and which denies to all Negroes, mulattoes and Chinese the right of suffrage. Both of these sections of the constitution are practically void. The bill to eliminate them from the constitution was introduced by Senator George McBride who has been assisted in this work by Senator Farrell, Dr. Andrew D. Smith and D. C. Lewis, members of the House.

The branch has held a number of notable meetings, including a Lincoln's birthday celebration. The work done by its Publicity Committee is especially good. The President is Dr. J. A. Merriman, the Secretary, Mrs. Beatrice Morrow Cannaday, and the Chairman of the Executive Committee, Mr. E. D. Cannaday.

Pittsburgh:

On the 17th of March the Branch held its first quarterly meeting in the Central Baptist Church, adding over eighty new members and raising one hundred dollars in cash. It sent a contribution of twenty-five dollars to assist the Harrisburg Branch in continuing its prosecution of the moving picture case mentioned above.

St. Louis:

This branch, through a committee of thirty members, fifteen white and fifteen colored, is waging an extensive cam-

ANNUAL CONFERENCE

As voted some months ago by the Board of directors, because of the retrenchment necessitated by the war, the National Conference will not be held this year. The Association will hold a meeting in connection with the National Conference of Charities and Correction in Baltimore on the afternoon of May 13, beginning at three o'clock. This meeting will be rather informal in character, having as its object the stimulation of discussion of the race problem among the members of the Conference. Addresses will be made by Miss Mary White Ovington, who will speak on "City Philanthropy Among Colored People;" Prof. William Pickens, whose subject will be "The Ultimate Effects of Discrimination;" and Prof. George William Cook of Howard University for D. Wald, as well as several prominent white Southerners, see the play. All agree in condemning it.

March 10:

The National Association brings criminal proceedings against Aitken and Griffith, owner and producer of the film, and retains James W. Osborne as attorney.

March 11:

We send a letter to the moving picture trade calling their attention to the action of Aitken and Griffith in producing this play after it has been disapproved by the National Board of Censorship.

March 12:

We appeal to the Commissioner of Licenses to stop the performance under that section of the penal code which applies to public nuisances.

We are advised that the Board of Censorship is seeing the play in its revised form. We attend the same performance and find that only slight changes have been made.

March 13:

Miss Jane Addams who has witnessed the play at our request, gives an exclusive interview condemning it to the Evening Post, which is sent out by the National Association to the press of the country. None of the New York papers carried this except the Post which, we understand, is the only paper in New York that has refused the advertising for "The Birth of a Nation."

March 15:

We are officially advised by the office of the National Board of Censorship that the film has been approved by the Board. Some of the members present tell us that the producer was even cheered when he came into the room.

March 16:

We are asked by the Board of Censorship to retract our letter sent to the moving picture trade. We do not.

We request of the Board of Censorship the addresses of their committees and again ask for a list of the cities where the film has been released and a list of states where bills for public censors are pending. We do not get this information.

March 19:

We write the Mayor requesting him to use his authority to suppress the play as an offense against public decency and as endangering public morals; also on the ground that the effect of the picture is likely to lead to a breach of the peace.

March 23:

A review of the play in the New Republic for March 20 published under the title "Brotherly Love," is mailed by the N. A. A. C. P. for editorial comment to five hundred newspapers.

March 24:

The New York press breaks its silence by publishing the "story" of the split on the Board of Censorship over the vote on this film.

March 26:

We are advised by the Mayor that he will receive a delegation from our Association. We invite all churches, clubs, and organizations interested, in New York and vicinity, to unite with us in appearing at this hearing.

March 27:

We attempt to arrange a procession to the Mayor's office. License is refused on the ground that it might lead to a breach of the peace.

March 29:

The National American Woman Suffrage Association refuses to co-operate with the National Board of Censorship in working against the bill for a public censor pending in Pennsylvania, because of the action of the Board on this play.

March 30:

Hearing before the Mayor with following speakers: Dr. Frederic C. Howe, Chairman of the National Board of Censorship; Dr. William H. Brooks, Pastor of St. Mark's M. E. Church; Dr. W. E. B. Du Bois, Editor of the Crisis; Dr. Stephen S. Wise, Rabbi of the Free Synagogue; Mr. Fred R. Moore, Editor of the New York Age; Mr. George E. Wibecan, President of the Brooklyn Citizens' Club; and Mr. Oswald Garrison Villard, President of the New York Evening Post Company, and Vice President of the N. A. A. C. P.

The following organizations were represented: The colored and white ministry of Greater New York, the Citizens' Club of Brooklyn, the Committee of One Hundred of Hudson County, N. J., the National League of Urban Conditions Among Negroes, the United Civic League, the Columbus Hill Civic

---

19

...n this is about the black."
...hen S. Wise said in a recent

...of all is the circum-
...this play constitutes a de-
...ght to deepen and justify the hearts of men the more or
...tive prejudices which it is the
...of an enlightened democracy
...challenge and to combat.
the author and the producers had ...declare that of which I
...designing to foster hate
...intentionally prejudice, to make it im-
...the two races to live side by side
...the basis of peace
...almost respect
...and not be
...their cowar-
...them for their shame
...the play is to
...ago as
...Therefore,
...against two
...responsible for
...and bitterness
...of men into

...Europe
...against the
...brought
...ultimately
...upon
...The
...race assas-
...The time to
...attempt is de-
...It may be
...late and we
...will be upon
...shall have suf-
...our nation
...by the fatal
...race pre-

...the Negro
...Negroes are
...picture
...rights in New
...If a college
...morality of
...than the ...professor sha-
...lecture in
...would not
...either a lecture or a college pro-

New York City
MAY 1915

A Liberal Censorship

...board of censorship which passes on the
...ality of films has given its sanction to one ...Birth of a Nation," made from a book by ...us Negro-hater Thomas Dixon. It shows
...e things happened (according to Mr. Dix...
...the Negro was given equal political rights
...ite race. It teaches that the Negro is a ...not be deprived of all human rights, and
...ally to keep him "in his place." It p...
...ages of the Ku Klux Klan and libels the ...er with malignant fanatics. It perverts
...race prejudice and justifies crime.

...ensors are getting "liberal." But there
...age of liberality.
...possible to say: "We will take the risk of ...doing harm. We will take the risk of ...g harm. We will permit nothing." That ...able, if difficult, thing to say.
...e board of censorship say that and resp...

NG PICTURE WORLD
ew York City
MAY 1 1915

Many Protests Against Showing "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago.

Heated discussions and speeches and letters by several prominent citizens still continue against the giving of permission to show "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago. Jane Addams and others protest against its exhibition because of its injustice to colored people. Miss Addams has said:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among the colored people and showing them as the representatives of the truth about the entire race. It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race.

"Moreover, it appeals to race prejudice upon the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider today. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the play is historical, but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events, but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain of its facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest. The production is the most subtle form of untruth—a half truth."

It will be remembered that in my letter of April 10 Charles Fitzmorris, Mayor Harrison's secretary, passed on these films and reported to Major Funkhouser that they should be shown in their entirety.

TIMES
Washington, D. C.
APR 30 1915

HERALD
Washington, D. C.
MAY 1 1915

IXON'S PLAY IS NOT INDORSED BY WILSON

tter From White House Explains Why "Birth of Nation" Was Produced There.

...fforts to make it appear that ...esident Wilson had indorsed the ...otoplay "The Birth of a Nation," ...lecting on the character of the ...lored race, were stopped today ...hen President Wilson, through Sec...tary Tumulty, addressed a letter to ...ngressman Thacher of Massa...usetts, denying that the President ...d given the play his approval. ...The "Birth of a Nation," which is ...sed upon Thomas Dixon's play ...he Clansman, was shown ...President, Members of his family, ...d Cabinet officers, state ex...bition at the White House. Mr. ...xon and the President were class...ates at the Johns Hopkins Univer...ty, in Baltimore, and solici...tion of the latter for a letter to ...hatcher explaining the exhibition ...as permitted.

Resented By Colored Men.

...Because of the severe picture which ...e film play draws of the colored ...en at the close of the civil war, its ...troduction in certain Northern cities, ...cluding New York, brought ...out several near-riots, leading ...ored men of the country to bit...ly resented its production, claiming that it was calculated to fan the ...d of the people for the colored race in ...ich the full rights of citizenship are denied.

...e President has been lately protesting against being so in indorsing the play of W. H. Lewis, a colored man even to the position of Assistant Attorney General, and Bishop A. Walters, of the A. M. E. Zion Church, of New Jersey, ...ested at the White House against their ...tests.

...ter were shown the letter to Thatcher, which read:

My Dear Mr. Thatcher: In ...your recent letter I ...beg to say that 'The Birth of a Nation' ...ore the President ...e White House ...was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time ...d his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance. Sincerely yours,

J. P. TUMULTY.

Secretary Tumulty said Bishop Walters and Mr. White, of the Supreme Court, who ...ing indorsed the petition, sent a letter denying ...ne so.

Leave Petition At White House.

The visitors left at the White House a copy of a petition ...ayor of Boston ...e production of the play ...ion it is stated that President Wilson's ...an people are thrown ...ake it appear ...atements from the ...e play.

These passages, ...esident in the ...violence against

HERALD
Syracuse, N. Y.
APR 30 1915

"BIRTH OF A NATION" BRINGS WILSON WORRY

Tumulty Says President Did Not Know Nature of Play Based on Dixon's Novel.

A statement issued at the White House yesterday indicates that President Wilson is chafing under the criticism aimed against him in some parts of the country because he permitted the photo-play "The Birth of a Nation," based on Thomas Dixon's "Clansman," to be presented at the White House. Secretary Tumulty sent the following letter to Representative Thatcher, of Massachusetts, which was made public here:

"Replying to your letter and enclosures, I beg to say that it is true that the "Birth of a Nation" was produced before the President and his family at the White House, but the President was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented, and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the White House was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

The letter was given out following a call at the White House by W. H. Lewis, former Assistant Attorney General, and Bishop A. Walters, of New Jersey, both colored. They called the attention of Mr. Tumulty to the use of President Wilson's name by some people in a way to indicate his approval of the principles depicted in this photo-play.

PUBLIC LEDGER
Philadelphia
MAY 1 1915

NEGROES AT WHITE HOUSE IN PROTEST ON "MOVIE"

Ask if President Indorsed Reconstruction Scene Film

WASHINGTON, April 30. — W. H. Lewis, a Boston negro who was formerly Assistant Attorney General of the United States, and Bishop Alexander Walters, of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion Church, of New York, called at the White House today to inquire about reports that President Wilson had given his indorsement to a moving picture film depicting scenes during the reconstruction period in the South, in a manner distasteful to negroes.

Secretary Tumulty showed them a letter to Representative Thatcher, of Massachusetts, saying that while the film was once shown at the White House as a courtesy to a former classmate of the President's, the President was unaware of its character and has at no time expressed any approbation of it.

GEORGIAN
ATLANTA, GA
APR 30 1915

Wilson Did Not O. K. Film Negroes Dislike

(By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson to-day repudiated the claim that he had indorsed the photoplay, "The Birth of a Nation," which has given offense to negroes throughout the country.

W. H. Lewis, of Boston, the only negro ever appointed an Assistant Attorney General, and Bishop Walters, of the African M. E. Church, called at the White House and obtained the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the President's secretary.

NEWS
Chicago, Ill.
APR 30 1915

NO O. K. OF FILM BY WILSON

Explanation Given of Exhibition of "Clansman" at White House.

[Special Dispatch from a Staff Correspondent.]

Washington, D. C., April 30. — Official denial that President Wilson has ever indorsed "The Birth of a Nation," a photo play based on "The Clansman" of Thomas Dixon, was issued from the white house to-day by Secretary Tumulty in a letter addressed to Representative Thacher of Massachusetts.

"Replying to your recent letter and inclosures," Mr. Tumulty writes, "I beg to say that it is true 'The Birth of a Nation' was produced before the president and his family at the white house, but the president was entirely unaware of the character of the play before it was presented and has at no time expressed his approbation of it. Its exhibition at the white house was a courtesy extended to an old acquaintance."

Publicity was given the letter to-day following a call by W. H. Lewis, a lawyer of Boston, the only colored man who has ever held the office of assistant attorney-general of the United States, and Bishop A. Walters of New Jersey of the African Methodist Episcopal Zion church, a supporter of President Wilson in the 1912 campaign. Mr. Lewis and Bishop Walters called the attention of Mr. Tumulty to a letter recently sent to the mayor of Boston by protesters against the play in which it was stated that "The Birth of a Nation" has been "interpreted as a political and social propaganda carefully planned to prepare the minds for the reduction of the negro to a state in which full rights of citizenship are denied."

Regarding the circumstances of the private exhibition before President Wilson, it was said here to-day that Mr. Dixon and the president were former classmates at Johns Hopkins university, and that Mr. Dixon requested that the play be shown at the white house.

HERALD
APR 30 1915

Wilson Denies He Endorsed Photoplay

WASHINGTON, April 30.—President Wilson today repudiated the claim that he had endorsed the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation," which has given offense to negroes throughout the country.

W. H. Lewis, of Boston, the only negro ever appointed an assistant attorney general, and Bishop Walters, of the African M. E. church, called at the White House and procured the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the president's secretary.

SARATOGA (N. Y.) SUN
APRIL 30, 1915

...SON DENIES HE ENDORSED PHOTO PLAY

Washington, April 30—President Wilson today repudiated the claim that he had endorsed the photo play "The Birth of a Nation" which has given offense to negroes throughout the country.

W. H. Lewis, of Boston, the only negro ever appointed an assistant attorney general and B. P. Walters of the African M. E. church called at the White House and procured the denial from J. P. Tumulty, the president's secretary.

IF LINCOLN WERE THERE.

[illegible] photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" Abraham [illegible] is presented agreeably, even eulogistically. I[illegible] of this acknowledgment of Lincoln's magnanimity [illegible] may assist in forming a just estimate of the play to [illegible] what the great president would have thought [illegible] seen its performance. Would he have regarded [illegible] as historically accurate and fair to the Negro, or [illegible] he have repudiated its history and considered it [illegible] provocative of sectionalism and stimulative of [illegible] hatred?

One can imagine that his attention would have first [illegible] challenged by the title and the argument interpret[illegible] it to the effect that prior to the events of 1861-1865 [illegible] United States was not a nation—that the nation was [illegible] at Appomattox and not Bunker Hill and Yorktown [illegible] Philadelphia under the nationalistic guidance of [illegible]ington. What would have crossed Lincoln's mind [illegible] he encountered this thesis is indicated by recalling [illegible] words of his first inaugural. "I hold," he said, [illegible] in contemplation of universal law and of the Con[illegible]tion the union of these states is perpetual. Per[illegible]uity is implied if not expressed in the fundamental [illegible] of all national governments. . . . No state upon [illegible] own mere motion can lawfully get out of the union— [illegible]tives and ordinances to that effect are legally [illegible], and acts of violence within any state or states [illegible]inst the authority of the United States are insur[illegible]tionary or revolutionary, according to circumstances."

[illegible]ham Lincoln would not have much respect for the [illegible]torical conclusion of Thomas Dixon.

The next thing to attract Lincoln's notice would [illegible]ve been the repetition of the charge, with which he [illegible] quite familiar, that slavery was introduced into the [illegible]th by greedy Yankee skippers, and that the abolition [illegible]vement was born of northern hypocrisy and jealousy. [illegible] to the Yankee skippers, he acknowledged their of[illegible], but held that when one gladly bought goods from [illegible] transporter he could hardly claim exemption from [illegible]. Lincoln's notion, expressed in his wonderful [illegible] and inaugural, was that slavery was wrong, in[illegible] wrong, and that both sections were to blame—[illegible]nsenting to it and for a long time encourag[illegible] the other for stubbornly insisting on retain[illegible] declared that if the struggle should "cont[illegible] the wealth piled by the bondman's tw[illegible] fifty years of unrequited toil shall be [illegible]nk, [illegible] every drop of blood drawn with the [illegible] another drawn with the sword," [illegible] judg[illegible] the Lord are true and righteous altogether." [illegible]

[illegible]tives of the abolitionists, he knew what [illegible] they burned in his own breast from the day he [illegible]avelled [illegible] the Mississippi and saw slavery face to face. He [illegible] not consider them an outgrowth of hypocrisy and [illegible]lousy.

[illegible] to reconstruction, Lincoln, although strongly be[illegible] in a policy of magnanimity, held that the re[illegible] the war must be conserved—that slavery should [illegible]d as gone forever. We can be sure of what [illegible] been his attitude toward the so-called "per[illegible]" laws which sought to revive slavery under [illegible]e and whose enactment was a chief cau[illegible] troubles of reconstruction. Whether he would [illegible] supported the flat enfranchisement of the Negro [illegible] not know, but we do know that at all times he [illegible]posed to discrimination in the laws based on race. [illegible]ould not have contended that the ignorant white [illegible] should vote and the intelligent colored man should [illegible]arred.

[illegible] the intermarriage question, on which D. W. [illegible] so much stress in his letter to The Globe, [illegible] often encountered it in his day. Douglas con[illegible] taunted him with the question as to whether he [illegible]d to marry a Negro. He responded that he could [illegible] that any aversion he might have to making a [illegible] woman his wife was a reason why he should [illegible] make her his slave. The intermarriage stuf[illegible] Griffith film he would regard as full co[illegible] sort of nonsense that he had so often [illegible] there was much danger of undesirable b[illegible] through illicit relations, which were inevit[illegible]ce was degraded, while there was no da[illegible] [illegible]gular marriage. Lincoln would not be more [illegible] Mr. Dixon's solicitude concerning race [illegible]n he was by the similar solicitude of Douglas. [illegible] the opinion that such anxiety merely indi[illegible]neral desire to be unjust to the Negro and [illegible]cuse for the injustice.

[illegible] honor to Lincoln on the anniversary of his [illegible]gize him and then to attack the great [illegible] for.

GLOBE
ATCHISON, KANSAS
APR 8 1915

Speaking of "The Birth of a Na[illegible]on," a motion picture drama found[illegible] on Thomas Dixon's story, "The [illegible]lansman," a writer named Francis [illegible]Hackett says: "Whatever happened [illegible] during Reconstruction, this film is [illegible]ggressively vicious and defamatory. [illegible]t is spiritual assassination. It de[illegible]grades the censors that passed it, and [illegible] the white race that endures it." This [illegible] the photoplay now running at a [illegible]w York theatre that charges $2 for [illegible] best seats, and packs the house [illegible]ry night.

Colore[illegible]
Sati[illegible]

Investiga[illegible] sociation fo[illegible] Colored P[illegible] the revisi[illegible] the film [illegible] Nation;" [illegible] pressed y[illegible] the enfor[illegible] ceedings ag[illegible]

[illegible] set to [illegible]ket Court, [illegible]derstood th[illegible] of the film p[illegible] to remove t[illegible] the film wer[illegible] suit would [illegible]

Attorney[illegible] ceed with [illegible] complainants [illegible]ed to go thro[illegible] hearing was a[illegible]

[illegible]om
[illegible]dress [illegible]
[illegible]ate

Women [illegible] Thom[illegible] "Bir[illegible]

New York, [illegible] "The Birth [illegible]sion of Tho[illegible] man," took [illegible] four prominen[illegible] to appear in [illegible] day to expres[illegible] duction. The[illegible] ing, however [illegible] was postpo[illegible]

James W[illegible] protestors [illegible] D. W. Grif[illegible] sulting act [illegible] shadow the [illegible] Mitchel.

Mr. Osbor[illegible] tional Asso[illegible] of the Colo[illegible] avenue. It [illegible] of the pictur[illegible] chases a wh[illegible] the other a[illegible] force marria[illegible] benefactor. [illegible] these scenes [illegible] holds they b[illegible] ciently.

Joel E. Sp[illegible] board of the [illegible] to be sent to [illegible] attention to th[illegible] he had summonses [illegible] are expected to be th[illegible] court.

They are Mrs. Norr[illegible] house, Miss Rosalie [illegible] White Ovington, au[illegible] Lansdowne and Free[illegible] man of the Nation[illegible] ship, who request[illegible] taken off the a[illegible] national board [illegible] proved the film.

Miss Ovington [illegible] tures yesterday [illegible] erward she was [illegible] approval of the [illegible] esting points is [illegible] the wom[illegible] wh[illegible] will [illegible]

[illegible]ALL
New Y[illegible]
[illegible] 8 19[illegible]

PROTESTS AGAINST [illegible] A NATION[illegible]

Editor of The Call:

Why have readers [illegible] raised their voices in [illegible] the picture, "Birth of [illegible]

My first act upon g[illegible] York was to see this p[illegible] I am protesting to the [illegible] and all around me. [illegible] those of you that believe [illegible] in the spirit of fair play p[illegible] me and the few other fo[illegible] that are heard?

A more outrageous yet [illegible] devised piece of slander an[illegible] of race prejudice I have ra[illegible] across.

All that is hateful in the [illegible] just freed from slavery, is [illegible] most minutely, while the many [illegible] that have caused the breeding [illegible] hatred are not even hinted at. [illegible]

The white South is angelic [illegible] Negro is all that is mean and de[illegible]

Why n[illegible] see the picture, then [illegible] letters of protest to the Mayor [illegible] the National Board of Censors? [illegible]

In the name of decency, get [illegible] gether and strike a blow for our [illegible] ored sisters and brothers. Good [illegible] knows their struggles are many, [illegible] battle harder than ours. We [illegible] only our economic masters to f[illegible] while they must fight these and [illegible] haters of their race.

Their blood is as red as ours, [illegible] if we possess souls, why, who [illegible] prove to me that souls are posses[illegible] of different colors?

See the picture, then write yo[illegible] letters, and, to add your supreme pr[illegible] test, join the National Association f[illegible] the Advancement of Colored Peopl[illegible] 70 Fifth avenue. Two dollars a ye[illegible] (less than 4 cents a week), which in[illegible] cludes a year's subscription to an ex[illegible] cellent magazine, the Crisis.

Sincerely,

VERNE F. SHERIDAN.

Brooklyn, N. Y.

[illegible] 1 1915
The Sun

[illegible]SON DENIES HE O.K.D FILM

[illegible] of a Nation" Shown at [illegible] White House, but Not Approved.

[illegible]ASHINGTON, May 1.—A statement [illegible] at the White House to-day indi[illegible] that President Wilson is chafing [illegible] the criticism that is aimed at him [illegible] parts of the country because he [illegible] the photoplay "The Birth of a [illegible] which is bas[illegible] on Thomas [illegible] "Clansman," to be presented at [illegible] White House. Secretary Tumulty [illegible] the following letter to Representa[illegible] Gardner of Massachusetts, which [illegible] made public here:

[illegible] Replying to your letters and enclos[illegible] I beg to say that it is true that the [illegible] of a Nation" was produced before [illegible] President and the family at the [illegible] House, but the President was en[illegible] unaware of the character of the [illegible] before it was presented and has at [illegible] expressed his approbation of it. [illegible] at the White House was [illegible] extended to an old acquaint[illegible]

[illegible]
[illegible]

Many Protests Against Showing "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago.

Heated discussions and speeches and letters by several prominent citizens still continue against the giving of permission to show "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago. Jane Addams and others protest against its exhibition because of its injustice to colored people. Miss Addams has said:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among the colored people and showing them as the representatives of the truth about the entire race. It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race.

"Moreover, it appeals to race prejudice upon the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider today. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the play is historical, but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events, but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain of its facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest. The production is the most subtle form of untruth—a half truth."

It will be remembered that in my letter of April 10 Charles Fitzmorris, Mayor Harrison's secretary, passed on these films and reported to Major Funkhouser that they should be shown in their entirety.

[illegible] TRIBUNE
[illegible]RIL 7, 1915

VOICE O[illegible]

[illegible]EST AGAINST A FILM

[illegible]il 4.—[Editor of [illegible] call your attention to [illegible] that Chicago has an extremely [illegible] [illegible]ard of censorship for films, the m[illegible] [illegible]rs of which, appointed under the ru[illegible] civil service, are under the super[illegible] [illegible]n of the morals division of police. [illegible] These censors pass upon all mov[illegible] [illegible]ctures before they are shown in th[illegible] [illegible]go. I note from THE TRIBUNE of Ap[illegible] that a film recently shown in New York [illegible]hown as "The Birth of a Nation" ha[illegible] [illegible]en "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, [illegible] [illegible]ecretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitz[illegible]norris may be a most excellent secretary [illegible] and [illegible]ersed in his duties as such, is [illegible] [illegible]t not rather unnecessary that he should [illegible] [illegible]usurp the work of the entire censo[illegible] [illegible]rd and that a film should be [illegible] [illegible]n the recommendation [illegible] The Birth of a Na[illegible] [illegible] arouse race pre[illegible] [illegible]ple; in it they [illegible] [illegible]ous, while the [illegible] [illegible]e of the Ku Klu[illegible] [illegible]es, performing magnanimous acts o[illegible] [illegible]lry and invariably appearing at the [illegible] [illegible] moment to rescue the virtuous and [illegible] [illegible] the country from destruction. Such [illegible] [illegible]entation of an historic period wo[illegible] [illegible] harm. Doubtless some of the [illegible] [illegible] are correctly reported, but [illegible] [illegible]en selected with the most sinis[illegible] [illegible] and for that reason are most [illegible] [illegible] and harmful.

[illegible] number of the best citizens [illegible]k protested against the appe[illegible] [illegible] the film in that city. Is it [illegible] [illegible] that permission should [illegible] [illegible]n for such a notorious film [illegible] [illegible] in Chicago before it was [illegible] [illegible]our board of censors or to [illegible] [illegible] of citizens who are occa[illegible] [illegible] to help them? If the cit[illegible] [illegible]nsiders it worth while to s[illegible] [illegible]ar to sustain this board of [illegible] [illegible]ot at such a time as this that [illegible] [illegible]tes would be the most valu[illegible] [illegible]rtainly, public spirited citizens [illegible] [illegible]pected to protest against this [illegible] [illegible]ry usurpation of power on the [illegible] [illegible]ty official.

LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
Juvenile Protective Association.

[illegible] EDITOR & PUBLISHER
New York City
MAY 1 - 1915

ONE of the niftiest little press age[illegible] stunts that ha[illegible]en put over, and [illegible] is being put over is being worked [illegible] the versatile [illegible] wide-awake genius who is getting first page news [illegible]tories over for D. W. Griffith's big movie, "The Birth of a Nation."

This film is being shown in New York and Boston, so it is the New York and Boston papers which are falling for this very smooth press agentry.

Here is the how of it. The story of th[illegible] [illegible]d on Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," and the colored popu[illegible] [illegible]s are "worked" to file protests, which, of course, are turned into first page news stories which seem to get by the editorial [illegible]rs easily.

They are so good, in fact, that more than once they [illegible] first page position.

Of course any film that can get this kind of stories [illegible] this kind of position is sure to get the attention of people with [illegible] see just what there is about the film that can draw so much [illegible] there you are.

The movies are surely moving along nicely, thank y[illegible] [illegible] about the best of the many press agent stunts yet attempted [illegible]

[illegible]
Cinc[illegible]
MAY [illegible]

BIRTH OF A N[illegible]

The play banned and always [illegible] Boston up arrested and fin[illegible] week in the "race riots" o[illegible] Birth of a Nation will never [illegible] they were the victims of [illegible] furnished by a press agent. [illegible] that they were.

There is absolutely nothing [illegible] a sane also [illegible]

WATERVILLE (Me.[illegible]
MA[illegible]

If the colored peo[illegible] protest a little m[illegible] against the picture p[illegible] of the Nation," it is [illegible] everybody would go to [illegible]

BILLBOARD
Cincinatti, Ohio
MAY 1 1915
A NATION

(Me.) SENTINEL
MAY 1, 1915
people would only more vigorously ure play, "The Birth
it is believed tha go to see it.

WILSON DENIES
INDORSEMENT

Telegraph MAY 2 1915
DON'T O. K. FILM

CLEVELAND (Ohio) PRESS
MAY 3, 1915

NEGROES RAP FILM

agers of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," appeared in court today for a hearing to decide whether the portrayal of the film may continue.

The national association for the advancement of the colored people has invoked the law in an effort to bar the sensational dramatization of "The Clansman."

BIDDEFORD (Me.) RECORD
MAY 4, 1915

any time.

Those Boston negroes have greatly injured their cause against the motion picture play "The Birth of a Nation" by threatening to resort to bombs and violence. Such threats afford further evidence of the natural animalism of the negro.

CONCORD (N. H.) MONITOR
MAY 4, 1915

Gertrude Stevenson has written a story based on the much discussed film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which the Boston Journal is publishing as a serial.

Empire
Cincinnati Ohio
5-2-15

Jane Addams and Other Women Protest

ers are striving to [illegible] "The Birth of a Nation" [illegible] appeal to "[illegible]" [illegible] there is but [illegible] picture arriving [illegible] son, because [illegible] sion requires [illegible] table. "The [illegible] demanding $2 [illegible] New York and Chicago.

NEW YORK OFFICE, 1022 LONGACRE BUILDING
Forty-second Street and Broadway
Telephone Bryant 1030

Editors: ED J. MOCK, PAUL H. WOODRUFF

Associate Editors
Neil G. Concord — John C. Garrett
Mabel Condon — Charles H. Condon

Advertising Manager: ALLEN L. HAASE

This publication is free and independent of all business or house connections or control. No manufacturer or supply dealer, or their stockholders or representatives, have any financial interest in Motography or any voice in its management or policy.

Entered at Chicago Post Office as Second Class Mail Matter

MOTOGRAPHY

WITH WHICH IS INCORPORATED THE NICKELODEON

PUBLISHED WEEKLY BY ELECTRICITY MAGAZINE CORPORATION
MONADNOCK BUILDING
CHICAGO, ILL.
Telephone: Harrison 3014—All Departments

NOTICE TO ADVERTISERS
Changes of advertising copy should reach the office of publication not less than fifteen days in advance of date of issue. Regular date of issue, every Saturday. New advertisements will be accepted up to within ten days of date of issue, but proof of such advertisements can not be shown in advance of publication.

SUBSCRIPTION PRICE
Per year $3.00

Canada - - -	Per year, $4.00
Foreign - - -	Per year, 5.00
Single copy - - -	.10c

FOR SALE AT ALL NEWS STANDS

NOTICE TO SUBSCRIBERS
REMITTANCES — Remittances should be made by check, New York draft or money order, in favor of MOTOGRAPHY. Foreign subscriptions may be remitted direct by International Postal Money Order.
CHANGE OF ADDRESS — The old address should be given as well as the new, and notice should be received two weeks in advance of the desired change.

If Your News Dealer Will Not Supply You — Please Notify Us

Volume XIII — CHICAGO, JUNE 5, 1915 — Number 23

Permitted Locations of Theaters

CHICAGO has an ordinance which is intended to prohibit "theatrical performances," among other things, within two hundred feet of a church. This ordinance has naturally operated to restrain the construction of picture theaters in a good many desirable locations, even when the churches themselves might have voiced no objection.

Judge Honoré in the Circuit court has just held that ordinance invalid, and following his decision Mayor Thompson has granted a license to the Fifty-third Street Theater, which is quite close to the Hyde Park Presbyterian Chur[illegible] one of Chicago's exclusive residence distri[illegible] is means that picture theaters in the Windy C[illegible] now free to locate next door to a church, if the[illegible] which opens up practically the only new te[illegible] Chicago can offer the exhibitor.

The churches foug[illegible] for over a year; but Attorneys John W. Cr[illegible] John L. Hopkins, counsel for the le[illegible] of [illegible] were able to show that the term "theatr[illegible]es," as used in the ordinance, was ne[illegible] to regulate the location of a theater, a[illegible] legislature never delegated that power to the city. The fact that the theater building involved an investment of nearly a quarter of a million dollars demonstrated the responsibility and dignity of the undertaking to the satisfaction of the court.

While any suggestion of antagonism between the picture theater and the church is deplorable, we are confident that the result of the decision will work for a better mutual understanding between these two congregations of people with apparently widely differing motives. The theater, properly conducted, will profit by the dignity of the church; while the members of the latter will soon learn that there is nothing irreligious in the motion picture, nothing to disturb the consecrated and concentrated peace of the most sanctified neighborhood.

The pro-church enthusiast is very apt to be all kinds of an anti-amusement zealot. He cannot see that the motion picture is but a silent lecture—a succession of photographs—the simplest possible routine. The elimination of Chicago's limiting ordinance is an opportunity to convince him that there is much good in pictures, and no evil. And possibly he will find in time that the church itself is better off for the general livening up of the community, the improved mental and spiritual circulation which results from the stimulant of honest entertainment.

The Birth of a Nation's Rebellion Against Censorship

[illegible] much-discussed picture, "The Birth of a Nation," has mounted to the dignity and distinction of a long editorial in the Chicago Tribune. It is [illegible] evident that the great newspaper approves of this particular great film. The editorial points out that the film has been suppressed in Chicago, while the book it was made from and the stage play made from the same book, were not. In commenting on this [illegible] the writer manages to martial some interest-[illegible] [illegible] he says) is a question of freedom in expression which [illegible] give any thoughtful person cause for reflection. We [illegible] our right to such freedom within the obvious bounds [illegible] common decency and morality. "The Birth of a Nation" does not offend against either. This film draws upon verifiable [illegible] from the history of the country, embodies men [illegible] of whom the pages treat, and they re-enact their struggles. We then say that citizens may not be permitted to see it.

The Tribune has been and is opposed to interference with freedom of expression, but it confesses that the subject here involved has complexities which do not yield to the application of ordinary rules. The terrible concrete reality of the moving picture is the disturbing factor and the consequent emotional response of the spectator is the disturbing result. The sin of the film is its effectiveness.

A lecturer with ability to touch men's susceptibilities might take this subject and do his emotional best with it and we doubt that a voice would be raised to stop him. Such people as might go to hear him would have their feelings made more acute, might have their prejudices heightened, but in the end the chief result would be that they knew more about the days of reconstruction.

The moving picture not so much makes its spectators know more about the period; it makes them live through it, vicariously but intensely, and the city government has said, in effect, that the citizens of Chicago ought not to live through it, and they ought not, as a matter of public policy, to enter a theater from which they must come with prejudices and race hatreds inflamed.

It is not displeasing to hear the pictures credited-

IF LINCOLN WERE THERE.

In the photoplay "The Birth of a Nation" Abraham Lincoln is presented agreeably, even eulogistically. In view of this acknowledgment of Lincoln's magnanimity may we assist in forming a just estimate of the play to imagine what the great president would have thought had he seen its performance. Would he have regarded it as historically accurate and fair to the Negro, or would he have repudiated its history and considered it as provocative of sectionalism and stimulative of race hatred?

One can imagine that his attention would have first been challenged by the title and the argument interpreted to the effect that prior to the events of 1861-1865 the United States was not a nation—that the nation was born at Appomattox and not Bunker Hill and Yorktown and Philadelphia under the nationalistic guidance of Washington. What would have crossed Lincoln's mind when he encountered this thesis is indicated by recalling the words of his first inaugural. "I hold," he said, "that in contemplation of universal law and of the Constitution the union of these states is perpetual. Perpetuity is implied if not expressed in the fundamental law of all national governments. . . . No state upon its own mere motion can lawfully get out of the union—resolves and ordinances to that effect are legally void, and acts of violence within any state or states against the authority of the United States are insurrectionary or revolutionary, according to circumstances." Abraham Lincoln would not have much respect for the historical conclusion of Thomas Dixon.

The next thing to attract Lincoln's notice would have been the repetition of the charge, with which he was quite familiar, that slavery was introduced into the South by greedy Yankee skippers, and that the abolition movement was born of northern hypocrisy and jealousy. As to the Yankee skippers, he acknowledged their offense, but held that when one gladly bought goods from a transporter he could hardly claim exemption from fault. Lincoln's notion, expressed in his wonderful second inaugural, was that slavery was wrong, institution wrong, and that both sections were to blame—the North consenting to it and for a long time encouraging it, the other for stubbornly insisting on retaining it. He declared that if the struggle should "continue until all the wealth piled by the bondman's two hundred and fifty years of unrequited toil shall be sunk, and until every drop of blood drawn with the lash shall be paid by another drawn with the sword," "the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether." As to the motives of the abolitionists, he knew what they were. They burned in his own breast from the day he travelled down the Mississippi and saw slavery face to face. He did not consider them an outgrowth of hypocrisy and jealousy.

As to reconstruction, Lincoln, although strongly believing in a policy of magnanimity, held that the results of the war must be conserved—that slavery should be considered as gone forever. We can be sure of what would have been his attitude toward the so-called "peonage" laws which sought to revive slavery under a new name and whose enactment was a chief cause of the troubles of reconstruction. Whether he would have supported the flat enfranchisement of the Negro we do not know, but we do know that at all times he would have opposed to discrimination in the laws based on race. He would not have contended that the ignorant white man should vote and the intelligent colored man should be barred.

As to the intermarriage question, on which D. W. Griffith lays so much stress in his letter to The Globe, Lincoln often encountered it in his day. Douglas constantly taunted him with the question as to whether he would consent to marry a Negro. He responded that he could see that any aversion he might have to making a colored woman his wife was a reason why he should not wish to make her his slave. The intermarriage stuff in the Griffith film he would regard as full of the same sort of nonsense that he had so often met with. He knew there was much danger of undesirable blending through illicit relations, which were inevitable where race was degraded, while there was no danger from legal intermarriage. Lincoln would not be more severe than Mr. Dixon's solicitude concerning race purity or than he was by the similar solicitude of Douglas. He was of the opinion that such anxiety merely indicated a general desire to be unjust to the Negro and an excuse for the injustice.

To do honor to Lincoln on the anniversary of his birth to eulogize him and then to attack the great principles he stood for.

GLOBE
ATCHISON, KANSAS
APR 8 1915

Speaking of "The Birth of a Nation," a motion picture drama founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," a writer named Francis Hackett says: "Whatever happened during Reconstruction, this film is aggressively vicious and defamatory. It is spiritual assassination. It degrades the censors that passed it, and the white race that endures it." This is the photoplay now running at a New York theatre that charges $2 for its best seats, and packs the house every night.

Colore
Sati

Investigat
sociation fo
Colored Pe
the revisi
the film Nation;" pressed ye the enfore ceedings ag
H set ket Court, derstood th of the film p to remove the film we suit would Attorney
ceed with complainant ed to go thro hearing was

PPER
New York City
APR 10 1

MAYOR MITCHEL ORD
VICTOR HERBERT
COLONIAL SUES GE
ANOTHER FRE
FRISCO GETS NEXT NAT
DEATH OF WM. V.
HORKHEIME
PENN. CENSOR LAW SI

MAYOR MITCHELL ORDER
ATIONS IN "BIRTH OF A
Acting on a complaint presente
Garrison Villard, Rabbi Wise an
C. Howe, representing the interes colored societies of New York C Mitchell, Tuesday, March 30, ord al eliminations to be made in Grif Birth of a Nation," playing to cap ness currently at the Liberty Theat
Wise who is connected with the Board of Censors, in his request,
Mayor to take action on the pl
utterance to the following remar
"The Board of Censors which exhibition to go is stupid or w regret that my name is even re pected as a member of such a negroes in this city have been pat have not yet arisen to protest lik who attacked the production of boy of the Western World.' The the playboy as a caricature, not acterization.
"Stop this production, Mr. Mayor will render a great service to the
this country."
Rabbi Wise is a prominent
of New York City. Oswald Garrison
the editor of The Evening Post, that "The Birth of a Nation," as f was concerned, was "impropo and Lamoral "I'll stake whateve tion I have a historical stude
Mr. Villard h my charges against play. The ging in of the negro exhibition needless and uncalled the pla old be improved upon respect the objectionable scenes w
out."
Mr. Villard, in addition to his activities, finds time to attend to t of vice president of the National As for the Advancement of Colored P Frederic C. Howe claimed tha scenes in the picture affected te citizens of the United States, who graded by the production.
The scenes chiefly objected to pursuing of a white girl by a craze and the attempted love-making with woman on the part of the mulatto of the piece. "The Birth of a Na based on Thomas Dixon's book, "Th man," which in literary form caused sensation when it was first published.
GRIFFITH APPEARS WITH COU
Following the presentation of the recorded complaints, D. W. Grifith, day afternoon, April 1, accompanied by torney, Martin W. Littleton and armed

TRIBUNE
PRIL 7, 1915

VOICE O
EST AGAINST A FILM
April 4.—[Editor of The call your attention to that Chicago has an extremely oard of censorship for films, the m ars of which, appointed under the ru civil service, are under the super
n of the morals division of police.
These censors pass upon all movie
ctures before they are shown in Chi go. I note from THE TRIBUNE of Apri that a film recently shown in New York hown as "The Birth of a Nation" ha en "passed" by Charles Fitzmorris, ecretary to the mayor. While Mr. Fitz-norris may be a most excellent secretary and w ersed in his duties as such, is t not rather unnecessary that he should usurp the work of the entire cens rd and that a film should be on the recommendation
The Birth of a Na arouse race pre ple; in it they ous, while the e of the Ku Klu an—are uniformly es, performing magnanimous acts of lry and invariably appearing at the moment to rescue the virtuous and the country from destruction. Such entation of an historic period works harm. Doubtless some of the are correctly reported, but en selected with the most sini
and for that reason are most m
and harmful.
e number of the best citizens
k protested against the appea the film in that city. Is it that permission should h n for such a notorious film in Chicago before it was our board of censors or t of citizens who are occa
to help them? If the cit nsiders it worth while to s ar to sustain this board of ot at such a time as this that es would be the most valu-rtainly, public spirited citizens
pected to protest against this ry usurpation of power on the ty official.
LOUISE DE KOVEN BOWEN,
Juvenile Protective Association.

PROTESTS AGAINST A NATION
Editor of The Call:
Why have readers raised their voices in the picture, "Birth of
My first act upon g
York was to see this p
I am protesting to the
and all around me.
those of you that believe in the spirit of fair play p me and the few other fo
that are heard?
A more outrageous yet devised piece of slander an of race prejudice I have ra across.
All that is hateful in the just freed from slavery, is most minutely, while the many that have caused the breeding hatred are not even hinted at.
The white South is angelic
Negro is all that is mean and de Why n see the picture, then letters of protest to the Mayor
the National Board of Censors?
In the name of decency, get gether and strike a blow for our ored sisters and brothers. Good knows their struggles are many, battle harder than ours. We only our economic masters to while they must fight these and haters of their race.
Their blood is as red as ours,
If we possess souls, why, who prove to me that souls are posses of different colors?
See the picture, then write yo letters, and, to add your supreme pr test, join the National Association f the Advancement of Colored Peopl
70 Fifth avenue. Two dollars a ye (less than 4 cents a week), which includes a year's subscription to an excellent magazine, the Crisis.
Sincerely,
VERNE E. SHERIDAN.
Brooklyn, N. Y.

Sun
APR 1 1915

SON DENIES HE O.K.D FILM Birth of a Nation" Shows at White House, but Not Approved.
Washington, May 1.—A statement at the White House to-day indi-that President Wilson is chafing the criticism that is aimed at him parts of the country because he the photoplay "The Birth of a which is based on Thomas Clansman," to be presented at White House. Secretary Tumulty
the following letter to Representa-Thatcher of Massachusetts, which made public here:
"Replying to your letters and enclos-
I beg to say that it is true that the Birth of a Nation' was produced before President and the family at the White House, but the President was unaware of the character of the before it was presented and has at expressed his approbation of it.
exhibition at the White House was intended to an old acquaint-

EDITOR & PUBLISHER
New York City
MAY 1 - 1915

ONE of the niftiest little press agent stunts that has been put over, and is being put over is being worked by the versatile and wide-awake genius who is getting first page news stories over for D. W. Griffith's big movie, "The Birth of a Nation."

This film is being shown in New York and Boston, so it is the New York and Boston papers which are falling for this very smooth press agentry.

Here is the how of it. The story of the [illegible] based on Dixon's novel, "The Clansman," and the colored population of the [illegible] are "worked" to file protests, which, of course, are turned into first page news stories which seem to get by the editorial rooms easily.

They are so good in fact, that more than once they have had first page position.

Of course any film that can get this kind of stories [illegible] in this kind of position is sure to get the attention of people with [illegible] see just what there is about the film that can draw so much [illegible] and there you are.

The movies are surely moving along nicely, thank you [illegible] is about the best of the many press agent stunts yet attempted [illegible]

Many Protests Against Showing "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago.

Heated discussions and speeches and letters by several prominent citizens still continue against the giving of permission to show "The Birth of a Nation" in Chicago. Jane Addams and others protest against its exhibition because of its injustice to colored people. Miss Addams has said:

"The producer seems to have followed the principle of gathering the most vicious and grotesque individuals he could find among the colored people and showing them as the representatives of the truth about the entire race. It is both unjust and untrue. The same method could be followed to smirch the reputation of any race.

"Moreover, it appeals to race prejudice upon the basis of conditions of half a century ago, which have nothing to do with the facts we have to consider today. Even then it does not tell the whole truth. It is claimed that the plays historical, but history is easy to misuse. It is undoubtedly true that some of the elements of the plot are based on actual events, but they are only a part of the picture. You can use history to demonstrate anything, when you take certain of its facts and emphasize them to the exclusion of the rest. The production is the most subtle form of untruth—a half truth."

It will be remembered that in my letter of April 10 Charles Fitzmorris, Mayor Harrison's secretary, passed on these films and reported to Major Funkhouser that they should be shown in their entirety.

BIRT
The poet Bab
Boston up arr week in the Birth of a Nati they were the furnished by a but they wer
There is sh a same sim

WATERVI

If the co protest a against the of the Nati everybody w

---

with effectiveness crete reality." W print about the d on the screen, an shot at the projec observed, and do ture show visitor loses his identity excess of emotion fectly aware that "show" and no p ture him beyond allegation of dang
"incite to riot."
But if the ne
most on the p malignant influen power to carry m history, it redeem
All censorship is of thought and exp
an ideal it not alwa cede any restriction justify it on oth censorship of inform extreme cases as un expression also is a limits. The field he other forms of art, tion rather than re
are treated.
But here it is ne extended in the gene cases are as clear often the result of rather than an expe opinion. Also there when it is created.
Censorship offe may be conceded to lose sight of the fact which are right in Here is the fir idence that men
the mental irrit trust and will in t be censured; and censorship of pres pic themselves.
jained to say who
There may be th advise us not to to prevent us by has not been prove
We cannot sa that paper definite already has t opinion, and tha

T final arranger away June" conte by the Reliance M tributed to exhib
June" contest as the live one exhib
June" contest wri
the Reliance trai cities on its way t patrons en masse
a tribute to the w is pointed out, are wards in their hon

BILLBOARD
Cincinnati, Ohio
MAY 1 1915

TH OF A NATION

...ne and simple that got themselves ...rested and fined at Boston last ...rave riots" over that film. The ...tion will never be persuaded that ...e victims of mental suggestion ...press agent.

...ntirely nothing in the film that ...

VILLE (Me.) SENTINEL
MAY 1, 1915

colored people would only ...a little more vigorously ...he picture play, "The Birth ...ation," it is believed tha ...would go to see it.

Times Herald
MAY 1 1915

WILSON DENIES INDORSEMENT

...Tuesday Says That Although "The ...a Nation" Was Once Shown ...White House, the President ...Unaware of Its Character

Washington, May 1.—Offi... that the president has ne... "The Birth of a Nation" was ... the White House yesterday ... reply to the president. It ... the form of a letter addres... Tuesday by Representative ... Massachusetts.

Regarding the occasion ... private exhibition of the pi... the White House, it is sai... Dixon, author of "The Clan... which the play is based, ... first were former Senator ... Hopkins, university and ... requested that the pla... the White House and ... the occasion. The ... play was not known ... advance and ...

Telegraph
MAY 2 1915

DIXON'S NEW FILM

Wilson ... Birth of a ...

(Special Telegram to The ...)

WASHINGTON, M... 1.—A ... ment issued at the W... House ... indicates that Presi... ... ing under the ... him in some ... he permitted ... of a Nation." ... Dixon's ... the White ...

CLEVELAND (Ohio) PRESS
MAY 3, 1915

...GROES RAP FILM

...TON, May 3.—D. W. ... H. B. Atkin, man... ...ners of the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," appeared in court today for a hearing to decide whether the portrayal of the film may continue.

The national association f... the advancement of the colo... people has invoked the law in an effort to bar the sensational dram... ...atization of "The Clansman."

BIDDEFORD (Me.) RECORD
MAY 4, 1915

any time.

Those Boston negroes have greatly injured their cause against the motion picture play "The Birth of a Nation" by threatening to resort to bombs and violence. Such threats afford further evidence of the natural animalism of the negro.

CONCORD (N. H.) MONITOR
MAY 4, 1915

Gertrude Stevenson has written a story based on the much discussed film spectacle, "The Birth of a Nation," which the Boston Journal is publishing as a serial.

...ness that amounts to "a terrible ... We remember the stories we used ... dog in the audience that chased a ... and the happy westerner who took ... ...pected image of a bear. But we have ... do not believe, the sane and normal ... ...tor, however "fannish" he may be, ...ity or his sense of time and place ... ...tional concentration. He is always ... that the thing at which he gazes ... ...o producer has yet been able to hyp... ...nd that consciousness. Therefore the ... danger is foolish. No picture show ...

...e newspaper editorial seemed there ... point of supporting the theory ... ...luence, the belief that the picture ... ...s men bodily and spiritually back ... ...eems itself later.

...hip is an infringement of that perfect free ... expression which is dear to the liberal ... always acceptable as a fact. Where we ... ...tion it is extremely difficult if not impossi... ...n other grounds than those of expedie... ...ntimentation and of debate is allowed only ... ...as under martial law. Censorship of litera... ...s is permitted only within relatively nar... ...ld broadens, however, with restrictions ... ...aft, especially where their appeal is to ... ...an reason and effects of public conseque...

...is necessary for us to resist a tendency ... ...e general name of expediency or morality. ... ...s clear as those we have cited, and restric... ...sult of the organized zeal of minute mino... ...expression of the consensus of a commun... ...there is always a disposition to use pow... ...ated.

...s often accomplishes concrete benefits ... ...ded to be necessary. But we ought never ... ...he fact, that if necessary, it is a necessary ... ...right in regarding jealously.

...the first signal of the awakening, the ... ...at men of thought are beginning to rea... ...al irritation of censorship—as indeed the ... ...ll in time. The American people will ... ...and make no error in your analys... ...d press or play is censorship of the p... ...ves. No living being on this earth is ... ...ay what you and I shall or shall not s... ...he things which others are at liberty ... ...ot to see; but we dispute anyone's rig... ...us by force from seeing anything wh... ...n proved illegal.

...not say that the Tribune's editorial al... ...definitely against censorship; but evide... ...has the logic of that function und... ...and that is a good beginning.

To Greet Winners

...rrangements and many details of the "Ru... ..." contest are contained in a booklet is... ...iance Motion Picture Corporation and d... ... exhibitors who are using the "Runaw... ...est as a big business builder. Several ... ...e exhibitors who are running the "Runaw... ...test write the film corporation that wh... ...ce train of winners passes through the... ...s way to the coast they will turn out their ... ...n masse with brass bands and banners, a... ...o the winners. Exhibitors who do this, it ... out, are certain to reap great publicity re... ...heir home towns and the vicinities.

Just A Moment ... Past

...Wonder where any of the doubting Thomases who have ... ...ed that growth on Bill Lawhead's upper lip and ... ...ed it was a walking mustache that it is ... Bill says ... ...ly wondering if he's planning to under... ...

...Wonder if we'll hear Dick Travers hoping sweet nothings ... ...ear in his ears the next time you encounter him. Dick ... ...ently returned from a prolonged stay in Tennessee ... ...ed if he had stayed a week longer he'd have been talking ...

SEVEN SUFFERING SISTERS

The World's Greatest Yarn.

By U. N. Derwood,

The World's Greatest Writer

Episode Six: "Lucy Dove"

(PART ONE)

...was a ... learned I was following him ... and caused the lock to be ... ...of the ... drained, thus leaving the sub... ...where in all ... station high and dry in the ... ...Dear ... canal. Failed in ... the story ... this method of pursuit I set out ... ...till the ex... on a bicycle to overtake him. ... ...Dick ... but he scattered tacks along the ... ...respect ... highway, puncturing my tires ... ...Dick ... and leaving me. Beck then ... ...ability ... started to make his way across ... ...been ... Central America, but I was ... ...where ... close behind him. Perceiving ... ...cates ... that I still followed, he ar... ...father ... ranged for my capture by a tribe ... ...we ... of cannibals and soon I was ... ...found and helpless in the camp ... ...the ... of the savages. The chief of the ... ...Washington ... tribe played Beck false, how... ...had ... ever, captured him, took the ... ...which ... diamonds away and turned them ... ...of ... over to me. I was then re... ...papers ... leased and started to make my ... ...Panama ... way back to Panama. Beck ... ...accidentally ... bribed his jailer to release him ... ...was up to ... and soon was again in pursuit ... ...Panama to ... of me. ... ...quickly ...

(To Be Continued.)

...that we've got this blame serial agoing, we're be... ...to wonder where it's going to take us.

...Dr. Inkwater has assumed charge of the Vine... ...at Coldwater, Michigan. Ought to be a ... "exhibition," hadn't it?

...we lamp by an ad that Lettice Fertiga... ...in "Brother Officers." If California M. P. ... wouldn't you like to see Lettice in "The ... ...aying the lead in "The Onion Bed" by ...

OUR BURG.

...film pirates, varied the humdrum and monotony ... Nice, California, lately. He returned to the ... ...ate to Los Angeles, paused for a few hours ... ...d in Our Village between trains while on his ... home again, after a squint at the big S... ...ties after Ed Gaylor, George Cox and N... ...fishing trip on Memorial Day.

...d of the Chicago Tribune refers to ... ...Optitoriums."

...all 'em next?

N. G. C.

ROCHESTER (N. Y.) POST-EXPRESS
MAY 3, 1915

...ing Photo Plays.

A recent production entitled "Birth ... Nation" is denounced in cities ... it has been seen as distorting history, unjust and offensive to many people and calculated to arouse race hatred. It may yet become as needful, as a matter of public policy, to prohibit such exhibitions as it was to put the ban on prize ring combats reproduced on films.

The moving picture is an educational agency of vast potentialities. But it is equally potent to work great harm. Demoralizing shows or stories are properly censored from the curtain, but there are other ways in which harm may be wrought. An unveracious presentation of a historical incident would be one such; and a story, if true to fact, of the Spanish Inquisition, let us say, or other old, unhappy far off epiode, would only inflame prejudices to no good end.

The mass of people who frequent photo-theaters carry away a more vivid and enduring impression from an alleged portrayal of a historical occurrence than they would be likely to get from a whole library of books. It is highly important therefore that the five cent film show should be required, where it undertakes to deal with history, not to mislead opinion or malign historical figures, but to conform as closely as practicable to truth and fact.

...N CHICAGO, MINNEAPOLIS
...ANCISCO AND LONDON
...RESS CLIPBURO
FROM

Date .....

NEGROES PROTEST AGAINST THE FILM

(By the United Press.)

NEW YORK, May 4.—D. W. Griffith and H. E. Aitkin, managers of the film play "The Birth of a Nation," appeared in court today for a hearing to decide whether or not the portrayal of the film may continue. The National Association for the advancement of the Colored people has invoked the law in an effort to bar the sensational dramatization of "The Clansman."

OAKLAND (Cal.) TRIBUNE
MAY 15, 1915

COURT ASKED TO STOP 'CLANSMAN'

Injunction Against Photo Play Is Sought by Colored Folk.

Criticising the moving picture production of Thomas Dixon's "The Clansman," or "The Birth of a Nation," now being shown at the Macdonough theater, as holding the colored race up to "public ridicule, humiliation, condemnation, misrepresentation and disgrace," a group of colored ministers and citizens today filed suit for an injunction against the management of the theater, the author and producer.

The petition for a restraining order has been assigned to Superior Judge T. W. Harris and is scheduled to be heard Monday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

The suit is brought by Father David R. Wallace, E. Marshall, Lee A. Brown, A. W. Cook, B. C. Cleveland, Myra Simmons, Rev. F. J. Peck, F. W. Springer, Frank Henry, Rev. S. W. Hawkins, W. F. Jackson and R. Chambers.

The defendants to the action are, besides the Macdonough theater, F. A. Geisea, manager; D. W. Griffith, Thomas Dixon Jr., and others concerned with the production.

Scenes 3, 4, 5 and 6 are dwelt upon in the complaint and criticised from the standpoint of the colored people as showing brutality, buffoonery and rapine under circumstances which have largely ceased to exist, even in the most impulsive of Southern communities.

Scene 4 is particularly attacked as tending to "show for no other purpose than to arouse prejudice and hate of the negro in the city of Oakland and elsewhere and said scene creates disturbance, creates mob violence and riotous gatherings, anger, malice and hatred toward plaintiffs."

Attached to the complaint is a newspaper clipping containing a note to the editor of The Tribune, signed by Miss Beatrice McCall of the Woman's Protective Bureau, in which she describes the production as "beautiful and artistic," but at the same time a "dreadful portrayal of murder and wrong-doing."

CHICAGO (Ill.) TRIBUNE
MAY 15, 1915

THOMPSON BARS SOUTHLAND FILM BIRTH OF NATION

Sensational Photoplay Based on Dixon's "Clansman" Refused Permit.

18

NEGRO PROTEST IS HEEDED.

"The Birth of a Nation," D. W. Griffith's great photoplay spectacle, founded on Thomas Dixon's story, "The Clansman," may not be seen in Chicago—not for four years.

Mayor Thompson yesterday gave his final answer. It was a firm "No!"

Not as long as he remains in the mayor's chair, he said, will the panorama, starting with the importation of African slaves to this country and ending with the distressing tragedy of reconstruction days in the south after the civil war, be seen at the moving picture theaters here.

While the mayor would not go into a discussion of his reasons for putting up the bars in Chicago against the sensational picture drama, his close friends understand that he objects particularly to the scenes depicting the assassination of President Lincoln, the abortive attempt to impose the "social equality" of negroes and whites, and the impression that northern statesmen and southern negroes committed great wrongs against the south in the years immediately following the war.

Production on a Vast Scale.

The photoplay, among the biggest moving picture spectacles yet attempted, has created a profound impression in sections of the north where it has been permitted. The book, "The Clansman," on which it is founded, stirred the entire south a few years ago. It sought to justify the work of the Ku Klux Klan, or the "invisible empire," as it was termed.

Both the novel and the photoplay have been severely condemned by leading negroes, although the authors purposely inserted into the reel several negro characters, representative of the best traditions of their race.

The big punch all through the drama is the predominating idea, sent home with unerring skill and effectiveness, that the south was cruelly imposed upon in reconstruction days and that had Lincoln lived the carpetbagger and his negro political aids would not have added "this humiliation to the defeated and devastated south.

"Social Equality" Driven Home.

One scene, tense and thrilling, that is objected to by the opponents depicts the breakdown of the "social equality" proposition upheld by the white leader when Silas Lynch, a mulatto leader, elected lieutenant governor, asks the hand of a white man's daughter in marriage. Then the personal aspect of the theory is driven home and the thrill of it, as pictured, stirs mightily.

However, above and beyond all the tragedy there is a note of optimism, brotherly love, and a readjustment of conditions on racial lines that is intended to soothe and brighten and present the proverbial silver lining to the somber picture.

Makers of Film Optimistic.

The photoplay makers, in their concluding monograph, portray the underlying optimism of their effort. It is:

"To the American people the outcome of four years of fratricidal strife, the nightmare of reconstruction, and the establishment of the south in its rightful position is the birth of a new nation. Lincoln's plan of restricting negroes to Africa was dreamed of only—never carried out. The new nation, the real United States, as the years glided by turned away forever from the blood lust of war and anticipated with hope the world-millennium in which a brotherhood of love should bind all the nations together."

History One of Strife.

The history of the film from the beginning has been one of racial bitterness, censorial squabbles, and politics.

The national board of censors inspected the production and promptly had a stirring row which ended in the resignation of some members of the board. In Boston presentation of the film was permitted after considerable agitation, but minature riots took place in the lobby of the Tremont theater on several occasions.

After putting on the film at the Liberty theater in New York at $2 prices and installing it under the name of "The Clansman" in Los Angeles and San Francisco, Mr. Griffith looked Chicagoward. He applied for a permit. Mrs. Carter H. Harrison and Charles Fitzmorris, the mayor's secretary, inspected it. Mr. Fitzmorris granted a permit. The film was underlined at the Illinois to open May 1.

...Director of Intelligence was shown. The ... applied for a new permit ... the ring. "Jim ... a committee from negro ... as once announced he would ... the film and if there were anything ... which would reflect on the negro race he would have it cut out. Later he evidently changed his mind.

OAKLAND (Cal.) ENQUIRER
MAY 15, 1915

SEEK INJUNCTION AGAINST "THE CLANSMAN"

Negroes Would Prevent Show of Moving Picture Film

18

...Fred A. ...; ... Jr., ... book, "The ... Oakland ... Further ... Detective ... and the ... Klan in the ... Lee, ... and the ... Jim ... a public ...

BEATRICE McCALL'S STAND

... the ... and cited ... of ... stimulating ... the ... and ... the ... the ... the

YS FILM PLAY IS INSULT TO OUR ARMY

HARVARD PROFESSOR ARRAIGNS "BIRTH OF A NATION"

Albert Bushnell Hart, Professor of American History, Takes Exception to Incidents in Film and Says that Dixon Aims to Spread Race Hatred—Title Is Merely a Catchword, and All Responsibility Is Placed on the Northerners.

Albert Bushnell Hart, professor of American history in Harvard University, arraigns the film play, "The Birth of a Nation," as an insult to the United States army, President Johnson and his Administration, and the American people, in a recent letter to the Boston Journal. His letter is in answer to a previous letter to the same paper from Thomas Dixon, author of the "Clansman," the book upon which the film play is based.

Professor Hart points out further that neither book nor play is historically correct, and that the title, "The Birth of a Nation," is merely a catchword, and has no foundation in the historical significance of the time of which it treats. He asks if Northerners are to be expected to "support a spectacle of which one of the main purposes is to throw all the responsibility and error of that distressed period upon them," and says that the film tends to brutalize the community and inspire poisonous distrust of a large element in it.

Professor Hart's letter follows almost in its entirety:

Is it a moral duty for every respectable person in Massachusetts to pay his dollar for an immoral seat in order to view the "moving spectacle of blood and lust" humorously entitled "The Birth of a Nation"?

If you believe the advertisements, you must go. If you believe the fearful, injured letter to the Journal by Thomas Dixon, the author, you are neglecting your soul's welfare if you stay away. To be sure, this show does not describe the birth of a nation; it does not give a true impression either of the antebellum period, the Civil war, or Reconstruction; it contains unforgivable slanders upon some Northern statesmen and upon the United States army; it is based upon the most hideous of crimes; and is calculated to arouse passionate and destroying race hatred wherever it is produced.

Otherwise, it includes many pictures of pretty girls and handsome youths and stately mansion, besides thick layers of cannon smoke and human gore. American audiences have become accustomed to "movie" highway robberies, beatings, stabbings, whippings, and shootings, and little children take pleasure in such diversions. But in the capacity to saturate the ordinary mind with the foulest and basest of crimes, and to fix the stigma of hatred upon innocent persons, the "Birth of a Nation" is in a class by itself.

TITLE MERELY A CATCHWORD.

The title is, of course, merely a catchword, unless by birth of a nation the author means the rending a nation in twain, and its reconstitution in a way which he obviously thinks undesirable. As a faithful statement of historical truths it deserves a place alongside Weems's "Life of Washington."

A prime objection to the whole thing is its caricature of the Union army and Union soldiers; and particularly its absolutely unfounded series of pictures intended to leave upon the mind the conviction that in Reconstruction times negro soldiers [illegible] plundered and abused the [illegible] to suggest the crime and to leave the rest to the imagination. But why must it be suggested?

